I pray earnestly that we may have the maximum number of real, simon-pure, red-blooded, Christ-serving, church-supporting men and women in this district. I want to see men called to preach from our altars. God grant to this great delta country a CALVARY VISION.

MEN TURNING TO THE LORD.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

On every hand we hear of an unusually large number of men being received into the church. The large increase in our membership last year was due to the increased number of grown men reached in our revival campaigns. Could the facts be tabulated, they would likely show about the same number of women and children received as in former years, but a vast increase in the number of men. For many years we have been reproached and sometimes sneered at by sceptics because our converts were women and children. Not so today. In many of the revivals held last year and now being held, more men were converted at the altars than women and children. Some among us had begun to lose faith in this Gospel to save grown and hardened sinners. Some seem to think that we are shut up to salvation by education. Thank God for many thousands of demonstrations to the contrary! We are reaching men. Why? How?

The Centenary plan, which is being followed by so many of our pastors, naturally helps in this matter. The survey reveals the large number of men who ought to be reached. The organization which the pastor sets up to reach these provides that men be sent to reach men. Men are going out to seek and to save other men of their class. Business men are sent out to reach other business men, professional men after their kind, laboring men after those whom they should reach. Thus many thousands of Christian men are doing personal work for men as they have never done before. This is the natural and inevitable result of the same Scriptural plan we are now pursuing in our revivals. This great unused asset, the laymen, are being brought into service and made a used and useful asset. Every child should be taught to accept Christ at the earliest moment possible. The largest and best evangelistic opportunity is in the Sunday school. The pastor who does not work this for all it is worth is unpardonably foolish. Children who are early taught to walk in wisdom's ways will, even if they depart from it, be more likely to be reached in after years than those who have had no early training. But let no man despair of the many thousands of adults now living who had no proper early training. We have a Gospel for them. It is now reaching and saving many thousands of them—a Gospel able to save the oldest and hardest sinner in the community. Work the plan. Trust God for power and this great work now going on among adult sinners will continue. This is the auspicious time to save these grown, neglected sinners. Let every church work this plan so as to present Christ to every sinner in your community and be able to say in the end, "Lord Jesus, to the very best of our ability, we have preached Jesus to every creature accessible to us."

BRING BACK THE BIBLE.

Bring back the Bible into your life! You have forgotten where you left it. Do you know where to find it? How long has it been since you looked into its pages? It has rested there on your table unopened through the days and back into the months and even into the years. You have not opened its cover. You have neglected it. You have forgotten it. It has had no influence in your life. Your heart has not heard it. Your mind has not thought of it. Your spirit has not cared for its light. But bring back the Bible into your life. It has gone so far away from you. It has slipped beyond your reach and there is a great silence in your life. Would you let it speak to you again? Would you stop long enough to let its words find their way into your life? Would you open a door for it to come in? You wonder why a great heaviness has come upon you. You cannot explain why a deep sense of loss possesses you. You do not know why you are conscious of the absence of something that has made your heart glad. You have walked along your way. You have borne your burden and found no relief at the end of the day. You have not cast your burden on the Lord. You have not turned your thoughts to him. You have not asked him to attend unto your cry. You have not opened your ears unto his call. You have permitted his Word to remain closed in your life until it has slipped so far away that you will have to retrace your steps in order to find it again.

Why not bring back the Bible into your life? Would you attend unto this call? Will it startle your conscience into thinking of what you have done with God's Word? Would such realization help you? Would it alarm you? Would it bring regrets? Would it drive you to your knees in confession that you have forgotten God's Word? And that your eyes have not fallen upon its pages and that your ears have not been opened to its message of love for your soul?

You are the reader, perhaps, of many books and your library table may have magazines and weekly journals and daily papers ever upon it. You are spending your time reading these. Your Bible has become lost among many books. Your hands have not rested upon it. Your fingers have not opened its precious leaves. The dust has gathered upon it and the days of the sere and yellow leaf declare its age. You have not marked it with your finger prints as you should have eagerly searched it for the rich treasures of Christ's truth and the expressions of his love for your soul. You have lost your Bible in this day of the writing of many books. If you would search for it, it would take long for you to find it. The task would weary you, and perhaps in the end you would be overtaken with grief that you had mislaid it.

Yes, hurry, beloved, and bring back the Bible into your life. Lest you cease to value it, lest its beauty fade away, lest its power be lost to you, and lest its light die upon your pathway and you walk in the darkness of the night where man cannot see the course of his journey. Hastily seize that Bible, that Book of all books, that volume that should rest in your heart and remain on its altars, that volume whose sacredness sends out an aroma of reverence and beauty that lifts your heart and crowns it in matchless integrity where the storms of life cannot disintegrate it. In these days when men are clamoring for peace and good will, when discontent ravages the heart of the multitude, when soul hunger finds universal expression, when spiritual thirst cries out as though humanity were passing through the wide stretches of an interminable desert, O soul, who knoweth the will of God, bring back the Bible into your life!—Western Christian Advocate.

I AM GLAD I AM A MINISTER.

I am glad the Lord has called me into his ministry for the following reasons:

1. It enables me to live so that I can be daily interested in others.
2. It enables me so to live that I can find opportunity to develop my love powers by attracting attention to the love powers of others.
3. It enables me so to live that I may find expression for those instincts for service which build for nobility of character.
4. It enables me so to live that I enjoy the largest possible field for the enlistment of all my powers.
5. It enables me to engage my energies in a field of labor as broad as human life.
6. It enables me so to live that I can easily come to understand human destiny.
7. It enables me so to live that I can tread the winepress of suffering and adversity with my fellows and lead them to faith and hope in Christ.
8. It enables me so to live that childhood's innocence and the maiden's beauty and the young man's strength appeal to all the goodness and greatness of my heart.
9. It enables me so to live that I can never lose faith in mankind.
10. It enables me so to live that I can offer redemption to men who fall under guilt, and salvation to those who fall into sin.
11. It enables me so to live that I can be a light and a blessing to every man who walks in darkness and suffers because he cannot see his way.

12. It enables me so to live that I can pursue my journey in the presence of an ideal of perfect manhood.

13. It enables me so to live that I may perfectly balance my life between intellect and emotion and keep my life fresh by days filled with inspiration and anticipation.

14. It enables me so to live that I can escape from the morbid life that spends itself hunting pleasures hid among the forces of earth.

15. It enables me so to live that I may always build up my life through the years by friendships and fellowships that grow more precious as the years multiply.

16. It enables me so to live that my life may not descend into the years of the sere and yellow leaf of decrepitude, but follow a way that shineth brighter and brighter even unto the perfect day.

17. It enables me so to live my life that the end thereof keeps outdistancing my years until it is lost in the golden glow of eternity's morn.

18. It enables me so to live that life's interests never grow less, but multiply with the advancing years.

19. It enables me so to live that my heart may enlarge with the extension of the kingdom of Christ until all the peoples for whom he died find a place at its altars of prayer.

20. It enables me so to live that all life's crosses throw their shadow on Calvary and enable me to join him in praying, "Not my will but thine be done."

21. It enables me so to live that those whom God in his providence has given me to love may know definitely the way I am going when he calls me to come and be with him.

22. It enables me so to live that I shall never be separated from Christ my Lord and from those I have loved and lost awhile.

23. It enables me so to live that though life's morning way changes into noon and then evening may pass into the deep shadows of the night there shall not come that darkness which falleth at noonday or that silence which resteth at midnight.

24. It enables me so to live that earth at the last shall be the threshold from which I shall step to the light of that day whose morning is swept with an ambrosial breeze, whose noon-time has no cloud, and whose evening has no setting sun, and whose twilight never settles into the darkness of distress.

25. It enables me so to live that death becomes an incident, heaven a reality with open gates and the streets thereof set with the mansions he has gone to prepare for those who love him.—Western Christian Advocate.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Please make duplicates of all cards before sending to me. Retain the duplicates for your home charge and church, except where some college has been especially mentioned. In that case make two sets of cards, keep the original, and send duplicate to me. Mark the colleges that the contributions are to be made to. Send all money, checks, drafts or money orders to me at Jackson, Miss. I am to deposit it to the General Board of Education, Stonewall Anderson, Treasurer. I will mail you a receipt as soon as I have received the amount.

Cordially yours,

TO LAW-ABIDING MEN AND WOMEN ONLY.

Please see your representatives in the Louisiana Legislature at once. Request them to support a bill giving all our State courts the power to enforce the prohibition law as written in the Volstead Act, when our Legislature meets September 15, 1921.

It is no longer necessary to argue the prohibition question—that is settled. The question for you to put to your representative is, "Do you want to see the prohibition law enforced in your parish and State? If so, support such a law as referred to above."

Pastors will please publicly call attention of their congregations to the importance of immediate action. We must have relief from the criminal element and our local courts will act if given the authority by the Legislature.

I will appreciate a line giving the result of your conference with your legislators. Don't overlook your State senator.

This is a request to you personally, don't depend on some one else, but act yourself.

Yours to serve,

A. W. TURNER,

State Superintendent Louisiana Anti-Slavery League.

"NOW GO AND DO IT."

Lord Kitchener was once approached by a subordinate officer with an array of excuses for failure to obey orders. Kitchener patiently heard the man's recital, and then added, "Your reasons for not doing it are the best I ever heard; now go and do it." Most of us can think of plenty of reasons for not doing our obvious duty. We acquire the habit early in life. The habit is hard to outgrow. Excuses multiply the more we think about them. People grow fairly eloquent in defense of their shortcomings. Sometimes I think they half persuade themselves. But after they have justified their omissions of duty, God usually says, somewhere in the soul, "Now go and do it."—George C. Peck

WHO IS TO BLAME?

By Payton A. Sowell.

We have been trying to settle and locate the responsibility for the presence of evil in the world. Surely it did not get here by chance. Ever since I can remember, the preachers—and as I was a Methodist most of the preachers I heard were Methodists—have had sharp things to say concerning Adam and Eve, but especially, like Adam himself, the burden of the blame has been put on Eve.

I am not a theologian, but like the late much-loved and lamented Ex-Governor Robt. L. Taylor, about all I claim to be, outside of being a "Jackson" democrat, is a life-time, rather, a three-generations, "Unworthy Methodist."

I am not inquiring into the "profundities" of the source of evil, but, as a Methodist identified through my grandfather with Burtee County, North Carolina, Methodist faith, I feel I have the privilege of asking: "Who is to blame for the indifferent spirit and neglect of the Methodist Church toward her superannuates and other dependents?"

I could put it on a good many, and tell the literal truth. There is one thing of which I am absolutely dumbfounded in its presence. I do not see how the members of the General Conferences from 1808—113 years—composed of men who (especially was it true for the first 50 years of that time), were tenderly and vitally united to each other by service, sacrifice and suffering, could have thought of everything else, and everybody else, the Indians, the Chinese, the Koreans, the Russians, the Africans, and all, and yet "forget" for 113 years the superannuates. These great assemblies of choice men have thought, discussed, labored, and even prayed, for a world democracy that all nations might have "high manhood"—and left the superannuates a "Pauper community"—for 113 years. Now I believe these dead "assembly men"—if they could speak from Heaven, would say: "We are to blame for the indifferent treatment of our old brothers."

I was once a preacher, however difficult it was to make others think I was much of one. I lifted at the load, if it was, most of the time, hold of the short end of the stick. One thing I became thoroughly convinced of through the forty years, as to the matter of being a "poor preacher"—I found myself in a "large company"—I never had a lonesome hour!

I was, and am, preacher enough to know I am telling a truth, which is as true as the "Gospel." It is. I sincerely believe the real "blame" rests on the preachers themselves. For twenty-five years this "shameful" situation has been burning itself into my spirit. Only three appearances of any dawning day of hope have come to my eyes (as a Tennessean): One day in Nashville, in a Conference session, Dr. McFerrin spoke, and said, as he only could say such a word, "I am ashamed I have lived so long, and am now at the end, and have done so little for the superannuates;" then when Dr. Watkins took up the call; then when Dr. Todd entered. The preachers in Tennessee cried when Dr. McFerrin spoke; they had to, and have never done one thing to make the "Conference Fund" grow. They cried when Dr. Watkins spoke—they thought it was orthodox to do so—and never did, or said one thing to raise the two millions, then thought to be sufficient.

Everybody knows how they cry now, when they hear Dr. Todd—even a heart of stone would "sweat" if it could not "shed tears"—when he tells of the neglect of these worthies who have added a million to the M. E. Church, South. Why, dear old "Uncle" Jerry W. Cullom, of Tennessee—all honor to his memory—ten years before he closed 54 years as an itinerant had added 3000.

But what have the preachers done? You say they could not do any thing. The "Centenary," and the "Educational" Boards had them body and soul. The churches were papered with billboards, their mouths were filled with different messages for these causes.

I have lived to see the young 18-year-old lad, clad in gray, with a musket, become the grizzled veteran of 80 years. I am not particularly writing for the superannuates of 75 years, for they have but a few more steps to take and they can, if need be, go out of the "Forgotten" gate to Heaven. It is for you men who will be "forgotten" to-morrow I write. Will you let me tell this one truth and quit?

In the three years in which Dr. Todd has been doing almost superhuman work, under circumstances of indifference and restrictions, under conditions which, if it were not that he "counts not his life dear unto himself," he would long since have thrown the whole matter at the feet of the General Conference, the bishops, the preachers, and the church, and gone on and done like the rest of the preachers are doing, get the best station possible, preach the "blessed (?) Gospel, and let the superannuates "go to Heaven!"

But I am trying to say—what it sickens my heart to say—in three years just past I have never heard the superannuates, the "Conference Claimant's Club," Dr. Todd's work, mentioned in a church of the M. E. Church, South. And I have heard local preachers, circuit preachers, station preachers, presiding elders, editors, secretaries of all the Boards, missionaries, bishops preach. I have rarely—but two or three Sundays—failed to attend church. Who is to blame?

REVIVALS IN THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

Brothers Faulk and Teekell have just closed a good meeting at Meridian. A fine spirit prevails there. There was one accession on profession of faith. The meeting at Olla, on Brother Thomas's charge, was a success. Brother Sparks did the preaching. There were ten accessions by vows and profession of faith. Brother French has just closed a good meeting at Forest Hill, where the writer did the preaching and Brother Ridge, our singer, led the singing and hustled generally. There were six accessions on profession of faith, salaries raised, and two babies baptized.

The following revivals are now in progress: Brother Shaw is preaching for Brother Akin at Jena in meeting now; Brother Jordan and Brother Ridge are with Brother Moss at Dodson; Brother W. E. Thomas of New Orleans and Brother Teekell are with Brother Faulk at Lecompte.

Will the brethren in the district please send me reports of their meetings and also let me know when they are holding meetings so I can keep in touch with all of them?

The revival fires are burning and souls are being born into the Kingdom of our Lord. ON WITH THE REVIVAL. Cordially, LIGHT ON THE SITUATION IN IRELAND.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

The first General Election in Ulster under the new regime resulted in a decisive victory for the Protestant Unionists, who returned 40 members out of 52. The Nationalists returned six members, and the Sinn Feiners six. The elections were held under proportional representation, so that they were an absolutely fair test of public opinion. Over 90% of the electors voted. The Roman Catholic Church did its utmost for the Nationalist and Sinn Fein candidates, including Collins, the notorious leader of the gunmen, but it failed to make any serious impression on the strong Protestant majority. The Unionists won 15 out of the 16 Belfast seats. The Socialist candidates, who were put forward in the vain hope of dividing the Unionist workmen's vote, polled so badly that they forfeited their deposits.

Those who suggest that Northeast Ulster is an absurdly small province to have self-government are ill informed. It had in 1911 a population of 1,250,531. She had almost as many white people—within 20,000 to be exact—as the Union of South Africa; she had more people than the Dominion of New Zealand; she had five times as many people as the Dominion of New Foundland; she had as many people as Queensland, South Australia, and Tasmania taken together; she had as many people as British Columbia, Alberta, and Saskatchewan combined. No one dreams of suggesting that these Dominions and Provinces are not populous enough to have parliaments and ministries. Protestant Ulster, with her Northern Parliament, is not a subject for statistical ridicule.

If what has happened in Northeast Ulster is properly studied and understood, it will be seen to reveal the truth about Sinn Fein and the nature of that vast conspiracy in which it is engaged. Now we can see clearly what the Sinn Feiners are in insurrection over, and what are the reasons that have induced them to turn murder into a fine art. Their guiding impulse has not been the desire for self-determination, not resistance to foreign oppression, not even revenge for past injuries, real or imagined. It is the evil and preposterous claim to dominate and oppress the loyal Protestants of the North; or to prevent any begging of the question, let us say those persons of different race, religion, and political instincts who happen to reside in the northeast portion of Ireland. Surely the English people and English-speaking people will now see the folly and the danger of allowing themselves to be made the dupes of Irish calumny. The Sinn Feiners and the disloyal Irishmen of the South are the greatest experts in calumny and in the creation of a false atmosphere that the world has ever seen. The fact that a man is abused and traduced by Sinn Feiners is no sort of reason for imagining that he has evil in him. Rather, it is a sound reason for suspecting him to be honest, true, and faithful to his word, and loyal to his trust.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Many are inquiring as to what to do with the cash subscriptions and pledge cards. Remember the Method Books says, "Send them to your Conference Secretary of Education." My address is 1063 Sheridan Avenue, Shreveport, La.

The Home Circle

OUR CHILDREN.

Sweet is the world to them and fair,
Seen through the springtime's lovely sheen;
But, oh, the road is wondrous long!
That tender mist of golden green,
They may not always find it there.

Theirs are such tiny feet to find
The long way that they must go;
The years must break their steps
To evenness—and as they grow,
May we have patience to be kind.

Love fondly bade that we should take
These little hands and gently lead,
Bearing the light when home lights fail;
Knowing the childish heart and need—
May we have grace that part to take.

THE REAL MISSIONARY SPIRIT.

By Gertrude Fisher Scott.

It was graduation time, and one of our young friends was finishing her course at high school, and we had been invited to her house to see her pretty new clothes and the presents that friends and relatives had given her.

After we had viewed the dainty muslin dress and other garments that Claire had made for herself, and had examined the wrist-watch, the pearl beads, the gold bar pin, the spangled fan, silk stockings, gloves, and money, we marveled at how good the world was to the sweet girl graduate.

And then we asked Claire what she intended doing now that she was through high school, and she replied that she was planning to take a course at an art school in a near-by city.

Just then my attention was drawn to a younger sister, Alice, a junior in the high school, who was to graduate the following year. Because I thought possibly she might be a little envious at seeing so much showered upon Claire, I said, "Never mind, Alice; your turn is coming next year." She answered pleasantly, "Yes, I know it."

And then I said, "What are you going to do after you graduate, Alice?" wondering if she had made up her mind so early.

Quick as a flash she answered, "I'm going to be a missionary."

Surprised at her reply, I said, "But where do you want to work, in this country, Africa, China, or India?"

And her answer again came promptly, "Wherever I am needed."

"Well, I am sure you will succeed wherever you go, for you have the real missionary spirit, and I do not believe there are many girls of your age that have it so abundantly."

I have thought so many times since of this splendid young girl with her high ideals and her wish for a life of service in whatever part of the world she might be sent. And I have wondered if there are many other young girls like Alice. God grant there are! If so, what a glorious future is promised us in the mission field in the coming years!—Zion's Herald.

HORSES OF FAMOUS GENERALS IN THE CIVIL WAR.

By A. Genevieve Dwyer.

The horse upon which "Little Phil" Sheridan rode, in his famous ride from Winchester to Cedar Creek, was a black charger named "Rienzi." The horse has shared with his master the fame and glory of that day in Buchanan Read's beautiful poem, which has made the ride immortal.

In the battle of Antietam, General McClellan rode a large black horse, which he called "Daniel Webster." The General's staff had much difficulty in keeping pace with him, and usually spoke of the horse in unflattering terms. The General, however, was very much attached to him.

General Ambrose E. Burnside always rode a horse called "Major." Like the General, "Major" came through the war safely, and outlived his master. After Burnside's death, the horse was shot at Edgehill, and it was claimed for him that he was thirty years old.

When the Union forces were pursuing the Confederates, after the latter's evacuation of Petersburg and Richmond, General Meade was ill of a fever, but could not be persuaded to enter an ambulance, and rode his favorite horse, "Baldy."

There was a very vicious horse called "Hannibal" given to the West Virginia Army, but the General forbade any of his officers to ride him, as he claimed to do so would be to risk their lives. A Captain Egan, of a company of volunteers, asked to be allowed to have the horse, and break him. The General handed him over to Egan with the assurance that he would break his neck. "Hannibal" became entirely tractable, and once saved the Captain's neck, when Egan was pursued by guerrillas in the mountains of West Virginia. Horse and rider soon became very much attached to each other.

The horse upon which General Kearney rode when he was shot at Chantilly, was forwarded with his sword to his widow by General Lee, showing the kindly courtesy which always characterized the Confederate leader.

At the battle of Chancellorsville, General Rushing of New Jersey rode a large gray horse, and "Fighting Joe" Hooker rode a pure white steed, making him conspicuous as he galloped from one part of the battlefield to the other.

General Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson's favorite horse was "Little Sorrel," upon which he was riding when he received his death wound. He had always been very much attached to her, and she it was who followed his funeral cortege, bearing an empty saddle. In appearance she was as raw-boned and ungainly as her master.

General Ewell usually rode a sorry-looking gray named "Rifles." No doubt he gave him that name in memory of the old company of Rifles in which Ewell had served during the Mexican War.

General Lee's "Traveller" was a handsome iron-gray.

General Turner Ashby had three horses shot beneath him upon the same day that he fell at Port Republic. He was dismounted when shot. The first horse he lost that day was his favorite, which he called "Black Conrad." When the horse was mortally wounded, Ashby knelt between the eyes and drawing his finger over his suffering. The horse that crossed the mountain, in the General's funeral cortege, was one of the occasionally rode.

The horse which General Adam Sedgwick rode when mortally wounded at Spotsylvania was a thoroughbred named "Fire-eater." The two were shot at the same time, and neither reached. It was only after a great effort that Sedgwick's growing patience that the General was lifted from the horse, and the gallant steed then sank to the ground without a moan. Our Dear Abner.

"TIME OUT."

Some people in peacetime will be interested in the young man who went into the army. On enlisting, he expressed the fear that he would face ridicule on account of his religion. After three years in the army he was asked how he had gotten along. "Fine," he replied; "they never found it out on me."—Christian Register.

A Sure Sign.

"Ellen, has George come home from school yet?" called Mrs. Snaggs to the servant.

"Yes, ma'am," came back the answer.

"Where is he?"

"I haven't seen him."

"How do you know, then, that he is at home?"

"Because the cat's a-hidin' under the dresser."—Selected.

Editorial

"RESISTING PESSIMISM."

The following editorial in a recent number of the Western Christian Advocate is of a kind to strengthen our faith and confirm our hope in the ultimate triumph of the gospel and the coming of the Kingdom. We take the liberty of reproducing it in full.

"Nothing is more needed in interpreting passing events than perspective. The present moment and one's immediate environment may fill him with dismay. Were men to measure the future only by the state of the world as seen to-day, they would have abundant ground for discouragement and dark forebodings. Not for generations have human conditions and human relationships been more outrageously evil. Many see no silver lining in the overhanging and portentous cloud. But the lining is there. Its outshining splendor is not imaginary. The moon has often totally eclipsed the sun, but it has never been able to prevent the resplendent corona from giving evidence of its continued existence. Out of the ominous darkness the day soon emerged in all its former glory.

"There is the counterpart of this in the moral history of mankind. The present eclipse of human sympathy, goodness, and fraternal love among the nations is to come to an end. One who is profoundly grounded in the principles and spirit of Christianity cannot for a moment doubt the coming of a brighter day—brighter than the world has ever yet seen. Paganism has its golden age in the past; Christianity in the future. The three great constructive and inspiring writers of the Bible are Isaiah, John, and Paul. They were all Messianic men, and for this reason—optimists, in spite of the fact that they lived in times of exceptional gloom and moral decay. Had they taken their bearings from passing events they would all have been hopeless prophets of evil.

"Isaiah did, indeed, give a clear diagnosis of the ominous conditions of his day, and spared no language in predicting the coming doom of unrighteous nations; yet no prophet or seer of antiquity ever saw more clearly the glory of the coming dawn. He speaks in terms of unbounded hope. His optimism thrills and inspires. It makes the pulse beat quicker and stronger, and the heart sing. It lifts the seer's prophecy into the realm of poetry until its music becomes the inspiration of the world's noblest symphonies and oratorios. The vision of Isaiah was but the foregleam of a more personal, confident, and vital faith in later times. No man can know the living Christ and saturate himself with the spiritual teachings of St. John and St. Paul without being an optimist to the very core of his being. In his own soul, life has conquered death, love has banished hatred and evil, and light has driven darkness far beyond the horizon of his confident faith.

"During all the horrors, crimes, cruelties, and agonies of the past half-dozen years there has been the resplendent shining forth of Christian purpose, sympathy, and love as in no former period of national or international strife. Horrible inhumanities have stood face to face with a bravery of kindness and service as mankind has never before known. The sword during all these unspeakable years of conflict and anguish never for a moment eclipsed the cross. The Spirit of the Christ never forsook the battlefield or left the demons of war to do their deadly work unchallenged. And to-day, in spite of the unfraternal greed that rules even this fairest and freest of all lands, the spirit of fairness and brotherhood is beginning to assert its masterful and beneficent power.

"Never in the history of this planet has it been possible to gather the nations of earth together for frank, mutual, and trustworthy conferences until this era, so full of dark forebodings. Even though the United States had no part in this council of the nations, and others (a very few) were excluded from its fellowship, the fact that it was convened at all demonstrates that a new day has dawned in the history of human relationships the world around. And America will be at the front in any movement toward international unity and brotherhood.

"Christians have not yet realized the reserve power of their religion. Whenever men believe in and follow and co-operate with the Christ of Easter and Pentecost, a new era of restoration and life is immediately possible. The divine Master is not only a Savior, but a Re-Creator. He is a Savior because he creates and re-creates. 'Old things pass away; all things become new.'

"The world may be, and ought to be, and to the eye of faith is on the threshold of a new and better era. It may not come in a day, or a decade, but it is coming. A great spiritual revulsion against world-iniquity is itself the beginning of a great spiritual reformation and revival. The church ought to be, and in many instances is, expecting and preparing for this new Pentecost of international unity and love. Christians everywhere ought to be full of bright expectation and optimism. Prophecy, even long, long ago, said nations could be born in a day. The day of God's mightiest miracles is yet ahead of us. The forces of evil can be overthrown; yea, they are already defeating themselves. The tide is turning. Men are returning to sanity and vision, not through their own inherent tendency, but through the compelling power of Christian ideals, now extensively diffused throughout the world, and still more through the enlightening and pervasive power of Christ's omnipresent Spirit. Paganism is inconsistent with Christian belief; optimism the very atmosphere in which the followers of the Master live, thrive, achieve, and overcome."

PROBABLY A GOOD INVESTMENT.

The announcement has been made that the Board of Missions has bought a building in Nashville for its own use, about $600,000 being involved in the purchase price and some improvements to be made. We have no reason to believe that this is other than a good investment, and that it will greatly increase the efficiency of the Board in administering the large affairs that are in its charge. We feel sure, however, that the church at large would be glad to have an official statement by the Board concerning this rather large financial transaction. If such a statement has been made, it has not come to our notice.

OUR HOPE IS IN RIGHTEOUSNESS.

It is altogether an encouraging sign that men prominent in other than church affairs are constantly calling attention to the fact that righteousness must be the fundamental aim of all our activities if we are to emerge safely from the troublous times in which the world now finds itself. It is all very well to undertake to help meet the issue by readjustments in the industrial and the political and the social order; but these readjustments cannot be properly made without regard for spiritual values and spiritual forces. In this connection the words of Vice President Coolidge, in an address at the opening exercises of the centennial celebration of Amherst College recently, are significant. He said:

"The work of the world will not be done, unless it is done from a motive of righteousness. Individuals and nations are at the present time afflicted with great burdens as a result of the readjustment which has taken place during the last year. Men find their resources very much impaired, with no corresponding reduction of their expenses. Often times both capital and credit have been entirely exhausted. The nations of the earth are struggling under a great load of debt incurred and resulting from the war. The raising of sufficient revenues to meet the costs of government is not only a grievous burden, but, in some cases, has not yet been found possible.

"The question that confronts us on every hand, whether in the consideration of private or public interests, is how these burdens can be borne. It can scarcely be said that they should be borne solely in order to secure a resulting prosperity.

"The world must look for something more than prosperity in the present situation. The individual must look for something more than wages and profits for this compensation. Unless this satisfaction can be found by proceeding in the way of right and truth and justice, the search for it will fall. The material things of life cannot stand alone. Unless they are sustained by the spiritual things of life they are not sustained at all. The work of the world will not be done unless it is done from a motive of righteousness.

"This brings us back squarely to the foundation of Western civilization, which asks not whether it will pay, but whether it is right. There is no other foundation for the maintenance and support of a peaceful relationship between individuals or among nations."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Ninety-one members have been received into the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., since Conference. Rev. L. P. Wasson is the pastor.

A note from Rev. W. W. Bruner, of Victoria, Miss., informs us that his work is moving along nicely, and that progress is still being made in the educational campaign.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, the indefatigable Sunday School Field Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, is attending the meeting of the Field Secretaries at Lake Junaluska, N. C.

The Presbyterian, the Baptist, and the Methodist churches of Natchez, Miss., are planning to hold a union tent meeting next fall. The arrangements will be in the hands of the Federated Bible Classes of the city.

The many friends of Rev. W. C. Harris, a superannuated member of the North Mississippi Conference, will be interested to know that he has moved from Uvalde, Texas, to Dallas, Texas, his address being 725 Montreal Street.

Our Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss., will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of its life in the present building this year. Extensive improvements have recently been made, and one of the finest organs in the State is being installed.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, our pastor at Jefferson Street, Natchez, Miss., is assisting Rev. J. A. Wells in a meeting at Gloster, Miss., this week. Rev. Claude P. Jones, of Fayette, will fill the pulpit at Jefferson Street on the Sunday that Brother Saunders is absent.

Miss Allice Gorton Wynn, of New Orleans, with a party of seventy-two persons, from eight States, spent the Fourth of July in Canada. They observed the day by carrying small American flags. She remembered the Advocate with a post card from Toronto, showing one of the stately buildings of that city.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, is assisting Rev. M. B. Sharbrough in a meeting this week at Main Street Church, Biloxi, Miss.

Rev. W. E. Dickens, the pastor, was assisted in a meeting at Pachuta, Miss., embracing the first Sunday in June, by Rev. John W. Ramsey. Five persons united with the church.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor of Epworth Church, this city, will spend a well-earned vacation in his old home, Jackson, Michigan. The editor of the Advocate will have the privilege of preaching in his pulpit next Sunday morning.

Rev. Otto Porter, of the Mississippi Conference, after completing his course at Millsaps College at its recent commencement, is now at Emory University, where he expects to remain until he has completed the course in the School of Theology.

We greatly regret being out of the office on Saturday of last week when our friend of college days, Mr. Morris Chambers, of Shreveport, La., called. Mr. Chambers is a son of the late Rev. John W. Chambers, of the Mississippi Conference.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, of La Grange, Ga., who recently underwent a painful operation at Touro Infirmary, this city, is now able to be up and about, and will return to his charge as soon as his physicians think it safe for him to take up his work again.

We are delighted to learn that Capt. F. A. Howell, of Durant, Miss., who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Baptist Memorial Hospital in Jackson, Miss., is at home again and on the road to recovery. Brother Howell is a most loyal friend of the Advocate.

Mr. A. Trimble, of Natchez, Miss., recently renewed, through his pastor, Rev. W. H. Saunders, his subscription to the Advocate for the thirty-second year since he began taking it. His church paper was one of the things he set up housekeeping with—and he has held on to it.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, who was called to the bedside of his mother, at Peebles, Ohio, recently, has returned to his work in this State, his mother having shown a marked improvement after her life was despaired of.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, the pastor, has just closed a splendid revival at State Line, Miss., resulting in four additions to the membership of the church. Rev. J. L. Sells, of Meridian, Miss., did the preaching and won the hearts of the people. Brother Ramsey will begin a meeting at Winchester next Sunday, in which he will be assisted by Rev. W. E. Dickens.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Seminary, Miss., writes: "We closed a very profitable meeting at Sanford, Miss., with the 11 o'clock service on July 1. These services resulted in reviving the membership throughout, and adding twelve to the church. The Rev. Henry A. Gatlin, of Canton, Miss., did the preaching, to the delight of all who heard him."

Bishop W. F. McMurry, on account of pressing obligations in other directions, will not attend the Ecumenical Conference in London, to which he was appointed a delegate. Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, as arranged by the College of Bishops at their Annual Meeting, will take Bishop McMurry's place as an associated bishop in the European work.

The Seashore Camp Meeting will begin this year on July 20, and continue through July 27. The preaching will be done by Dr. Moore, one of our Mobile pastors, and the music will be in charge of Mr. T. O. Adams, of New Orleans. Let all our people join in prayer that there may be a great work of grace accomplished in this meeting at this sacred and historic spot on the Gulf Coast.

A telegram from Rev. Waldo W. Moore, pastor of the Back Bay Methodist Church, Biloxi, Miss., received last Tuesday, informs us that work on the building has ceased on account of lack of funds. The sum of $150 is needed at once, and Brother Moore earnestly calls upon the Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, and other friends to raise this amount at once for this mission church. Rev. W. M. Sullivan preached at this church last Sunday.

As a token of appreciation of her splendid work as teacher, the Business Men's Bible Class of Shelby, Miss., has made it possible for Mrs. J. M. Wyatt to spend the month of July at Lake Junaluska, N. C., where she and Brother Wyatt will spend the time in rest, recuperation, and study. This is the third year in succession that this class has done this gracious thing—a good example that many other classes might follow with profit to all concerned.

The work at Amory, Miss., is in fine shape. The men have just spent about $1000 on improving the parsonage, and the women a like amount on furnishings for the church. The Sunday school and the Epworth League are making splendid progress—the League has 268 members, and the Sunday school attendance is considerably in excess of that of last summer. A revival meeting is being planned for September. Rev. E. R. Smoot is the active and happy pastor.

We take this interesting item of news from the Nashville Advocate of last week: "Dr. John W. Boswell, one of the assistant editors to Dr. E. B. Chappell, editor of the Sunday school literature, and Mrs. Addie P. Matthews, of Trenton, Tenn., were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Adams, son-in-law and daughter of the bride, Cedar Hill, Tenn., July 1. Dr. and Mrs. Boswell will make their home at Cedar Hill." The Advocate joins their many friends in extending all good wishes to Dr. and Mrs. Boswell.

Dr. R. A. Meek, presiding elder of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Bishop W. F. McMurry has authorized me to announce the appointment of Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Iuka, Miss., to Batesville station until Conference. Brother Craddock was educated at Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., at which institution he was a classmate of the lamented Bishop McCoy. He once served the Dryades Street and Felicity churches of New Orleans. He occupied the pulpit of the Batesville church last Sunday, and has entered hopefully upon his new work."

Scarborough, Victoria, Texas, 2; Rev. J. W. Price, Walnut Grove, Miss., 2; Rev. J. D. Harper, McDonoghville, La., 2.

IMPORTANT WORDS FOR THE FIVE THOUSAND VOLUNTEERS AND THEIR FRIENDS.

By Rev. R. H. Bennett, D.D., Life Service Secretary.

The success of the Life Service Campaign of the Christian Education Movement has gratified the entire church. It is no small cause for thanksgiving that five thousand of our younger brothers and sisters have offered their lives for Christian service. Of these, quite a number will be ready for work at an early date. Some have been accepted and are already on the field. But the great majority are of tender years and need to complete their education and mature their character before they enter upon their life work. It is well to emphasize the fact that the church must have educated workers. The Mission Board can send to the field only those who are well prepared to meet the contest with the false religions of the world. With the general world-wide advance in education, the churches are demanding more and more a well trained ministry. Many of our young volunteers in the flush of their consecration wish to enter at once upon service. But this of course cannot be. A call to Christian service means first a call to prepare for that service. Their pastors and other nearby friends will gladly explain these things to them. Meantime let these dear young people talk to these wise friends and enter into whatever church activity is at hand, attending church, Sunday school, Epworth League and Missionary Society, and taking an active part in the same. Above all let them talk to their Heavenly Father from day to day about their life plans and purposes. They should also meet with one another and exchange experiences, confidences, and hopes and see that the heavenly vision that has come to them does not fade, and that they are increasingly obedient to that vision.

"What must we do now?" ask some of our volunteers. The answer is, go to school and continue your education. Make your arrangements to enter one of our Methodist schools or colleges this fall. Write to the president of the institution at once about conditions of entrance. Confer with your pastor about this. "But if we have not enough means to go to school?" Tell your pastor this and also the school president. Many of our schools have aid funds to help their students who need it. At other schools there are ways of making some money at odd hours to help defray expenses. Ask about this.

As is known, there was an item of a million dollars in the budget of the Christian Education Movement to aid students in their college expenses. It is well to say that this fund is not yet available, for two reasons. One is that only about eighteen millions of the thirty-three millions asked for by the Christian Education Movement has as yet been subscribed, and another is that the first payment of the subscription made will not be due until the first of next October. There is a limited fund already on hand for students for the ministry but it has to be used mostly for ministerial students in their college and seminary years. Write me about this fund. Some twenty of our Annual Conferences have funds for assisting students for the ministry from their Conference. Write the President of the Board of Education of your Annual Conference about this.

Meantime it would seem to be an easy and small matter, but great in results to the Kingdom of God, for a pastoral charge to help with his or her college expenses a young volunteer in that charge. If he or she can say, "Here am I, send me," surely the church can say, "Here is the few hundred dollars to fit you for the work to which God has called you." Of course, your pastor will gladly take this matter up in the proper way. What investment for the church will produce greater assets?

According to the joint plan agreed upon by the different Boards of the church, the names of the five thousand volunteers have been referred to the Board in charge of the work for which they have volunteered, as follows: Men volunteering for Missions, Rev. C. G. Hounshell; women volunteering for Missions, Mrs. H. R. Steele; volunteers for Sunday school work, Rev. E. B. Chappell; for Religious Education, Rev. C. D. Bulla; for the ministry, Rev. R. H. Bennett; for other kinds of work or those as yet undecided on their field of service, Rev. R. H. Bennett. The address of these secretaries is 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., except that of Rev. R. H. Bennett, whose address is 160 Fourth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn. Write to them for any information or literature needed. It is their privilege and pleasure to counsel and help you. We do not handle the names of part-time volunteers. These should be kept by the volunteers' pastor.

We must cultivate these dear young friends. In many cases they are immature and need guidance and help. A distant office, however desirous, can only help in part. It is the nearby pastor, parent or friend in personal touch who can lay his hand upon these young lives and hold them to the way that shineth unto the perfect day. In them is the potential army the church must have for tomorrow's advance. Not to cultivate and train them is the height of suicidal folly.

If the volunteers will preserve this article, it will save much correspondence. And if their pastors and other friends will co-operate in the suggestions made above, as no doubt many of them are already doing, it will conserve many a young life to an increasingly rich service in the Kingdom of our Master, and will mean for the church one of the greatest advances in its history.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Rev. JOHN MARSHALL was born in North Carolina in 1828, and died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eugene Owen, on April 19, 1921. For nearly a century he served his day and generation and then, like a child in the great house of his father, lay down to rest. Years of life were spent in Texas, where he served the people as judge in the courts of justice and attorney-at-law. He served as an itinerant preacher in the Louisiana Conference during the trying period following the Civil War, when, owing to the responsibility assumed in rearing orphaned children, he was compelled to locate.

Brother Marshall's faith was that of a seer or prophet. He had an insight into spiritual things that was wonderful in its clairvoyance. To him God was immanent in all. His heart was as tender as that of a child, and yet he was one who had read what men had said on the subjects of life and faith. He loathed that which is vile, low, and mean, and honored them who feared the Lord. To him death was but passing from one apartment of God's great house into another. It was my privilege to know him intimately and many were the hours of joyous fellowship. May God's richest grace rest upon those who cared for this aged servant of God in his declining years and may the memory of his exemplary life comfort them.

Grand Cane, La.

In the city hospital in Biloxi, Miss., on the 9th day of June, 1921, the spirit of Mrs. Sue Smally (nee Cunningham), returned to God who gave it. From the Methodist church at Coalville her precious body was carried to the cemetery and placed beneath a bank of beautiful flowers to await the resurrection morning. Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. G. W. McLain, pastor of the Coalville church, assisted by Rev. G. W. Huff and Rev. L. Fayard. At the age of 16 years Sister Smally gave her heart to Jesus and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Grand Bay, Alabama. At the time of her death she was a member of one of our Methodist churches at Mobile, Ala. Hers was a well-rounded Christian life. Truly the church has lost a faithful member, the sorrowing husband a companion, and we have lost a friend. Besides her husband she leaves four sisters and a host of friends to mourn her going. Our sympathy and prayers go out to them at this time of sorrow. We would say, "Friends, God does all things well; therefore let us bow in humble submission to His will."

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our beloved president, Mrs. OLIVIA BROWNING, has gone from our midst and entered into her Eternal rest, thereby causing a vacancy which will be difficult to fill, and in her death our church has lost a loyal member, our Society a wise, painstaking president, and each of us a personal friend, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who "doeth all things well."
2. That we extend to the relatives our heartfelt sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent them.
3. That a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. H. B. Wren, Mrs. Helen Bussa, Mrs. Anna Ferguson.

RESOLUTIONS.

On March 21, 1921, the spirit of Mrs. HARDY J. POOLE returned to God who gave it. Hers was a life beautiful—full of good deeds and expressive of the highest ideals of the Christian life. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in early life, and her life was ever a demonstration of the religion she professed.

She was not only loved by her friends, but was depended upon by them, and her willingness to help was at all times noticeable.

She was a faithful member of our Missionary Society and will be sadly missed in the Society, as well as in the church and community.

Therefore, realizing our loss and feeling our bereavement, the following resolutions were adopted:

1. We bow to the will of God and say, "He doeth all things well," even though we would have kept her with us longer.
2. We, as a Society, express thus formally our great love for Mrs. Poole and our appreciation of her devotion to the work.
3. That we assure the family and friends of our continued sympathy and prayers for them in their great sorrow.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the minutes, and one sent to our local paper, and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. K. I. Bean, Mrs. J. W. Carroway, Mrs. John E. Cooper. Committee

FROM NOXAPATER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We had a great revival in Noxapater, one that was far-reaching. Brother W. M. McIntosh did the preaching, and Mr. Robert Cooper, of Aberdeen, led the singing, and he is a fine leader. There were twenty-two additions to the church, several by certificate, the others by vows and baptism.

Our work throughout the charge is moving on well.

Mrs. C. C. Gunn, the mother of our church here, met with a serious accident in the city of Jackson recently; she fell and broke one of her lower limbs. Notwithstanding her age and the hot days, she is doing nicely. We are praying that her life may be spared yet to the church she loves so much.

Very truly,

J. A. GOAD, Pastor.

LAST CALL FOR JUNALUSKA MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

If all our people knew what a treat has been prepared for them at the General Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska, July 29-August 7, we would witness there the greatest gathering ever held in Southern Methodism. For the platform a splendid array of talent has been secured—men and women of vision, bringing messages that cannot fail to inspire and fit for larger leadership all who hear them. Among these may be mentioned Hon. Josephus Daniels, Ex-Senator W. R. Webb, Drs. Charles L. Goodell, O. E. Brown, W. W. Alexander, Guy S. Inman, W. W. Pinson, Ed. F. Cook, T. H. Haden, Arthur H. Armstrong, Carlton D. Harris, F. N. Parker, J. A. G. Shipley, W. D. Weatherford, E. L. Pell, Mrs. W. P. McDermott, Mrs. H. R. Steele and Miss Mabel K. Howell.

In addition there will be institutes, round table discussions, illustrated lectures, etc. For those who desire not to listen only but to do real work, there will be conducted also a regular School of Missions, with courses on Missionary Pedagogy, the Missionary Message of the Bible, Stewardship, Inter-Racial Relationships, the Kingdom and the Nations, and Southern Methodist Missions. A certificate counting toward a diploma will be given for each course completed.

ABLE TO DO HER WORK

After Long Suffering Mrs. Siefert Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pottsville, Pa.—“I suffered with female trouble for four or five years and was very irregular. I was not fit to do my work at times and took medicine from a doctor and got no benefit. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers and took it and got all right. I gained twenty pounds or more and am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial.”—Mrs. SALLIE SIEFERT, 313 W. Fourth Street, Pottsville, Pa.

The everyday life of many housewives is a continual struggle with weakness and pain. There is nothing more wearing than the ceaseless round of household duties and they become doubly hard when some female trouble makes every bone and muscle ache, and nerves all on edge.

If you are one of these women do not suffer for four or five years as Mrs. Siefert did, but profit by her experience and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

scenic attractions of Lake Junaluska, nestled in the heart of Skyland, the invigorating altitude, and the afternoons open for rest or recreation, and one can hardly imagine conditions more favorable for a glorious ten days, from which one will return refreshed and stimulated in body and spirit, and eager to take up life's tasks anew.

To make sure of reservations, write at once to J. Dale Stentz, Lake Junaluska, N. C. He will reserve hotel space for you and send you certificate entitling you to special railroad rate of one and a half fares for the round trip.

FROM SULPHUR AND VINTON CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed one of the best meetings that were ever held in the Methodist church at Vinton. Brother H. T. Young did the preaching. His strong faith in God, his uncompromising attitude towards sin, and his consecrated life make him one of the strongest men of our Conference. He brought a great blessing to our own lives and to the church. There were twenty-four additions to the church, most of them on profession of faith. Men and women from the best and strongest families of the town came into the church and consecrated their lives to the work. The work there has been growing constantly, because of the fact that we have had those in the church who have lived consistent Christian lives. We are praying that God might increase the tribe of those who believe in scriptural holiness and live it.

We are expecting a great meeting here at Sulphur in September, when Brother Young will be with us again. Pray for us, brethren.

WAR OR PEACE? IT'S UP TO YOU!

A Staggering Challenge to the Churches of America.

By Robert B. Eleazer.

The preachers and the Christian people of America never faced a more vigorous and arresting challenge than that flung them a few days ago by General Tasker H. Bliss. Read his burning words and inquire of your conscience if they are not true. And if they are, then in the name of God and humanity act, preacher and layman, individually and collectively. The hour is ripe for the world to take a great forward step. It awaits only the leadership of the Christian men and women of America.

This is what General Bliss said: “If the clergymen of the United States want to secure a limitation of armaments, they can do it now without further waste of time. If, on an agreed date, they simultaneously preach one sermon on this subject, in every church of every creed throughout the United States, and conclude their services by having their congregation adopt a resolution addressed to their particular Congressman urging upon him the necessity of having a business conference of five nations upon this subject, the thing will be done. If the churches cannot agree upon that, it will not be done nor will it be done until the good God puts into them the proper spirit of their religion. The responsibility is entirely upon the professing Christians of the United States. If another war like the last one should come, they will be responsible for every drop of blood that will be shed and for every dollar wastefully expended.”

A simple suggestion, brother pastor, and fraught with vast possibilities. Will you not act upon it at once, and thus deliver your soul?

And you, brother or sister layman, there is something of great importance for you to do. Write the President and your Congressman to-day! Get petitions signed and resolutions passed by churches, Sunday schools, Leagues and Missionary Societies, and forward them to Washington.

It's up to you. What will you do about it?

Open the window of our spirits, O Lord, and fill us full of light; open wide the door of our hearts that we may receive and entertain thee with all our powers of adoration and love. Amen.—Christiana Rossetti.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Last Thursday was spent in Hattiesburg. I had the delightful privilege of visiting the workers of the churches there—that is, part of them. They were most kind and cordial.

Main Street was in a meeting led by Brother Klein. The meeting was progressing very nicely. Awful hot weather for a meeting. They had a good attendance and from comments a fine interest.

Sunday was spent in Clyde. This Sunday school is doing a good work and will measure up very favorably indeed. I feel that they will move forward. They have some very fine workers and all seem to be taking a great interest.

A Boy Scout and Girl Scout movement is on among the Intermediates and this will do the young folks much good.

We are still trying to get circuits and stations or individual Sunday schools to give us a class of students to put on the Training Course. We will furnish everything but the books and the students. Let's make a great effort to have many classes taught this summer and fall.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The month of July has a fifth Sunday, and much literature has been sent out by the Field Secretary and the presiding elders about four-times-a-year Institutes; now let every charge begin this month to put on this excellent program. A few have done so.

A letter from the Teacher-training Department says: "A number of the students at Mansfield Standard Training in June have asked for the examination question to secure the second unit credit." We'll never cease to hear good reports from that great school.

The Field Secretary and Miss Caroline Hess will spend three weeks at Lake Junaluska, N. C., attending the Training School for Leaders, July 13-27. ALONZO EARLY, 306-15th Street, Alexandria, La.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Wesley Bible Class Federation held at Grenada College, June 20, elected Prof. J. R. Brinson, Senatobia, President; Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Shelby, Vice-President; Mr. S. C. Lindsey, Eupora, Secretary-Treasurer. District officers were also elected. Two objectives were adopted: Increase the organization, and secure a complete list of classes already organized. I am glad to report several new classes have been organized as a result of the federation.

The training school had an enrollment of 130; 30 schools were represented; 87 took credit work. We had teachers from the stations and from the circuits; we had young people and mature people. The student body took the matter seriously and did as fine study as the calling deserved. Young and old had a joyous time, socially; the Holy Spirit graciously pervaded the entire body until the atmosphere of the heavenly world enveloped all of us. On Wednesday, at the noon hour set apart for devotions, Julien Duncan led the services. Sixteen young people gave themselves for definite service, five of them for full time. Our visiting teachers said this school has set the pace for Southern Methodism. Miss Covington, of the Alabama Conference, taught the class of Beginner Pupils. A young girl from Hernando gave the following paper that gives expression to her feelings and to the feelings of all the young people present:

"I cannot begin to tell all I have really gotten out of the training school this week. I think the main way it has helped me, it has given me a clearer idea of what Christian education really means. Before coming here I was always quite embarrassed when I was in a crowd discussing Bible topics, and now I see my mistake.

"I have also learned to appreciate good lectures as I have never done before. Also I did not know that a crowd at a religious gathering like this could have such a good time. I thought that really every one had to be quite stiff, but I can truthfully say that I never enjoyed a week from home any more than I have enjoyed this one.

"I have also gained a clear view of the nature of a child four and five years old; and when I go home I feel that I will be of more service to my companions and especially to my class of Beginners. BERNICE BAILEY."

Judge John W. Kyle, of Sardis, and Prof. J. Reese Lin, of Millsaps College, delivered lectures that edified and charmed young and old. We had not heard them before, but we hope to have them with us next year.

We have planned to hold a Standard District Training School at Corinth, August 15-20, and one at Sardis, August 24-30. The same class of work will be done at these district schools as is done at Lake Junaluska and in the Conference schools. It will be worth a great deal to those who are managing these schools if we could get a line from them saying what course they expect to take. Those in the Corinth District should write Rev. J. B. Randolph and in the Sardis District, Rev. E. G. Mohler.

The Corinth District Standard Training School will be under the following management: Director, Rev. J. B. Randolph, Corinth; Managers: J. G. Houston, New Albany; J. J. Taylor, Booneville; H. E. Finger, Ripley; Mrs. A. H. Patrick, Corinth; Mrs. C. W. McKnight, Iuka; Miss Jimmie Caldwell, Sherman; W. C. McCay, Baldwin.

Tired Mothers. It's hard work to take care of children and to cook, sweep, wash, sew and mend besides. Tired mothers should take Hood's Sarsaparilla—it refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, assures restful sleep, and helps in many ways.—Adv.

FROM RULEVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a line from Ruleville and Daddsville. Plans for protracted meetings, with the very best preaching talent in the North Mississippi Conference, or in any other Conference as to that, have been made. W. N. Duncan to do the preaching at Daddsville, commencing the third Sunday in July, and L. M. Lipscomb at Ruleville, commencing July 27. These are small Delta towns, but with many big people living in them, or near by, and we are praying and working for a great outpouring of Divine grace and power on these two meetings.

I go over into old Carroll to-morrow to commence a meeting with Brother W. H. Hester at Smith's Chapel the second Sunday morning in this month.

We are trusting in the Lord to help us do some good. Very hot and dry in this part of the Delta yet.

Cordially your brother,
W. S. SHIPMAN.

Our Missionary Society is a force for good in the community. Through its influence we see our women developing into brighter, more useful, consecrated Christians.

We are studying the Gospel of John. So replete is it with food for the soul that ever as we dig deeper into its blessed truths, we feel that we are treading on holy ground. Indeed, Christ is shown forth in every word.

Niebergall, State President. Mrs. Niebergall brought to us a fresh inspiration, using as her topic, "What does the Lord require of us?"

Mrs. G. M. Scarle gave a very gracious welcome to the Conference, and to our new District Secretary.

Mrs. Stearns in replying and in an introductory talk, revealed to us her great enthusiasm in this new field of work. She gave plans for the coming year, and asked for the strong co-operation of the different auxiliaries.

Mrs. Harper's talk on children was full of meaning, and so near to our hearts—bringing us to realize that we were neglecting a precious privilege, that of training our children in the mission work.

Mrs. Duvall's message on Social Service was broad in its suggested activities. From her remarks, we gathered how much help and how much hope we could give to an unfortunate fellow-creature by a little kindness. It was decided that Mrs. Duvall's paper be given to the Christian Advocate and The Voice for publication.

Brother Lutz gave a short, convincing talk on the evils which the church is facing to-day—giving Christian education as the only solution of these problems. He asked for greater support for Mansfield and Centenary Colleges.

Brother Joyner addressed the Conference on "The Organization of Women." He said that the church felt the influence of the organization in many ways—that they were a great force for moral development and general uplift.

Mrs. Niebergall followed Brother Joyner with suggestions, and plans for enlarging our organization. She talked generally on the different lines that are included in our Council work—"The Motion Pictures," "Children's Work," the Scarritt Bible and Training School, and the growing menace to our social life—the divorce evil.

Just before adjourning for the noon hour, Brother Early, a former pastor of Amite, was asked to say a few words to his old co-workers and to the Conference.

The afternoon session was opened with the hymn, "Divine Love." The devotional was led by Miss Bradford. Her talk was sweet and full of spiritual force. She visualized the work we might accomplish in extending the Christian spirit if we would only reach out and take and make use of the great power that is always awaiting us.

Roll call of the auxiliaries was the most interesting feature of the session. The report brought about a real community spirit, which seemed akin to a Methodist experience meeting.

Mrs. Taylor was appointed to succeed Mrs. Johns as chairman of committee for care of the district parsonage.

Mrs. Skolfield, of Baton Rouge, showed a helpful chart that she had drawn to use in their Bible Study.

A vocal solo, "Flee as a Bird," by Mrs. H. E. Burnham, was much appreciated.

Motion was made by Miss Bradford and carried that the Conference meet a day in advance of the laymen's conference, so that the delegates might enjoy the sessions of both conferences.

A rising vote of thanks was given to the Amite auxiliary for the delightful hospitality extended to the delegates.

Mrs. Stearns in a loving word of parting, urged us to bring up every phase of the auxiliary work in full, and if possible increase our activities.

Hammond will be our meeting-place next year.

THE COMPANIONSHIP OF FEAR.

All psychologies make not a little of fear as a human experience, generally treating the subject under the head of "phobias," or dreads, of which a large number are listed, and in a way accounted for in many instances by natural laws or heredity. Theology takes up the story of fear and treats it in two aspects—fear in the sense of dread, horror, and a certain "fearful looking for of judgment," which is the final outcome, if not the immediate accompaniment, of all sin unrepented of, and fear in the sense of filial regard, reverence for superiors, and awesome contemplation of the universe, which is a mark of the experience of all normal natures. So the great Kant said, "Two things fill me with unutterable awe—the starry heavens above and the moral law within."

That man must be dead while he lives who has no respect for authority, no feeling of reverence in the presence of the eternal verities, and no aspiration after a knowledge of God. While now there is a certain company which, in the case of the remorse-driven wicked, misery loves, there is also—which is far better—fellowship of fear in which the righteous join. "I am a companion of all them that fear thee," said the Psalmist. The words are deeply impressive and strikingly suggestive. This fear that makes akin all pure spirits in all ages and climes is essentially a reverential worship of the divine Creator, and a recognition that all life comes from and returns to Him, joined with an earnest effort, during all of this earthly life, to realize His will in human action and institutions.

What we all need is a deeper sense of this solidarity of spiritual experience the world over, a heightened realization that we, if sincere Christians, are companions of all that fear God, and the corollary of this main proposition is that any believer, Chinaman, Japanese, South Sea Islander, Hottentot, or otherwise, whether he be a convert from a civilized or a pagan nation, is our brother in Christ, and a fellow-heir of immortal blessedness. Of the fear that makes cowards and slaves we have no need, but that "fear" which is a reverence, awe, and worship of the Eternal as revealed in the person and work of Jesus, makes us all one, in the bonds of a blessed fellowship, where headship is centered in the Christ, and all are lovingly and helpfully "members one of another."—Zion's Herald.

BIBLE SCHOOL FOR PASTORS AND EVANGELISTS.

The opportunity that is to be afforded the evangelists and pastors in beautiful Lake Junaluska, August 14-21, is supplying a "long-felt want," not to say an absolute need. Evangelists and pastors should be congratulated on having the privilege of this closer relationship.

There is a more sympathetic feeling existing between pastors and evangelists than I have ever known, and much of it is due to the untiring efforts of that prince among men, Bishop John M. Moore, and his worthy successor, Dr. O. E. Goddard.

Every evangelist appreciates the opportunity of this closer relationship with the pastors and it is bound to result in great good and be the means of bringing thousands of souls into our beloved Southern Methodist Church.

My work carries me over the South and West, largely, and I have noticed much activity among sister denominations, notably the Baptists, along this line, which has gone a long way in promoting a revival spirit in their church. With our superior numbers and larger organizations, better equipment, broader doctrines, the Southern Methodist Church will be absolutely invincible if the purpose of this Junaluska meeting can be gotten before the men and women of our church.

I find it easier to lead men to God during the last six months than I have found it in years. It seems they have tried everything else and have failed and are now turning to Jesus Christ. I reach more men than women; boys are easier reached than girls. Why? These and many other questions should be discussed between pastors, evangelists and bishops.

Lake Junaluska is the place and August 14-21 is the time.

FROM DECATUR AND HICKORY CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: It has been sometime since I wrote to the Advocate, but I am still deeply interested in all the affairs of the church. I have had quite a hard time since I left Louisiana and came back to Mississippi, but there is a better day further on for me I am sure.

Last December, at the request of two or three P. E.'s, I swapped my appointment at Eden, Miss., for the Decatur and Hickory charge. Up to that time I had swapped almost everything, such as horses, knives, etc., but I had never swapped appointments before, and I want to tell you, Brother Editor, that you can get beat in swapping appointments just as you can in swapping anything else. Well, so much for that! I am glad I am here. I feel sure I am right where the Lord wants me to be. I found lots of work to do over here, and I like that, and by the help of the Lord I am getting it done. The old parsonage at Decatur, that has been here so long and has housed so many of God's anointed and their little flocks, has been torn away, and a nice new six-room bungalow is being erected in its stead. It will be a home that the church will be proud of. My wife and I have rooms with Prof. and Mrs. Pugh in the boys' dormitory while the building is going on. We are very pleasantly situated and getting along fine. Decatur is a very important place to preach on account of the Agricultural High School's being located here. We have a very fine body of young men and women during the school months, and we feel that the very best is none too good for them. Prof. R. C. Pugh, the principal, is a fine Christian gentleman and a splendid school man.

Will Prevent Much Sickness.

These enervating days are fraught with danger to people whose systems are poorly sustained. This leads the makers of Hood's Sarsaparilla to say, in the interest of the less robust, that the full effect of this good old family medicine justifies calling it, not only a blood-purifier but also a tonic. It is sustaining. It gives strength, aids digestion, promotes refreshing sleep, and will prevent much sickness at this time of year. Hood's Pills, which are gentle and thorough, may be taken with it, in cases where there is need of a cathartic or laxative.—Adv.

I thought I would get to build a nice concrete block church at Hickory this year (the dream of my life has been to build a concrete church), but they are not quite ready yet, so if all goes well I hope to do that next year. We have a very fine people to serve at Hickory, and I am sure when they do get ready to build a church it will be no mean affair.

I am glad to say that my health is greatly improved and I attribute it all to out-door work. I have pulled the bell-cord around old Beck a few times and I have wielded the shovel and the hoe, and I have a fine garden, corn patch, and chickens galore.

The Lord bless you, Brother Carley, and all the preachers in their separate charges is my daily prayer.

Yours in His name,

H. BROOKS PERRITT.

MISSISSIPPI CONGRESSMAN OPPOSES CIGARETTE SMOKING BY WOMEN.

The anti-smoking bill, introduced by Congressman Paul B. Johnson, of Mississippi, to prohibit women in the District of Columbia from smoking cigarettes, is the subject of considerable comment by New York and Washington newspapers, while many personal letters, some approving, some disapproving, have flooded the office of the Congressman.

The bill prohibits "any female persons in the District of Columbia from smoking cigarettes in any public place," and it also prohibits owners of public places from permitting females to smoke, subjecting any violator of the law to a maximum fine of $25 for the first offense and not less than $100 for subsequent offenses.

For Nation's Welfare.

Congressman Johnson, in being interviewed on the subject, avers that his sole purpose in introducing the bill is for the welfare of the women of America.

"Cigarette smoking by women is a bad thing and is going to contaminate the race," said Mr. Johnson. "A woman who smokes and nurses her child transmits the evil effects of smoking."

"The women really don't want to smoke. They smoke because those who are looked upon as leaders set the pace and they feel that they have to follow. Women as a whole are in favor of legislation of this character. I have a great many letters from the people down in my district saying so."

Mr. Johnson is quoted as follows in the New York Times of recent date:

"Regulating smoking by women comes under police power, and, as it is well known, police powers are practically without limit. Down in my State we have a law that a man shall not curse in the presence of women. I have punished many a man under that law and it is held to be constitutional."

Too Much Smoking.

"There is too much smoking by women to-day, and there are a great many women who would like to have it ended. Besides, the men do not look with respect upon women who do smoke. I have been assured that I will have a lot of support for the measure.

"I was brought up to reverence women," concluded the Congressman, "but I must confess that my respect for them drops when I see them smoking."

The bill is the subject of much comment in Washington, and many assurances have been received by Congressman Johnson that his measure will have the active support of the women of the country who realize the danger of the habit of cigarette smoking spreading among the women.—Bulletin.

A REVIVAL THAT REVIVES IN OIL CITY, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed a four weeks' revival here in Oil City on June 27, a revival that revives after the evangelist is gone. Brother George D. Anders preached the gospel for one week without fear or favor, and the Holy Spirit honored his messages. Brother Anders is a stump-puller in a meeting, especially where you have church stumps to pull.

Brothers Dan E. Kelly and John Kelly arrived on June 4, and remained through the meeting. These men of God did not spare themselves in this fight for God and the church. Brother Kelly put so much of God in each service that sin in all of its wickedness was exposed, and many church members and non-church members who were sinners together took the preacher's hand and said, "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

During the meeting 115 new members joined the churches. Of this number 88 joined the Methodist Church, and 27 the Baptist Church. The last night of the meeting, 24 men walked down and stood before the congregation and said they would hold prayer meeting if they were asked to do so; 47 women also took a similar stand. These men and women represented the Methodist and Baptist churches. This is a typical missionary field, morally, socially and financially. Every vice under the sun is practiced in the oil fields, and this one is no exception. The moral lines were so closely drawn here in Oil City that when a man broke ranks with sin and gave his heart to God, he had to burn the bridge behind him. In the afternoon of the last Sunday of the meeting, there were held a mass meeting for men in the Y. M. C. A. and a meeting for women in the Methodist church. These two meetings were held under the auspices of the "Citizens' Law and Order League." Brother Dan Kelly made one of his characteristic addresses to men only, which was both politic and forceful. Brother W. W. Drake addressed the women's meeting, and practically 100 agreed to stand for law and order in this community. More than this number of men signed their names to a document as follows: "We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to become members of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Oil City, La., and to assist in co-operating with the constituted authorities in freeing this community from the evils of gambling, prostitution and the illegal sale and distribution of spirituous liquors."

More than 100 members have been added to the church since Conference, and we have our new church practically finished. The above meeting was held in our new church, which will cost about $6000. We went $1785 over our quota in the educational drive.

D. L. GRIFFIN, P. C.

HOW THE PRESS HELPED.

If the drive for $30,000,000 for Southern Methodist schools turns out to be as large a success as now promises, the church press deserves the largest share of the credit, and the next largest goes to the managers, who had the wisdom to see that their advantage lay in an unprecedented use of these organs. Elmer T. Clark, who was publicity secretary of the Christian Education Commission, gives the papers the highest praise for their service:

"It was magnificent—this spirit of unalloyed fidelity to the greatest thing the church ever asked her people to do. And I'd like to have some stars—and some gold—so that I could he-fewel the crowns of the editors with the one and place their papers beyond the handicap of need with the other. This is their due. Out of sheer admiration and gratitude I'd like to do it."

"The shame of it is that Methodists do not appreciate such a service as this. Think of it! Only ten per cent of our members ever read their own journals: nine out of ten never see an Advocate unless they borrow it from a neighbor."

"So when the church wants to launch a forward enterprise she must spend thousands upon thousands for literature with which to reach these people—and it could all be saved if the rank and file of Methodists displayed one tittle of the loyalty which characterizes these organs."

We print this not because we share in the credit, but because we share in his belief in the value of the church press to the promotion of every church enterprise. We doubt not that most of these papers "lose money," as the harsh critics say. Most church papers do. But their deficit in paying for white paper, composition and press-work is made up a hundred-fold in the value of the intelligence they disseminate, the enthusiasm they kindle, and in the gifts which consequently flow into the treasuries of Methodism.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

There is always a great conflict being waged between the flesh and the spirit. The struggle on the part of the soul is to realize itself in the perfect joy of affinity with its Creator. The struggle on the part of the flesh is one of obstruction to the spirit—a struggle in which the baser passions try to dominate and to gain the ascendancy. This is what usually results when man lives apart from God, and, by so doing, fails to place a right value on his own soul.—Henry Lowndes Drew.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

LEARN TO BE CONTENT.

When Paul said that he had learned, in whatever state he was, therewith to be content, he was not giving expression to a feeling of indolent unconcern, but describing a highly developed state of grace. He had learned the lesson of contentment through many a hardship, many a period of persecution, many a day of want. He was not content because he always had everything he needed—though there were times of plenty—but because he was doing his best in the service of God. He received help from a source that was amply able to supply all his needs of body, mind, and spirit. His dependence was upon Christ. It is this lesson that many of us need to learn to-day. If we have the consciousness within ourselves that we are doing all we can do for the accomplishment of the divine will, and if our trust is wholly fixed upon Christ, we may very well afford to be undismayed by even the most untoward outward circumstances. Much of the unrest of the world to-day would vanish if men would realize that humanity linked with divinity is omnipotent.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER.

The new Prohibition Commissioner, Major Roy A. Haynes, in his first public statement after assuming office, hits straight from the shoulder in outlining his conception of the duties of his responsible position. Among other things, he says: "In unmistakable language America has spoken for prohibition. Federal constitutional provision has been made for it. Laws have been enacted for its enforcement. The law should be enforced. The man or woman or agency which condones its violation, or becomes a party to its violation, or encourages a sentiment of laxity in regard to its enforcement, is helping to create, consciously or unconsciously, a very serious condition. * * * At the very outset of my administration of this office I want to preach the gospel of the need of law enforcement. If there was ever a time in the history of America when all good citizens should unite on a program of law enforcement in the home, in the school, in the church, and in the press, it is to-day. * * * Any other policy toward law in general means chaos, means Bolshevism. * * * I pledge, God helping me, every ounce of vigor and ability there is in me to this end. With comparatively few officials to enforce the eighteenth amendment, it cannot be effectively done without the co-operation of a patriotic and helpful citizenship. My ambition is to see the dry law, as all laws, generally and properly enforced. We can readily bring about this splendid result and high aspiration if we all dedicate ourselves to the patriotic program of believing, preaching, talking, and practicing the gospel of law enforcement. To this platform I shall devote all of my energies, and I believe that I shall have the co-operation of all true, broad-minded, patriotic Americans, who put love of country and regard for its very foundation—law and order—in their proper and fundamental relationship." How pitifully small by the side of this vigorous, outspoken type of patriotism seems the attitude of the brewers and other opponents of prohibition who flagrantly, even boastfully, violate persistently the requirements of good citizenship!

A MOVE TOWARD PERMANENT PEACE.

President Harding's invitation to the great nations to meet in a conference to discuss the general subject of disarmament is, in our judgment, altogether to be commended. There can be no prospect of permanent peace so long as the nations of earth are armed for war. Premier Lloyd George spoke truly when he said: "It matters not what treaties are signed, what pacts are entered into between nations, what understandings they may establish; it makes no difference what leagues or associations they may found; if nations arm against each other for war, war will ensue in the end. * * * No treaty is of value unless it leads to an understanding among nations that they will not utilize their resources, their wealth and their strength for the purpose of developing the mechanism of human slaughter among themselves." A recent compilation of the statistics has shown that the great powers are spending at the rate of $10,000,000,000 a year in preparations for war—and that at a time when the world has barely begun to recover from the shock of the terrible carnage through which it has just passed. We can give credit for sincerity to those who maintain that military preparedness is the surest way to maintain world-wide peace—but we cannot agree with their opinion. If the engines of war are in readiness, sooner or later an occasion for their use will be found. And a peace that lays constantly increasing burdens upon the people through the drains it makes upon the material resources and man power is not much better, economically, than war, anyway. We need either to begin the process of disarmament, or confess frankly that universal peace is an unrealizable dream, and bend all our energies toward providing the most formidable equipment for human slaughter the world has ever known. The ideal toward which we move must be peace or war—and it ought to be peace.

UNREGENERATE HUMAN NATURE.

Most of the large cities of this country are passing through various experiences which show that unregenerate human nature cannot be relied upon to do anything that is contrary to self-interest. Just at the present time, New Orleans is in the throes of a fight against what are commonly—and appropriately called "rent hogs"—those owners of houses for rent who take advantage of the necessities of poor people especially to exact of them a rental that is out of all proportion to their ability to pay, or of the value of the houses themselves. They are of the same stripe with those whose patriotism during the war was conditioned upon self—those shameless and conscienceless profiteers who hesitated at no fraud against the Government in its dire need to add to their wealth, whom poetic justice would ultimately consign to the poorhouse in this life and to the eternal conflagration hereafter. No laws too stringent for controlling their rapacity can possibly be passed—but no law will curb their greed or restrain their lust for gold. Repressive measures ought to be passed, as they doubtless will be; but to strike at the root of the matter a power must be invoked that will change their hearts. When the Golden Rule becomes operative in business life, a new and better era will have dawned upon earth. That this Rule is practicable has been demonstrated again and again. A recent shining example is that of the Nash Company, of Cincinnati, which has experienced remarkable success while other enterprises have barely been able to keep out of bankruptcy. There has never been a greater incentive in the history of the world to preach the gospel and make application of its spiritual principles than there is right now. The legislature may make criminals respect the law, but only the gospel can make saints out of sinners.

ONE GAIN.

We have no idea that the extreme "blue laws" now before Congress will be passed by that body; but one gain from the agitation attending their introduction is the wholesome respect that will be instilled into the minds of the "antis" for the character and ability of the people who believe that moral questions are at least of as much importance as other questions that engage the attention of our national lawmakers. A mild majority is a mighty fine thing in a republic.

A PETITION.

Father, I know that all my life
Is portioned out for me,
And the changes that are sure to come
I do not fear to see;
But I ask Thee for a present mind,
Intent on pleasing Thee.

I ask Thee for a thoughtful love,
Through constant watching, wise,
To meet the glad with joyful smiles,
And to wipe the weeping eyes;
And a heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathize.

I would not have the restless will
That hurries to and fro,
Seeking for some great thing to do,
Or secret thing to know;
I would be treated as a child,
And guided where I go.

There are briars besetting every path,
That call for patient care;
There is a cross in every lot,
And an earnest need for prayer;
But the lowly heart that leans on Thee
Is happy anywhere.

OLD ST. GEORGE'S.

Edifice on Fourth Street the Cradle of American Methodism.

(The following article, furnished us by Mr. A. Trimble, of Natchez, Miss., descriptive of one of the historic churches of Methodism, will, we are sure, be of interest to many of our readers.—Editor.)

One of the details in the Delaware bridge report which attests the thoroughness with which the Board of Engineers has attacked this many-sided problem, is the section devoted to St. George's M. E. Church, on Fourth street, which stands in the line of the proposed approach. A body less inclusive in its breadth of view might have confined itself to the technical phase of the undertaking and, unmindful of the strength of the sentiment which attaches to such venerable landmarks, precipitated a prolonged squabble over the question of site, perhaps resulting in a complete change of plans. This obstruction to an early start on the work of constructing the big span has been all but obviated by the assurance of the engineers that the aged structure can be removed without incurring the slightest damage and their recommendation that the city furnish another location for it worthy of its historic importance. For St. George's is not only the first Methodist Church edifice erected in Philadelphia, but the only church belonging to Methodism in the United States now standing that was erected in the eighteenth century.

The significance of the church in development of Methodism in this country has not always been appreciated, even in Philadelphia. Indeed it was less than twenty years ago that something like an endowment fund was raised for its maintenance, through the efforts of a group of citizens which included among its members former Postmaster John Field and former Governor Pattison, who succeeded in drawing attention to it as the cradle of American Methodism. The origin of St. George's is almost contemporaneous with the beginning of the denomination in Philadelphia, for although the celebrated Whitefield had preached here almost a generation before, producing a profound impression by his eloquence and fervor, it was not until 1768 that the first society was organized here, probably under the administration of Captain Thomas Webb, who was in the British military service. At first meetings were held by the little company in a sail loft near the spot where Front street crossed Dock creek. In the following fall, when Joseph Pilmore was sent by Wesley to preach in Philadelphia, recourse was had to open-air meetings, and it is said that he began his ministry by delivering a sermon from the steps of the State House on Chestnut street, afterwards addressing large gatherings on the race course at Centre Square, where the City Hall now stands. By this time the congregation numbered about one hundred and the need of a suitable meeting place became pressing.

The opportunity to gain a permanent abode soon presented itself in the enforced sale of an unfinished building which had been begun by some members of the German Reformed Church of St. George, who had become swamped with debt. Though uncompleted, it was immediately used for religious services and for years had no other name than the preaching house, although in time it came to be known by the title selected for it by its original projectors. The growth of the first church, however, was very slow; the opposition was strong; pamphlets against Methodism were published, and the most extravagant denunciations were made. In July, 1773, when the first annual conference was held in this city, one hundred and eighty members were reported for Philadelphia, but this included not only those in the city, but all in Eastern Pennsylvania and northern Delaware. In the following two years great gains were registered throughout the Colonies generally, but the growth here was relatively small, and the period of the Revolution witnessed a considerable falling off in membership. While its congregation was made up almost wholly of those in humble stations of life, some noted men were attracted to St. George's by the occupants of its pulpit, and John Adams, in his diary for 1774, speaks highly of Captain Webb's "fluent and eloquent preaching."

If other reasons were lacking, the association of the name of Francis Asbury with St. George's would be sufficient to make it the object of reverent regard by all Methodists. It was there that he first raised his voice in Philadelphia, shortly after his arrival from England, and he occupied its pulpit time, and again in the course of his prolonged career. In it he held his first American watchnight, and the first three annual conferences, at which he presided, were held within its walls. His power as a missionary speaker, and his capacity as an executive did much to inspire the local society, and success was beginning to attend his efforts to build up Methodism in America when his work was brought almost to a close, at the outbreak of the Revolution, through his refusal to take the oath of allegiance prescribed by the Whigs. He was arrested and fined as a disloyalist, and finally fled to Delaware, where he remained until vindication restored his effectiveness as a pulpiteer. For his sympathies were entirely with the Colonists; he avowed that religious, not political, scruples prevented him from subscribing to what was regarded as a test of patriotism, and at a time when all other English-born clergymen returned to the mother country, he insisted that it was his duty to remain in the field to which he had been assigned by John Wesley.

During the occupation of Philadelphia by the British, St. George's, like many another local church, was put to military use by Howe's troopers. Stripped to its walls, it was transformed into a riding school for cavalymen, and the edifice was in wretched condition when the Rev. Freeborn Garretson, a native of Maryland, was sent by Asbury to build up the scattered congregation in 1779. A rough board floor was put down over the eastern end of the auditorium, the other half remained bare; rude seats were constructed, and a square box served as a pulpit. Its plight was a matter of deep concern to Asbury, who exerted himself to the utmost in aid of the struggling society and succeeded in raising two hundred and seventy pounds to meet arrears in ground rent in 1781, and four years later provided five hundred pounds to assist the church. During this period the little band of Methodists labored under peculiar difficulties. They were considered merely as members of a society; their ministers were not ordained, and for the performance of the rite of baptism or the celebration of the Lord's Supper they were compelled to hold membership in one or the other of the existing churches. The Revolution, however, disrupted most of these churches, and the Methodists became anxious to set up as a separate church, so that they might have the benefit of ordinances. With the return of peace, steps to this end were not long relayed, for in 1784 Wesley ordained Dr. Thomas Coke as bishop, requesting that Asbury be associated with him in the direction of the American churches, and at the famous Christmas conference in Baltimore, the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in this country.

At this time the number of Methodists in and about the city had risen to something like five hundred, and under the influence of the impetus given the faith by its formal organization, St. George's continued to make rapid strides. From a small prayer and class meeting which had been formed in Southwark, there developed in 1790 the Ebenezer congregation, a body which soon gained reputation for its intense zeal and itself the parent of flourishing offshoots. From the mother church in later years there came also the Nazareth and Salem churches; Old Brick, in Kensington, was under the control of St. George's during its infancy, and on its burial ground at Sixteenth and Coates (now Fairmount Avenue) Streets, the Heddon church was built.

For many years little was made of the historic identity of St. George's with the beginnings of Methodism in America. It was regarded by most Philadelphians who were aware of its existence as merely the home of a humble congregation in a neighborhood which had suffered from the inroads of trade and manufacture. Indeed it has been only during the term of service of the Rev. J. S. Hughes, who has occupied the pulpit for the last two decades, that a decided change came about in this attitude towards it. But few are the Methodists who now are unacquainted with its history, and the commemoration of its anniversary in the fall of the year has for some time past been the occasion for pilgrimages to it by congregations and Sunday schools throughout the city.—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

How can we escape so many conferences, institutes, assemblies, etc., et al., in these days of such—and some more? There seems to be an actual mania for getting together and talking about all the placés, purposes, ends, and intentions of every existent institute near or distantly related to the church; then to return home, strain the thing out, save the best of it, for if one attempt to apply all that is so freely given, he will have to hunt the garage where they mend overturned brains. Yes sir, I say it to all the world, that modern style, you know, we are emphasizing relative things and neglecting essential things. The Kingdom of God in the earth must be built up and maintained by faith, prayer, and preaching. And these simple, yet age-old means of grace and life, must be borne by faithful messengers to the homes and hearts of His people—right where these people live, toil, and suffer. The great problem that confronts us here is this—Are we reaching the people with the saving power of a saving Christ by all these gatherings? I grant you, some of these are necessary, but I fear they are too frequently made to take the place of revivals and other more direct and effective means for saving people. I am getting weary of theoretical methods being taught, which from their very nature cannot be applied in the average Methodist charge. As some one tersely put it, "They run over more than they pick up," and it's the picking up that counts. Now hear me, convention men and women, when I hear of a genuine, soul-saving revival taking place at one of your institutes or other named meets, then let me know of it—I want to join in the shouting.

It was a day in June. Clouds flecked the sky like plumed doves in flight; the sun beams kissed the corn fields with a rich chrism of life. All the world was glad and its joy was vocal in bird songs, and all the varied minstrelsy of praise ringing on the air, redolent with the incense of flowers. Then came Wisdom and grasped my hand in greeting as we met on the way of my going. Then together in fellowship, hand in hand, walked I with Wisdom, and the bright, glad worker seemed brighter for his coming. And full well I knew the help of his comradeship.

"Why all this glad life of bird and corn, this minstrelsy of song and beauty? It is only for a day—a brief season—and then to pass away." Wisdom's eyes shone like a crystal pool in forest depths, all luminous and radiant, and his voice was like distant bells of chimes breaking the soft stillness of evening, as he answered.

"The glory of the terrestrial is one and the glory of the celestial another. The beauty of earth is a promise and prophecy of a life beyond life. Men are passing, earth's best is transient, nature's songs and beauties are the lettering with which we spell out the eternal, which after all is the real Heaven, only is the lasting day in June."

Then a traveller passed. He saw none of the glory filling the glad earth, was deaf to its music, and there seemed no soul in the man. He only looked downward, never upward, never shaping his course before him; he only saw the earth—earthy. He glanced at us and stumbled onward.

Wisdom said: "Every soul is its own interpreter. To the Sons of Light vision is given, because with prayer made strong by faith, they have sought this from the King. The old story of Promethean fire is no mere myth. The lighted fires on the high altars of human hearts are from the divine heights. But the heavenly flame will not light the dead, cold altars of faithless souls."

Then came another by the way. The music of the rustling corn and all the choral symphony ringing from woodland and field seemed only the diapason of his glad song. The light of the summer day was well nigh outdone by his shining face. Firmly yet tenderly he grasped the outstretched hands of Wisdom, for these were friends for years, then went onward down the way, saying, "The King's business." "All of earth" said Wisdom "is a parable. The light without is but to show the light within; the glory and splendor of field, wood, and sky teach lessons of deeper meaning than their own beauty. The music of the hills is only the minor key. Some day to such as our friend and those like unto him, a song-burst will break upon the air of another summer land." And I was glad.

Ye crags and peaks, I'm with you once again.

Methinks I hear

A spirit in your echoes answer me,

And bid your tenant welcome to his home

Again.

THE EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN IN THE LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: Doubtless it will be of interest to Louisiana Methodism to know how the Lake Charles District conducted itself in the Educational Campaign. Mr. R. J. Wilson, of Lake Charles, who was the District Campaign Director, did heroic work. He let no opportunity pass to further the cause which he so ably represented. Seldom do we see one who is so intensely interested in church work as was Mr. Wilson in this movement. He devoted practically the whole of two months to the Movement and used his automobiles unstintingly. Together with the presiding elder he visited every charge in the district, and some of the charges he visited several times. It is needless to say that his work aided greatly in bringing the total of subscriptions to what it is. Mr. Wilson himself contributed $10,000 of the amount.

I give below the results of the campaign to date. It is earnestly hoped that many of the charges will make another canvass and pull the total to a far higher point. Naturally, there is much disappointment in the figures; but we cannot help but be grateful for the great good that has been done.

During the month of May Bishop McMurry made a trip through the district making stirring and convincing speeches at Lake Charles, Crowley, De Ridder, Lafayette, New Iberia and Morgan City. The Bishop is one of the most untiring workers I have ever seen; and his devotion to the church, and especially at this time to the Educational Movement, is so marked as to be worthy of especial notice.

The honor charges of the district of course are those which went "over the top." Hornbeck and Peason, Lake Charles, Lafayette, and Opelousas. J. M. Mashburn and O. A. Bobinette did fine work at Hornbeck and Peason. Mrs. J. J. Davidson, of Lafayette, is one of the most consecrated workers in the State. She directed the Movement there. At Opelousas J. L. Ballard deserves commendation. Under Brother Riggs' inspiring leadership old Opelousas has waked up and is making a fine record for itself.

On the Gueydan and Estherwood charge, Gueydan itself went above its quota of $2,000, but the average for the whole charge was less than the total quota. Brother Bernard is one of our most untiring and consecrated workers. At Rayne Brother Gunn directed the Movement himself and practically solicited all the subscriptions made. Pickering subscribed $1,145 on a quota of $1,100 on the Zwolle work, but the record was not quite maintained at Zwolle and Neame. Brother R. M. Brown labored day and night for the great cause. He did not spare himself; and the church is due to know of his devotion and unselfishness.

A record was made at Crowley also. The quota for this church was $1,000. Brother Freeman and his workers raised the quota with courage and ability. Brother Freeman did the work at this beautiful and important place. Only a few hundred dollars are lacking for the whole quota to be raised. This, it is hoped, will come later. Brother Freeman can do almost anything for the good of the church, and he can do this no doubt.

At Lake Charles Brother Davidson had a good organization under the leadership of T. L. Freeman, and the whole district was thoroughly canvassed. This is a fine record of organization with good work being done in all departments. Peace and harmony prevail everywhere.

Time and space would fail us to set forth the details of the fine work done at De Ridder, Lake Arthur, New Iberia, Indian Bayou and other places. Brother Lowrey at Indian Bayou has the most unique station in Southern Methodism. His membership is scattered over a vast area, being totally rural and engaged exclusively in agriculture. It will take some time thoroughly to canvass these six hundred members as it is hoped will be the ultimate result.

The Leesville quarterly conference passed a resolution to the effect that the drive would be completed in that church at a later and more prosperous time. Other charges will, it is hoped, do the same thing. It is well known that the Lake Charles District lies within the rice and cane growing sections of Louisiana, and that the financial depression over these areas at present is almost beyond description. What has been done evidences the loyalty of our people to their church. We do not feel that the result should be measured by the deficit. The Southern Methodist Church was never more thoroughly grounded in the hearts and consciences of our people than at this time. The campaign has not ended, and by the end of the year we hope the amount pledged by the Lake Charles District will be materially increased. It has seemed hard in the past to reach those able to give large sums to missions and to education; but no doubt God will lay such matters more closely upon their consciences in the future.

C. A. BATTLE, Presiding Elder.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

So it is Dr. Carley! I approve. There is a bumper crop of divinity doctors this season, and we need them, for our theology is getting in bad condition. With Genesis taught as mythology in our schools and Unitarianism preached from our pulpits, we are headed for the sanitarium or the graveyard. I got my "D.D." from Emory College when Atticus G. Haygood was its chief. The last time I saw Bishop Pierce was on that occasion. He was feeble, but was able to be at the service, and in those days commencement crowds were immense. One could not find standing room. If I remember correctly, "Marse Warren Candler" was editing the Wesleyan, acquiring that facility with his pen which he still displays. I was the commencement orator for that year. That is a type of speaker that is fast becoming obsolete now, and will soon be seen no more—utterly unlike your little piddling spouters of natural gas, which cost them nothing to produce? No, sir. There were orators on the platform that day. I don't say that I was one of them; but I made a speech, Carley! My subject was "American Civilization"—some subject that! The afflatus was on me, and I said things. Pierce applauded, Haygood clapped his hands, venerable doctors all around me said "Amen," and the vast audience cheered as I went swinging and soaring on the wings of iridescent words to high places of thought. After it was over, Haygood and I walked away together alone, and he said: "Now, honor bright, Steel, how does that speech compare with your average utterance?" "Far, far above it," I replied. He stopped suddenly, and, seizing my hand, said: "Thank God for an honest man!" There is little incentive now to make special preparation for public speaking, for if one exceeds twenty minutes the little tin cup auditors get full to overflowing and want the benediction and fresh air. Alas, I fear you young doctors can't do much to cure this affliction. I am glad I came up under a different regime, for among the richest treasures of memory are my recollections of the soul-stirring and life-lifting oratory of such public speakers as Marvin, and Munsey, and Doggett, and Pierce, and Kavanaugh, whose sermons were like veritable chariots of fire. Don't rest on your honors, Carley, but push on, for there is bigger work to be done.

I, too, have received a new title. It was not conferred by any college, bears no academic seal, or inscription of cryptic Latin, or legend of classic lore; but it is a genuine patent of nobility, and I shall henceforth feel afresh the inspiration of noblesse oblige. It was bestowed by a beautiful Virginia woman, who, when I was introduced to her, said: "I am happy to meet the Knight of the Pelican Pines!" So that is my title and I am proud of it, and of the source from which it came, the heart of a noble woman. Academic honors fade before the luster of a queenly woman. Of course, some grim skeleton, diseased from head to heel with cynicism and adept in the black art of writing anonymous letters, will grin, and say she had in mind Don Quixote and his crazy tilts with wind-mills, which he mistook for giants! These characters, like vermin, make a bath welcome. No, she had in mind King Arthur and his Table Round, and the knightly spirits that formed the starry galaxy of his court, "when knighthood was in flower." She reads what I write, she said so, and knows that I stand for the old ideals that have been crushed under the ponderous wheels of material progress. It was a graceful compliment to associate me in a sentimental way with the picked men of old through whom "the good King Arthur" thought to redress the wrongs of his realm and chase the heathen from the land. I want no higher honor!

Tennyson's "Idyls of the King" is an allegory that finds its illustration in our own time. Poor Arthur! His ideals were wrecked on the rocks of depravity and his heart broken by the failure of his lofty aim. He found his noblest knight the secret enemy of his peace, and his oldest covetous of the gems that glittered on Excalibur, and all unable to comprehend his work. All?—no, Sir Galahad was pure and sought the Holy Grail with honest heart. But, alas, the noble king's design vanished, and only the bitter disappointment remained as he drifted away to the fair island of Avalon "to heal him of his wounds." So with our Arthur over yonder in Washington, broken in body, doomed to see the splendid idealism that thrilled the world as millions of knightly lances leaped to light at his call, end in a political chaos. Like the king of old, Wilson was far ahead of his age. His "too proud to fight," and when forced to do it, "fighting to make the world safe for democracy," sound like the veriest sarcasm in the light of recent events in this land. The devil and Germany must have locked arms and laughed "unter der lindens" last week, when more than ninety thousand people went wild at the sight of two bulls beating each other up like beasts. They should have put a thoroughbred Polled Angus bull in against the human beast to determine which was the fittest to survive. Yet for a week all America was talking about an incident that exalted the ideal of brute force; the press teemed with it; the bulletin boards heralded it; the movies reproduced it; it was discussed with admiration of the human animals around myriads of fire-sides. Yet if it meant anything, it meant that the very thing we fought Germany for incorporating in her life, the principle of brute force, is the thing America admires. Idealism indeed! "Too proud to fight!" It is the old story of Launcelot and the recreant knights of Arthur's Table Round. To-day, as then, the very men we expect to uphold the realm drag its honor in the dust.

So Dr. Carley, buckle your armor tighter. The fight is on, but it is not won. The Dempsey display shows that the brute nature still controls us.

But the idealism of Wilson yet will win, and the day will come when men will blush to remember they ever fell so low as to boast a champion like the bully who won the "fight." Meantime don't forget that I am "The Knight of the Pelican Pines!"

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

The executive committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement met in Nashville, Tenn., June 8, 1921. The spirit of this meeting and the larger interest of the members of the Committee was all that could have been asked.

The regular business was dispatched with very great care and plans for the enlargement of the program of the Laymen's Missionary Movement were thoroughly discussed, and certain issues which had been in the mind of the Secretary for some time, were determined.

Mr. T. S. Southgate, who was the Chairman of the Executive Committee, found it impossible to serve in this capacity and resigned as Chairman. Judge W. Erskine Williams, of Fort Worth, Texas, was elected to succeed him.

Triennial Meeting.

The committee commenced to plan for the greatest triennial meeting ever yet held by the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the year 1923. The following resolution was passed:

"The triennial meetings of the laymen of our church under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement have been of invaluable service in promoting an enlarged program for our church and in developing definite Christian activities of our laymen in the service of the Kingdom. Be it resolved, therefore, by the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement in session this day, June 8, 1921, at Nashville, Tenn., that we begin now to plan for the greatest triennial meeting for our laymen in the year 1923 that we have as yet ever held. The leadership and co-operation of our laymen in bringing to a wonderfully successful conclusion the Centenary Movement and now in carrying through the Educational program puts a triumphant note in the very beginning of our preparation for this great conference of the men of our church two years hence. While the laymen's week at Junaluska, August 8-13, 1921, is not under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, we bespeak for it the earnest co-operation of our laymen in all of the Conferences. It is a matter for thanksgiving that the laymen of our church are showing more and more their capacity for leadership and initiation for work in the Kingdom of God."

Minute Man Program.

The Minute Man Program, which has become a part of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, will be more and more functioning through the local church as the church may have use for these men. An enlarged and definite program for enrolling laymen as lay-messengers who will speak in vacant pulpits of churches from Sunday to Sunday is being worked out. There is very great demand on the part of some churches for this sort of service. With the very many capable laymen that are in every presiding elder's district of our church there is no sufficient reason why we could not have a helpful religious service in every church every Sunday in the year.

In order that this may be carried forward more effectively and that the Conference and District Lay Leaders may understand more perfectly what is to be done, the month of January was set apart as the month in which there will be gatherings of all these leaders in every Annual Conference for special training.

Literature.

It was also decided that we ought to revise and bring up to date the pamphlets which give definite information for the various officials—Conference, District and Church Lay Leaders.

Annual Conference Board on Lay Activities.

Action was also taken as the consensus of opinion of this Executive Committee that the Board of Lay Activities of every Annual Conference should meet annually at some other time than that of the regular conference session.

Membership in the Local Church.

The following resolution was passed by the Committee:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of this Committee that the Committee on Lay Activities should enroll a membership in each congregation through which the Lay Activities may be made to function under the local executive committee as now constituted."

It has become more and more apparent that there must be a group in every local church through which the Laymen's Missionary Movement can more effectively function. The nucleus of this is found in the committees on Evangelism, Missions and Social Service. It is realized, however, that we need a larger group than that of the regular committees so that from now on under this action every local church will have authority to organize a local group representing the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Details of this will be published later, with suggestions of what ought to be done.

Junaluska.

A most interesting report was read concerning Junaluska and its government which indicated, as was the original plan, this property is in the hands of the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement as representing the entire church.

The following committee was appointed to co-operate with the local governing body at Junaluska: J. M. Pound, T. H. Tatum, R. F. Burden, J. E. Edgerton, F. A. Carter.

This committee and the local governing committee constitute the authority for the program and management of this magnificent property.

District Executive Committee.

It was further decided that every presiding elder's district should have an executive committee or Lay Activity Committee of that district of which the District Lay Leader must be chairman. This committee should meet as frequently as is needful in order to keep the programs and plans of the organization active in all of the local churches of the district.

W. B. BEAUCHAMP,

General Secretary Laymen's Missionary Movement.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

Perhaps not all of our people know that we are having a splendid Summer School at Centenary this year. The session is now nearly over, and it gives me great pleasure to say that the Summer School has done excellent work—far better than we had expected. I never have seen boys and girls work any better.

Plans are under way for new buildings and improvements, and the prospects are bright for the next session, which opens on September 14.

We have just employed an experienced teacher of French and Spanish; a man who has had seven years' travel and study in Europe and speaks the Romance languages fluently.

Next year we are beginning something entirely new at Centenary College. It is a School of Commerce. This will be a great Business College in connection with our religious institution. It will include banking, bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting, and everything essential to business training. It will no longer be necessary for our boys to go to a so-called business college, but they may come right on to Centenary and get just what they need in that line. This has been made possible by the generous gift of Dr. Luther Sexton, of New Orleans.

Mr. Editor, I have my heart set on having a good up-to-date male quartette to represent Centenary College at our next Annual Conference and at other religious gatherings. May I ask right now if you know of any young men who have good voices, or have had quartette experience? If any of the brethren know of such young men, we shall be very grateful to them if they will send us their names and put us in touch with these quartette boys. We shall make it interesting to the young men as we shall be glad to allow part on their expenses for the quartette work.

Without a doubt a new era has dawned upon Centenary College as Dr. Sexton assumes the presidency. The people here are rallying to him from every quarter. He is sure of the financial backing necessary to make Centenary one of the strongest institutions in this Southland. Let's also rally to him with our prayers and hearty personal support.

R. E. SMITH, Dean.

Shreveport, La.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE NOTES.

The faculty of Port Gibson Female College has been selected for next session with unusual care.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt remains as president and will extend the work done in the department of Christian Education. Mrs. Hunt will continue as Lady Principal and instructor in Latin and French. Miss A. M. Kennard remains as Associate Lady Principal and instructor in mathematics and history.

The other members of the faculty are new, but have been selected because of special fitness. Miss Ruth H. Reynolds, of Conway, Arkansas, will succeed Miss Lyons in English and Expression. Miss Reynolds is an A. B. graduate of Hendrix College, and is a daughter of the president of that institution. She has pursued her studies for a year at the University of Illinois.

Miss Fannie C. Moore is a graduate of Peabody Normal and also of Scarritt Bible Training School. She is now studying at Chicago University and has had about twenty years of actual experience in teaching. She is admirably fitted for combination work, but most of her teaching will be as associate in science and mathematics.

Mrs. Mamie Burton Ahney, of Pioneer, Louisiana, will have primary work, being especially fitted for it by training and experience.

Mrs. Johnie Barber, of Port Gibson, will preside over the Domestic Science Department. In addition to her local training here, she has taken special courses at Peabody Normal and has had charge of domestic science at the Camden Agricultural school for several years.

Miss Altie Holmes, of Magnolia, Mississippi, will have an important position in the department of music. She received her training at the Mississippi College for Women and at Asheville, N. C. She is especially gifted as a vocalist, inspiring enthusiasm wherever she sings.

Mrs. Eugenia Todd Leverett, of Jackson, Mississippi, will be the new matron, having special charge of the sick and of the campus activities of the girls. Mrs. Leverett was formerly of Hickory and has had ample experience and training for her important position.

One of two other specialists are to be announced later.

AN OPPORTUNITY WORTH WHILE.

By Rev. J. S. Chadwick.

Every pastor to-day is feeling the fearful pressure of certain social conditions that in their tendencies are making for lowered moral and religious ideals. To some it is well-nigh a hopeless situation, and they frankly confess that the church is not able to grip the young life of their communities and to save the young men and women from the demoralization of present-day social conditions. Others view the situation as one that has in it no real occasion for alarm, believing that this "wave" of worldliness will recede and we will come soon to a better day and better social conditions.

It is a situation that we must face fearlessly and with the purpose to make the church count in its influence upon society. And as we thus face it, provided we do not surrender our faith, there is recognition of both the encouraging and the discouraging signs in the social conditions of to-day. At no previous period of the last several decades have there been so many Christian life service decisions, so many young men and women choosing the best things of life. Let's hold to that as we see, also, the movements in our social life that make for evil and only evil. The church must offer a remedy—more than that, the church must be able to apply the remedy.

The Department of Young People's and Adult Work of our General Sunday School Board is offering now a constructive program for service to the young life of the church and community. In its program of religious education are included social and recreational features. If we cannot work out some plan of service to the youth of our communities that will carry into social activities that which is wholesome and helpful, we must acknowledge that the church is helpless in the face of a most alarming situation. But it can be done, and we must in earnest take up this task.

This is written, not to discuss the program but to call attention to one of the opportunities offered to young people to study it at first hand. It is in the Young People's Camp Conference, at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, August 12 to 26. It is to be a camp for the training of selected young people in the fourfold program of religious education in order that they may become leaders in this work in their respective churches and communities. It will offer special courses for leadership dealing with practical problems of Sunday school class and department work; a devotional study of the Bible and a course in the training of the devotional life; organized recreational activities.

Certainly pastors will see here an opportunity worth while. Let them see to it that young people of their churches use this opportunity, both that these young men and women may be helped and that they may be trained for helpful leadership. The camp will be open for one hundred and forty young men and women, ranging in age from eighteen to twenty-four. The cost has been brought within the reach of persons of moderate means. The camp will be in charge of Rev. W. C. Owen, Superintendent of Young People's and Adult Work, and associated with him men and women who are competent and who for years have been real leaders in church activities. Write to Rev. W. C. Owen, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee, for information concerning the camp. Do not fail to use this opportunity.

THE PERFECT PREACHER.

He is never too long, either in his sermons or prayers. He never forgets anything he ought to remember, and he never remembers anything he ought to forget. He knows just when to speak and when to be silent. His laughter is always well-timed and his tears are always shed at the precise moment of psychological correctness. His sermons are always well prepared, well delivered, and appropriate. He is educated enough to be a college president, and unassuming enough for a humble beginner. He never has any financial embarrassments, as he always manages to live comfortably on the smallest salary. He never quarrels with his quarterly boards, and yet he always is outspoken and courageous. He is at once an ideal visitor and an ideal student. He is a real leader of Israel's hosts, and yet even his enemies speak well of him. His wife is absolutely without fault, and his children are all just like her. His theology is old-fashioned enough to please the most conservative, and new-fangled enough to satisfy the most radical. There is never any difficulty in stationing him, as any appointment is glad to get him, and he is always willing to sacrifice himself for the good of his brethren.

Unfortunately for us, we have never met this brother. We have heard of him; we have listened wonderingly to the tales of his perfection, and we have hoped to meet him; but always he has happened to move away or die just before we could meet him. But we are still looking for him, and when we find him we shall have no hesitation in letting our people know just where he lives.

But meanwhile we have some thousands of good men in our ministry who are carrying on the work. They are not perfect, and they know it; and we know it. And yet it is surprising how great a work these men are doing. They have lots of faults, but more virtues; and they are honestly trying to build up the Kingdom of God. And it may be that one of these men will be called by with great depth of knowledge of the Kingdom of heaven. I am sure that if we keep on looking up, but take our eyes off the Lord, we will find him. But pick out the man who is loyal to his Master and will follow him to the end.

REV. T. J. NORSWORTHY IN EVANGELISTIC WORK.

Dear Mr. Editor: Please permit me to say through the Advocate that, owing to recent changes in my slate, I have some open time in August which I will be pleased to give to some charge which may need my services. Any communication addressed to me at Meridian, Miss., my home, will be promptly forwarded to me.

It is very gratifying to me, Mr. Editor, after several years of enforced absence from the field, to be able to take up my evangelistic work again; and I am very happy in it; and the good Lord has been with us in the meeting. I have conducted this season.

On the night of the 11th instant I will begin a campaign with my good friend, Rev. Martin Luther White at DeKalb, Miss. Please pray for us.

Yours sincerely,

EPWORTH LEAGUE CABINET, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

There has been a call for the officers of the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference to meet Rev. Ralph Nollner, in the parlors of the Chisca Hotel, Memphis, Tuesday, July 26, at 10 a. m. THE HAPPIEST BOY IN THE WORLD.

Once upon a time, many years ago, there was a little prince who lived in a beautiful great palace. The king, his father, loved him dearly and gave him everything he could wish for—ponies and rowboats and servants to wait on him, books and pictures and toys; and yet the little prince was not happy.

Did you ever know a little boy who had sleds and bicycles and such things and yet who was not happy? I have met a boy like that, and this story will tell you the secret about him.

One day a magician came to the palace and saw the unhappy little prince, and he said to the king: "I know how to make your little boy happy, but you must pay me my own price for telling you the secret."

"I want my son happy," said the king, "so I am willing to pay anything you ask."

Then the magician took the little boy into one of the private rooms of the palace, and he wrote with something white on a piece of paper and gave it to the prince.

"Here is a candle," said the magician; "when I am gone, hold it under this paper and read the words which will then appear."

Then the magician went away and would take no pay at all.

The little prince held the blank paper over the candle, and these words appeared in little letters: "Do a kindness to some one every day."

The little prince did so. That was the secret that made him the happiest boy in all the great kingdom.—Exchange.

CONCEALING FUNDS FOR CHINA FAMINE RELIEF.

Those persons and Ministers of all Churches Co-operating in the China Famine Fund Appeal.

The American Committee for China Famine Fund has been very successful in securing money for the relief of the Chinese people. The funds have been secured from many sources, and the work of the committee has been very successful. The committee has been very successful in securing money for the relief of the Chinese people. The funds have been secured from many sources, and the work of the committee has been very successful.

In view of the urgent need of the American Committee's appeal it is probable that some of the money contributed by churches and individuals for famine relief are now in the hands of local church treasurers. Many of these officers may be in doubt as to what should be done with such funds. The American Committee's endorsement of the American Committee has no desire to receive these church funds. On the other hand, there is no doubt that the American missionary agencies working in China will be compelled to face serious post-famine problems such as have been referred to above.

The Protestant churches have been represented in this famine appeal by the Committee on Church Co-operation. This Committee, in view of all the circumstances, urges that all moneys for the China Famine Fund now in the hands of local church treasurers, or which may later be received, be remitted to the foreign board of the denomination concerned. This recommendation has the full approval of Mr. Thomas W. Lamont, Chairman of the American Committee for China Famine Fund.

Such action will insure the use of these funds for forms of relief which the American Committee cannot undertake yet, which are an inevitable result of the famine.

If such moneys are sent promptly to the foreign boards, it will be possible to learn at an early date just how nearly adequate the funds available are for China's needs.

Yours sincerely,

ROBERT E. SPEER,

Chairman Church Co-operation Committee.

TRAINING SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

(Prepared and read by Mrs. S. C. Stone at Quitman County (Mississippi) Sunday School Association, Crowder, Miss., July 6, 1921.)

This is no new requirement. The old prophet Isaiah insisted that "precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little." Later, St. Paul wrote to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Further on down the ages our own Dr. H. M. Hamill says in part: "The Sunday school teacher, by warrant of the Scriptures or in the order of Providence, is second only to the preacher. His commission is directly from God, and his place of usefulness is becoming more and more recognized by the church." "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles," etc. This declaration of Paul is worthy of the modern teacher's study.

The ancient order of "apostles" has passed away. The "prophets" are merged into the pastors. The teacher in the pew is next to the man in the pulpit; and the working of miracles takes lower rank than the teaching of a Sunday school class. Which had we rather do, turn a brick into a loaf of bread, or teach a Sunday school class? To teach at all is a work of serious responsibility but to teach the Bible to childhood and youth, in the formative period of life, is a peculiarly sacred vocation. Our Lord is fittingly called "The Great Teacher;" and the Gospels record significantly how He and the apostles who succeeded

Him "went about teaching and preaching."

The ideal Sunday school teacher, trained intellectually and spiritually for his work, is the immediate need of the home, the church and the state. The "class" has passed from the secular school to the Sunday school, and the State is dependent for its prosperity upon the maintenance of the Sunday school. The Sunday school teacher must look to the maintenance of the Sunday school as the primary mission of his youth. The Sunday school teacher must be a man of high character and high ability. He must be a man of high character and high ability. He must be a man of high character and high ability.

The teacher who is not a Christian in deed and in truth, who is not in the sacred place he holds and "latter with untempered mortar." His first duty is to get right with God. "Out of the heart the mouth speaketh," and the Sunday school teacher who is himself untaught of God cannot clearly teach a class the way to Bible life. When one takes up teaching in a Sunday school it at once becomes a question of being an example to others rather than of allowance to one's own conscience in things doubtful. The teacher for the sake of this work is called to acts of self-denial in things which his conscience may justify for himself, but which might offend some of God's little ones. The Pauline law of offense forever sweeps away all questionable amusements and self-indulgences. The teacher cannot help being an example, and should be a safe one. Paul admonished Timothy, "Take heed unto thyself, and the doctrine." He will be closely copied for good or evil—the evil most surely. Let not the teacher delude himself by assuming that a correct public example in the eye of the class and while on duty is enough. He is all the more dangerous as a leader if there are unseen stumbling blocks in his character.

A Sunday school teacher should be an intelligent, thorough-going church member. Each church stands for a body of doctrine and a polity which differentiates it from other churches, and there is no place in the Sunday school for teachers who are half-hearted and apologetic when the denominational issue is raised. A teacher needs a backbone of denominational conviction to indoctrinate the class in that belief. He should read books telling the history of his own church, and should know something of its pioneers and the process by which it was founded. He should know how, when, and why, and have definite reasons and references for his line-up besides just because "Ma" or "Pa" belongs to that denomination.

The teacher must take time for study of the Bible itself. The helps are mostly good and often are better than "private interpretations." Still there is nothing better than to search the Scriptures to be sure of correctness on its subject matter. The Bible does not promise to temper the wind to the shorn lamb, nor does it prophesy the change of the seasons before the end of the world, nor does it prophesy the appearance of a created star in the sky to herald the advent of the Christ.

The teacher should be quiet in voice, manner and method. Boisterous conduct is like the "loud laugh which speaks the vacant mind," and else. Teacher's quietness helps to subdue the disorderly scholars who infect the orderly ones, spoil the teacher's work, and sorely try his patience. As long as the doctrine of depravity stands, this will be inevitable. The training of the teacher in punctuality will eliminate some "class problems." In grading scholars the trained Sunday school teacher has found that the only practical method, in view of the things peculiar to a Sunday school, is upon a basis of age. Sex makes this a necessary matter. Little children may be classed together without regard to sex—say the infant roll—but older than that the teacher must be careful in seating the class, preferably separating the boys and girls. Young men and women, in whom are the beginnings of mutual respect and courtesy, may be placed together in a class; but even here the teacher must be very wise and thoughtful. Dame Nature has a way of playing pranks even while holding a Bible in her lap. It is only in knowing the scholar that the teacher can be sufficient for these things.

It is not so much his social or mental as his spiritual condition. Is he already a Christian? Is his conscience yet sensitive? Is he the slave of some bad habit? Is he growing careless religious? Has he light and frivolous notions of religion? Does he realize his need of prayer? The teacher must know the answer to these questions if he succeeds in doing his duty for the Master.

Then, however well trained the Sunday school teacher may be, possibly his efficiency will be crippled by adverse home conditions. Once when I was conducting a Sunday school near Holly Springs I asked a boy what would happen if he went off fishing on Goldwater after his father had forbidden him. He squirmed around speechless, and his father responded that if he brought home some fish he wouldn't be whipped, otherwise he would. That nullified for the time my teaching that obedience is better than sacrifice.

Now, if there is so much required of a teacher who gets never a nickle of salary, hasn't he a right to expect a whole-souled, thorough-going support from his co-religionists? You know Moses had to have his hands held up by Aaron and Hur for Israel to prevail. How can teachers put conviction into their teachings when the day for which they teach is constantly openly violated by members of their own church, especially in the matter of using public utilities on Sunday? How many of us here, realizing that we really and truly are our brothers' keepers, promise that by the help of God we will refrain from breaking His commandment, not patronizing the railroad, the post office, the telephone, or the stores on Sunday for pleasure, profit or convenience? This, too, is teacher training and inspires them to take courage and go forward in the work, looking unto Him who said "abide in Me," and "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me."

OUR WORK IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.

No field of Southern Methodism promises larger results than does Czecho-Slovakia; in fact the success of the work to date makes strong appeal to the church in America to make larger investments of workers and of money in that promising field.

Rev. Joseph Dobes, one of our missionaries writes, under date of June 18:

"Yesterday we closed our revival meeting at Strasnice. We received 88 members and 37 children into the church. Though this meeting lasted 4 weeks the people were not tired of attending the services. They requested us not to leave them in the future. We have here in all 156 people with children.

"Arrangements have been made to preach here once a week in a dance hall as there is no other hall for rent.

"The first thing we ought to do here this year is to build our own house of worship, if we want to shepherd this congregation properly.

"The field is ripe for harvest all over the country. People are dissatisfied with Rome and are waiting for a chance to hear the Gospel preached to them.

"At Vrsovice we had three additions to the church last Sunday. Here we shall start protracted meetings next Sunday.

"Brother Drahorad, our colporteur, visited several towns around Prague selling Bibles and doing pioneering work for our evangelistic campaign.

"Next week, on June 21, there will be great celebrations held all over this country in memory of the 27 Bohemian Protestant noblemen who were beheaded 3 centuries ago because they refused to submit to Rome, but were faithful to Christ and to their country to the last moment. We are planning to hold open air meetings, lectures and services in several towns. I wish we could have 100 Methodist preachers in Czecho-Slovakia today preaching the undefiled Gospel of Jesus Christ and leading people from superstition and sin into the light of the Son of God."

SUMMER.

By Willie C. Page.

Summer proudly unfurls her banners that all the world may see;
Its splendors thrill the heart with its pageant of green.
The west wind whirls the clouds about in happy revery—
Gardens, hedges are lilac-scented—the river flows serene.

Summer's mantle is a cloud with a lining of azure blue;
Its shadows fall and quickly vanish o'er vales and hills away.
Flowers dewy, starry-eyed, dreaming the whole night through.
Awake and shyly lift their faces to greet the king of day.

Summer! Sweet, radiant, rose-crowned-bearer of ecstasy;
You set to music chords of nature in measures soft and clear;
A thrill with exquisite harmonies—full of light, life and glee—
Come notes as clear as the pipes of Pan, "Summer-time is here."

JIMMIE'S ANGELO.

It was nearly time for Jimmie Junior to come home from school. His mother hurried with the currant buns, while his grandmother watched impatiently at the window. "Eleanor," she said suddenly, "what do you think he's bringing home now?"

"Not another eat?" said his mother, anxiously. "I'm ashamed to let people know we have three cats now."

"A boy," groaned grandmother; "the filthiest little creature you ever say. You'll have to make a stand, Eleanor. He can't bring home every forlorn creature he meets."

Jimmie liked the kitchen door best. It was nearest the cookie jar and the cake closet. "Mother," he sang out in a clear little treble, "I've brought my friend Angelo home to supper."

Jimmie had warm hazel eyes and a wistful, trusting smile. Eleanor tried half-heartedly to frown. Angelo waited bashfully on the doorstep. It was a very easy matter to send him home. Eleanor put her lips to her small one's ear. "He's very dirty, Jimmie," she whispered.

"I know it," said Jimmie, coolly, "but I'll wash him. May I have some cookies, those with the raisins in them?"

"Here are two cookies for each of you," said Eleanor, resignedly "and lend Angelo one of your blouses. Take one from the pile in the bureau drawer."

"Eleanor," inquired Jimmie's grandmother, "are you going to have that filthy little creature sit down at the same table with us?"

"Jimmie is washing him now," explained Eleanor, mirthfully; "it's no use, mother. I can't let Jimmie lose his faith in me."

Jimmie Senior had just arrived when Jimmie Junior appeared with Angelo. Jimmie Senior loved all small boys. He stared admiringly at the pretty little fellow with brilliant dark eyes and soft, dark hair.

"This is Angelo Vinei, father," Jimmie explained. "I've just been washing him."

Jimmie Senior patted his small son on the back. "You may always bring Angelo to supper Friday nights," he said. Then he turned to his wife and his mother: "Did you hear the mayor say that we should all try to make the Italian colony become Americanized? It strikes me that our Jimmie has gone about it in a very sensible way."

Eleanor smiled a little absent-mindedly. She was noticing how closely Angelo was imitating Jimmie's manners, with a fair degree of success.

The first helping of potatoes and gravy had brought only a bashful grin. The second brought a whispered "Thank you." Always he kept his big eyes fixed on Jimmie and his way of doing things.

Angelo wore Jimmie's blouse home. The next week he appeared with a little parcel. "My mother thank you for the blouse," he said politely, "and she send you this."

Eleanor unrolled the little parcel and found a piece of hand-made lace. "Oh, Angelo, this is wonderful!" she exclaimed.

"My mother made it for you," Angelo said. "She cannot sew like Americans, but she can make lace."

Grandmother's hobby was lace. "Does she make other kinds of lace, Angelo?" she demanded.

Angelo spread out his hands in a sweeping gesture. "Many, many kinds," he said dramatically.

"Do you suppose she would show it to us?" she wondered.

"I'll take you home with me after school tomorrow," Angelo cried. His intelligent little face glowed with anticipation at the thought.

The Italian quarter resented curious visitors, but Eleanor and her mother were received with open arms. Beautiful, intricate pieces of lace and hand-woven bedspreads and table linen were brought out for their inspection.

"But I cannot make an American blouse for Angelo," sighed his mother.

"I'll come down and cut one for you," volunteered Jimmie's grandmother, looking at the foreign woman with friendly eyes.

"Luigi's mother wants to make him one," said Angelo's mother.

So Jimmie's grandmother found herself teaching a group of Italian women to make clothes for small boys. And in the same delightful, neighborly fashion they taught her to cook many things in a different way, until Jimmie Senior said to Angelo: "This is good spaghetti, isn't it? I'm glad your mother taught Jimmie's grandmother how to cook it."

Angelo's splendid eyes sparkled with joy. He smoothed his new blouse fondly. "I am glad Jimmie's grandmother taught my mother to sew in the American way," he said decidedly.

"I have a new pattern for your mother," admonished Jimmie's grandmother. "Don't forget to take it when you go home."

Angelo laid a smooth, dark cheek against grandmother's soft, white one as he passed by her chair. Jimmie's father looked after the two boys thoughtfully. "If all American would neighbor like Jimmie," he said presently, "our foreign problem would be gone in a year."

Eleanor smiled absent-mindedly, as she tucked two gingerbread men in the oven. The Continent.

"TIME OUT."

Incorrigible.

"I have told you I don't know how often, my lad, not to say 'I have went,'" remarked the village schoolmaster to his most loquacious pupil. "Now you will stay in and write the correct expression a hundred times."

After school Tommy set to work to scrawl his lines, and when he had finished he left them on the master's desk with a little note.

"Dear teacher," it ran, "I have wrote 'I have gone' a hundred times, and now I have went."—Tit-Bits.

English As She is Spoke.

We'll begin with a box, and the plural is boxes;
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes.
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese;
Yet the plural of moose should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse, or a whole nest of mice,

But the plural of house is houses, not hlee.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine,
But a vow if repeated is never called vine;
And if I speak of a foot and you show me your feet,

And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?

If the singular's this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that and three would be those.
Yet hat in the plural would never be hose,
And the plural of cat is cats; not cose.

We speak of brother, and also of brethren;
But though we say mother, we never say methren.
Then masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine she, shis and shin!
So the English, I think you will all agree,
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

GOOD REVIVALS.

Nothing else is rejoicing us so much as the news of the good revivals that are being held throughout the church. Our evangelists are reporting that people are responding to the gospel appeal in unusual numbers, and our pastors are receiving many new members into the church. By custom at least, the summer is the revival period. We hope that many meetings will be held during this season, and we are praying that God will greatly bless preachers and people as they labor for the extension of the Kingdom among men. Nothing else is so important just now as the earnest, faithful preaching of the gospel of salvation.

BEGINNING TO GET READY.

With the General Conference not so very far in the future, from various and sundry sources we are beginning to hear of some of the things that will doubtless be up for discussion when that body meets. So far as we know, nobody has formulated a definite program, but many suggestions are being made as to the matters that will properly call for attention.

Among these, of course, is the question of unification. The report of the Commission will be presented in due time, and some action will have to be taken thereon. If we may judge by the general tenor of the recent opinions we have seen or heard, it is not likely that very much time will be devoted to this subject. The action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Des Moines seems to have indicated that an early agreement on this matter is not likely to be had.

The question of a constitution for the church—one about which there can be no uncertainty—will be up for discussion. We know of at least one draft of a constitution that has been prepared for submission, and probably there will be others. There seems to be a growing feeling that we should have a document which specifically supplies the need of an organic instrument.

Some provision will doubtless be made for a movement that will result in the adequate support of our superannuated preachers, and the widows and dependent orphans of deceased preachers. In view of the obligations already incurred through the Centenary Movement and the Christian Education Movement, there may be some difficulty in evolving a plan that will accomplish the desired end without stress; but the cause is so just and the need so urgent that there appears to be a positive demand on the part of the church for a definite undertaking of this kind. It has already been delayed too long, and we believe there will be a hearty response to the appeal, whatever its form may be.

The great departmental interests of the church as represented by the various Boards will, of course, be given full consideration. The developments in our missionary work and in the field of education, growing out of the Centenary and the Christian Education Movement, will likely call for an unusual amount of attention.

Doubtless there will be urged a change in the name of the church, the elimination of the word "South," as an unnecessary and misleading term, being the end sought. The dropping of this word has met with strong support, but there seems to be no general agreement upon a name that would be generally satisfactory.

In connection with the operation of the various Boards of the church, it may be desirable to work out some plan of co-operation and correlation that will make for economy and efficiency of administration. The Boards themselves may have some such plan in mind to propose.

Some new bishops will, of course, be elected, the number being determined largely by the probability of the retirement of some of our present chief pastors and our expanding work in foreign fields.

The Commission on Christian Literature will probably propose some definite plan to secure the adequate circulation and support of church periodicals. It is clearly evident that some means must be provided by which these periodicals can be maintained if the church is not to suffer a great loss through lack of a well-informed membership.

The above are only some of the things the approaching General Conference will probably be called upon to consider. As the time of its meeting approaches, many other matters will doubtless come to the front for discussion, and the "hopper" will have plenty of material to grind on while the Conference is in session. The "millers" ought to be able to keep in fine condition for work at Hot Springs.

THE CENTENARY COLLECTIONS.

We should not, under any circumstances, forget that much of the new work enterprised by the Board of Missions is dependent for its successful prosecution upon the full and prompt collection of the Centenary pledges. We happen to know that the Centenary secretaries of our three patronizing Conferences are diligently and earnestly making every effort to bring these pledges up to date; and they should have the hearty co-operation of all our people, both preachers and laymen, in the very important work in which they are engaged.

It may be that some of us need to be reminded now and then that these pledges are just as binding to-day as they were when made. There is sometimes a tendency to grow lax concerning promises made in the past, not because there is any disposition to evade a voluntarily assumed obligation, but because the urgency of the need thus provided for is not so strongly felt. It is at this point that we should be on our guard. As a matter of fact, the enterprises that were undertaken on the strength of the first payments and the pledges for succeeding years will inevitably fail unless these payments are kept up as they become due.

We realize that many of our people have assumed heavy obligations in the subscriptions they have made to the Centenary and to the Christian Education Movement; but we doubt if many of them have assumed more than they are able to carry. The secret of success in meeting these obligations lies in a definite, systematic plan of giving. If all the subscribers to these causes would adopt some such plan as is involved in tithing—and we know of no better plan than that of tithing—these special pledges could be paid promptly, and all the other claims of the church could be easily met.

THE SCHOOLS FOR RURAL AND URBAN PASTORS.

We have read with a great deal of interest of the success of the recent schools conducted by the Department of Home Missions for our rural and urban pastors. The unanimous testimony of those who attended them is to the effect that they were helpful even beyond what had been hoped, and that they have met an actual need in the work of these two important fields.

Since so much of our work is rural in its nature, it is especially important that those who are engaged in it should have every opportunity of qualifying themselves for it. There is no more responsible position in the whole church than the pastor of a country charge occupies. Farmers used to be called "clod-hoppers," and the term had a kind of contemptuous significance; but the day of the "clod-hopper" has passed, and the farmer is generally recognized as one of the most important and influential citizens of the community. So the country charge and the country preacher were not always given the high position to which they were entitled. But all that is changed. We are in a new day, and we are recognizing the fact that it requires as high order of intelligence, as full preparation, and as diligent work to succeed in the country pastorates as it does in the city. These schools are a step in the right direction, and we hope they will be continued in a way to do the greatest good possible.

We hope the Board of Missions will be able to devise some plan by which all our rural pastors may have the benefit of these schools. By the very nature of the case, many of those who would profit most by attendance upon them are financially unable to stand the expense involved. It ought to be possible for the General Board and the Conference Boards, working together, to give all our rural pastors the opportunity of attending these schools. We hope some such plan will be worked out.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. T. Nolen, our pastor at High Point, Miss., passed to his eternal reward on June 1. In due time we hope to have a suitable memoir of this good man.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, our pastor at Corinth, Miss., is spending some weeks in Chicago, pursuing some special courses of study at the University of Chicago. Blessed is the workman who sharpens his tools!

While all reports are not in, indications are that the church has subscribed, up to date, about $18,000,000 in the Christian Education Movement. In the face of a world-wide depression on a scale never known before, this is a marvelous achievement.

Rev. D. R. McDougal, our pastor at McCool, Miss., requests the prayers of our people that his daughter, Martha, who has gone to a hospital in Memphis for an operation, may soon be restored to health. We are sure there will be many responses to this earnest request.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of Lake, Miss., gives us this note from his work: "On last Friday night, July 9, we closed a fine meeting at Lawrence, Miss. The Holy Spirit was with us in his saving power. Thirteen were received on profession of faith. Brother J. V. Bennett did the preaching."

We learn that the work on the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, is moving along smoothly under the leadership of Rev. A. T. Mellwain, the presiding elder. The preachers and the people are happy in the work of the church, and gracious revivals are being held throughout the district.

We have received a copy of the 1921 Handbook of the Board of Church Extension. It contains the thirty-ninth annual report of the Board, and is full of valuable information. An especially interesting section is the part dealing with modern church buildings, accompanied by plans and illustrations. Copies of the Handbook will be furnished on application, as long as they last, to the Board of Church Extension, 1115 Fourth Ave., Louisville, Ky.

First Church, Laurel, Miss., Rev. O. S. Lewis, pastor, will soon install a very fine pipe organ, at a cost of more than $5,000. As the pastor says in the weekly Bulletin, "Now, let all the people sing."

Rev. B. P. Fullilove, our pastor at South Side, Corinth, Miss., reports that his work is moving along well. There are two prayer meetings in operation, and the Sunday school is doing good work.

We are informed by Rev. C. A. Battie, the presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, that Rev. H. W. Rickey, our pastor at Lafayette, La., and Rev. L. P. Moreland, pastor of the Hornbeck and Peason charge, both did remarkably effective work in the educational campaign.

We learn from the Durant (Miss.) News that an "all-day Methodist meeting" was held at the home of Mrs. T. R. King on July 20. We do not know just the purpose of the meeting, but the announcement stated that "every Methodist lady is expected to be present with her husband," and that a dinner would be served and a free-will offering taken.

The interesting article in the April number of the Review on the Resurrection, by Rev. James A. Burrow, D.D., editor of the Midland Methodist, has been reprinted in pamphlet form—as it well deserved to be—and can now be had of the author, at 501 Georgia Avenue, Chattanooga, Tenn., for twenty cents a copy.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman began a meeting with Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux last week at Spring Hill, La., the result of which we have not learned. Brother Bozeman has an open date in August which he would be glad to have filled. He will be joined in his evangelistic work in August by Brother Spinks, who will soon be graduated from the Moody Institute.

The Advocate office enjoyed a call on Tuesday morning of this week by Rev. L. C. Spencer, pastor of the Pine Grove charge, Louisiana Conference, and Mr. W. F. Talley, of Savannah, Tenn., a song evangelist, who has been assisting Brother Spencer in revival work. Brother Spencer stated that plans are under way for a new church at Pine Grove.

A note from Rev. D. P. Yeager, of the Matherville charge, Mississippi Conference, informs us that a fine revival meeting has just been closed at Theadville. The preaching was done by Dr. C. M. Chapman, of Poplarville, Miss., and his ministry drew all hearts to him. There were a good many accessions to the church, and a work of grace was wrought in the community.

From a recent number of the South-Reporter, Holly Springs, Miss., we learn that the membership of the Home Department of the Sunday school has been practically doubled within the last three months. Much credit is given to Mrs. R. D. Ford for this achievement. We learn from the same source that the membership of the Epworth League at Holly Springs is one hundred.

"The Quillian Lectures" for 1921 were delivered by Bishop Warren A. Candler during the month of May. They have just been published by Smith & Lamar, Agents, Nashville, Tenn., in an attractive volume with the title, "The Kingdom of God's Dear Son." The price of the book is $1.50 postpaid. It may be ordered of Smith & Lamar, Agents, Nashville, Tenn., or J. G. Stipe, Registrar, Emory University, Ga.

From the Panollan, Batesville, Miss., we take the following: "Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Iuka, the new Methodist pastor who has been assigned to this station to succeed Rev. Melville Johnson, who was transferred to New Albany, occupied the pulpit at the Methodist Church at both services Sunday. A large audience greeted Dr. Craddock, and he preached two very able sermons, which were enjoyed by all who heard him. He has made a very favorable impression on our people, and we hope his stay in Batesville will be long and pleasant."

Rev. J. D. Simpson, the pastor, reports a good meeting just held at Shaw, Miss., in which Rev. E. E. McKeithen, of Gunnison, Miss., rendered most efficient service by conducting the singing and doing a good part of the preaching. His wife and his daughter also rendered helpful service in the meeting. There were eight additions to the membership of the church. The work on this charge is moving along well. The financial showing is good, and the people are interested in the welfare of the pastor and the work of the church. All indications point to a good year.

Rev. J. W. Chisholm, of Forest, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call on Friday of last week. He had come to New Orleans for medical attention, some x-ray examinations being necessary. We were glad to learn that the work prospers on the Forest and Morton charge. There have been sixty-three accessions to the church this year, with others to follow. The church at Forest has recently been repainted at a cost of about $400, and an annex is now being added to the church at Morton for the use of the Sunday school.

Our pastor at Kosciusko, Miss., Rev. E. H. Cunningham, is a busy man—and a successful one in his work. He has received into the membership of the church since Conference ninety-six persons, making a total of more than two hundred in the four years he has served that appointment. In addition to his pastoral work, he has married twenty-six couples, preached three commencement sermons, addressed four graduating classes, and has accepted invitations to assist in six revival meetings during August and September. The Sunday school is the best in the history of the church, the courthouse being used for part of its work.

We have received the Third Annual Bulletin of the Board of Finance, of which Board Dr. Luther E. Todd is secretary. It is an exceedingly interesting pamphlet, showing in detail what the Board has accomplished in behalf of the superannuated preachers of the church. Dr. Todd has put his whole heart into the work to which the church has called him, and he has done a remarkably effective work in the two and a half years he has been in charge. We believe that the church, under his leadership, is ready to make adequate provision for the needs of the men who have worn themselves out in the service to which they have devoted their lives.

From a personal letter from Rev. J. L. Neill, superintendent of Missionary Education in the Sunday school work of the church, we learn that the series of Sunday school institutes recently held in Cuba were remarkably effective in building up the Kingdom in that mission field. Ten of the Cuban missionaries are now at Lake Junaluska, receiving the benefit of the training at that great center of religious instruction and inspiration. A Training School will be held in Havana, August 17-31, which will do for Cuba what Junaluska does for the church at home. Brother Neill will return to Havana for that School, accompanied by his wife and little daughter. They will make the trip by automobile from Nashville to Tampa, taking boat there for Havana.

SUPPORT YOUR PASTOR—IN WHAT?

By Roscoe C. Jerrell.

Much has been said on the subject of an adequate support for the ministry. Some of it has been wise; much of it has been unwise. There has been need of agitation on this question. To pauperize the ministry means to impoverish the church in all its life. There is a sad failure in the spiritual life of the church when the ministry is permitted to suffer in material things. The church must make larger and better provision for her ministry or be satisfied with an inferior class of men, which would be to invite inevitable and deserved failure.

But why should we not call attention to the need of an adequate spiritual, moral and personal support for our pastors and leaders? This is even more urgent and necessary than the wise planning for their material support. The true minister is not thinking about remuneration, in fact that is the least of his considerations. There is the great passion for souls and for the advancement of the Kingdom. How thrilling and full of encouragement to the pastor to have fifty strong, wonderful, great-hearted, great-minded laymen, Christian in heart and life who would stand by him in his work and be willing to follow in his leadership for the building of God's Kingdom! With a great group of laymen for spiritual and personal support a pastor would be weak indeed if he did not succeed. Again, how difficult is the work when the pastor stands almost alone and the church remains listless and inactive to the needs of the community! How many ministers are utterly hindered from doing any great work because of the failure of the laity to support them adequately in a spiritual way!

Pray for the man who ministers to you in spiritual things. He has great burdens, strong temptations, many problems. He is just a man, such as yourself. You can strengthen him and help him to be a success by your intercession and kindly interest; or by your indifference you can be a dead weight on the load which he has to pull. His success or his failure will in a large measure be checked up to you. Jesus could do no mighty work in some places because of a lack of faith on the part of the people. Some ministers can not do any mighty work in some communities because of a lack of faith and a lack of support on the part of the laity. If your minister is not the man you want or need for your pastor, you can help him become that man if you will pray mightily for him. How rich a service that layman gives who is able to pray a successful prayer for his pastor and is able to lift him to a higher degree of service and leadership for the church!

A famous church in England had lost the beloved pastor who had ministered to them for many years. Seeking for a new minister, many were invited to preach. Among the visiting men were ministers great and famous as well as younger men with less experience. Finally the choice fell upon a young man of good promise. One of the officials of the church on being questioned as to why the church did not select a man of large experience and success, replied: "We call a man to be the pastor of our church and then we expect to make a great minister of him." How wonderful if our churches over the country had the purpose and thought of so supporting their ministers that they would have every opportunity of becoming good and faithful and successful ministers of the Gospel!

O Church of God, give to your ministers an adequate financial support that they may not be limited in the great work of the Kingdom! Above all give to them an adequate support in a spiritual way which will assure to them a wonderful success and in even a greater sense the glorious success of God's Kingdom and church.—Central Christian Advocate.

LORD, DIDST THOU KNOW?

O Lord, when Thou didst call me, didst Thou know

My heart disheartened thro' and thro'
Still hankering after Egypt full in view
Where cucumbers and melons grew?

Yes, I knew.

But, Lord, when Thou didst choose me, didst Thou know

How marred I was and withered, too,
Nor rose for sweetness, nor virtue rue,
Timid and rash, hasty and slow?

Yes, I knew.

My Lord, when Thou didst love me, didst Thou know

How weak my efforts were, how few,
Tepid to love, and impotent to do,
Envious to reap, while slack to sow?

Yes, I knew.

Good Lord, who knowest what I cannot know,
And dare not know, my false, my true,
My new, my old; good Lord, arise and do,
If loving, Thou hast known me so.

Yes, I knew.

On April 6, 1921, the pure spirit of Miss LUCILE COLLIN bade adieu to the trials, cares and afflictions of earth, and took its joyous flight, accompanied by snowy winged angels, and by Him who says: "If I go away, I will come again and receive you to myself that where I am there ye may be also." Surrounded by weeping loved ones and friends, she talked of approaching death as one speaks of a pleasant going away. It seemed hard to give her up, she was such a willing, and competent worker in the Sunday school and in all the work of the church, and we needed her so badly. It was such a pleasure to hear her say, "I am saved, and just want to get well again to work for the dear Lord's cause." Her dear loved ones, Brother and Sister Ike Collins, of Mayersville, have the sympathy and prayers of the whole church and community.

M. J. MILLER, Pastor.

Died, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. J. R. Harris, at Baird, Texas, surrounded by her faithful children, Mrs. LUCY HAMPTON, wife of H. R. Hampton, formerly of Wilkinson County, Mississippi, and a sister of Col. J. O. Fuqua, formerly of Baton Rouge, La. She came to her death in June last, as a result of old age, being 92 years, 10 months, and 3 days old. She lost her husband about thirty years ago, in St. Landry Parish, La., and then moved with her children and grandchildren to Texas, where she spent her declining years. Grandma, as she was commonly called, was a Methodist of the old school. She loved to talk about Uncle Winans and Uncle Drake, as she called them, and Bishop Marvin, these veterans of the Cross in her day and time. Some of her children were baptized by these old pioneers of Methodism in bygone days. Grandma was one of the best women that I ever knew, having married her eldest daughter, Anna, on the 2nd day of January, 1867. My wife died three years ago; now Grandma meets her in a better land. Grandma spent her last days serving her loved ones, until she became deaf and blind; then her loved ones took a great pleasure in serving her. She said that she was waiting for the call. Seemingly, "Not a wave of trouble rolled over her peaceful breast." May God help the rest of us to appreciate her clean Christian life and be prepared to meet her beyond this vale of tears.

Her son-in-law,

R. M. DAVIS.

The death angel again made silent entry into our quiet little town and, on June 8, bore from our midst our friend and co-laborer, Mrs. WALTER S. PHILLIPS. Her death brought great sorrow to the home and to the entire community. A more beautiful life and character one seldom knows. Her name is synonymous with love, patience, kindness, gentleness. She loved her church and was ever anxious to help in the Master's work. She was church organist, teacher of the Young Peoples' Bible Class, and secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society. She took a leading part in all church activities. She was a blessing to all who knew her. Truly, "She hath done what she could." On June 9 we laid her to rest in the Grand Cane cemetery. A large crowd of relatives and friends filled the church, and the grave was twice covered with beautiful floral offerings. There are many besides the family who miss her, and the dear loved ones have many friends to share their sorrow; yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we know in whom she had believed, and that we shall meet again in the Great Beyond.

May our Father, who tempers the sorrows of life with His love, give to those who love her strength to bear their great grief.

Signed by: Mrs. Eva Richardson, Mrs. S. J. Davies, Mrs. Paul Foster, for Woman's Missionary Society, Grand Cane, La.

FROM PELICAN, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: It gives me pleasure to report a good meeting at Pelican. Brother James G. Galloway, of Brandon, Miss., came to my assistance on June 29 and remained with us through Tuesday, July 5, preaching twice every day, each succeeding service becoming richer in grace and spiritual power until Sunday morning we reached the climax with a veritable Pentecost. The church was greatly revived, and the entire town was blessed with the princely ministry of Brother Galloway, who won the love and confidence of everybody. We received a fine class of twenty-three members, twelve of whom were by baptism and vows.

To God be all the glory and praise.
JOHN G. SLOANE, Pastor.

FROM PURVIS CHURCH.

Dear Brother Carley: We had a real good meeting here, which ran for ten days. Brother J. V. Bennett did the preaching. He held up the Methodist standards of regeneration and right living as necessary for salvation. The co-operation of all denominations and their preachers gave force and efficacy to the gospel preached. We had fine congregations and deep interest. We had no great "rousement," as nothing but sane methods were used. We had 18 accessions on profession of faith. The church was strengthened and the whole communi-

SYMPTOMS WOMEN DREAD

Mrs. Wilson's Letter Should Be Read by All Women

Clearfield, Pa.—"After my last child was born last September I was unable to do all of my own work. I had severe pains in my left side every month and had fever and sick dizzy spells and such pains during my periods, which lasted two weeks. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing others so much good and thought I would give it a trial. I have been very glad that I did, for now I feel much stronger and do all of my work. I tell my friends when they ask me what helped me, and they think it must be a grand medicine. And it is. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HARRY A. WILSON, R. F. D. 5, Clearfield, Pa.

The experience and testimony of such women as Mrs. Wilson prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct such troubles by removing the cause and restoring the system to a healthy normal condition. When such symptoms develop as backaches, bearing-down pains, displacements, nervousness and "the blues" a woman cannot act too promptly in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound if she values her future comfort and happiness.

ty was helped spiritually. The children's services in the afternoons were well attended and fruitful. The kind of preaching that Brother Bennett does will strengthen the foundation and build up real spiritual life in the church. Yet we have many who are not spiritual and seem to be satisfied in that state. We need to emphasize more and more regeneration and experimental religion. Our Sunday school and prayer meeting have increased.

Our education quota was $5,000, and we raised $26,350. We are hopeful of a successful year.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

FROM MOUNT OLIVE AND MAGEE.

By request of the official boards of the churches at Mount Olive and Magee the pastor conducted the revival meetings at both places. Three meetings were held each day—preaching twice and meeting for young people once. The business places in each town were closed each day from eleven to twelve, and there were good congregations both morning and night, at times more than could be accommodated. Eight days were spent at each place. As far as we could, we followed the plan as outlined by the Commission on Evangelism. In taking the census we found that there were but few persons in each town who were not members of some church; so, following one of the rules as laid down by Wesley for preachers, "To suit the subject to the congregation," the sermons were for the most part to the church. As a result many renewed their vow to God and promised a better Christian life. Twenty-two were received into the church. Nineteen have been received this year on profession of faith. We have two more meetings to hold.

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

SUNDAY SCHOOL HELPS NEAR EAST SUFFERERS.

Dear Brother Carley: The call came to our Sunday school to buy one barrel of flour for the Near East Relief work, and it was stated it would cost $6 per barrel. So we sent enough money to buy five barrels and trust all the Sunday schools will do as well, or better.

We are always ready to answer a call so long as politics is free from it. It's awful, the way our God-called men are becoming interested in operating steam rollers, etc. Yours sincerely,

C. S. BENNETT, Supt.,

FROM MAYERSVILLE CHARGE.

Dear Advocate: We held our revival meeting for Mayersville church, embracing the third Sunday in June. We had a good meeting, My son, M. K. Miller, of Holly Bluff and Louise charge, conducted the song service and did the preaching and both were well done.

I want to say in closing that we are serving a most thoughtful people. About mid-week before the meeting, the ladies began to bring in nice things to the parsonage—and they just kept coming and kept coming, bringing in the good things so necessary on such occasions, until the good wife said, "I don't know where we can put all of these nice things." And then the good ladies said, "Now get you a good cook and send us the bill." Who can come up to that?

Our meat market man, although a Jew, furnishes us beef, pork, mutton, etc., and makes no charge, and the fishermen give us fish. So we are happy in our work over here at Mayersville on the river. Now don't any of you preachers commence to fix up to move to Mayersville next winter, for there is no use moving when you are as well fixed as we are.

I had the pleasure of attending a good meeting at Harriston, on Brother Ainsworth's charge. Brother Claude Jones, of Fayette charge, did the preaching and M. K. Miller conducted the song service, and each man did his part well—and with Ainsworth in charge, I'll tell you things moved. Brother Claude preaches the old-time gospel, describing a hell so terrible that it seems no one would want to go there, and a heaven so pure and glorious that everybody would want to go there. Oh, it was good to be there! Those boys are a team in the Lord's cause.

Well, good bye—God bless and keep you.
M. J. MILLER.

SOME LOCAL RED CROSS WORK.

Few realize in how many ways the American Red Cross is still active in helping the ex-service man and his family, when help is needed. Here in New Orleans, there are many things done by the Red Cross, outside of the work of the New Orleans Chapter, and co-operating with the Home Service section of that chapter and of other chapters.

"Liaison officers" they call the young women who represent the Red Cross in the offices of the U. S. Public Health Service, the Federal Vocational Board, and other governmental agencies dealing with the ex-soldier. There are several such officers in this city, for New Orleans is the natural center for the southern half of the Mississippi Valley, and the location here of the U. S. Naval Station and the U. S. Marine Hospital makes it an important point for health and economic reconstruction work among ex-service men.

The old Mint building on Esplanade Avenue is the headquarters for the reconstruction work of the U. S. Public Health Service, and here Miss Beatrice Hodge is liaison officer, assisted by Miss Jeanne Gueydan, in charge of the tuberculosis cases, and Miss Grace Gillean, who has the mental and neuropathic or nervous cases.

Mental and nervous patients are sent out to Belvedere Sanitarium for treatment and observation, and there the Red Cross representative is Miss Lydia Finley. She has the same sort of work as the others, in keeping in touch with the families of the men, and their needs, and also has much to do in furnishing them suitable recreation—automobile rides, securing passes to picture shows, etc.

At the U. S. Naval Station in Algiers is Miss Kate Powers, well known throughout Mississippi and the neighboring States for her writings before she went into the service of the Red Cross. Miss Juanita Day is stationed at the Marine Hospital, and similar work is also done at Jackson Barracks by Mr. C. W. Barker, a Red Cross worker.

Formerly, the Red Cross maintained a liaison officer at the headquarters of the Federal Board for Vocational Education—Miss Maude Short, whose task it was to help the ex-service man who wanted training to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the government, arrange about his compensation and make sure that his family was cared for. She is still there, and still does all this work, in co-operation with the Home Service sections of the different Red Cross chapters; but beginning last month, she was taken over by the Federal Board, which now employs her and relieves the Red Cross of that much expense.

LET ARMIES AND NAVIES DIMINISH.

The talk about disarmament of the nations will not down. Even though there is an insistent demand that we, as a people, become not careless and forget that the seeds of war have been sown to the wind by the recent peace treaty, there are men who claim that the only hope for the future of the world is the reduction of the heavy burden of militarism. The most recent advocate of this is General Tasker H. Bliss, a man who has grown old in the service of his country and is perfectly familiar with what large armies and navies mean. He would bring the matter of disarmament to a crisis by refusing to make the least reduction until a conference was called of all the nations to consider the matter; then he says: "If such a conference were to be held and if the Secretary were to make public every day an abstract of the proposals put forward and the arguments for and against with the names of the national representatives who made them, the common people of the world would not allow the conference to dissolve until at least the first step forward had been taken. I do not care what the cabinets of the world think, the masses of the people, who pay the taxes, have the vital interest in this subject."

We do not doubt this to be true. We believe ourselves in the reduction of armaments. We do not believe in belligerency. We have discarded militarism; for we have learned that when a man is prepared to fight, if he is armed and trained to strike, and knows that he needs fear no one, the least provocation will send him forth swinging and striking right and left at any man who gets in his way. It is easy for an armed nation to run wild. But we also do not believe in a pacifism that once looked so idealistic. There come times when a nation must fight or be a slacker. As long as nations go to the bad, and sin and commit wickedness and foster wrongdoing and support injustice, there will be a judgment day, when retributive justice will demand reparation, and war appears then as the means of drastic punishment. The only safeguard of the future against the sprouting of the seeds of war that have been sown broadcast is the intensive propagation of the Christianity that now prevails in America. If this be not done, there will be another war within the next fifty years as sure as time passes and the years roll round.—Western Christian Advocate.

FABLE

By Laura E. Richards.

The Wheat Field.

Some children were set to reap in a wheat field. The wheat was yellow as gold, the sun shone gloriously, and the butterflies flew hither and thither. Some of the children worked better, and some worse; but there was one who ran here and there after the butterflies that fluttered about his head, and sang as he ran.

By and by evening came, and the angel of the wheat-field called to the children and said, "Come now to the gate, and bring your sheaves with you."

So the children came, bringing their sheaves. Some had great piles, laid close and even, so that they might carry more; some had theirs laid large and loose, so that they looked more than they were; but one, the child that had run to and fro after the butterflies, came empty-handed.

The angel said to this child, "Where are your sheaves?" The child hung his head. "I do not know!" he said, "I had some but have lost them, I know not how." "None enter here without sheaves," said the angel. "I know that," said the child. "But I thought I would like to see the place where the others are going; besides they would not let me leave them."

Then all the other children cried out together. One said: "Dear Angel, let him in! In the morning I was sick, and this child came and played with me, and showed me the butterflies, and I forgot my pain. Also he gave me one of his sheaves, and I will give it to him again, but I cannot tell it now from my own."

Another said: "Dear Angel, let him in! At noon the sun beat on my head so fiercely that I fainted and fell down like one dead; and this child came running by, and when he saw me he brought water to revive me, and then he showed me his butterflies, and was glad and merry that my strength returned; to me also he gave one of his sheaves, and I would give it to him again, but it is so like my own that I cannot tell it."

And a third said: "Just now, as evening was coming, I was weary and sad, and had so few sheaves that it hardly seemed worth my while to go on working; but this child comforted me, and showed me the butterflies, and gave me of his sheaves. Look! it may be that this was his; and yet I cannot tell, it is so like my own."

And all the children said, "We also had sheaves of him, dear Angel; let him in we pray you!"

The Angel smiled, and reached his hand inside the gate and brought out a pile of sheaves; it was not large, but the glory of the sun was on it, so that it seemed to lighten the whole field. "Here are his sheaves!" said the Angel. "They are known and counted every one." And he said to the child, "Lead the way in!"

Dire Need Still In The Near East.

From a letter to our foreign office from Mr. Charles Vickrey we take the following startling items that have come by cable to the office of the Near-East Relief:

"Total orphans now at Alexandropol 18,000" (probably the largest assemblage of orphan children that the world has ever known.)

"Supplies Alexandropol allow half rations for thirty days. After that nothing."

A later cable announces: "Immediate transport saved lives of eighteen thousand orphans and seven Americans at Alexandropol, where food arrived the same day that the last of half rations exhausted." Another cable reports five thousand orphans at Harpoot and others on conditions in Constantinople, Cilicia, Syria, and Anatolia.

"Coincident with the receipt of these cables," says Mr. Vickrey, "we are experiencing a decrease in contributions that threatens disaster, for we cannot sustain these children during the summer months without larger financial resources than are now in prospect."

Interracial Co-operation in Macon, Ga.

A splendid piece of Interracial co-operation is being carried on by the women of Macon, Ga. The white women have held numerous conferences with the colored women, meeting in both large and small groups. A wise choice has been made of women, both white and colored, who are to be the moving force of the enterprise. On the colored committee they have secured the president of the City Federation of Clubs, the chairman of the Red Cross work during the war, the leader of Baby Welfare Work, and a trained nurse sent by the government to do work among the colored people during those trying days. A good, roomy house has been secured on a corner lot on the car line, where it is planned to begin soon a day nursery and kindergarten, the colored women bearing half the expense.

Churchmen Attack Ku-Klux.

Bishop Reese, of the Episcopal diocese of Georgia, addressed his recent annual convention most forcibly on mob lawlessness and other forms of injustice. He asked the convention to express and publish its condemnation of these acts and to declare the Ku-Klux organization "more than a mistake, a wicked and dangerous folly." This the convention did, recommending at the same time that this section of the Bishop's address be read in every Episcopal church in the diocese.—Southern Publicity Committee, in Council Bulletin.

CUNNING CRAFTSMANSHIP OF CONGO NATIVES.

In every Congo village there is a blacksmith, and in some villages several. The shop is an open shed, usually in the middle of the street. The bellows consist of a log of wood hollowed out in the shape of a sausage stuffer, with a skin stretched over the big end. It is worked by a stick tied in the middle of the skin. The fuel is charcoal. The anvil consists of a heavy iron pin stuck in the ground, and the hammer of another iron pin of the same shape. The tongs consist of a handle of wood into which the work is stuck, or of a green pine branch bent double. With these implements they can turn out work that is astonishing. They make knives, hoes, adzes, axes, razors, bracelets, chisels, scrapers, and even bells, out of iron.

One of the remarkable things is that in certain places they mine the ore and melt it in stacks just as it is done here, the draft being by several of the bellows mentioned above.

Other industries are basket and mat-making, cloth weaving, and wood-carving. The industry of the wood-carver is very interesting. Everything, from a whistle to a canoe, is made out of one piece of wood. The tools are axe, adze, chisel and scraper. With these the carpenter makes mortars to pound the meal in, drums, stools, paddles, whistles, wooden dishes, etc. The Batetela drum is hollowed out of a log of wood through a slit at the top scarcely more than an inch wide.—By E. B. Stilz, in Missionary Voice.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CAMP CONFERENCE.

In every community are opportunities worth while for young men and young women who are willing to give themselves for leadership of other young people and of boys and girls of their churches in social and religious activities. Present-day conditions call for an enlarged program of wholesome recreation. The church must help, must take the leadership in providing such features of community activities. The unwholesome, the demoralizing recreational activities are in every community, and the play instinct of youth answers the call of these things. The church can voice its protest against the demoralizing influences in every community; and the church must make its protests and sound the note of warning to its young people. But the church must do something more than protest, warn and rebuke. It must give something in the place of that which is unwholesome and demoralizing.

Has the church such a program of service to its young people? Go to Lake Junaluska for the Young People's Camp Conference, August 12-26, and see what the Sunday school of your church is attempting in the way of a solution for this problem of city, town, and country. There the men and women who are specialists in their fields will give both the practical theory and the demonstration of the plan of your church for service to the young people, the boys and girls.

This is a camp for the training of selected young people in the fourfold program of religious education in order that they may become leaders in this work in their respective communities and churches.

There will be special courses for leadership, dealing with the practical problems of class and department work.

Organized recreation, which will not only afford a most excellent outing for the summer vacation, but which will at the same time present a constructive program of recreational activities to meet this need at home, will be offered. This program will include hikes, camp trips, picnics, both formal and informal social and recreational features.

In addition to the devotional study of the Bible, and a course in training the devotional life, the young people will have devotional meetings under their own leadership, as well as opportunities of counsel with trained men and women on all phases of religious life.

The cost will be about $21 for board for the fourteen days, a registration fee of $3, and the railroad fare. Reduced rates to Lake Junaluska are offered by the railroads. For information write to Rev. W. C. Owen, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tennessee.

MOVIES BY WIRE.

Motion pictures are to be sent by wire. The name of the marvelous apparatus is the "Telecinematograph." The American boy who has shortened the long word cinematograph to "movies" will probably find an equally expressive word for the new apparatus. Photographs are now being sent daily by wire for hundreds of miles and it is believed the telegraphic transmission of moving pictures will soon be a commonplace. The method is the discovery of a Frenchman. It consists of a cylinder with minute grooves only 1-20 of a millimeter in size controlled by much complicated electric apparatus. By this it will be possible to take a movie in London, for example, and watch its reproduction a few minutes later in American cities.—Boys' Life for January.

MORE LIGHT, MORE PLEASURE.

Some interesting tests have recently been completed to show the effect of light upon one's enjoyment of any sport or entertainment. An audience has been carefully watched while enjoying some form of entertainment in bright sunlight, in various degrees of subdued light and in total darkness. The tests have been scientifically accurate and the effects have been measured by reading the pulse, the blood pressure and the general physical condition of the spectators. It has been found that the degree of enjoyment and the physical and mental benefits increases steadily as the light increases. In other words the spectator gets much more enjoyment and benefit from the same performance if the light be increased. In moving picture theatres, where the house must be kept dark, the spectator enjoys himself less than in a lighted room or out of doors. These experiments confirm the opinions of many scout leaders. It is good scout philosophy and proves, what we have always believed, that sunlight and out-of-door life is beneficial to us all.—January Boys' Life.

A MONUMENT TO JESUS.

Quite seriously, I suppose, a French physician has suggested a monument to Jesus as the greatest teacher and most proficient brother of man. A monument to Jesus? I wonder how this Frenchman thinks of churches and hospitals and Christ-like institutions, thousands upon thousands of them, scattered over the world. I wonder what he makes of crucifixes and wayside shrines and splendid altars. All these are monuments, and the number of them is legion. But when all is said and done, Jesus does not need monuments so much as He needs witnesses. Monuments are for dead heroes; witnesses are for a living friend and leader. The best monument to Jesus Christ is not really a monument at all; it is some man or woman who goes about doing good in the name of Jesus; who makes men think of Jesus; who leads others to the heart of Jesus. Not monuments but heralds.—George Clarke Peck.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE MARVELS OF GRACE.

The fact that a man is recovering after having had three stitches taken in his heart was considered of sufficient news interest last week to get a place on the front page of our daily newspapers. It is a marvelous achievement of surgical skill that makes possible a successful operation of this kind—but not so marvelous as the healing wrought by the Great Physician upon the souls of men who are sick of sin. We wonder at the almost miraculous things that are happening every day in the material world; but we are often blind to the miracles of grace that take place in the hearts of the men and women about us. There are enough such miracles wrought every day to validate every claim made by the gospel—yet we are prone to wonder if that gospel is sufficient for the needs of the age. These miracles of grace do not often get recorded on the front page of our newspapers, but they are infinitely more important than the record of a healed body. What a joy to know there is One who is able to save, even to the uttermost!

NO NEED FOR THE KU KLUX KLAN.

We know nothing of the Ku Klux Klan except what we have read concerning it in the public prints. It is a secret national organization which lays down as conditions of membership belief in the tenets of the Christian religion, the maintenance of white supremacy, and the principles of a pure Americanism. It professes to operate entirely within the law and to use its influence for the maintenance of principles that all good citizens hold to. But we cannot believe that such an organization is needed to-day, or that it can accomplish its aims properly in the way it proposes to operate. The very fact that it is a secret organization imposes upon it an unnecessary burden in the suspicion that will inevitably connect it with various lawless acts throughout the country; and its name will at least suggest that it is related to another organization that grew up out of peculiar conditions and that finally disintegrated because of the excesses that were committed in its name. We believe that all the things that are worth while in our national life can be attained in other and better ways, through other organizations that do not labor under the disadvantages of the Ku Klux Klan. Instead of promoting the interests for which it professes to stand, it seems to us there is every reason to believe that it will make their attainment harder to realize. We have no means of knowing to what proportions the organization has grown, but we cannot believe that it will make a strong appeal to the level-headed, clear-thinking men of the nation, who realize the problems of our present social order and who are working without stint to solve these problems according to the principles of righteousness as taught by Jesus Christ. We look to the church rather than to the Ku Klux Klan or any other organization for the leadership in the establishment of all those aims that all good citizens ought to be interested in.

WHO CAN TELL?

When an enlarged vision, a quickened conscience, and an earnest desire to serve come to a person, there is no telling what the outcome will be. Many of the great achievements of history have grown out of a seed sown in the mind of a little child; many a mature life that was moving along commonplace levels has been aroused to high endeavor by the inspiration of a new thought, a new purpose, a new hope. It is a wonderful privilege to be the means, under God, of setting in motion forces that will enlarge an individual life and result, perhaps, in the blessing of the world. If "a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver," how zealous we should be in striving to speak the word to some boy, some girl, that will transform the life and generate floods of power that will be a blessing for many days to come!

PROFANITY.

It is a strange thing that boys, young men, middle-aged men, and old men—too many of them—seem to think that profanity is a mark of mental vigor, that it adds force to even the most casual conversation, and that it is a necessary accompaniment of good fellowship and social enjoyment. We have heard it said, too, that many young girls are beginning to acquire the habit of profane speech, apparently believing that they are adding thereby some element of charm to their conversation. We wish all those who so volubly interlard their words with oaths and profane ejaculations could see and hear themselves as others see and hear them—certainly a blush of shame would mantle their cheeks and they would feel an embarrassment that would cause them to apologize for their breach of good manners—to say nothing of good morals—and promise amendment for the future. That the disgust for profanity is felt by good men everywhere, and that there ought to be a vigorous protest against it, is indicated by the following editorial which we saw in one of our city papers several days ago: "When Jesse B. Osborne, 92, oldest citizen of the county, died the other day, many things were said in his praise. But what he was honored most for was that in all his life he never permitted a profane word to pass his lips. Profanity is not the mark of a strong man, but evidence of a weak vocabulary. The man of foul tongue holds in high respect the man of clean speech, conceding his superiority. There is a lot of propaganda for better English. How about cleaner English?" With all of which we heartily agree.

THE REWARDS OF WORK.

Dr. Richard C. Cabot, in his book, "What Men Live By," says many things that are full of truth and beauty. We commend the following, from the chapter on "The Rewards of Work" to those who may be tempted to become weary in well-doing: "When we try to serve the world (or to understand it), we touch what is divine. We get our dignity, our courage, our joy in work because of the greatness of the far-off end, always in sight, always attainable, never at any moment attained. Service is one of the ways by which a tiny insect like one of us can get a purchase on the universe. If we find the job where we can be of use, we are hitched to the star of the world, and move with it."

WHAT IS A HERO?

We ask the question appearing at the caption of this paragraph as a result of reading a press despatch from Paris to the effect that Georges Carpentier, the unsuccessful contestant for the heavyweight prize fighting championship of the world, was given a hero's reception upon his arrival in Paris recently from the United States. A great crowd was assembled at the railroad station to meet him, and his admirers, breaking through the guard placed by the police authorities, took him on their shoulders and bore him to the street, with the cry, "Carry him in triumph!" If Carpentier is a hero, what are the standards by which we measure greatness? He has not rendered any great service to humanity; he has not made any remarkable scientific discovery; he has not led in any great reform; he has not uttered any prophetic word; he has not sung any inspiring song. All he has done, so far as we know, is to take second in the pugilistic ring and traded blows with another man to determine which was physically superior. If Georges Carpentier is a hero, God save our heroes!

A FRIEND.

By Celia Berkstresser.

I thought I could not live and drink so deep
A draught from sorrow's cup; but when I drank
There was revealed to me a wondrous way
Made sweet by human sympathy. Amazed,
I looked into familiar faces near
And saw what I had never seen before—
The best, the noblest, in the soul within;
For face to face was I with all that's true,
Immortal, in the human breast; and I
Was strangely comforted. All griefs, complaints
Were hushed in awe. I stood on holy ground
And humbly thanked the God of love that I Had seen the hidden soul of man and knew
The truest meaning of the word—a friend.

AS WITH EAGLES' WINGS.

By William F. Hovis, D.D.

Only natural is it that man, grimy with the sweat of toil, tried with vexatious cares, fretted with chafing burdens, beaten with the lash of driving circumstances and hunted by relentless necessity, should covet the pinions of his aerial neighbors and break forth with the yearning: "O that I had wings like a dove! that I might fly away and be at rest and haste me to a shelter from the stormy wind and tempest." In answer to this cry comes the assurance that souls choked by the fetid miasma of the lowlands, parched by the burning heat of life's blasted desert, weary with the strain and tumult of continuous struggle, "sick and helpless and ready to die" may "mount up with wings as eagles."

Man does not yearn in vain for pinions. He is both mundane and celestial. The bard who sang:

"We have not wings, we cannot fly:
But we have feet and we can climb," told only half the truth. Man both tramps the earth and soars aloft. He delves and climbs and flies. He is not more a creature of the dust than of the stars, and every soul may say:

"If I had winds as lordly eagles wear,
And I could circle mountain peaks and soar
Above their spires, and in deep valleys pour Reiterant circling shadows while through air
I voyaged as a boat through seas, and bear
Me on in triumph over ocean's shore,
So far and high my flight that ocean's roar
Signaled me not, could I with eagle's share,
My flight were not so high as now, my wings
Less mighty than the wings which me upbore,
My eye less keen than sight which now is mine:
'I am God's son,' my joyous spirit sings,
I soar sublime above earth's dust and cares,
And wing my way to heaven with flight divine."
—Quayle.

There is something overpowering about an eagle's wings. They do not suggest unreality. They suggest power, regality, altitudes to which only superiority can rise, muscles steeled with conflict with the winds, effort which mocks faint-heartedness, dominions through achievement. There is nothing puny about the promise that man may mount on eagles' wings. It hints of conquest, the triumph of battles won, and the rulership of greatness.

Immense possibilities lie within easy reach of every soul. Man's task is mundane, but he can glorify his work with the vision of an eagle. He walks in the dust, but he can soar to realms above the clouds.

Whether man walks in dust or basks in light is at last a matter of his own choosing. He is here the arbiter of his own destiny. He may either wallow in malarial swamps or dwell on peaks that pierce the zenith—it is for him to say. To choose the first is to rob himself, to beggar his own existence. The lowland dweller just exists, the man who builds his house upon the mountain lives. The one is "a finished and finite clod, untroubled by a spark;" the other feels "the doubt low kinds exist without." The one is "as the horse or as the mule which have no understanding," the other "as the bird wings and sings" cries "all good things are ours." Browning said:

"Poor vaunt of life indeed,
Were man but formed to feed
Oh joy, to solely seek and find and feast
Such feasting ended, then
As sure an end to men:
Irks care the cropful bird?
Frets doubt the maw-crammed beast?"

"Abundant life" is the privilege of the human heart. Tennyson is thinking of this fact when he makes Ulysses say, "I will drink life to the lees!" and Walter Savage Landor would teach men to utilize its fullest power in his line, "I warmed both hands before the fire of life." Reiterating the same idea Browning has David sing before Saul, "Saul, the mistake, Saul, the failure, the ruin he seems." Man must have wings to explore life's high and far horizons.

A man's thoughts may be wings. Man's soul is transfigured, and exalted by worthy thoughts. On the other hand, the soul is contracted, disfigured, and debased by thoughts which are corrupt. I shall never forget a sentence in a prayer which I heard the late Joseph Parker make in the pulpit of the City Temple in London nearly twenty years ago. He prayed, "O Lord deliver us from little thoughts."—Central Christian Advocate.

SOME THINGS HARD TO KNOW.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

A general acceptance of the Bible as the inspired Word of God is not so hard to the man whose faith is too lazy to think. It is easier to believe what we don't know than it is to know what we believe. David, in speaking of the "prosperity of the wicked," and sufferings of the righteous, says, "When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me." Peter, in commending the writings of the "beloved Paul," says, "—in which are some things hard to be understood."

David exchanged his unbearable pains for rapturous joys by selecting a new point of view. He found that the continuous love and presence of God were greater and better than great wealth, and that the chastening of soul was more profitable than the fatness of the body, sainthood more glorious than brute life.

When we think to know what it is that He taught—or to add intelligence to our faith—we find some things "hard to understand." Yet it is the only way to "add to our faith knowledge" or attain to an "intelligent faith." Salvation is not by ignorance, but by a knowledge of the truth.

"Let the dead bury their dead" was Jesus's demand of the young man whom He would send to preach the Kingdom of God, and who would first go and bury his father. Was Jesus inconsiderate or unsympathetic? Humanly speaking, this seems hard—and we are human. We shall have to grow some before this will be easy to understand. We shall need some elevation of viewpoint. What is He talking about? To whom is He speaking?

To those who would follow Him, He is revealing the true conditions of discipleship. He had just taught them that "whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow me;" "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me;" "He that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me." An able and practical discourse on the heroics of the Christian faith—but how little it meant to them! We have no record of the final decision of the first volunteer—he goes out of sight on the announcement of no home or bed; the second pleaded the death of his father as of first importance; the third, the consideration of his family.

A man is not a sinner because he needs a home and a bed, nor is he a criminal because he loves father or mother, son or daughter. There is nothing wrong in the proper respect for our loved ones, living or dead. Let us view the matter from a military viewpoint (certainly Christian service is on no lower plane than our patriotism). In the midst of the battle the provost marshal riding in the rear, found the boy who was carrying water to wounded, unloading his canteens and wailing over the body of his slain brother. He ordered him forward to the wounded calling for water, saying, "Leave your brother for the burying squad, and get water to those dying of thirst." The general passing behind the firing line, halted the young soldier who, with smoking gun in hand, was retiring to where his father had been killed, and ordered him back to the front to press the enemy who had slain his father, lest they all be killed, the battle lost, and the country ruined. The young soldier, fired with a desperate zeal, rushed to the front. As his captain fell, he called to his comrades, "Follow me to victory or to death." They won the battle. That victory ended the war and saved the country. Shall the soldiers of the Cross be less heroic?

A story is told of a farmer who was so in love with his beautiful wife and children that when he had plowed to the end of the row nearest his house he had to go kiss his wife and play with the children—till the weeds took his crop and they all starved. His neighbors who toiled early and late, said, "This man was not worthy to prosper or to live." Jesus needs soldiers who will stay on the firing line—men who will remain on the job. The church is suffering for the want of men of heroic faith.

Jesus was not wanting in sympathy, or proper regard for the memory of departed loved ones; but to make a shrine of the tomb and neglect the church for the living is to die religiously and retrograde in civilization.

REV. J. D. NEWSOM—A MEMOIR.

The Rev. Joseph Duckworth Newsom, son of James Newsom, was born in Louisiana, March 17, 1828, and died in Meridian, Miss., December 18, 1919, aged 91 years, 9 months and 1 day. He was three times married. His first wife, Sarah A. James, was the mother of all his children, six in number, all of whom preceded the father to the spirit world except one son. Miss Frances James was his second wife and Miss Leila McCracken was his third.

Brother Newsom was converted in 1839 and was received into the Mississippi Conference in 1848 and served the following appointments: Coles Creek, 1849; Tallulah, 1850; Lake Washington, 1852; Wilkinson, 1853; Bayou Sara, 1854; Laurel Hill and Barrow's Chapel, 1855; Wilkinson, 1856-7; North Warren, 1858-9; Hildale, 1860-61; Black Hawk, 1862-3; Holmes, 1864-5; Black Hawk, 1866-7-8; Lexington, 1869-70. At the close of the latter year, the North Mississippi Conference was organized and he was returned to Lexington for 1871-2; Vaiden, 1873; Liberty, 1874-5; Louisville, 1876-7-8-9; Bolivar Station, 1880; Greenwood, 1881; Minter City, 1882; Indian Bayou and Faisonla, 1883-4; Deer Creek, 1885-6; Friars Point, 1887;

Huntington and Mound Bayou, 1888; Duncan and Friendship, 1889; Hebron, 1890; Kossuth, 1891; Sparta, 1892-3; Ethel, 1894; Newport, 1895. He was superannuated in 1896-7-8; served Longtown, 1899; Cedar Bluff, 1900, and was then a superannuate until his translation in 1919. Thus was spent a ministerial career of seventy-one years.

In physique, he was slender, sinewy, supple. He carried no surplus flesh. His was an unabused body, hence his longevity. No stimulant or narcotic had weakened or destroyed a fiber or function of his frame. He realized the necessity of caring for the house in which his spirit lived and worked. With human help, the Spirit may Christianize both body and soul.

There was a quaintness about Brother Newsom that enriched his own life and others which he touched. Into the darkest situation he would often flash a light that would clear up the most perplexing questions. The brightness of his spirit made the hardest charges more endurable.

Practice of what he conceived to be right kept his moral vision clear. One view of a situation gave him instant decision as to the right, and his course was settled. It never entered his mind to consider his own popularity or the opinion of others. So simple and sincere were his intuitions of propriety and good morals that observers noted wholesome distinctions. His position on moral issues was never in doubt. He became an epistle known and read of all men. His life was a luminous comment on the sanctity of the Sabbath. God had set the day apart and no compromise was tolerable. Joy-riding, games, theaters open on the Sabbath on the pretense of recreation for laborers were shams that stirred his righteous soul.

Worldliness in the church gave him great concern and drew forth his wise and helpful counsel. There was no middle ground for the Christian, according to his faith and conscience. In the days of the fathers, he would have been called a Puritan. His consistency and conduct and life gave great steadiness to the congregations to which he ministered, as well as to his brethren in the ministry.

His devotion to the cause of Christianity was nothing short of inspiring. He began itinerant work when charges were large and laborious; when luxuries were almost unknown and comforts were scarce. Churches were poorly built and poorly furnished, generally very uncomfortable. But this diligent servant sought out such places for more than half a century that he might tell the people of Jesus and His love. Roads were bad, churches far apart, bridges few, accommodations for shelter and food most uninviting. Often rooms were open and fireless with slight covering for beds. In addition, the salary was small—too small for providing adequately for the necessities of life. However, he served uncomplainingly, like his Master. It was a mark of his ministry, as of that of the Master, that "the poor have the gospel preached unto them."

His intuition of right and his readiness to carry out his convictions; his devotion to Christ; his unswerving and unceasing fidelity to duty made him a notable man and minister of Jesus Christ. The impress of his godly life will not soon pass from those to whom he ministered and with whom he associated.

His body was laid to rest in the city of Meridian to await the resurrection after services conducted by Rev. H. B. Watkins and other ministers present.

A HALF-DAY WITH THE BIBLE MAN.

By Rev. J. J. Morgan,
Secretary Southwestern Agency, American Bible Society.

Actual experiences of a half-day in Bible work are given by the veteran colporteur, G. A. Perkins. They illustrate average experience of a Bible colporteur in his house-to-house canvass. This half-day was spent in the poor district of an Oklahoma oil town.

"First house: 'No, we don't want any Bibles'

"Next: Same answer.

"Next: 'Oh, mother! buy me one of them little Bibles,' cries a sturdy little boy of eight years. He becomes the proud possessor of our 38c Bible.

"This little boy beats me to the next house, and when I arrive, he is showing his Bible to a neighbor friend. Another sale.

"Next: 'Well, I guess I need one. I have not had a Bible in my house for sixteen years, and I confess I have been a sinful woman. Do you think God will forgive, if I repent?'

"A large print Testament. A short prayer. A woman in tears, and, we trust, a woman saved.

"Next: No one at home, but we have difficulty in getting safely away, for an ugly dog attacks us.

"Next, and next, and next are all well supplied.

"Next house: The door is slammed in our face. We lose 'pep' here, and stop for a moment in silent prayer.

"Next: 'I am so glad to see you. I have heard of your being in town, and I have been hoping you would come to my house. I want some Bibles for my Sunday school class. God bless you! You are doing a great work.'

"We straighten up, take a long breath, thank God, and press on.

"Next house: Nothing doing.

"Next: 'I want one of those Bibles with a family record. I am twenty-eight years old, married, and have three children. This is the first Bible we have ever had in our home. No, we don't go to church or Sunday school.' A short prayer—a penitent mother.

"Next: We hear footsteps, slow and feeble, coming to the door. 'Oh, we have plenty of Bibles, but nothing that I can read. The print is so fine.'

"How is this?'

"I can read that! What is it worth?'

"The American Bible Society will sell you that Bible at the cost of manufacture, namely, $1.50.'

"But I have only one dollar in the house.'

"This is mission work; you may have it for one dollar.'

"We meet a street-car conductor: 'No, I have one of those army Testaments. It is all stained with blood from a wound in France, and I wouldn't take anything for it.'

"Next house: 'Oh, we have got a Bible somewhere about the house, but I never get time to read it.'

"Well, I will tell you what you ought to do; you ought to dig up that Bible and read it. God will hold you responsible for neglecting his Word.'

"Again on our way. We hear footsteps behind us. A little girl runs up all out of breath, and says: 'Mister, have you any more of those pretty little Testaments I want so bad? No, sir, I haven't got but ten cents.'

"Well, God bless you, my child, you shall have one.'

"Next house: A woman sitting on the bed, holding a sick child. When asked if she will buy a Bible, she breaks out crying, and says they have no money and nothing to eat but flour. In the name of the American Bible Society, we give her a Bible; and, on our own account, we give her a dollar. We report her case to a local pastor.

"It is now twelve o'clock. We are growing weary and hungry, and stop at a wayside grocery for a bottle of milk and some crackers. The half day's work is done."

In the afternoon it is customary for the Bible man to sell Scriptures from a stand downtown where the crowd is thickest. This not only gives his tired feet and legs a rest, but it gives him a remarkable opportunity to reach all classes of men, women, and children. The very presence of the Bibles on the street causes men to stop and think. Many scoff at God and scorn His Word; but the sales are good, for the Bible outsells any book on the market, and the Bible has a far-reaching influence on a busy downtown corner.—Exchange.

Do we wish to see the way of the Lord? Let us prepare it; let us prepare for it. We do not want to see set up an index expurgatorious, in which books dreaming of a better social state are thrust into derision and refused a hearing. They may be a contribution to that social preparation which may fulfill the injunction: "Prepare ye the way of the Lord."—Exchange.

A REVIVAL.

A real revival of religion is a great blessing that can come to any people. It is not differences, disputes, wrangling, and hard feelings between neighbors and friends. It is not a spirit of neighborliness, kindness, gentleness, forbearance and forgiveness. It means the presence of God in the hearts of the people, the love of God, which makes men love one another. It creates confidence and brings harmony and peace.

It is a wonderful thing that a revival does. It makes honest, truthful, dependable, reliable men. It converts robbers, thieves, and death-dealers into honest, industrious, reliable citizens. It makes our homes and places of business more secure. It is a great incentive to material prosperity.

It is destructive as well as constructive. It destroys sin, selfishness, covetousness, idleness, littleness of soul. It eliminates Achan from the church. It gets rid of Ananias and Sapphira. It makes people pay their debts, settle old accounts, straighten up their business and social lives. It destroys hard feelings, bitter envyings, malice, jealousy, strife.

It transforms character. It makes honest men out of thieves and robbers. It makes truthful men out of liars. It makes pure and pure-minded men out of profane and vulgar-mouthed men.

It brings the greatest boon imaginable into the home life. It creates mutual love and confidence, honor and trust between husband and wife. It is worth more than wealth and education to the children. It enables the parents to sow the seeds of real Christian character in the lives of their children.

It makes the church work worth while to the community—one of the most valuable institutions to the welfare of civilization.

How may such a revival be had? Isaiah, 55th chapter, gives a good answer. It must be desired above everything else. It must be considered the "pearl of great price" and we must be willing to pay the price to have it. It comes by way of Matt. 6:33. God loves to bless His people, but He is too good and too wise to give spiritual blessings where they are not desired and appreciated. God does not "cast pearls before swine," nor "give that which is holy unto dogs." So, if we desire with a supreme desire a real revival that will destroy sin in high and low places, and make men's hearts pure and their lives clean, and fill them with the love of the Father, and prove to God by our lives and devotion that we are willing to pay the price, the revival will surely come.

The proof of such a desire that God recognizes is expressed in prayer. PRAYER in secret, PRAYER in the home, with the loved ones, with fellow Christians in the church—special, definite, persistent, importunate PRAYER; prayer like Jacob uttered at Peniel, when he lingered all night in prayer and said, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me;" prayer like the Syrophenician woman offered, who came to Jesus in behalf of her daughter; prayer like the woman before the unjust judge prayed; prayer like the man who went to his friend at midnight for bread prayed; prayer like the apostles uttered when persecution arose because of the preaching of the gospel. Acts 1: 23-31. Bulletin, Pontotoc Methodist Church.

A MAN OF COURAGE.

Jacob Flyter, with four Italian workmen, was working in a tunnel under the Chicago River when the river broke through. The Italians, in their flight, slammed the door behind them and left Flyter a prisoner. His rescue was an act of heroic proportions in itself, but it is Flyter's own courage that deserves a place here. When the water crept up nearly to his head, his rescuers passed a flask of whiskey into him through a small opening in the door, but he refused it. Again at the hospital, though shaking with chills and exhaustion, he refused whiskey. "I promised my old mother that I'd never touch the stuff and I wouldn't, if I knew it would save my life," was his simple explanation. Only a common, everyday man, but he had the moral courage that saves humanity. Florida Christian Advocate.

PREACHING WITHOUT PASSION.

A great deal of modern preaching fails of all spiritual result because it is passionless. Hundreds of men in the pulpits preach and preach well, but nothing happens; and in view of the seriousness of the religious and moral situation everywhere evident, we are constrained to ask, Why? Many reasons might be adduced with more or less justification. The chief of them all is lack of evangelical passion. For it is all-inclusive. The preacher who lacks it is altogether out of place in a Christian pulpit. The congregations who suffer it are to be pitied for the wrong done to them and to their children. The church which loves to have it so is in peril of having its candlestick removed from its place.

I.

How seldom in sermons to-day is the note of urgency heard! Even where the truth of the Gospel is the subject-matter, it is often declared in such a way as to savor of death rather than of life. It is presented as a noble philosophy, a flawless argument, an overtowering ethic, and as such it may move men's minds to some slight measure of interest. The greater number of its hearers it leaves unmoved. They are conscious of no moral demand for repentance and of no imperative call to faith. By no means hostile—for, indeed, the ordinary preaching is not calculated to arouse hostility—they are simply indifferent to a matter which, as presented to them, is more or less negligible.

Not so is it with the clamorous call of the world. It offers immediate gifts, and is urgent that they be taken and enjoyed without delay. And to hearts uncaptured by a passionless Gospel its source very much of the unashamed worldliness of the present day is the direct consequence of feebleness in the pulpit. For under passionate preaching of Christ, which sets a direct and unavoidable issue before every hearer, it would be infinitely harder for young people to shake free from His claims than it is now when nothing deters them. To the conscience of many of them it is no offense whatever to spend life in a God-forgetting frivolity. They are altogether unaware of having turned from Christ, and are untroubled by any regret. For the plain fact is that many of them have never been brought face to face with the vital choice. They have, on the whole, heard preaching enough, but it has not been of the sort which summons conscience as an ally, and makes an ineffaceable impression upon memory. They have not been captured by the ideals of the Gospel because the preaching they have heard has not been urgent, insistent, passionate. We talk of people "sitting under" preaching. What a comment on the preacher! Where he is on fire with love to Christ and souls, where he preaches,

" * * as though he ne'er would preach again,
And as a dying man to dying men," his hearers will not sit. They will bow down before the Savior and rise to run the way of His Commandments with hearts aflame. Over such the world has no power.

II.

There are comparatively few pulpits to-day from which is preached a Gospel alive with the urgent necessity of immediate response to its invitations and claims. It is an increasingly rare occurrence to hear a sermon which literally forces men and women to take sides. From all parts the same reports come, of cold, passionless, unconvincing preaching, and of church communities—in every denomination—with nothing whatever in their life to differentiate them from the world. And how can it be otherwise if the ministry itself is content to stand elsewhere than with Christ in His unequivocal attitude toward all that opposes itself against the knowledge of God? What else is to be expected if it is content to make itself the mouthpiece of that which has no sort of affinity to His Gospel? For this is exactly what is happening. Preachers do not urge men to "flee from the wrath to come," because they are not themselves sure that any wrath is coming. They do not press the need of personal conversion to God, because they have persuaded themselves that good citizenship is a quite adequate moral goal—and easier to secure. They have no compelling voice, beseeching men to Christ, because they have themselves no authoritative convictions about Him. And, whatever else their ministry may be, nobody with any reliable discernment can call it triumphant.

Yet how many and great are the imperatives and encouragements to a soul-winning ministry, with its protective influence upon the young, and its redemptive power among all classes! A well-known American writer has recently said: "The Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are unapproached in searching the conscience, comforting the heart, and revealing the will of God to men. And Jesus Christ is a living power for regenerating and recovering wasted humanity. There is only one message of hope for the woman who has lost her crown, and that is Christ's word to her. There is only one power in the world to-day that can lift a man by a single bound to heights to which culturists would need years to raise him, if indeed they could raise him at all. And that power is the power of Christ. And while the great medium of education to-day is the printed page, the most thrilling medium for the transmission of truth is a living person, stirred with a great passion for mankind. This is the opportunity of the pulpit for the man who is called of God to occupy it—to unfold the message of the Old and New Testaments under the power of Christ, out of a heart quivering with interest in men." We may add that such a ministry gathers fresh passion with its every accomplishment. It is not in the enthusiasm of the novice that the most convincing examples of the fruitfulness of urgent preaching are to be looked—though we should be the last to disparage what the limited vision and power of youth can accomplish. It is rather in those men of outstanding esteem, who through the years have never forsaken the first aims of their high calling, and who, whenever they speak, impress upon those who listen that the issues raised are those of life and death. Thank God there are such in our midst, whose word is constantly confirmed by signs following. The tragedy of the situation is that they should be so few.

III.

We are not now speaking of the problem of the empty church, for many churches with a positively Christless pulpit are only too well filled. There will always be people who are glad to support a ministry which causes them no discomfort while securing to them a measure of social approval. And many a minister who has little, if any, avowed purpose of bringing men to Christ is full of keenness to bring them to church. It should not be necessary—but it is—to state as plainly as possible that to get a man into membership of the church without first securing his allegiance to Jesus Christ is to make his last state worse than his first. For when such a one is prevailed upon to observe one of the most important outward signs of an inward grace without being a possessor of the grace, his heart is almost unalterably hardened against subsequent entrance of the Word of God. He has a form of holiness but denies its power—even though, as often happens, he attains to office and authority in the church. Of such are the most stubborn opponents of all true spiritual work. Many a minister against whose zeal no possible charge could be made, is simply making his church a mere collection of unsaved people, instead of a living fellowship of the redeemed. From the statistical point of view his work leaves nothing to be desired. From the soul-winning and spiritual—which is the only point of view worthy of consideration—his success is nothing more than pitiful disguised failure. Nor is such personal popularity as may be won by artfully distorting the truth as it is in Jesus, any index of the Divine approval. Rather are these twain in inverse ratio. Yet we have known men who loved the praise of men more than the praise of God, and have lived for it to the utter denial of the only authenticating purpose of the Christian ministry. Surely it is from all such mistaken and false emphasis that the world's need in the present day is calling all those who hold themselves to be Christ's servants.

At the back of every absence of the urgent note from to-day's preaching, is usually to be found a personal confusion as to the Divine Word. Has God passed sentence on human sin or has He not. Has He given His Son to strive with men, or has He not? Has He appointed a day in which He will judge the world, or has He not? Has He declared the issue as one of life and death, blessing and cursing, or has He not. Has He proclaimed the present as the day of salvation, or has He not? Has He given us to understand that His Spirit will not always strive with them, or has He not? Upon their answer to these queries must depend the urgency of men's preaching. For if they believe in the profound alternatives which wait upon the response of their hearers to the message they deliver, who amongst all those, who preach can content himself with anything less than a flaming ministry in the heat of which his very life is consumed?

When the ministers awake to the utter folly of any other type of preaching than that which convinces, convicts and converts men by the unseen influences of the Spirit working through their own passionate earnestness, the longed-for revival will be here. But not until then.—The Christian.

NOTES OF THE ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE.

By H. K. Carroll, LL. D.,
Secretary of Western Section.

The Conference opens September 6 and closes September 16. All the sessions except the first will be held in Central Hall, Westminster. The first session for the opening sermon will assemble in Wesley's Chapel, on City Road.

The Central Hall is opposite Westminster Abbey and the Parliament buildings. It was erected at the beginning of the century out of the Thanksgiving million fund of the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

The offices of the Conference from August 3 to September 3 will be at Westminster Training College, 130 Horseferry Road, Westminster, S. W. 1, London, where information as to hospitality and tickets of admission to the Conference will be given. From September 5 to September 16 the offices of the Conference will be at the Central Hall, hours of attendance 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tickets should be secured prior to September 7.

Ample facilities will be given for the free accommodation of visitors to the Conference in the galleries, the floor being reserved for the delegates only.

American delegates may have their letters addressed at any time to the Westminster Training College, 130 Horseferry Road, Westminster, London, S. W. 1. During the sessions of the Conference they should be addressed to Central Hall, Westminster, London, S. W. 1, where there is a poste restante.

The Central Building is about ten minutes' walk across St. James Park from Charing Cross and the great hotels, the Grand, Metropolis, Victoria, Cecil, etc.

A dinner will be given to the Overseas delegates at Hotel Cecil, Tuesday, September 13, at 6:30 p.m. Extra plates may be secured at $4 each.

All kinds of banking business will be transacted for delegates by a branch of the London Joint City and Midland Bank which will have an office at the Central Building.

By arrangement with the tourist agents, the Temple Tours Co., 65 Franklin Street, Boston, Mass., the "Albania," of the Cunard Line, will be the ship for delegates to the Ecumenical Conference. She is new and is a one-cabin passenger ship. That is, there is only one class of passengers and all have the same general privileges. The rates are low, ranging from $125 up, according to location and number in room. Reservations should be secured through the Temple Tours Company, and return passage should be arranged for before sailing from New York.

The British brethren are planning to entertain American delegates in private houses, providing lodging, breakfast and dinner. Luncheon is to be served in the Central Building and also tea in the afternoon.

Word has just been received that Bishop Kogoro Usaki, D.D., will attend the Ecumenical Methodist Conference as a delegate of the Methodist Church of Japan. This body has a place among the American Methodist Churches in the Western Section. It was organized in 1907 as a result of the joint action of the General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Church of Canada. It has about 22,000 members. Bishop Usaki has had over twenty-five years' service as pastor, preacher, editor, missionary secretary and college president, and was elected bishop two years ago. He is a wise and effective administrator, and is an eloquent speaker.

Unusual difficulty in completing the assignments on the program has been met on both sides of the sea. Important changes have been made in the appointments of the Eastern Section and those of the Western Section are not quite complete. But as soon as the revised list comes from the Eastern Section the program will be printed and given to the Methodist public.

The preacher of the opening sermon in City Road Chapel will be the Rev. S. P. Rose, D.D., of Montreal, Canada. Bishop Leete will give the Ten Years' Retrospect of American Methodism and the Rev. F. L. Wiseman will do the same service for the British Methodism.

The Conference will have four secretaries, two from each section. Those nominated by the Western Section are H. K. Carroll, L.L. D., and Mr. Oscar W. Adams of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. Doubtless Dr. H. B. Workman, Secretary of the Eastern Section, will be Chief Secretary of the Conference. There will be a president for each session, alternating between the Eastern and Western Sections.

The Business Committee of the Conference will consist of twenty persons, ten from each section. Those nominated from the Western Section are: Bishop J. W. Hamilton, D.D., Dr. H. K. Carroll, Mr. E. L. Kidney, Mr. W. T. Galliher, Methodist Episcopal Church; Rev. H. A. Boaz, D.D. (one to be named) Methodist Episcopal Church, South; Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., Methodist Church of Canada; Bishop C. S. Smith, D.D., African Methodist Episcopal Church; Bishop J. S. Caldwell, D.D., African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church; and Mr. Harry Shaw, Methodist Protestant Church.

RURAL EVANGELISM AND USEFUL TRACTS.

Much has been said and written in recent months concerning an evangelistic program for our church, and there has been a fine response from the men in the pastorate throughout the entire denomination to an appeal for a church-wide revival. Many of the men in town and country charges have been writing to us to suggest help in the way of pamphlets and tracts. As a church, we have not built up a very large tract supply, but we do have a few which can be had by writing to us.

We would first suggest that you take the little red book sent out by the Bureau of Evangelism, which has been placed in the hands of every preacher in the denomination. Read that carefully and follow the program, and we think you will find some help from it.

The following tracts may be had free of charge:

"What the adult applicant for membership should know."

"Why delay your salvation?"

"The Lord's Supper."

"Baptism in a Nut Shell."

"Methodism."

These tracts may be had in any reasonable quantities if you order them from us. We are earnestly praying that a great revival shall sweep throughout our entire rural Methodism. Nothing would so affect our church as this. Let's give ourselves wholly to it this summer and fall.

O. E. GODDARD,

R. L. RUSSELL,

Home Mission Secretaries.

REV. R. T. NOLEN.

If knowing God and loving his fellow men are the essential qualifications for the Christian ministry, Rev. R. T. Nolen, the subject of this memoir, was qualified in an unusual degree; and for years he rendered fruitful service among the circuits of the North and South Mississippi Conferences. His happy, cheery spirit, which no hardship or adversity could destroy, his sterling character, his willingness even as years advanced to labor unceasingly in his Master's service, and his acceptability with the people both as pastor and preacher rendered it always easy to find a place for him, and made association with him in the work of the church a joy and pleasure.

He was born in Eupora, Miss., July 5, 1851, and died at High Point, Miss., June 1, 1921, at the age of seventy. He was first married to Miss Jennie Atkinson, of Carrollton, Miss., in 1870, and after her decease was married, a second time, to Miss Mary Hester, of Acona, Miss., on Nov. 29, 1891. He leaves seven sons and three daughters, all of whom are married, and whose love and veneration for their father is a lasting tribute to the genuineness of his piety and his love and devotion as a father.

For twenty-one years he served in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as a local preacher, supplying charges in both South and North Mississippi. His last field of active service was the Vardaman Circuit, North Mississippi Conference, to which he was literally called by request of the people while the writer of this sketch was presiding elder of the Aberdeen District. At the session of the Conference at Charleston he was appointed to the High Point charge, but on account of failing health was never able to render active service. Unto the end he was faithful, and tenderly cared for by his devoted wife and surrounded by loved ones, he passed from a life of fruitful service on earth into the joy of his Lord forever.

"Now the laborer's task is o'er,

Now the battle day is passed,

Now upon the farther shore

Lands—the voyager at last.

Father, in thy gracious keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

THOS. H. LIPSCOMB.

Columbus, Miss.

A SUPERANNUATED PREACHER'S REPORT FROM JANUARY TO JULY 19, 1921.

Since January to 19th of July, 1921, expenses have been:

1. Painting and repairing	$ 97.90
2. Insurance	30.00

Total (not including his own work) ..	$127.90
Received from Conference Board ..	$110.00
Received from General Board	27.49—$137.49
Less expenses above	127.90

Balance.....$ 9.59

leaving $9.59 for his wife and himself with which to buy food, clothes, fuel, to pay for water, lights, laundry, stationery, church and secular papers, church dues, etc., during nearly seven months.

The preacher making this report, he and his wife, surrendered themselves with all they were, had or ever expected to be or to have, wholly to the Conference in 1878.

During their four years in one charge he took 518 persons into our church and besides, during those four years, he baptized 315 infants.

In 1886, he began to write books and pamphlets and gave all the proceeds therefrom to the church and the poor, not depositing nor investing one dollar for his and his wife's superannuation, etc.

If his taxes are as last year, he will have to pay out of what is expected during the remainder of this year, $65.57 for city and county taxes.

THE CHURCH PAPER IN THE CHURCH BUDGET.

On no question has there been more discussion and more disagreement of opinion and action than the question of the denominational paper. Read the report from the convention proceedings.

The next question discussed at the convention was that of the denominational paper. Dr. Livingston Johnson, of Raleigh, N. C., was asked to speak on the subject. In his address he said: "Pastors and churches need to be educated in conscience; that they are interested in the other objects of the convention. I would like to get that the denominational paper is not all these objects. He said the $77,000,000, which was the greatest thing the Baptists ever accomplished, could not have been put across without aid of the denominational paper, that very few, if any, of the denominational papers of the South are paying expenses; that unless they receive better support it seems probable that some will be forced to suspend publication. 'For the sake of the denomination more than the interest of the papers, I am pleading for a better support for these papers.'

"Dr. Johnson's speech was followed by speeches from twenty others. This was the largest number that spoke on any one subject during the convention.

"A resolution was then unanimously adopted requesting the churches to put the denominational paper in the church budget." Exchange.

AN URGENT APPEAL.

Some weeks since, I requested all our pastors to call attention of their people to the necessity of a State law giving our State courts the power to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. They may be at work, holding conferences with their legislatures, as requested, but if so, I have not heard from them.

The Legislature meets on September 6, not much time left; if you have not attended to this matter, please do so at once. I cannot do this work alone. In fact, without your hearty cooperation I can do but little in the name of the boys and girls of Louisiana. I again appeal to every pastor to call this matter to the attention of his people and let me hear the result.

We expected trouble in the matter of law enforcement; it will take time, but we can and will win. Your children are not drinking antiseptic and hair tonic—they don't get the habit that way. It is the fellow who learned to drink under the old saloon system that drinks bar tonic and "white lightning."

What are you going to do about it?

Yours sincerely,

A. W. TURNER,

Superintendent, Louisiana Anti-Saloon League.

THE BIBLE NOW AND THEN.

By Edwin Gene.

Early in the past year a priest of the Roman Catholic church gave an address in the city of New York under the auspices of the Catholic Woman's Association. His subject was "The Greatest Book in the World." In the course of the address he said: "There is one book that lives forever. It is ancient, yet ever new. It has influenced every age and every leader in every age. It has the reverences of millions who regard it as the Word of God and of other millions who deny its divine character, but admire it for purely human reasons."

About six months later a well-known Protestant minister of the gospel in the same city preached a sermon on "The Bible, the World's Best Loved Book." In concluding his sermon he said: "This Book was dear unto your fathers and your mothers. The pioneers fed upon this hidden manna and the heroes found it was angel's bread. * * * Other books are lamps; this is the star. Other volumes are of to-day, this Book is of yesterday, to-day and to-morrow. Other books are for a special crisis and one race. This Book is a universal Book for all ages and climes and centuries. Therefore it is the Book of Life and the Book of God for the Sons of Men."

More than three hundred years ago, that is, late in the fall of 1619, there was a large congregation gathered in the open air at Dedham to listen to a sermon preached by the Rev. John Rogers. He is described as an aged Puritan preacher. He was one of the children of the Rev. John Rogers, a martyr in the days of Queen Mary of England. The preacher had stood with his mother and other members of the family to witness the burning of husband and father. Froude, the historian, describing the scene, says: "His family, whom he was forbidden to part with in private, were waiting on his way to see him, his wife with nine little ones at her side and a tenth upon her breast; and they too (as well as the people) welcomed him with hysterical cries of joy, as if he were on his way to a festival."

The preacher of the day, the son of the martyr, had chosen for the subject of his sermon, "The Study of the Scriptures." Earnestly and eloquently he pleaded for the regular and prayerful study of God's Word. Coming to the close of his sermon, he took occasion to reprove those who neglected the Word. Personating God and speaking on His behalf, he said: "Well, I have trusted you so long; you have slighted it. It lies in your houses all covered with dust and cobwebs. You care not to look into it. Do you use my Bible so? Well, you shall have my Bible no longer." Then, taking it up, he turned as if to carry it away. Turning back again, he personated the people and, falling on his knees, he began to plead most earnestly: "Lord, whatsoever thou doest to us, take not Thy Bible from us. Take our children, burn our homes, destroy our goods, only spare us Thy Bible." Then again personating the heavenly Father, he said: "Say you so? Well, I will try you a little longer. Here is my Bible for you. I will see how you will use it, whether you will love it more, whether you will value it more, whether you will practice it more and live more according to it."

The congregation was deeply affected. Some were in tears, many went away determining not to be "neglecters of the Word." Present on the occasion was a young man named Thomas Goodwin, a student from the University of Cambridge. He listened; was impressed with the earnestness of the speaker, his power in prayer, the yearning of his heart for the salvation of the people. Mounting his horse to return home, he fell on the horse's neck in tears. He yielded himself to God, afterward became a well-known theologian and eminent minister of the gospel. Sixty years after that day, he told John Howe, the Puritan divine, how there was awakened in his soul then a love for God's Word which never died out and there was kindled within him a fire that was still burning.

The record of the centuries, the testimony of priest and preacher, the experience of millions, of others unite to maintain the blessed truth that the Bible is the greatest and is the best loved Book in the world. It deserves to be recognized as such, and if accepted the gospel it proclaims is the power of God unto salvation to those who believe it. Yet how many there are who are neglecting it, some denying the Book. Is there not danger that it may be taken away from such, that "the candlestick may be removed from his place," the gospel become a savour of death unto death instead of a savour of life unto life?—Exchange.

"I NEVER THOUGHT OF MY MOTHER."

One of the largest bank robberies on record occurred some weeks ago in Chicago. A young employee of a trust company, less than seventeen years old, absconded with Liberty Bonds valued at $772,000. He was arrested in the little town of Heyworth within a few days and was returned with practically the whole of his plunder to Chicago, where he was indicted by the grand jury. So far as is known he was an exemplary youth and was guiltless of the small vices of his age. His mother was a godly woman, and he had been brought up under Christian environment.

When his sister, on seeing him for the first time after his arrest, reminded him of his mother, he is said to have exclaimed: "Through this whole thing I never thought of my mother. That is what I regret." He never thought of his mother, and that omission brought the first tears to his eyes. What a lesson for mothers and sons alike!

A great French economist has said: "We may forget our fathers, but we never get away from the early teachings and principles of our mothers." How true the word! In the whirl of our present-day life fathers, even Christian fathers, give little time to their children. They leave home early in the morning and usually return late at night, worn with the day's work and usually too tired to be troubled with household matters or the training of their children. It has been said that we take our talents from our fathers, our characters from our mothers. The Roman Catholic Church fully understands this principle when it lays down the maxim: "Give us the child until he is seven years old, and then you can have him." It is the home training that counts. The old Romans used to say: "A vessel long retains the odor wherewith it has been imbued when new."

The first awakening of conscience took place when this young bank robber, led astray for a moment by the glitter of the thousands which had been committed to his care "to count them over," obeyed an insane impulse, and absconded with all this wealth. Fortunate is the boy who can weep at the memory of his mother; there is still hope for him. Home-training in almost every case is mother-training. The memory of a prayer made at mother's knee cannot be effaced; the tears in mother's eyes when we have committed some youthful offense will never be forgotten.

We would imprint this little bit of contemporaneous history on the hearts of all Christian mothers. Grip your children with hooks of steel; keep them close to you; let them never get away from you! Whatever your children may do or may become later in life, see to it that your memory ever stands between them and whatever sin may allure or tempt. God only knows how many sons have been kept straight in an hour of great temptation by that memory, by a godly mother's tears and prayers and admonitions. If that boy had only remembered his mother when the temptation came! But "ifs" do not avail when we are in the grip of some terrible catastrophe.

To all young men reared in Christian homes we would say: In every instance, when you are at the parting of the ways, remember "mother," and, above all, remember your mother's God. Our unhappy, riven, tortured, misguided world needs God and Christian mothers and their potent influence for good as never before. The warning lesson of William Dalton should be engraved on the hearts and memories of Christian mothers and in indelible letters.—Christian Observer.

SALVATION BY FAITH.

There is nothing that the church and the world need to-day more than the fearless, vigorous, tender, persistent preaching of salvation by faith. They need it because the minds of men are befogged and befuddled. The multitudinous isms and 'ologies of the past one hundred years have left people bewildered. A great many have given up trying to think on religious matters at all and a great many more consider themselves heretics when, as a matter of fact, they are at loggerheads only with an outgrown conception of God and life. There are those, it is said, who do not yet know that the war is over, and there are those who do not realize that Calvinism is dead.

The proclamation of the fact that only by faith can a man be saved is called for, not only because men are mystified but also because they are misled. The greatest curse of modern religious teaching is its revival of the doctrine of salvation by works. The doctrine is not preached in so many words. It is merely suggested. It is implied by the modern emphasis and trend. It is a perversion of the vital principle of service, contained in the widespread idea that the only thing necessary in order to become a Christian is to go to church or subscribe to the benevolences or serve on the official board or endow a college or co-operate in philanthropic activities. Not for one moment would a sane man belittle religious activities. We need more, not less. But it is high time the people of Christendom were reminded that, while we are saved for service, we are not saved by service. Eternal life cannot be earned by the greatest saint that ever walked. It is the gift of God. Neither does religion consist merely of doing a lot of things. If it did, the invalid and the shut-in and the old and the feeble would be un-religious, if not irreligious. It is something inner as well as outer. It is a spirit, a temper, an experience of God. It is "the life of God in the soul of man." If the gentlest Mary that ever sat at the Savior's feet has that, she has religion, and if the most bustling Martha that ever fretted over a surplus of duties hasn't that, she hasn't religion.

Furthermore, salvation is religion, pure and simple. As has been stated a thousand times, it is not so much getting to heaven as it is getting the heavenly spirit into your own heart, and then, through that, into the world. It is escaping hell in the sense of being delivered from greed and lust and envy and hatred and ill-temper and the unforgiving spirit and everything else that grieves God and hurts man. It is peace instead of self-condemnation, joy instead of discontent, hope instead of despair, power instead of impotence, sympathy instead of indifference, victory instead of defeat. Above all, it is the consciousness that God is living in us, working His will.

And what but faith can create such a condition? Not an intellectual conception or a theological tenet but a vital laying hold of Him who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life. Not all the doing in the universe can give a man peace. Philanthropic activities are as impotent there as were hair shirts and blood-letting belts a hundred years ago. Salvation—that is, oneness with God—is the fruit of a receptive mind and a trustful heart, not of frenzied effort. William James says that even in the most active type of conversion, there comes a time when surrender is the thing. And what is that but accepting God on His own terms and taking Him at His word?

Let us have done with the idea that a man's entering into the larger life depends upon his holding certain opinions or his experiencing certain feelings. Let us stop splitting hairs over theological questions which have no bearing upon character or conduct. But let us proclaim to a world endeavoring to pull itself out of the mire by all sorts of activities and sophistries, "By grace are ye saved through faith." Only those who by faith lay hold upon God in Christ, who believe with a vital belief that gives them access to the peace and power of the Lord, can either be saved themselves or save the world.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

THE GARDEN.

There are voices in the garden
When the world is fast asleep;
You can hear them in the twilight
When the dusk is purple-deep.

"Sway," says the lily;
"I creep," says the snail.
"Jump," says the frog,
"And I hide," says the quail.
"Swim," says the little fish;
"I sleep," says the grass,
"Waiting for the rose light
When the dark shall pass."

There are voices in the garden
When the candles dim and die;
You can hear them in the treetops
When the wind sings "Rock-a-bye."

"Dance," says the firefly;
"I glide," says the bat;
"Shine," says the moonbeam;
"I blink," says the cat.
Fairy on the tree twig
Beside the baby bird
Laughs a bit and listens,
But never says a word!

THE DISCONTENTED BLACKSMITH—A SIAMESE STORY.

There once lived in India a blacksmith who was never happy. He complained about that until his wife and his friends and his neighbors were tired out with him, and the gods were tired out with him, too.

One summer day, when he went to work in his shop, he began to complain as usual.

"It is too warm a day to work, and besides I am not well. I wish I could be a stone on the mountain. There it must be cool for the wind blows and the tree gives shade."

And a voice answered him, "Go thou and be a stone."

Before he had time to think, there he was, a stone high up on the mountain side.

"This is fine," said he. "It is cool and there is a wind, just as I thought."

It happened that a stone cutter came by, and when he saw the one that had been the blacksmith, he knew it was what he sought, and he began to cut it.

"This hurts!" the stone cried out. "I no longer want to be a stone. I want to be a stone cutter. That would be pleasant."

A voice answered him, "Be a stone cutter," and he was a stone cutter. But as he went seeking a good stone to cut, he grew tired and his feet were sore. He whimpered: "I no longer want to be a stone cutter. Oh, if I were only a prince and could sit on the grass and have a golden umbrella held over me, how happy I should be!"

A voice was heard, "Be a prince," and he was a prince. Servants stood about him as he lay on a rich rug on the grass in his palace garden, and a boy held a golden umbrella over his head, but in spite of the water that his servants had poured on the grass, the rays of the sun scorched it and the heat of the sun beat through the umbrella and wearied him. A soft white cloud floated over his head, and he murmured to himself, "I wish I were that cloud."

"Be that cloud," said a voice, and a cloud he was, and lay between the sun and the earth. To be sure, he was not a very good cloud, for he got black and heavy and poured down rain in the places where there was enough and floated idly over the places where it was dry and parched. So the sun set his beams upon him, and he began to break up and be absorbed by the heat. Then he was very angry.

"It is the sun that makes me all this trouble," said he aloud. "Why not be the sun?"

"Be the sun," said the voice, and he was the sun, and behold! he did not like that at all, even for one little minute, for the sun was very hot and very high up above the earth, and he was very uncomfortable.

"Oh dear! oh, dear!" said the blacksmith, "I am hotter than I was when I was a smith. I wish I could be a smith again. That is, after all, the best life."

"Your wish is heard," said the voice, "Be a smith, and remain a smith, and remember the lesson you have learned."

And the blacksmith found himself back in his own smithy, hammering away, and for the first time in many, many years, he did not complain, but said, "It is good to be a man and a blacksmith."—Exchange.

THE HAT RACE.

Martha Gaston was a little girl who lived a long time ago, when much of the country was covered with large trees. Her mother was dead, so she helped her older sister keep house for her father and younger sister.

One fine Sabbath morning Martha found it very hard to take time to wash the breakfast dishes, for she was anxious to put on her new calico dress to wear to church. As she dried the last dish, she saw her father coming through the woods leading the horse he was to ride to church. Soon her big sister was ready to comb Martha's long hair, braiding it into two "pig-tails," as they were called. Then she slipped on her new dress, and while her sister buttoned it she in turn buttoned her little sister's dress. In a short time they were ready to start on their three-mile ride to church. The older sister rode one horse, while their father took the little girl in front of him on his big horse, and Martha stuck on behind him. She held on tightly to her father and thoroughly enjoyed the ride. As they neared the church, they saw other people coming, some walking, some on horseback, and some in big wagons.

The women and children went indoors, while the men stood outside quietly talking until they heard the minister announce the first Psalm, then they all went in to their various pews. Each carried his hat with him, usually a tall hat called a "stove pipe," or "plug" hat, and placed it in the aisle at the end of the pew.

Martha soon grew sleepy in the warm church, in spite of the fact that her sister slipped her a piece of licorice to chew. A kind little breeze, which was playing around outside, may have known she was sleepy and needed to be waked up. At least it came gaily in through the door up by the pulpit. Before it reached Martha or any other sleepy boy or girl, it caught sight of all those hats in the aisle. It had never been to church before and really did not know how to behave; so what did it do but send every one of those hats racing down the aisle. The men forgot they were in church; so they went racing after them. It was such a funny sight that Martha had to put her handkerchief to her mouth to keep from laughing out loud. When all the men and the hats settled down once more, she wasn't sleepy at all. —Zella McDill, in the United Presbyterian.

"TIME OUT."

She Ought to Have Known.

She was a stranger to London and was traveling from Brixton to the Elephant and Castle. She had worried the passengers on either side of her as to whether she was nearing her destination. Finally, getting really anxious, she reached over and deliberately poked the conductor with her umbrella.

"Tell me, my man," she said. "Tell me, is this the Elephant and Castle?"

"No ma'am, it isn't," sharply replied the man. "It's the conductor."—London Tit-Bits.

The News From Boston.

A teacher in one of our public schools in Boston was asking the usual questions of the pupils at the beginning of the year. Antonia Gianelli was called. "You are an Italian?" "No." "Why, your father is an Italian?" "Yes." "Is your mother American?" "No." And so she was told to bring her mother the next morning to have the matter settled. Next morning appeared Mrs. Gianelli, shawl over her head, Italian undoubtedly. Again the question, "Is Mr. Gianelli an Italian?" "Yes." "And are you an Italian?" Again the answer, "Yes." "Why, then Antonia must be an Italian." "No! No!" with much emphasis "She Irish—she born in Boston!"—The Christian Register.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

It was our privilege to attend the opening service of the Seashore Camp Meeting on Wednesday evening of last week, and to spend the next day in attendance. The preacher for this year is Dr. E. C. Moore, pastor of our Government Street Church, Mobile, Ala. Since the congregations are largely made up of people who are already members of the church, the sermons we heard him deliver were addressed largely to those who are professing Christians. They were forceful utterances, laying emphasis upon the fundamentals of the Christian life.

The presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. W. M. Sullivan, who was in charge of the meeting was unavoidably kept away on Wednesday evening, but was on hand Thursday, Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, pastor of Main Street Church, Biloxi, serving in his place for the opening service. Among the preachers present while we were there, we saw Rev. Wm. Schuhle, Rev. W. W. Moore, Rev. W. L. Duren, and Rev. J. T. Lockhart. Others, we presume, came in later.

We were informed that every cottage on the Camp Grounds is occupied this year, and that the demand for houses largely exceeded the supply. Keller Lodge has been made considerably more comfortable, we were informed, and the restaurant, under the management of Miss Rowan, was serving good meals. There seems to be a general feeling, however, that there must be somewhat extensive improvements throughout the grounds before the historic spot can again be made especially attractive to the multitudes who attended the meetings in other days. We have no doubt that the trustees would gladly make such improvements as are needed if the money were available. It is very evident that some policy of improvement must soon be adopted if the place is to continue to serve the church in any large way.

It has often been suggested that the Camp Grounds could be made one of the most attractive centers in the whole church for connectional gatherings, and some efforts has been made, we understand, to enlarge the scope of its work. The Divinity School is a fine example of what can be done in this larger way when determination is shown to achieve success. It would be a reproach to a great church if this magnificent property should ultimately be allowed to pass out of our hands for the lack of means to make use of its evident and superior advantages. It is currently reported, with what foundation we unable to say, that the Knights of Columbus, an organization of the Roman Catholic Church, is anxious to secure possession of the property.

Although our stay on the grounds was necessarily very short, it was exceedingly pleasant, made doubly so by the delightful hospitality we enjoyed in the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Duren. Brother Duren's family are spending the summer on the Grounds, Brother Duren himself taking only a short time each week from his duties as pastor of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, to visit this delightful spot "across the lake." We do not know of a place where a more enjoyable vacation could be spent than on the historic Seashore Camp Grounds—the chief requirements for such vacation being time and a little money. As stated above, our stay was "necessarily" short.

UNIFICATION FROM A NORTHERN EDITOR'S VIEW POINT.

As a matter of information, we give below a recent editorial utterance in the Christian Advocate (New York) concerning unification. We have not seen in any of our own periodicals any statement concerning the negotiations that were suggested to our Commission by the Northern Commission following the action of the General Conference at Des Moines. The article is as follows:

"More than a year having elapsed since the General Conference of 1920 at Des Moines, Ia., took action with regard to bringing into one body the two great sections of Episcopal Methodism, it is proper to state what has been done or attempted since that time to promote such unification.

"The General Conference, it will be remembered, considered fully the plan transmitted to it by the Joint Commission, but, instead of taking final action upon it, referred it with other suggestions (made or to be made) to the Commission, which was reconstituted for the purpose of giving further study to the subject, and which was authorized to arrange with the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for holding a joint convention, in which both churches should be equally represented, and which should have the proposed plan and other suggestions before it for debate and action. The action of the General Conference was transmitted by letter on July 1, 1920, to Bishop E. D. Mouzon, chairman of the Southern Commission. Bishop Mouzon in his letter of July 17, acknowledging receipt of the communication, added, 'It now seems that there is no hope of the unification of American Methodism by reorganization, and that the whole matter of the organic union of the two Methodisms has been indefinitely postponed.'

"On March 8, 1921, by direction of the Business Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Commission, a letter was sent to Chairman Mouzon with regard to arranging for a joint meeting. After consulting his fellow commissioners, he replied on March 24, expressing regret that other engagements made it impossible at that time for a conference between the business committees of the two commissions, and adding:

"It is the opinion of our commission that we exhausted our authority when after long deliberation we agreed to a plan to be submitted to our General Conference. It seems now that our commission can do nothing more than present that plan to the General Conference in 1922, and await the action of the General Conference."

"This regrettable decision would seem to be a bar to progress for the present. Meanwhile we do not believe that the members of the Methodist Episcopal Commission should conduct themselves as those who have no hope. We believe that substantial and lasting good came of the intercourse between the two commissions in the last quadrennium, even though the Plan which they formulated was found to be defective at important points.

"Our own Methodist Episcopal Commission should not allow the inaction of the Southern Commissioners to prevent them from doing all that is possible under the circumstances. They should meet, become acquainted with one another, take a serious look at the great problem, and determine upon a course of action. The action of the General Conference to which they owe their appointment was taken after full consideration, and was of high importance. The commissioners should try every means of making the wishes of the General Conference effective. It is due to the dignity of the great Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that on our side everything which was in the mind of our General Conference should be done.

"We repeat what has been said again and again in these columns, that we believe the rank and file of the two Methodist churches earnestly desire to have one church. Neither would absorb the other, but the two would flow together and mingle in one common channel as they did before they parted at the rock of offense seventy-seven years ago. Therefore we regret that any technical consideration deters the Southern Commissioners from making possible any further contacts on the subject, out of which by the grace of God some more excellent way might appear, and we do not think the Methodist Episcopal Church will begrudge any expense attendant upon doing its part to remove the stubborn obstacles which unification faces at the present juncture."

TEACHING BY TRACTS.

We take the liberty of calling attention to an advertisement in this issue of the Advocate of some tracts issued under the auspices of the Board of Christian Literature, with the hope that many of our people may take advantage of the opportunity to secure helpful tracts at a very low cost.

The Board of Christian Literature is charged by the General Conference with the duty of providing a suitable supply of tracts on the doctrine, history, polity, and evangelistic work of Methodism, for general distribution; and the Board is offering these tracts in keeping with these instructions. Every Methodist can become a teacher—if not a preacher—by distributing good literature, and we hope that the response to the work this Board is doing will prove that the church is ready to enter very actively upon this form of religious work.

If Mr. Henry Ford could do with all railroads what he has done with the one recently acquired by him, we wish he might early come into possession of all of them. He has increased the wages paid and made material reductions in freight rates.

A very fine program has been prepared for Laymen's Week at Lake Junaluska, N. C., August 8-13. The general subjects to be discussed are: "Christian Principles in Industrial Relations," "Christian Labor Relations in Factories," "How to Prevent Social and Industrial Waste," and "Christian Principles in International Relations." These subjects will be discussed by men who have a widespread reputation in the fields in which they are interested.

We have just received the following good news from Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of Franklinton, La.: "We have just closed a good meeting at Fitzgerald Church, Franklinton circuit, with twelve accessions on profession of faith, a Sunday school organized, four family altars erected, and the church greatly strengthened on all lines. There were fine congregations, notwithstanding the rains. Rev. L. W. Cain, of Franklinton, did the preaching, and it was well done."

All of the Conference Educational Secretaries west of the Mississippi River held a meeting with the General Secretaries of the Board of Education at Hot Springs, Arkansas, July 28 and 29, for the purpose of discussing the future plans of the Christian Education Movement. The whole policy of the Board with reference to extending and conserving the results of the movement was considered. One feature of the conference was a demonstration of the standard office and book-keeping equipment which will be used by the various Conference Educational Secretaries. A similar meeting of the field men east of the Mississippi River will be held at Blue Ridge, N. C., August 9 and 10.

Next Sunday will be used largely for presenting the claims of the Memorial Home, New Orleans. Throughout the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference. This institution, as is well known, is doing a work for unfortunate young women that commends it highly to the sympathy and support of all our people. So far as we know, it is the only institution of its kind under Protestant auspices in this section of the country, and its mission of mercy has been a blessing to many unfortunate ones throughout Louisiana, Mississippi, and neighboring States. It is owned by our church and is under the direct and careful supervision of Rev. W. C. Childress, superintendent of our mission work in New Orleans, in co-operation with a board of managers appointed by the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences. We bespeak for the representative of the Home in the Brookhaven District next Sunday a cordial hearing and a generous response to their appeals. Mrs. Luella Ramsey has been appointed field worker for the institution in the Mississippi Conference, and she will enter at once upon her duties. We know of no work that is more deserving of support than this which brings hope to those who have been cast out by the world.

THE OVERLOADED MAN.

In the good old days of Methodism, when the circuit rider had twenty appointments, he did little else than preach. In order to fill all his appointments he had to preach on many week nights. Incidentally, as he rode from neighborhood to neighborhood, he visited among his people, but it was practically impossible for him to visit in all the homes. His opportunities for study were limited, but he needed only one or two new sermons a month, and, as he was sent to a new circuit almost every year, twenty-five to fifty sermons were sufficient for a lifetime. By preaching often from the same texts he became a strong preacher. One who knew Bishop Marvin well has said that the Bishop made his great reputation as a preacher on about twenty sermons.

Now the pastor is literally a beast of burden. He must have each week two new sermons. If he is suspected of preaching an old sermon he is discounted and called lazy. Then he must have a sermonette for prayer-meeting, and be prepared to discuss the Sunday school lesson and the Epworth League topic. He must also have lectures on popular themes and addresses for special occasions. If he fails to visit all of his people once a quarter he is pronounced a poor pastor. He must be ready to visit all the sick and officiate at numerous funerals and weddings.

He is expected to know all about his Sunday School, Epworth League, Woman's Missionary Society, and be on good terms with the Boy Scouts, Y. M. C. A., and other organizations. While his stewards may help, still the pastor is held responsible for the collections and for leadership in building churches. Then every annual conference secretary and connectional officer writes him with special requests three or four times a year. Last but not least, the editor of his conference organ expects the pastor to promote the circulation of the paper. Of course, he must read a dozen papers and reviews and all the new books, and be prepared to discuss every subject from farming to Bolshevism.

In order to be half-way human he must cultivate the acquaintance of his own family, assist in various domestic affairs, and be subject to interruptions at all times and by all kinds of people, from the tramp to the committee of citizens, who seek favors or advice.

He must study, pray, and be good-natured and religious under all circumstances. The wonder is that he can do and endure so many things and still be sane and loving and kind.

When all of these duties and activities are considered, the work of a faithful pastor seems overwhelming. And yet how can he omit any or many of these things? He must be about his Father's business and that touches every side of human life. To be sure, his stewards and other laymen help, and, in some instances, relieve him of the financial burden, but even then he must keep his hand on all these activities in order that they may be spiritualized and rightly related.

We should be profoundly glad that there are men, called of God and helped by the Spirit, who can, on meager salaries, endure all these things. A faithful pastor must be the hardest-worked man in his community, and yet, with divine help and the co-operation of the best men and women in the world, these pastors are happy and do not complain. Let us pray more for them and co-operate more fully to establish the Kingdom of which they are the human representatives.—Arkansas Methodist.

SUNDAY LABOR.

An infidel farmer wrote a letter to Horace Greeley when he was editor of The Tribune:

"Sir: I have been trying an experiment. I have a field of corn which I plowed, planted, and cultivated on Sunday. I harvested the crop on Sunday and hauled it to my barn, and I find I have more than my neighbors who would not work on that day because of conscientious scruples."

To which the editor replied in one sentence: "N. B. God does not always settle his accounts in October."

No; nor in the spring or summer. Thoughtless people sometimes run up a big debt against God, and imagine that after the account has stood for a long time it will be outlawed or forgotten. But it never is. In the end every account has to be paid, usually with accrued interest.—Editorial in Forward.

ONE ASTRAY.

An American bishop related the following: "A youth belonging to a Bible class thought fit to discontinue his attendance. The class assembled, but his place was empty, and the leader looked for the familiar face in vain. He could not be content to conduct the Bible reading as usual, ignorant as to the condition and whereabouts of the missing one. 'Friends,' said he, 'read, sing and pray; my work is to seek and find a stray sheep' and he started off on the quest. The stray sheep is before you," said the bishop to his hearers, "my teacher found me, and I could not resist his pleading."—The Expositor.

Miss SUSIE BYRD was born August 13, 1891, near Basin, Miss., and spent the 29 years of her life there. She was a real blessing. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at an early age, and was loyal unto death. She loved the work of the church and was an efficient Sunday school teacher. Her presence was noted every Sunday for a number of years; and when health failed, her heart went out for the ones she had tried to lead to Christ. Surely the God she loved will honor her efforts. She was so kind and good to her widowed mother, who found great comfort through the efforts of this good child. How beautiful was her life! But God who loved her best called her home June 27. We laid her body in the family cemetery near Salem church. Her life lives on with us while her soul rests with the God she loved and served. Heaven has one angel more, earth one less; but our eyes are turned toward the place she has gone and her hand beckons us to a home where parting never comes.

Her pastor,
VAN R. LANDRUM.

ROSANELLE JONES was born June 20, 1903, at Hurley, Miss. She joined the M. E. Church, South, two years ago, and her life proved her love for God. On December 18, 1920, she was married to Lonie Baria, and they lived happily together, but sickness came. All that skilled physicians and loving hands could do brought no relief, and on July 11, God called her home where pain is a stranger and sorrows never come. She kept the Epworth League Quiet Hour Covenant as long as she could read, then had some one read for her. She was faithful to her church in every way. Her beautiful alto voice will be missed so much when the choir sings, but she is singing in that choir that shall never cease.

I cannot say, I will not say,
That she is dead; she is just away.
With a cheery smile and wave of the hand

She wandered into the heavenly land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be since she is there.

Her pastor,
VAN R. LANDRUM.

MARRIED.

On Thursday, June 30, 1921, at 6:30 p.m., at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. J. W. Prouty, Daleville, Miss., Mr. CARLIN ALMAN GRAHAM, of Quitman, Miss., and Miss DORA ELIZABETH PROUTY, Rev. W. J. Walters, pastor of the Methodist Church, South, officiating. After the ceremony which united this happy pair, they left for Quitman, where they will make their future home.

THE UNCERTAINTY OF LIFE.

By George E. Bass.

"Let me die the death of the righteous, and my last end be like his."

The length of our days in the land of the living is of short duration and uncertain. In the midst of life there is death all about us. We are "like the grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth." "The days of our years are three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be four-score years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; it is soon cut off, and we fly away." The death angel is ever present, ready to snatch some one from a circle of faithful friends and loving relatives. To put trust in a future lengthening of our days upon the earth on the part of God, is like claiming something that does not yet belong to us. Only the moment that we are now living is ours, and ere it ends we may have departed this life; we may be meeting our God face to face to give an account of all the deeds done in the body and of all the thoughts that have passed through our brain. The uncertainty of life makes it necessary for us to be prepared for death at all times. We know that it may come "like a thief in the night" when we least expect it. If our preparation has not been made before the summons comes, it may be too late. We may not be granted a death-bed repentance. All cannot have this special privilege. We ought not to depend upon it for the future welfare of our soul.

Our stay on the earth is to prepare us for the future life that lies beyond the grave. Our experiences here are making us either better or worse, and consequently are preparing us for either heaven or hell. The way that we are now living is largely determined by our attitude toward life. What is our viewpoint? What things count for most in the life that we lead? Are we given to placing a higher value on the material needs of man than on those of his spiritual nature? We need to devote our time to spiritual matters first, and to material affairs afterwards. If either of these needs has to be neglected, let it not be the spiritual. We ought not to devote all of our time to gaining money, fame, honor, food, clothing, etc., or to having what is called a good time. These things are of a secondary nature, and however necessary some of them are in life, they are unworthy of receiving all our best thought, time, and action. We are told that if we will seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all these things that are necessary will be granted unto us.

The earthly compensation of living an upright life is dying a noble death. We should all want to die worthily. The difficulty in doing this is that we must fulfil the law and die as we have lived. If we would die worthily, we must prepare for death in the midst of life. Then our death shall be like that of the many great and good men of the past who stand ready to greet us in glory. Let us take these words of wisdom to heart and hearken unto them in time while we are living in the light of the present day.

PASTORAL VISITING.

By Rev. W. R. Lott.

When a young minister is ordained a deacon or an elder in the Methodist Church he is strictly exhorted to be diligent in the pastoral oversight of his people, especially the sick, the poor and impotent. Experiences of many have taught them that it is not best to restrict their visiting to these classes, but that better fellowship and influence are secured if all members are included in this work: the poor, the rich, the lame, the halt, the sinner and the saint. This is very important work of the pastor, but it takes more courage, consecration and tact than any of the other duties which he has.

Vernon, Tex.—“For three years I suffered untold agony each month with pains in my sides. I found only temporary relief in doctor's medicine or anything else I took until my husband saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I mentioned it to a neighbor and she told me she had taken it with good results and advised me to try it. I was then in bed part of the time and my doctor said I would have to be operated on, but we decided to try the Vegetable Compound and I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a dressmaker and am now able to go about my work and do my housework besides. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial as I am always glad to speak a word for your medicine.”—Mrs. W. M. STEPHENS, 1103 N. Commerce St., Vernon, Texas.

Dressmakers when overworked are prone to such ailments and should profit by Mrs. Stephen's experience.

visiting as I see it are scarce. It may be that so many of us are weak at this point that there is not enough success to inspire books of that nature. I realize that it is a work so varied in intricacies, so delicate in its demands, and also a work that calls for a spiritual outlay that to write of it or lay down rules for it would be difficult indeed. How, when, and with what motive should a minister go from house to house? Those are questions doubtless many ministers in their weary moments would be delighted to have answered.

Our church, with its ministerial oversight demands it, but is it often discussed in conferences, General, Annual, district or quarterly? Here is an important part of the minister's work on which he is seldom called to report, hardly ever hears discussed; yet it is so important that ministers are often designated as acceptable or not in proportion to their proficiency in it. It does seem that it would be helpful to have this work freely discussed in detail; let older ministers give their experience and advice, telling of their mistakes and successes. How much appreciated and how helpful it would be!

As before stated, it is a drain on spiritual resources, terribly so, if one does not have the spirit of Christ in going and also His motive. There are several motives in doing pastoral work: to become informed as to the name and residence of the people; to know their physical surroundings, and, last, to converse and instruct on matters purely spiritual.

A minister on going into a charge will be influenced more by the first motive than any other. He must know his people before he can serve them effectively. He has desire to know their names, both of children and parents; this will locate them in his mind and then he connects them in his own mental way with the church. But he must remember that this is only a means to an end. The census taker is more efficient in this than he is.

The physical and the spiritual are so closely interwoven that, to a great extent, they are interdependent. The Master knew that when he healed so many sick people, for then he reached their sin-sick souls. A minister will visit his people when they are sick, and he will visit them when they are not sick, depending on how much he really loves them. There is a pitfall here; a minister is not a physician, he is a shepherd. How deplorable it is when a pastor sees his people only as sick in body or well in body! Did you ever notice how often we ask people of their physical health as if that was what we were more interested in than anything else?

The chief motive in visiting from house to house should be to be of benefit in spiritual things. A minister is not a news carrier; he is not a gossip, or at least he is not as well equipped for that by practice as many of his congregation doubtless are. Pastoral visiting must be raised to the dignity and the worth of the cause represented, or it is the pattering deeds of a sycophant. When a man called of God to be a shepherd of a flock of his children leaves his place of prayer and meditation, he can go out with the assurance that the Holy Spirit will open the hearts of the people for him to converse of holy things —the church, God's love for them, the growth of the spiritual life, and the matchless theme of redemption.

There is more need for equipment for effective pastoral visiting than there is for preaching. A man can preach without being tender; he can be a denunciatory prophet; but he cannot visit the sick, the down-hearted, the sinful, without tenderness. He can preach without a knowledge of human nature, for he can, parrot-like, repeat the beatitudes; but he cannot touch the various strings of life and make them vibrate unless he knows their individual attributes. No doubt the ministry is one in its cry for more power and influence over the individual lives of the people. Oh, for some magic wand to carry to transform, to attract! Let us search in every court and land and here we have it! It is in the flower garden of God: “Beloved, let us love one another, for God is love.”

Teaching Points.

1. Persecution of the church is a bitter experience—but it is nearly always a fruitful period in bringing people to Christ.
2. Any unusual event always attracts attention; when an investigation is to be made, it should be made by a good man—such as Barnabas was.
3. The real disciples of Christ are always ready to help those who are in need, just as the early Gentile Christians sent famine relief funds to the church at Jerusalem.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past few days were spent at Cold Springs church, Harrisville charge. We had a good time. The folks came to the church and we did the hardest work we knew how.

Six or more people prayed and testified in public. A Cradle Roll was instituted—the material gotten and started while on the grounds. A Sunday school was organized and we had the satisfaction of feeling that there was something permanent left behind. Several promised to be at the next Circuit Institute.

Three babies were baptized. One man and a beautiful little girl were received into the church on profession of faith, and another joined by letter.

The congregation at Crystal Springs has moved into their new building and the old building has been sold to a Negro congregation and is being torn down and moved. This is a beautiful building and the congregation is proud—and they have a right to be.

Who would like to have experienced help in putting on boys' camps next summer for the town or church or boys' class? I am interested and will be glad, as far as I am able, to furnish you help if you desire it?

How about your training class? You furnish the students and we will furnish the instructor.

Pray for the work and the workers.
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

TAKE A REST THIS SUMMER.

By Elmer T. Clark.

George Ade recently gave us this good advice: "Move around before the ivy begins to clumb up your legs." He said that a rolling stone may gather no moss, but it wears off the rough edges and gets a lot of polish. Anyway, who wants to be covered with moss?

George Ade was right. In these days of rush and worry the busy man owes it to himself, to his family, to his business, to the social order to throw off his cares and anxieties for a relaxing spell.

No matter how efficient you may be, a summer outing will make a better man of you. This will mean a change of environment, scenery, and experiences. No man can really relax in the environment of his daily toil.

The church has an interest in this matter—and believes in vacations for all people, not only because it is their due and will contribute to their general well-being, but also for the very prosaic and practical reason that it will make the people better and more efficient church workers.

Accordingly, the church urges all Methodists to move about a bit this summer. And it has also provided the place for them to visit.

Lake Junaluska, in North Carolina's "Land of the Sky," is the place.

Surrounded by the everlasting hills of the Blue Ridge and the Smoky ranges, it is a place of beauty and a joy forever. There it is always springtime. There are no sultry and oppressive days; the nights are chilled by the mountain breezes.

The Lake has everything that people ought to have. There are fine hotels—and moderate-priced ones. There are mountains to climb and modern highways on which to motor. You can pull an oar and paddle a canoe on the broad expanse of crystal water—or you can get the result and escape the exertion by taking a motor craft or the lake steamer.

The old swimmin' hole of our boyhood days was never like the swimmin' hole at Junaluska. They call it a "bathing beach," I believe, but to the average man it will always be a delightful reminiscence of the old mill pond where he used to "hang his clothes on a hickory limb."

The new golf course is a beauty. So if you are addicted to "the ancient Scotch vice" just bring along your brassie and your cleek. There is a professional in charge of the links, and daily the course is thronged with enthusiastic players. They start the day with eighteen holes, then they plunge into the lake, and then they are "as fit as a fiddle" for the rest of the day.

But there are other attractions at Junaluska for the serious minded. It is not all frolic and play, for here one may hear the choicest music, listen to lectures by noted men, sit in on discussions of pressing problems if he chooses.

In the course of a season there will be more prominent men of church and State appearing on the platform at Junaluska than will likely visit the average southern town in a decade.

This will be especially true during Laymen's Week from August 8 to the 13th inclusive. This is the time when the clans from the pews will gather in full force.

They'll have their inning then. They will play as much as they please and they'll "let the eagle scream" to their heart's content. All the problems in which they are peculiarly interested will come up for discussion—and they will do their own discussing.

And those who are so fortunate—and so far-seeing—as to be present will go back to their homes rejuvenated in heart and head. They will be more capable in their business, in the work of the church, and in the art of living.

Laymen's Week at Lake Junaluska will make a Master Layman of any man.

CENTENARY GIVING TO DATE.

Reports on Centenary payments to June 30 show a total of $11,349,722. This does not take into account credits, but does include amounts paid by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues. The total amount pledged, not including credits, is $36,919,166, hence we have paid but thirty per cent of our pledges. The Virginia Conference leads in amount paid, with a total of $987,216. In percentage of pledges paid, the Pacific Conference leads, its percentage being 46.7. In the face of adverse financial conditions, the payments to date for 1921 compare favorably with 1920, but we are far below the amount due to this date. The next few months should show a large gain in amount paid, and in this special effort every Methodist congregation and every member who made a Centenary pledge should have a part.

In these days half our diseases come from neglect of the body in overwork of the brain.—Lytton.

ATTENTION!

Valuable Tracts

The Board of Christian Literature, created by the General Conference of 1918, has issued the following tracts:

1. "Poison in Present Day Literature" Price, 75c per hundred
2. "Why Delay Your Salvation?" Price, 50c per hundred
3. "What the Adult Applicant for Church Membership Should Know" Price, 85c per hundred
4. "The Lord's Supper" Price, 50c per hundred
5. "Methodism" Price, $1 per hundred

Other Churches, and notably many of the freak religious bodies, are using literature of this character as propaganda, to their great advantage, and not infrequently to the detriment of our Church. The best way to meet this is by the circulation of these and similar tracts.

SNAPSHOT OF A MISSIONARY'S LIFE.

You were in my thoughts a few days ago—of course you are on my prayer list too—until I wanted to write you how God has led me in the ministry of intercession. (But I felt you were too busy for such a personal letter from me.) Nevertheless there is one answer to prayer I have received this year which I feel ought to be told to help others. If I had the pen of a ready-writer I would send it to the Voice.

I have been led to four hours a day of praise (the first hour) and intercession, and five hours on Saturdays. I have nearly two thousand, four hundred names of workers in all fields, and friends on my prayer list, weekly.

God has put India on my heart especially. I daily ask the Holy Spirit's guidance as to whom to write and for whom to pray. I cannot express in words the wonderful praise and joy of the hours spent with God, face to face, pleading for his passion for these lost souls, the "fellowship of his sufferings" for them. Paradoxical as it sounds, the deeper I enter into the fellowship of Christ's sufferings for the multitude who never have had a chance to know him, the more rapturous is the joy that floods my soul.

I have the Methodist Episcopal Mission in India with nearly one thousand names as my special in prayer. (Though the world is my parish and I have a country or more daily as special in my world trip.) Last January, the 7th, I wrote Miss Ehoeb Emery, an evangelistic missionary of Moradabad, India, I was praying for her especially. God wonderfully used my prayer that day and then let me hear about it. I often know through the Spirit that he is working. But it helps it to know, sometimes, just how.

I quote from Miss Emery's letter in answer to mine:

"Your letter of January the 7th received to-day (Feb. 28), and on reading it I could only bow my head and worship at the thought of the goodness and greatness of God—On last January the 7th I was out in the villages as usual (She spends all of her time travelling from one village to another in an ox-cart and living in a tent) when I received a remarkable uplift and filling of the Spirit. We had wonderful meetings every where. In several villages the people broke down and wept aloud at the story of the cross. As I went from village to village that day in my ox-cart I had an abundant opportunity for reflection and prayer as we jogged along, and I also had the powerful assurance that the whole secret of the day's success lay in the fact that some one was engaged in special intercession for me. With this in mind I meditated much upon the wonderful power of intercession, and a little poem on Intercessory prayer just seemed to write itself. I did not know you by name at the time, but I did know that you were praying for me. The poem might have been named "To Belinda Barcroft." It was published in the Indian Witness (a paper I take for my prayer list there)."

The poem:

"When the battle is long and I am weary with strife,
When legions of sin and evil are rife,
I feel—and new courage flows into my life—
That you are praying for me.

When victory comes out of seeming defeat
And the dark lowering clouds shine with rainbows replete,
'Tis then that I feel—and the assurance is sweet—
That you are praying for me.

I'll gird tighter my armor and advance in the fight,
With a strong heart and brave I'll battle for right,
I'll blanch at no danger and quail at no slight
If you will keep praying for me."

The rest of the letter is fine but I did want you to see how God has led and answered me and rejoice with me. It is not easy to be an intercessor. But God has made it my work now. I seek daily guidance for whatever he wants me to do to answer my prayers.—Bulletin.

Concerning Our Missionaries.

On August 18 on the Empress of Asia, of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company, sixteen of the Council's missionaries will sail for the East. The party includes the following: Miss Lochie Rankin, Miss Clara Steger, Miss Kate B. Hackney, Miss Janie Watkins, Miss Nell Drake, Miss Nina Stallings, Miss Ella M. Hanawalt, Miss Jessie Bloodworth, Miss Louie Lillian Knobles, Miss Mary Dill Overall, Miss Annie Justice Hanson, Miss Alice E. Furry, Miss Lynda Bray, Miss Annette Gist, Miss Mabel Cocke, and Miss Mary Vick Mauk. Of this number seven are old missionaries returning and nine are new missionaries going for the first time. The prayers of all the women of the Church are asked for this missionary party.

On June 7 Miss Sieu E. Yui, of Huchow, China, received her degree of B. S. from George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn. Miss Yui has been in America three years, having attended Scarritt Bible and Training School the first year and Peabody the last two years. Miss Yui has taken high rank as a student and a Christian and has the love and esteem of the teachers and students. The Kansas City District has made possible Miss Yui's study in America. She sails for China on the Empress of Russia on July 21 and will teach at Laura Haygood Normal School in Soochow.

During the summer the following missionaries of the Council will be returning from the East: Miss Emma Lester, Miss Julia Wasson, Miss Muriel Smith, Miss Kate Cooper, Mrs. Julia Gaither, and Miss Mary Blackford.

First Report From Our New Evangelistic Plant.

(Extract from a letter from Miss Mamie Myers, of Seoul, Korea, May 18, 1921.)

The work in the Seoul Evangelistic Plant is most fascinating, and it grieves me that I have no one to help me. We have one hundred and sixty-two young women here daily. They are studying music, English, Bible, Chinese, arithmetic, and Japanese, singing, and foreign sewing. There are seven Korean teachers. I have two sewing classes in the afternoon and choir classes. The young women I have in the morning are Kodung graduates, and they are a fine start for all the work. Nearly half of the students are from wealthy homes. We charge fifty sen (twenty-five cents) a month fees and one dollar for music and one dollar for practice fee. Night school starts May 23. They have clamored for one until we can refuse no longer. We have had a few big night meetings. Our Seoul District Conference met here May 12 and 13. All the delegates stayed with us.—Council Bulletin.

SOUTHERN DESK CO., Hickory, N. C.

FROM WEIR, MISS.

I should like, as an humble layman in our church at Weir, to occupy a few lines in our Advocate just to tell the Advocate family of a gracious revival which has just closed in the Methodist church at Weir under the able ministry and evangelistic zeal and earnestness of our pastor, Rev. W. L. Storment, of Ackerman, who was certainly directed and empowered of the Holy Spirit in this wonderful meeting which stirred and lifted the whole town and community as has not been done for 25 years.

Brother Storment began the meeting on Sunday, July 3, and continued throughout the week, doing the preaching himself, bringing at every service a message of power that reached all hearts. He is a truly great preacher, and believes in the old-time power of the Holy Ghost. Well, it came in convincing and convicting power in this meeting. About 20 persons united with the church and the whole town and community is now on a higher spiritual plane.

The Baptist pastor, Rev. H. M. Whitten, and the members of the Presbyterian congregation deserve much credit for their faithful co-operation with our Methodist people in this meeting. It was really a meeting for the whole town and surrounding country, as all appreciated the broad, brotherly spirit of the preacher and readily fell in line.

The preeminent thing now should be a campaign of soul-winning, for "the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth." As a co-worker with my pastor in our church for the onward march of the Kingdom, I am persuaded that I can better do the work now that my church has asked me to do since this meeting. This, too, is the prevailing sentiment and conviction of the whole community.

JAMES H. MCKINNON.

MORE THAN EIGHT THOUSAND SPECIALS.

The Bureau of Specials of our General Board of Missions reports that Specials aggregating $8,407,796 are now carried by churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Sunday school classes and individual members of our church. The total number of specials is 8,132. By far the larger number of these have been assigned since the beginning of the Centenary campaign, for early in 1910 the total amount of regular specials was less than $1,500,000. Since January 1, 1921, specials to the amount of more than $1,500,000 have been assigned. The goal for 1921 is $10,000,000 in Specials, a record worthy of a great church. This goal ought to be reached. Churches, Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and individuals have now their opportunity to relate themselves to some special field or to some missionary in the foreign or home field. These Specials are available in amounts from $10 to $100,000. Churches, Sunday schools or individuals can use their present Centenary pledges as Specials, and the amount of the pledges can be increased, or new pledges made.

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by falling appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer—it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.—Adv.

A LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE ITS SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

FROM TALLULAH, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed a meeting in Tallulah Methodist Church on May 19, which was a great success. There were 100 applicants for church membership in the various churches of the town. We received 50 into our church. Rev. D. E. Kelly did the preaching and it goes without saying, he did it well. Men who have spent most of their lives in the devil's services gave their hearts to God, and they are now giving their best service to the Lord by attending Sunday school, preaching service and prayer meeting each week.

We organized a Men's Bible Class about five months ago, which has about 45 or 50 on roll. We began our work by meeting in a private home near our church. The men have taken a forward move and erected for themselves a house, at a cost of $250 or $300. This is the first year of Tallulah as a full-time station. They look after the preacher's interests well.

R. K. MORGAN, Principal
Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn.

WHAT OF YOUR BOY?

His education and training, and the development of his mind, body, and character depends on you, his parent. It is a grave responsibility, for there are so many antagonistic influences that come into play in a boy's life. As every boy looks back over his education and training he can always point out some one influence, some one life that has had a more profound influence. To thousands of boys this influence has been the guiding spirit, the personal association and the inspiring character of Mr. Robert K. Morgan, principal of Morgan School for twenty-five years. He knows boy nature. The close personal associations which he has fostered between his boy students and himself, his carefully chosen faculty, his careful attention to the boy's work, his thoughts, his talents, and his special needs, have given great prominence to his school and have characterized the success that he has merited in successfully shaping the lives of thousands of youths at the shaping age.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

Brother John Kelly was no small help to us in the meeting with his cornet.

There have been 74 members added to our church roll this year. The Sunday school is doing nicely, and our prayer meeting is very interesting, well attended and conducted by the laity of the church.

We hope that this will escape the waste basket and will be news to some who have labored here.

These are a fine people and they are going to build a new church when things are right again.

Come to see us.

Sincerely yours,

H. W. CUDD.

A GREAT REVIVAL OF RELIGION

Dear Advocate: You may say that we closed a great revival at Sebastopol church on July 14. Sebastopol church is on the Walnut Grove circuit, Newton District, Mississippi Conference.

Rev. J. M. Smith, of Union, Miss., did the preaching. There were twenty-eight accessions to the church—26 on profession of faith and 2 by certificate. This is the best revival ever held in the Sebastopol Methodist church. The whole membership was quickened to greater activity in promoting the church and kingdom of God. The spiritual condition was wonderfully deepened.

Rev. J. M. Smith is one of our very best young preachers. He preaches the true gospel, and stands solidly for the faith once delivered to the saints, a gospel that saves from sin.

If any pastor is in need of a real evangelistic minister that is safe, sane and sound through and through, I recommend Rev. J. M. Smith as the man to get; no mistake will be made in securing his services. I firmly believe he will make one of our biggest evangelists.

May God bless our Zion.

Yours sincerely,

J. W. PRICE, Pastor.

A NOTE FROM SISTER T. S.

RANDLE.

Dear Brother Carley: I came back to my dear boy so weak and worn. I had lived in a suitcase sixteen long months. I had cold water dashed over me by some of the brethren, but, thank God, I am out of debt to the dear Lord.

When Brother S. S. Hunter gave me $500 to pay my home out of debt—God bless him—I thanked my Heavenly Father on my knees and promised to put that much in the "C. C. C." for the dear "Forgotten Man."

May I write a little of my experiences? I am not a ready writer, but I sleep so little, and I love to write. My eye is so much better. I promise to get a fountain pen before I send No. 2. I am trying to get well and go to work for the "C. C. C." and the Advocate. Pray for me.

I was in Louisiana, my native State, working for "C. C. C." and trying to get my name on the pension roll as the widow of Rev. T. S. Randle, of precious memory, who was a Confederate soldier for four long years. He had so much pride for his church and his family that, as long as he had a pastorate, he would not apply for a pension. But at last, when we knew superannuation was near, Brother C. C. Diamond persuaded him to apply, and dear Brother Moore, a local preacher, of Winnsboro, had no trouble in getting his name on the roll. Since his death, I have tried to get my name on the roll as his widow, but cannot because my dear one sleeps in Texas soil. I and my friends have applied to the Pension Board and the Governors, but the ironclad laws of the Pension Board will not permit it.

I want to ask every friend who loved my dear husband and wants to make my seventy-first birthday a real "shower" day, to write me a short letter and say, "God bless you, Sister Randle; I think they ought to give you the pension."

August 6 is my birthday. It would have been our fifty-fifth anniversary, and I want you all to put 25 cents in your letters to buy a small tombstone to mark his resting place. The Louisiana Conference furnished the money for the lot, and it is so pretty, and I know you want to erect a tomb and make me feel that he is not forgotten. Your lonely friend, Sister T. S. RANDLE.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

YOUNG MAN!

Young man, what are you going to do with your life? It is yours to-day to do with as you please. No matter what impediments the law of heredity has put in your way, and no matter how unpropitious your environment may be, by the exercise of your will power you can overcome all the disadvantages you may have felt you are laboring under, and rise superior to all the circumstances and conditions that have discouraged you. Have you fixed a worthy goal toward which to move? Have you made up your mind that you will be somebody in the world and do something worth while? Have you estimated the possibilities of your life in these days of boundless opportunity, and determined to invest your powers in a program that will lead you to the heights? Have you estimated the resources that are at your command for the attainment of position and influence—and have you realized that greatness is within your grasp if you will dedicate your life to the service of your fellow-men? Some of us who are older would give worlds to stand in your place at this moment, when the future is radiant with promise and a new light is beginning to break over the face of the earth. We cannot exchange places with you; but will you not take as your own the lessons we have learned through the trying school of experience, and begin your course where we, of necessity, must leave off? How the world needs men! You may become one of those men if you will. Clean thinking and living, consecration to the service of God and your fellow-men, and hard work will win for you rich and enduring success. Be and do something!

BRAVE IN PEACE AS IN WAR.

When Sergeant Alvin York, who captured 132 Germans single-handed during the war, was acclaimed the greatest hero of the war, he took his honors calmly and declared that it was only by the power of God that he was able to accomplish so marvelous a feat. The whole world was struck by the simplicity of his faith and his unassuming demeanor as he received the plaudits of the potentates of earth. Now it seems that he is likely to lose his farm by the foreclosure of a mortgage unless he is able to raise $12,500 by fall, the decline in the prices of farm products having made it impossible for him to meet his obligations out of his farming operations. He has been offered generous pay for lectures, newspaper and magazine articles, and appearing in moving pictures, but his religious scruples prevent his acquiring wealth through what he calls an act of Providence. In speaking of it he said, "I would rather lose my farm and go back to work as a common laborer than to commercialize the fame which was only incidental to an act of Providence." While we may not agree with him as to the legitimacy of his receiving pay for writing an account of his exploits, we cannot but honor him for his determined adherence to his conception of right. He has demonstrated that he is as brave in peace as he was in war.

THIS BEATS US!

We cannot be blind to the social evils that are threatening our nation in these days, and we are always on the lookout for any explanation that will throw light on these evils and suggest a remedy. All observant persons know that the divorce evil is rapidly growing, and that it threatens the disintegration of our home-life—the foundation upon which rests all that is worth while in our civilization. When, therefore, we saw a few days ago a news item under the heading, "Increased Divorce Laid to Pea-Sized Organ Near Brain," we read it with interest, and this is what we found: "The increased prevalence of divorce in proportion to the growing wealth of the country is attributed by Dr. Ernest E. Tucker, of New York, to a change in the function of the pituitary body, one of the smallest of the so-called ductless glands. He said this little organ is about the size of a pea and is hidden on the underside of the brain." Not being familiar with the pituitary body, we turned to the dictionary for information and made the following startling discovery: "Pituitary body or gland, a glandlike body of unknown function, situated in the pituitary fossa, and connected with the infundibulum of the brain; the hypophysis." So that is it! In our ignorance we had been supposing that the increase of divorces is due to SIN.

A "BE GOOD WEEK."

There are so many "weeks" for various and sundry causes and purposes that we venture to suggest another, for the benefit of those whom it may concern (which means all of us). The suggestion is that everybody try to be good a week. It would be harder for some than others to do this, to be sure, but we firmly believe that it would not hurt anybody. If people would try to be good during one week, maybe, in the course of time, they might be persuaded to try it for two weeks, or even longer. The real saints are those who try to be good all the time.

PASSIONATE PREACHING.

In the Advocate of last week appeared a very suggestive article under the caption, "Preaching Without Passion." The point of that article was in the contention of the writer that too much of the preaching nowadays lacks the note of urgency. Whether the contention is sustained or not, we are not prepared to say; but we do feel that, in many cases, those of us who face congregations from the pulpit fail to deliver our messages with the passionate appeal that makes men realize that they are lost without the gospel of Jesus Christ. If Christianity is merely a matter of expediency or of convenience, or if it is merely one of several remedies proposed as a cure for sin, we might be excusable for presenting it calmly, dispassionately, more as an academic issue than anything else. But if it is the power of God unto salvation—and the only power that has been made available for us—its appeal should fall from our lips with the compelling passion of infinite love. If men are not saved, they are lost—and the only Name under heaven whereby they can be saved is the Name we preach.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR EDUCATION.

The fact that our own church has just been engaged in a great movement for Christian education adds emphasis to the campaign that is being waged by Dr. John Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, in behalf of the illiterates of this country. In a recent address before the summer session of Rutgers College, Dr. Tigert made the following startling statements: "It is the world's greatest disgrace that in the richest country on the globe there is not money available to pay men and women to teach our children. Unless we are willing to pay our teachers more than janitors or scavengers, the temple of freedom will be destroyed by vandals who will come within through the doors of illiteracy. One man out of every four in the American army could neither read nor write, but there was only one illiterate in every five thousand of the German army. . . . We have come out of the war into an aftermath more pitiful than the war itself. With profiteering and selfishness contrasted with idealism and self-sacrifice, it is the task of the schools to carry us through." We agree with Dr. Tigert that it is the task of the schools to carry us through this terrible aftermath of the war—but we add that the task must be performed by schools that are part of an educational system that is shot through and through with the principles of the Christian religion. The German army might not have had but one illiterate in every five thousand of its soldiers—but their education was of the mind only, and not of the heart also, as it ought to have been.

A STUDY IN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Rev. S. X. Swimme, of Midland, Texas.

Introduction.

While attending the session of our General Conference of 1914 (as a visitor only) this writer came in possession of a copy of the "Report of the Commission on the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and gave it a somewhat hurried examination. As the matter was by common consent allowed to pass over unconsidered, the writer filed away the copy of the Report, together with some notes which he had at that time made thereon.

As the matter of organic union—or "unification"—with the Methodist Episcopal Church was taking a leading place in the minds of the ministers and members of our church at the time of the meeting of the General Conference of 1918, the matter of the Constitution of the church was not discussed at that session.

Recently, while in our Publishing House at Dallas, this writer was making a little visit with our Brother W. C. Everett, and in the course of our conversation the question of the Constitution of our church was given some brief discussion. The writer expressed quite briefly his views on the subject, and added that he had been considering writing and submitting to the press of our church an article on the question. Brother Everett was kind enough to encourage—even to urge the accomplishment of—the idea; and, with that encouragement, the following was written and submitted to Brother Everett for his opinion thereon. He offered no criticism, but wrote:

"The fact that we have no Constitution that we can call such, and that we have no basis on which to settle great fundamental questions, is an embarrassment to our church. We should settle down on a definite Constitution, and a liberal discussion in the church press will help to that end. . . . I think you have stirred up a very vital subject, and hope you will print this manuscript."

This article is, therefore, submitted to the church.

Historical.

The following eight paragraphs are copied from and constitute the introduction to the "Report of the Commission":

"The General Conference which met at Baltimore, Md., in May, 1898, passed the following preamble and resolution:

"Whereas, certain differences of opinion now exist as to what is the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and whereas it is highly important that all doubts on the subject be removed, and at a time when there is no controversy pending that might prevent an unprejudiced investigation and settlement of the question; therefore,

"Resolved, That the College of Bishops appoint a Commission, consisting of three elders and three laymen, to which the College of Bishops are requested to add one of their number, whose duty it shall be to ascertain and report to the next General Conference what is the Constitution of the church; and also, separately, such amendments as they may recommend to render it symmetrical in form and substance, in order that the next General Conference may, if it see fit, send the same around to the several Annual Conferences for ratification and adoption."—Journal of General Conference 1898, pp. 205, 206.

"The official records contain no reference to a report from the Commission that was appointed by authority of this action of the General Conference.

"The General Conference which met at Asheville, N. C., in May, 1910, had before it the following report from the Committee on Episcopacy:

"Whereas, there is some confusion and uncertainty regarding questions of Methodist laws and their interpretation; be it,

"Resolved, That the College of Bishops is hereby requested to constitute from its membership a commission on Constitution, which shall get up a digest of the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and shall report the same to the General Conference for adoption or revision. Said digest to be published in pamphlet form by the Publishing House at least six months before the assembling of the next General Conference."—Daily Advocate, May 18, 1910, page 93.

"Complying with the last quoted resolution, your College of Bishops promptly appointed the following bishops on this Commission: A. W. Wilson, Warren A. Candler, James Atkins, Collins Denny, William B. Murrah."

1. The resolution said by "The Commission" to have been adopted at Asheville, N. C., in 1910 was in fact never adopted. It was introduced, but never acted upon. "The Bishops merely took it for granted that the resolution was adopted, when it was not. The so-called Commission was wholly unauthorized, and had no authority to make a report," says Dr. Arnold.

While this is interesting, it does not change the fact that if the church has a Constitution, no one knows just what it is, and the further fact that the church should have a Constitution; and this writer heartily approves and adopts the following opinion expressed to him in a letter on this matter: "In my judgment, it is best to confess frankly that we have no Constitution and go to work and make one."

2. The matter of the Constitution WAS discussed to some slight extent, but nothing was done, in the General Conference of 1918.)

The Commission, after making "long, detailed, painstaking study of this important question," made a report which fills a 32-page booklet, and makes most interesting reading.

For two reasons, the Report was not considered at the General Conference of 1914:

First—The Commission, instead of publishing its findings "at least six months before the assembling of the General Conference," did not issue it till about two weeks before the sitting of said Conference. In the third paragraph of page

2 the Commission says: "The failure to publish this report six months before the assembling of this General Conference is due to an oversight, for which oversight your College of Bishops asks your pardon."

Second—At the time of the holding of the General Conference of 1914 most of its members thought that there was coming in the near future union with the Methodist Episcopal Church, hence it would have been time and labor unnecessarily expended to have considered at that time the question.

Therefore, it was passed over without action.

Now a "Live" Question.

But, as from all appearances, organic union, or "unification" of American Methodism seems to have failed entirely—or to be so far in the future that none of us now living may see it—this question: "Has the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a Constitution; and, if so, What is it?" is now a live question. It seems well that it be given some consideration in these days immediately preceding the election of delegates and the assembling of the General Conference of 1922.

Findings of the Commission.

Beginning on page 2 of the Report, the Commission quotes, states, argues, and concludes. At the middle of page 16 the conclusion is given in four lines:

"What, then, is the Constitution of our church? Let (Bishop) Bascom answer: 'Our only Constitution is our book of statutes, rules and regulations—the Discipline of the church.' (Quotation being from the "Review of the Reply to the Protest," page 67.)

The Commission's Way to Its Conclusion.

The Commission first considered the Question: "Has Our Church a Constitution?" and concluded that it has a Constitution. In arriving at this conclusion the Commission says:

"In speaking of the Constitution of the church it must not be understood that something quite similar to the Constitution of the United States is intended. In the language of Bascom, used when he was putting forth his great strength on this very question, 'a constitution is that which establishes and constitutes a government. That is intended, and those things especially included, without which the government could not exist.' Again he says: 'As technically understood and applied, in the political jurisprudence of the United States, the Methodist Episcopal Church is without a Constitution. We have a Constitution, however, as certainly as the United States have, resembling, it is true, the English Constitution in its origin and structure, much more than that of our own country, consisting mainly, as does the British Constitution, of declaratory acts, statutes, rules and regulations, together with its construction, precedent and usage, as the means of compact union and action, and thus forming a body of law, which is in fact our only Constitution.'"—Quotation from Bishop Bascom is from the "Review of the Reply to the Protest," page 67.)

The above quotation is here inserted for future use; and will be used to refute the conclusion of the Commission as to what is the Constitution. It might be well, however, to state here that this writer agrees with the Commission and the late Bishop Bascom that the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South (if it has one) is—like the British Constitution—an accretion.

What Is a Constitution?

It will be well for us to arrive at a distinct understanding as to just what is a Constitution.

In the General Conference of 1844, in the great contest over the "Bishop Andrew case," the debate turned upon the question as to what was at that time the Constitution of American Methodism.

In discussing the question, "What is the Constitution of our church, the Commission cites and quotes as its chief authority the late Bishop Bascom, its quotations being from the "Review of the Reply to the Protest," a paper written by Bishop Bascom; and the "Declaration" adopted at the Louisville Convention of 1845, at which time and place the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was organized—which "Declaration" was also written by Bishop Bascom.

Without disparagement of the character of the late Bishop Bascom, this writer does not hold the same high opinion of him as a constitutional lawyer held by the Commission of Bishops to whom was committed the task of determining and defining the Constitution of our church. That Bishop Bascom was a wonderful man in many respects we all agree; that he was a great constitutional lawyer is open to question.

To particularize: See his definition given of a "Constitution." Says Bishop Bascom: "A Constitution is that which establishes and constitutes a government." No more is that a fact than that "a plan and specifications" is that which "establishes and builds a house."

A Constitution is the expression of the judgment and will of those who promulgate it as to the purposes, powers and limitations of the body thus formed and organized. It does neither "establish" nor "constitute" anything; it is merely the expression of the will of the persons who did both "establish" and "constitute."

Some Definitions.

"Constitution. The fundamental, organic law or principles of government of a nation, state, society, or other organized body of men, embodied in written documents, or implied in the institutions and customs of the country or society; also, a written instrument embodying such organic law, and laying down fundamental rules and principles for the conduct of affairs." (Web. Int. Dic.)

"The British Constitution belongs to what are called customary, or unwritten, constitutions, and any part of it may be modified by an ordinary Act of Parliament." (Ib. id.)

"In framing the laws which were to give shape to the new Government the Assembly distinguished between those which were 'constitutional' and subject to change only by special processes of amendment, and those which, though 'organic,' were to be left subject to change by the ordinary processes of statutory enactment," etc. (Woodrow Wilson.)

"At the present time, however, the term is used in the more restricted sense of the fundamental law of the State, society, or corporation, public or private. More specifically, the Constitution of a State or society is the body of legal rules by virtue of which it is governed, and which determines its legal relations to other States and societies and to its own members." (New Int. Enc., article on Constitution.)

"THE FAITH OF OUR FATHERS."

By Rev. G. M. Gibson, D.D.

In recent articles in our Advocates, Dr. S. A. Steel, in his usually fascinating style, has much to say in what he regards as a defense of "the faith of our fathers." A real defense of this sacred treasure is a most commendable task for even as brilliant a writer as my good friend, but the Doctor's articles force into the mind the question, What are we really to understand by "the faith of our fathers?" Are we not in imminent danger of so overloading these words with mere human opinions on features of the Bible that can never be considered at all vital to salvation that their simple, soul-saving significance may become lost to view and "the light that is in them become darkness?" Heresy-hunting almost invariably so concerns itself with the mere scaffolding of the great Biblical structure that it leads its victim to lose sight of the foundation stones and mighty columns that really determine the strength and significance of the structure. It was this attitude of the Pharisees who hounded the steps of Jesus and branded him a dangerous heretic, that led the Master to say, "Ye blind leaders of the blind." It was their constantly loading down the simple elements of faith with their traditions and foolish interpretations of the law that made their religion a burden that Peter, in righteous wrath, declared,

"neither our fathers nor we were able to hear."

What is the real content of that term, "the faith of our fathers?" for it is our common heritage and we all believe that the essential truth in it is still "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." At once it will be seen that we cannot allow all of the opinions and views of the fathers concerning the Bible and its teaching to be crowded into these vital words. Luther's work in defense of the very life of Christianity is of such value that we are compelled to class him with the "fathers," and yet his view that the letter of James is "an epistle of straw" we refuse to accept, along with many other opinions of his concerning the Bible. John Wesley will of course have to be placed in that honored group, and yet all instantly reject his view concerning witchcraft as taught in the Bible. These citations serve to suggest the duty of the most careful discrimination in dealing with the theories and views of the Bible that have been handed down to us by godly men. This great volume of personal opinion and of peculiarity of interpretation upon the part of the noble men who made our religious heritage make it urgent that only the fundamental, life-giving elements handed down by these holy men be allowed to have a place in that sacred term, "the faith of our fathers."

That conservative Methodist scholar, Dr. Curtis, of Drew Seminary, whose book on "The Christian Faith" has become a textbook in our schools for our young preachers, reaches the following conclusion as to the essential elements of faith found in the Bible: "The Bible is ultimate authority on precisely four things, namely, 1. On Christ; 2. On the facts of redemption; 3. On the doctrines of redemption; 4. The principles of conduct for the daily Christian life." Then he tersely sums up thus: "In a word, the Bible is authority on Redemption." Upon mere scientific and general historic questions Dr. Curtis disclaims any pretense to authority upon the part of the Bible.

Now if this great Methodist teacher is right, then Dr. Steel must be wrong in trying to make it appear that "the faith of our fathers" comprehends his interpretation of all sorts of Bible deliverances and the fantastic notions of good men whose teaching has been to him the very words of wisdom. Surely, after second thought, a fair-minded man as he is, even though a hopeless traditionalist, will not claim that one's opinions about the literary structure of the books of the Bible, or his notions about snakes, witches or child-sacrifice, can in any sort of way affect the doctrine of redemption, and if not, then such views cannot be against the "faith of the fathers."

Some one, in the same sort of uneasy state of mind Dr. Steel is manifesting, was urging certain opinions, something like these Dr. Steel is scared about, upon Mr. Wesley, and with his usual directness he thus replied: "I answer, believe them true or false; I will not quarrel with you about any opinion. Only see that your heart is right toward God, that you know and love the Lord Jesus Christ, that you love our neighbor and walk as your Master walked: and I desire no more." I know my genial friend, Dr. Steel, upon being thus reminded of Wesley's breadth of view and tolerance of spirit will be ashamed of this "quarrel" he has carried on for some weeks through the Advocates over mere "opinions" and will never again attempt to add to "the faith of our fathers" that which Wesley says has nothing to do with a man's salvation.

I would earnestly plead that the elemental things of our inherited faith be kept absolutely clear of all gloss of tradition or opinion. The curse of Romanism has been its disposition to add to the vital things in our faith a growing mass of mere opinions, traditions, fanatical interpretations, etc., until the Christ has been eclipsed by the multitude of trivialities. It has thus become so enslaved to the voice of the past that it is afraid of and militantly hostile toward modern investigation—so hostile that a few years ago its authoritative head placed all "modernism" under ban, and rigidly restricted the reading and writing, if not indeed the very thinking, of priests and teachers within the narrow limits of well-worn traditions.

I am wondering if Dr. Steel has not been surrounded so long, over there in the "Pelican Pines," with the fogs of Romanism that he has almost lost the way! From his letters in the Advocates it really seems that he needs not only to be "modernized," but to be purged from Roman Catholic spirit, freed from the fear of study and modern research and be led out into the large, free life of a Wesleyan Methodist. One of the mottoes of Methodism from its foundation has been "Think and let think." It has no uneasiness about its "faith." It believes the Bible is able to stand the test of our rapidly increasing knowledge and of the most searching modern investigation, and it welcomes any light that science, or archeology, or historical criticism may be able to turn on its sacred pages. It therefore expects of its ministers that they will show their faith in its enduring qualities by "seeking and intermeddling with all knowledge." It founds its great schools not that they may become seats of Pharisees, endlessly rehearsing "the traditions of the elders," but on the other hand of men who believe it is the truth that makes us free and are therefore fearlessly seeking by the aid of the Spirit to be led, and to lead others, into all truth.

My dear Brother Steel, let us strive after the truth and not be afraid, and let us cultivate that breadth and sweet tolerance that are inherent in the very life of Methodism.

Dallas, Texas.

"BUT WHY PREACH?"

"It is wonderful, simply splendid—but, after all, why preach? Why under the sun should a business man with a job like yours give it all up to bury himself in the ministry?" This is the question which is answered in a most interesting and arresting article in the June number of Harper's Magazine. It is written by an anonymous author, a college graduate of 1914, who had filled one or two creditable positions of responsibility in the business world. He entered the army during the war and was wounded in France. During the time of his recovery in the hospital he gave very serious thought to the question of the investment of his life. After earnest thinking reaching over two years, in which time the final issue was thrashed out with himself on a camping trip in the mountains, he reaches this conclusion: "And so I came out of that week of canoeing in the mountains with my answer. I had decided to 'bet my life' on the ministry as the biggest job in sight, and the job I would rather do than anything else I knew of."

Between the question and the answer lies one of the most absorbing stories of a present-day call to the ministry which one could imagine. It is the frank record of a keen mind facing the question of life investment with all the alternatives which are offered and coming through by dint of clear, logical thinking with the decision to enter the ministry.

It is not the story of the old-fashioned call with its clear, unmistakable voice, but the story of the mental and spiritual pilgrimage of one who desired above all things to find the place where his life would count for most in service. The author describes the consternation of his friends on learning he was leaving the business in which he was making great success to enter the ministry. "Most of my acquaintances," he says, "seem to regard it as an exhibition of magnificent folly—a kind of 'Charge of the Light Brigade,' or even, in the case of some of them, like going over Niagara in a barrel. And so they ask, 'Why preach?'"

All varieties of ridicule and objections are made, but they do not outweigh in the mind of the young man the growing desire to find happiness through service.

During his convalescent days in the hospital, this desire became more vivid through concrete experiences of helpfulness. "Gradually I fell into helping the other men in one way or another: There was the Turk from the Patterson silk mills, with an arm and a leg gone, who wanted lessons in English each day; the man with the paralyzed back, who wanted Zane Grey read aloud; 'Dad,' the little bald-headed farmer from Illinois with the bad leg, whose sly ambition was to learn enough arithmetic so that he could 'figger how many square foot in an acre;' the boy from Montana, who dreamed in a vague way of going to college, and only needed encouragement for his dream later to become a reality. This incidental work gave me a hankering which later developed into the first of my three reasons for going into the ministry; it 'sold' me completely—in the lingo of business—on the satisfactoriness, so far as I am personally concerned, of service directly among people and in touch with their personal problems."

The Surest Path to the "Happiness Stuff."

"I came out of the war, then, with what was later to become my first reason for entering the ministry—a strong faith that through creative service among people lies my surest path to this 'happiness stuff.' Nevertheless, I went back to my original work, though keener than ever to make it a 'vocation' rather than a 'job.'"

The second reason for the strengthening of this appeal to the ministry was the conviction that the so-called spiritual values in life count overwhelmingly, and that religion is the most important agency engaged in their cultivation and preservation.

"Here, then, was perhaps the most fundamental service in the world, the essence of creative service—the fostering of spiritual values, not in any locally partisan sense, but in a big catholic sense that will draw together all beauty and love and aspiration everywhere and actually do work. This appealed to my practical side, because it is a direct effort to go back and tap the basic sources of energy in life; as surely as the dynamo generates hitherto unsuspected power out of space with which it turns the wheels of the world, so in the air all about men lie these spiritual powers waiting to be harnessed and used."

But even when this had been decided there still remains the question, "Why preach?" There came to mind other avenues of service in which the motives of sympathetic helpfulness could find play.

"This question was one which took a long time to answer convincingly. I found myself going to bed with it at night and shoving with it in the morning. Granted the necessary function of religion and churches, why should I be warranted in thinking that for myself the greater and more satisfying service lay through resigning an already socially useful position in a field which I had deliberately chosen, and entering the ministry? And, should I decide to change my work, did not some such work as education offer a more practical field than the ministry?"

"I tried to face every alternative squarely, to meet every challenge head on. I turned to education. Here, if anywhere, lies the hope of the world; yet education without the religio magistri is a mere shell; and whence comes this faith of the teacher if not from that greater flame which keeps all faith alight?"

The Task of the Twentieth Century.

"Then I turned to one phase after another of the practical work aiming to free men from the bondage of our faulty economic life. My friend, the economist, contends that, once we get man's economic life straightened out, once we reduce the busy-ness of keeping alive to the kitchen of life and it ceases to occupy the whole house, the 'heaven on earth' of the ministers will result automatically. He points to the seeming folly of 'preaching' to a sick and hungry world. And yet its very sickness and hunger, the very anomaly of proclaiming love and fellowship and service to a world run on the diametrically opposed principle of 'dog-eat-dog,' seems to me to demand as never before that somebody preach and preach harder and straighter than ever to the ideal of Christ. The 'industrial revolution' of the twentieth century is to be the shift from business for profit only to business for service in which capital, labor of all classes, with hand and brain, and society at large will benefit mutually. The name of the new industry is co-operation, and this is the first teaching of Christianity. Here, in my faith, lies the dynamite in Christianity. Here is the contribution which religion must make to the work of the economist."

The whole story is one well worth reading and very significant in its indication of the trend of thinking of a large company of keen-minded, earnest-spirited young men to-day. It is written in the language and with the mental background of the young college man, and it would be extremely fortunate if it could be read by thousands of college students.—Exchange.

REPORT OF DENOMINATIONAL SECRETARIES TO THE COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM AND LIFE SERVICE OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA, JUNE 28, 1921.

This has been the greatest year in Evangelism which America has ever seen. More people have been received into the churches this year than ever before. The latest reports from the Commissions on Evangelism connected with the Federal Council are as follows:

The Baptist Church reports that eleven States have been organized with the definite purpose of reaching every church in the State with some evangelistic effort. In most of these States a Superintendent of Evangelism has been employed, and the plan is to secure a Superintendent for each State. The emphasis everywhere is being placed on pastoral and personal evangelism. Reports of the great Easter ingathering cannot be given in exact figures, but it will probably be more than 150,000, and certainly the largest in the history of the denomination.

The Southern Baptist Church, known as the National Baptist Church, has a membership not far from 3,500,000. The denomination is urging its pastors to become their own evangelists and to depend less upon outside help. It is estimated that they received not far from 200,000 additions during the past year.

The General Conference of the Seventh Day Baptists does not occur until June 30, so that no definite statistics can be given. The denominational Missionary Society promotes evangelistic spirit and carries on evangelistic work. The Secretary of that Society reports that a Field Secretary for Evangelistic work has been recently appointed. He says the denomination is interested as never before in evangelistic work.

The Christian denomination reports great interest in special evangelistic training classes for personal work. Fifty per cent more churches held pre-Easter services this year than ever before. Colleges have been visited in the interest of life service. There is a net gain in membership of more than ten per cent.

The annual report of the Congregational Commission on Evangelism states that their program of Parish Evangelism has been accepted by the majority of the churches. Hundreds of thousands of copies of helpful evangelistic literature have been sent out. More people joined the church than in any previous year of its history. More than 72,000 were actually reported a month ago, with the certainty that the reports from the remaining churches will make the number of accessions more than 100,000. The churches of California and New York report accessions fifty per cent greater in 1921 than in 1920.

The Disciples of Christ report that this year has had the greatest evangelistic results in all the 112 years of the history of the church. Scores of personal workers have been organized and members trained for personal soul winning and many revivals have been held throughout the country. Simultaneous evangelistic campaigns by cities, counties and States are being stressed for the fall and every church is to have a training class for personal workers. During the first three months of 1920 the churches of Northern California received 1000 members, while during the same period of 1921 they received 1600. Kansas added 4000 members to her churches in the six weeks preceding Easter. From January 1, 1921, to Easter, 100,000 members have been enrolled.

The Evangelical Association, from reports at hand, estimates that there will be 50,000 conversions and accessions. This is far in excess of the last few years, and also far in excess of the goal which the church had set for itself of 100,000 for five years in their Forward Movement.

The recently appointed Evangelistic Committee of the Lutheran Church is at work preparing plans for this denomination. The estimated increase of the Lutheran Church in this country is 110,000.

The Methodist Episcopal Church reports that the Department of Evangelism has had the greatest success of any year since this work began. Special emphasis has been laid upon classes for the training of Christian workers, and upon ministerial retreats, where methods and inspiration have both been presented. Special men have been sent to work among people of different occupations, such as harvesters, woodsmen, etc. The net increase in membership for the year ending November 1, 1920, was 182,338. A much larger increase is expected this year.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, reports that there have been the greatest revivals ever known in their conferences during the winter and spring. Large conventions are being held to encourage the pastors and workers in rural communities. The summer months are being given to evangelistic work in the country. It is believed that 1921 will go far beyond 1920; the official statistics for that year show 279,000 members received into the church, of whom 139,000 were on profession of faith.

The African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church reports that they have only lately organized a Department of Evangelism. They have now a General Evangelist who has been in the field about three months. Wonderful success has followed the meetings that he has planned and the work done. This year will bring the largest returns in conversions in the history of the church. The meetings North and South have been exceedingly gratifying. They are expecting an increase of 100,000 members in their four-year drive.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church has a regularly authorized Board of Evangelism, which is having such marked success that they are asking now of their constituents for an ingathering of 1,000,000 souls during the next four years.

The Commission of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. reports that it found it necessary in carrying out its program to use a great many men—1700 men, mostly pastors, gave from two to four weeks of their time to churches other than their own. The Presbyterians throughout the nation are thoroughly organized for evangelistic work. The church reported in June an increase of 124,000 in membership.

The report of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. for the year ending April 1, 1921, shows 24,294 additions to the church, the largest number received in any year of the church's history. The total membership is now 397,250, or, with the addition of ministers, about 400,000. The gain in membership is 20,793.

In the United Presbyterian Church special emphasis has been laid upon the family altar and prayer. Evangelism has been at the front and all the pastors have been urged to do their own evangelistic work. The results have been exceedingly gratifying—10,356 new members were received into the church on profession of faith and 9,402 by certificate, the total net gain being 3,902.

For the Protestant Episcopal Church, Dr. Floyd W. Tomkins, Vice-President of our Commission, reports that the Presiding Council of his church has appointed a Commission on Evangelism, which is called "Commission on the Holding of Missions." They drew up a strong report which was accepted, and will greatly stimulate the holding of these evangelistic meetings or missions. A sub-committee has drawn up a book of suggestions concerning these meetings as to time, method, etc. It is especially urged that the ministers should hold the meetings themselves in their own churches. There is a very eager evangelistic spirit noted throughout the church.

The Reformed Church in America is strengthening its evangelistic work and is planning for a strong Forward Movement in organization and effectiveness. It reports a net gain of over one per cent in membership.

In the Reformed Church in the U. S., an evangelist has recently been appointed for the Eastern Synod, and it is the purpose of the church to put an evangelist in each of the nine synods. Its Commission reports that the church has become awakened and stimulated as never before. The Commission is circulating valuable literature—26,907 members were received during the past year, a net gain of 6,270.

The United Brethren Church at its General Conference in May made a separate Department of Evangelism and elected a Secretary to give all his time to that work. There is a new zeal manifested throughout the church. It is estimated that since October more than 20,000 have been received into the church.

Reports from other denominations have been delayed, hoping to be able to send definite figures. The outlook from all the denominations is most optimistic. It will be seen from the figures here presented that the additions to the Protestant churches in the country this last year must have been not far from 2,000,000 souls.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

Rev. W. M. Williams,
Purvis, Miss.

My Dear Brother Williams: Our Representative Church in Washington City was completed two years ago and has been an immense success. It has set forward to a very great degree the cause of Southern Methodism at the national capital.

But the building has not been paid for. Relying on the pledges of the Annual Conferences, the Commission charged with the erection of the building gave notes running through several years, and thereby borrowed money to pay the contractor. These notes are falling due, and one must be paid very soon. Collections have not been such as to yield an amount sufficient to meet the next note. We lack $18,000 of the amount required.

I am writing you as the President of your Conference Board of Church Extension to ask if you can not set in motion some process by which you can secure all of the unpaid balance of the pledge of your Conference, or a considerable part of it if you can not pay all. The amount of the balance due from the Mississippi Conference is $4,272.81. Please let me hear from you concerning this matter.

With kindest regards, I am,
Yours very truly,

W. A. CANDLER,
Chairman of the Commission.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS AND PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The above letter from Bishop W. A. Candler reminds us of the need of our redeeming our pledge made at the last Annual Conference to pay this $4,272.81 balance due on this most worthy and profitable enterprise.

You recall that the members of the Conference Board of Church Extension assumed the responsibility of raising the above amount as a special to prevent an increase in the assessments. We agreed to raise this in five annual payments.

This would be less than $150 per district, and less than $7.50 per charge for each of the five years. Now we ask, urge, insist, appeal, and implore every presiding elder, pastor, and member of the Conference Board of Church Extension to raise your quota in your district and forward same to W. D. Davis, Treasurer, Brookhaven, Miss., giving district and charge, marked Special to Washington City Church. DO IT NOW.

W. M. WILLIAMS,
Pres. Miss. Conf. Board of Church Extension.

INFORMATION FOR USERS OF CLERGY PERMITS.

The Clergy Bureaus west of the Mississippi have very kindly perfected an arrangement with the Southeastern Clergy Bureau for inter-territorial use of their respective clergy permits. By this arrangement, holders of permits residing in either territory can use either for inter-territorial travel.

That is, a person with a Southeastern permit, but not possessing a Southwestern, could travel from Atlanta to Dallas on a Southeastern permit, and vice versa.

The Southeastern Bureau will also honor permits west of the Mississippi for intra-territorial travel. That is, a person holding a Southwestern permit coming to Southeastern territory could use the Southwestern permit within the territory under the jurisdiction of the Southeastern Clergy Bureau. No such arrangement, however, exists in the territories west of the Mississippi. The Eastern Bureau, which controls the territory east of Chicago and north of the Ohio River, does not enter into the above arrangements with either of the above mentioned bureaus.

This information will be gratefully received by users of clergy permits, and genuinely appreciated. The saving of time and the convenience and comfort which this arrangement insures will be of great service to the users of clergy permits.

A few railroads have not accepted this inter-territorial arrangement. The nearest railroad agent will know which they are.

BEARING DEFEAT GRACEFULLY.

All boys and girls like to play games, and, naturally, they like to win. It is impossible, however, for any one to be on the winning side all of the time. Sooner or later the best players and the best teams are bound to meet their match and to go down to defeat.

There are two ways, however, of meeting defeat. One way, and a way which is more common than it ought to be, is to get peevish when one is beaten, especially if he is beaten again and again. Who has not seen boys and girls become real "down in the mouth" and grouchy because the other side was winning at croquet or in some other game? Such boys and girls take it as a personal affront when an opponent can outplay them.

But there is another way to take defeat, and that is to meet it with a smile—that is, to congratulate the winner and to say: "You beat me fairly this time; but if you do it again, you've got to play harder than ever."

There is almost no way in which the real disposition and character of boys and girls is shown equal to that of the way they take defeat. Watch a boy or a girl playing games, see what they do and say and how they look when they have been beaten, and you know what the real inner life of the loser is. No one really likes a boy or a girl who does the baby act when defeated, but every one admires a good loser.

Over the gate of one of the New England athletic fields are these words: "May the best team win." In every game into which boys and girls enter this should be their desire: "May the best player win." It is possible to win on a fluke or mistake, but no one who is truly honest is satisfied to win that way. The player who has the real sportsmanlike quality in his make-up is the one who wishes his opponent to play his best, and desires to win only when he can clearly outplay him. Until he can do that, he is willing to lose, but he is just as cheerful and good-natured in defeat as in victory.—The Visitor.

SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY.

The writer may be pardoned a concrete illustration out of his boyhood recollections. There was in the town a poor, motherless, demented boy who ran the streets in rags, swearing and screaming as other boys and some men would tease and torment him and laugh at his pitiful anger and agony. What were the preachers in that town doing in those days? They were preaching abstract theological doctrines and warning us boys against going to the circus; but not a minister or elder or church member ever took any action or thought he had anything to do about that boy. There was not enough social Christianity in that town to care for him or even think about him. Such a thing would now hardly be possible in any Christian town, because we have organized a Christian society of our town, and we are the whole of the community and we are the whole of the church members. James H. Taylor, in "Is the World Growing Better?"

CLEVELAND CAMP MEETING.

The Cleveland Camp Meeting will be held August 11-21. It is the hope of the Rev. E. E. McKeehen and the E. E. Taylor. This meeting has been running fifteen years. It has had many of the best preachers on the continent to hold the meeting. Don't forget to pass for it.

MRS. S. C. TAYLOR, Secretary.

WHEN WE COME TO OUR CAESAREA PHILIPPI.

For each of us there is a critical point in our lives. We come to our Caesarea Philippi. We face the question of Jesus Christ: "Who am I, and what will you do with me?" How much does one need to learn and know before he can answer the question? What training or education must he have? How long must he be in school? Not so long as Simon Peter and the rest of the disciples; because he has the record of all that Jesus taught them, and it does not require three years to learn. If one is diligent and earnest. In the quiet, let us be impressed with the fact that Jesus was not teaching those disciples for their sakes alone. Through them he was teaching us. Nor was he praying for them alone. "Neither for them only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word." (John 17:20.) Nor was he working miracles for them alone. "Many other signs therefore did Jesus in the presence of the disciples, which are not written in this book; but these are written, that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye may have life in his name." (John 20:30, 31.)

A little girl once asked her mother: "How old must I be, mother, before I can be a Christian?" Her mother in turn asked: "How old will you have to be before you love me?" "Why, mother," she replied, "I have always loved you." "How old must you be before you can trust yourself wholly to me and my care?" continued the mother. "I always did; but tell me now what I wish to know." "How old will you have to be before you do what I wish you to do?" her mother asked. And the little girl, seeing clearly what her mother meant, whispered: "I can now without waiting to grow older."

Are you old enough to love Jesus, to trust yourself to him, to do what he wants you to do, and have you learned what he asks you to do? If so, the conclusion is plain enough: you are old enough to become a Christian.—Gospel Advocate.

"JESUS WENT WITH HIM."

Jesus is always quick to respond to calls for help. He went at once with Jairus when his little daughter was dying. But he is never in a hurry. Although the child was at the point of death, when a poor woman in the throng touched the hem of His garment, with a heart cry for healing in the touch, Jesus gave heed to her and gave her the blessing she sought. He even lingered to talk with her. By the time he had done this, it seemed that he had waited too long, for word came that the child was dead. But Jesus is just as able to restore the dead as he is to heal the sick. So His delay in reaching the ruler's house resulted in a greater work, when he raised the dead child to life, than if he had hastened and had kept her from dying.

We need never be afraid of Christ's delays—He never tarries too long. We may learn a lesson, too, on the beauty of waiting work. When we are going somewhere on an errand of business we may find opportunity of doing others' kindnesses on the way.—Selected.

It is easy to see the good points of the man on a pedestal.—Exchange.

READING THE APPOINTMENTS.

Rev. C. H. McCrea.

The Conference is drawing to a close. It is the hour of worship in the entertaining church. The great Methodist menu which covers almost a week has but two items remaining, the sermon by the Bishop and the reading of the appointments—good wine for the end of the feast and the annual sentence for a year with hard labor at the Conference tribunal—and then adjournment sine die.

For five days and nights 200 men have been in session. From early morning worship, into which the old faithfuls straggle intermittently and from which the sleek moderns absent themselves to thumb Boreham essays in the basement bookstore, down to the midnight hour, when the jovial circuit-riders fish the oysters from the flowing bowl at the Greek restaurant and swap inside information about the supposed leaks from the hermetic seal on the cabinet, it has been a strenuous and a strenuous time.

The secretarial staff sit back of the episcopal chair, whereon reclines the appointed Bishop. On the table beside this arbiter of clerical destiny lies the portfolio which holds the latest draft of appointments. The elders round about the throne carry sheets of foolscaps, very imposing in appearance, on which are written copies of the imperial rescript in the portfolio. The treasurer and his force occupy front seats. They will be called upon to state the truth about our "Benevolences" and "Centenary." When their books are opened we shall be judged upon the things written therein. Have we buried our talents, or shall we be rewarded with the lordship of great cities on one hundred per cent industry? "All causes presented, evangelistic services held, ministerial support prorated and Centenary made up in full," is the glad accounting of our stewardship.

The Sunday evening attendance is made up most variously. It is a capacity house, and more beside. The overflow invades the choir loft, sits around the communion-rail and encroaches upon the seats of the mighty on the platform. In general the attendance is the Methodism of the city, too loyal to desert in the morning, but given a vacation to hear the Bishop at night.

There are yawns from the secretary and his staff, from the treasurer and his helpers. These with the statisticians have borne the burden and heat of the Conference, unpaid and unthanked. The recording angels are ready, and the tabulated record of accessions, with membership of all organizations, is ordered. Was it some madness in our Methodism or the scorn of our enemies that gave us the name of the Methodist Statistical Church?

There are many careworn faces in the great crowd—some merely grave and solemn, some disconsolate and depressed. If you are sitting near one of the dispirited brethren, you may frequently note a sigh that, like a bubble from the ferment, indicates a heart very ill at ease. This anxious engine is running on "high." In their humiliation their judgment is taken away, and they can not find a key that will shut it off. Whose are the hearts so ill at ease? There be some who feel that the shadow land of mediocrity is reserved for them, wandering stars whom the superintendents jest about as "yearlings," the "supplies" for whom there is small demand in the better charges. Occasionally you will find a man in that list who has had a humiliating drop from higher up. He may have been frozen out by some church faction, or by a local Pharaoh of the oppression. Perhaps he may be a square peg that bulged the round hole uncomfortably for the twelve months past, and hole and peg are relieved when Conference convenes; at any rate, he feels his edges frayed by the ill-fitting sphere in which he moved, and now he looks for a happier fit.

The Bishop is a man of generous girth, "with good capon lined," but care sits mantling upon his brow. For almost a week he has been playing the great game of clerical chess with four deciding elders. Up to many a midnight hour and after many a late session the game is a draw. There are so many aspirants for the king row, the star seats, and such an array of tail-enders, who wonder why they can not move at least one shift nearer the goal of hope, and there are laymen with secret instruction for the district superintendents.

Apart from the overworked, the weary and the anxious, there is a larger group who come fresh and ready, the church-member, folk of all denominations, who expect a deliverance. All is new to them, and some have never heard a "real live bishop" in all their interesting lives. Also, they have no intense personal interest to weigh upon the heart. These do "all the Bishop's carking cares beguile, and make him quite forget his labor and his toil."

The sermon is long, unusually so. It is a strange thing, but a certain, no matter how weary the officiating elder may be, it never occurs to him to save himself by the time limit. "It came to pass" is one of the most frequent sentiments in the Book, but we do not recall any sermon preached from that text. The eloquent utterance climaxed with the rarest illustration of the whole sermon: bill of fare, dies gently into a prayer, and then heads are lifted, noses blown, coughs indulged in, and the tension is dropped generally. But the "yearlings" grow more restless. Damp beads appear upon their brows. The handkerchief, which the elect lady of the parsonage put in the valise so flat and white and square, is now a shady mop from nervous use.

The Bishop has a whispered conversation with one of the superintendents, and we all wonder whose name is mentioned and what news is conveyed thereby. It is the final word. The judgment is set, and the books are opened—to every man according as his work has been.

The judge takes the Irishman's privilege of making a few remarks before he begins. He and the cabinet have mingled sighs and tears and midnight oil, in their endeavor to lubricate the Methodist machine for a peaceful and harmonious adjustment that will satisfy everybody. Adjustment! did you say? It is the faith of the chiropractor that God made man upright, but that many kinks and curves have spoiled the perpendicular since God finished creation. But the chiropractor's jolt on the erring vertebra is as the zephyr's touch on the aspen leaf in comparison with the twelve labors of Hercules laid on the Bishop and cabinet. To get right men out of the wrong place, fit square pegs into square holes, transform misfits into suitables, and roll the stars and gems and shining ones into orbits where luster will count. It took prayer, brethren, and wisdom not of earth, yea even the genius of the superman, to prepare a square deal for all charges, and chargers, and chargees. If any surprises will be sprung it is because the lateness of the hour made communication impossible.

As the Bishop proceeds it is to be noted that the brethren applaud from time to time. When the beloved superintendent is mentioned, all the toilers in his bailiwick pat their hands with enthusiasm, delighted to have the privilege of serving under their reverend champion during the coming anno domini. Spasmodic bursts rise from the congregation, as the name of their favorite is mentioned. Were they not fearful he might be translated into some glorious sphere for which his marvelous talents so eminently fit him? The episcopal throat is cleared, and the last great item of the sky-pilot parliament is on. In order that the gentle reader and the ungente writer may get together in enjoyable understanding of the difficulties that beset the adjustment process, we have symbolized circuits and furnished circuit-riders with aliases:

Thus and so forth, until the group attached and detached had received their sentences. Dismissal was pronounced, and we each wended our way back to the old task, or forward to the new, wishing one another a happy, Methodist New Year.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

THE MYSTICS.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

The Christian world to-day is confronted by man's most insidious enemy. The devil has shifted his battery of huge "Berthas" from the fields of materialistic thought to that of psychology. Since thinking men have come to see that the material universe is but the physical manifestation of the spiritual—Creator, God—the devil and all his cohorts admit the reality of spirit: and out-Caesar the Caesars in their mad rush to the other extreme. In some extremes they deny the real existence of matter altogether, and in others they throw down a barrage of the green smoke of mystery to becloud the mind; and then proceed on the false hypothesis that all mystery is divine. If you can't understand a thing, and explain it by the natural laws of the material world, then that is God—all mystery is God. They teach a reverential mystic, religious superstition in lieu of an intelligent faith.

In such a mental atmosphere "Spiritualism," "Christian Science," (?) "New Thought," and all the occult schools find rich and verdant fields on which to roam and feast. The devil never had a bigger time in all his life than since he donned this sheepskin coat and erected real temples with spires and called them churches. He has broken into the church business, and is crying persecution, if you dare to disagree with him. He has become extremely liberal, even to the "goats," and is full of miracles (?) "doing many wonderful" works in the name of Jesus (?). He can do almost anything but raise the dead or prevent the people from dying when their time comes; and to ease this and go Christianity "one better," they do not die, but "pass on"—"matter is not real, hence there is no death." "Sin is but an abnormal mental state," hence there is no need of repentance or other sorrow.

Such things can only grow as the legitimate fruits of such a faith as is ignorant of real knowledge of facts, and has no correspondent in realities which fall within the domain of our God-given senses. Real faith has always an objective, corresponding reality which comes within the domain of the senses. Human mind has a material temple—a real human body. Psychology is essentially related to the material. Jesus was God made manifest in the flesh—the Spirit materialized; as he was, so God is. "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." He materialized the Spirit that He might spiritualize the material. Mystery and darkness are the things which God seeks to banish, and to bring us to a knowledge of God.

The need of our day, yea, our only security, is in a more intelligent faith. "Add to your faith knowledge"—seek to know what it is that you believe. It is so much easier for man to believe what he does not know, than it is to know what it is that he believes. He came that we might have light and life.

We learn to love God by giving ourselves to Him, by serving Him, by doing His will. Love to God is thus born of self-dedication. Having learned how to love man without selfishness, we can love God in the same way.—James Freeman Clarke.

The Home Circle

DID YOU MEET THEM?

Two little Tempers went their way
Through town and country, one winter day.
One, like a queen, wore a golden crown,
And the fairy Sunshine had spun her gown;
And she gaily tossed, as she danced along,
A largess of smiles, good cheer and song.

The other one wore on her brow a cloud,
And her voice was fretful, and cross, and loud;
And people pulled up their mufflers high,
And said, "There's an east wind passing by."
And she scattered about, in the frosty air,
Quarrels and bickerings, everywhere.

Both had followers in their train,
Earning their wages, pleasure and pain.
And Time took snapshots of each and all,
And hung the pictures on Memory's wall.
Sunshine and shadow, gloom and cheer;
Which did you walk with to-day, my dear?

FOR GRANTED.

"It must be a great comfort to Elsie to have her mother with her," said the grandmother, always interested in the good fortunes of others. "With her two little children to care for, the help and company of such a mother must make her life much easier and happier."

"Yes," assented the visitor. "Last year she couldn't talk enough of what a help and relief it was, how much safer she felt about the children when she had to leave them for a little while. This year"—the speaker paused with a little laugh. "Oh, well, mother is just as much a dependence and help, of course, but Elsie has reached the take-it-for-granted stage. You know how that goes. What she couldn't be sufficiently thankful for at first, is now only the usual and expected. There are more demands and less appreciation."

"I see," said the grandmother with her grave little smile that ended in the faintest breath of a sigh. "It's a way we have of treating our blessings."

Louise, sitting at the table with her book, felt a warm flush creeping over her face. She suddenly remembered how much it had meant to her when she first came to spend this winter with grandmother; to find the dish of fruit, the bowl of popcorn, or some little treat awaiting her each afternoon when she came from school; and now she looked for them as a matter of course. To-night she was so busy thinking of the theme she had to write, that she had even forgotten to say "Thank you!" Then she thought of home and of mother's constant love and service there, and how the whole family depended upon her to keep all the wheels running and the loose ends gathered up. They were so used to the orderly rooms, the comfortable meals promptly served, to mother's remembering all that ought to be remembered, and knowing all that ought to be known, that they were naturally taking her for granted. Suppose some dark day she should find her not there? A lump rose in the girl's throat, and a swift resolution in her heart. Never again would she be so carelessly ungrateful.

Will she remember as the days go on? When God was leading Israel on their long journey they feared and complained as the food grew short. Then, one day, there came the bread from heaven to supply their need, and they gathered it in wondering gratitude morning after morning, all their fear of hunger banished. But as the months went on it grew to be a common thing, accepted carelessly. Manna, of course there would be manna, but one would like a change, and after a time they announced that they "loathed" this light bread. Yet their story is only the story that might in some way be told of us all. Our blessings are so many, our safety and comfort are so expected, the love that blesses our lives and fills our homes is such a familiar thing, that our sense of appreciation dulls, and we forget to thank God for the mercies that are new every morning. Let us learn a new prayer, "Help me to have a grateful heart, and not take all my life's blessings for granted."—Queens' Gardens.

FAITH.

"The trouble is," said Harold Raymond, on his return from his second year in college, "that when you enter the sphere of religion, you deal with something quite different from anything that you meet in science. In the one you move step by step along lines of induction or deduction, and in the other you fling a highway through the air, in a bold and beautiful manner, but in a way quite different from that of science."

"I am not sure that the difference is so great as we are accustomed to suppose," replied his friend. "I have been thinking how scientific faith is, or, rather, how large a part faith plays in science. No man ever made a great discovery that was wholly an accident. Even if he were seeking the Northwest Passage and found America, it was faith that was guiding him."

"But it is a very different thing from what you call faith, isn't it?" asked Harold. "Faith seems very vague as compared with the processes of science."

"I don't think so. I have wondered how it would seem if we were to try to add some modern names of science to the great muster-roll of faith in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews."

"I should like to hear how it would sound."

"By faith Columbus, when he was called of God to discover a new world, went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sailed strange waters, with Cabot, Magellan, Vesputius and Balboa, the heirs with him of the same promise."

"By faith Copernicus lifted the earth from its solid base and set it to moving in rhythmic order round the sun; and all the suns and sons of suns with planets in bright array that circle round the throne of God. This he beheld by faith."

"By faith Laplace understood how the worlds are made from star-dust; and Newton beheld in the fall of the apple a force that holds the worlds in place, and that not by things that do appear."

"By faith the men of science, who did not always call themselves men of faith, found substance in the things hoped for, and moved from experiment to hypothesis and from hypothesis to theory, and from theory to fact and from faith to sight; and all these were the children of faith."

"And what shall I more say? For time would fail me to tell of Stephenson and Fulton, or Morse and Roentgen and Edison and Bell, of Cyrus Field and Alexander Bell and Marconi and Wilbur Wright, who through their iron float, yoked chariots to the invisible power of steam, caused the voice of man to be heard by his fellow-man at a distance of a thousand miles, filled the air with voices from the four corners, but intelligible to the man at the other end of the globe and the minds of men of young or old, and set them to sailing amid the clouds."

"By faith they built railways, crossed the trackless ice to the poles, subdued climate, overcame hardship and incredulity, out of weakness were made strength, and added to the space and comfort of human life, and gave wonderful analogies to those who seek the farther knowledge which is by faith."

"And whereby we have learned from saints and apostles, and the Lord of life, and have found sure footing for faith, let us not count it unreasonable that still we follow, and live the life of faith."—Youth's Companion.

"TIME OUT."

Another Ford Joke.

Prof.—"Why is a well-ordered schoolroom like a Ford?"

Bright Freshie "Easy! Because the crank's up in front."

Prof.—"Yes, but there's more to it than that. The crank's up in front, and all the Nuts are in their proper places."—Exchange.

The Ready Irishman.

Standing by the entrance of a large estate in the suburbs of Dublin are two huge dogs carved out of granite.

An Englishman going by in a motor thought he would have some fun with the Irish driver.

"How often, Pat, do they feed those two big dogs?"

"Whenever they bark, sir," was the straightforward reply.—Exchange.

THE VALUE OF A VACATION.

A vacation is no longer looked upon as a luxury, but as a very fine thing for increasing the efficiency and effectiveness of those who are able to take one. Application year after year to the same work, without any opportunity for relaxation or a change of scene, is bound to result sooner or later in diminished physical power and a weariness of mind that make the doing of the daily tasks increasingly difficult. The cause of this growing burden of work is not always recognized, but a short period of rest almost invariably results in renewed vigor and increased efficiency.

Unfortunately, it is not always possible for those who need it most to take a vacation. Their work may be so arranged that they cannot afford to leave it even for a few days—or it seems so; or, as more frequently happens, the expense of a vacation is greater than the one who needs it can afford to bear. When a man is engaged in a gainful occupation, he himself should, if possible, make such arrangements as will enable him to enjoy a respite from labor that will really result in his being able to do more and better work, and is, therefore, a profitable investment.

But some people are not engaged in gainful occupations, and the limitations of their resources are such that it is practically impossible for them to lay aside the amount of money necessary for even a short vacation. Preachers, for example, give all their time and energy to a work that is altogether for the welfare of the community. Their object is not to make money, but to do good, and their incomes are usually not more than enough to provide for their daily necessities. In many cases, if they have a vacation at all, it must be provided by those whom they serve.

A good many congregations throughout the church are beginning to realize that making possible a vacation for their pastors is not only a beautiful way of expressing their appreciation of their faithful work, but that it is also a profitable investment, the dividends accruing in renewed strength that enables these pastors to render more efficient service.

We wish all our pastoral charges would take this view of the matter and act in accordance therewith. There are so many places now where meetings are held especially for instruction and inspiration of preachers, that the expense of attending one of them is not very great—certainly not so great but that it could easily be provided by the membership of almost any pastoral charge. We have been associated with preachers all our life, and we know how their hearts hunger for contact with men and institutions that will refresh their minds, inspire their souls, and add to their equipment for the work to which God has called them—but often that hunger has to go unsatisfied.

Any suggestion contained in the above lines is not based upon the poverty of the preacher—he is not a pauper in any sense of the word—but upon the evident propriety of a congregation's showing its appreciation of a faithful man's services while, at the same time, making possible an enlarged usefulness on the part of the man it delights to honor.

GO TO COLLEGE THIS FALL.

The opening of the fall term of our colleges is not very far off. While the financial results of the Christian Education Movement have not yet become available in any large amount, most of our institutions of learning have relied upon the assured addition to their resources from this Movement to increase their facilities for taking care of students, and it is probable that they can take care of a larger number of students this fall than ever before in their history.

We hope there will not be a vacant room in one of them this session. It is no longer necessary to point out the advantages of a college education. It is not the mere fact of attending college that better equips our young men and young women for life, but it is the opportunity to come into contact with inspiring personalities, new currents of thought, enlarged ideals, and to follow courses of study under the direction of men and women who, by precept and example, teach the vital doctrines of the Christian religion. Christian colleges have become centers in which are generated and from which go out influences that uplift the soul as well as enlarge the mind. It is in such institutions that men and women are trained for the largest usefulness in life.

Many of our young people have already made up their minds to go to college this year. There are many others who need to have the matter brought to their attention and to have the encouragement of parents, pastors, friends, to help them realize the importance of such a step. In every community there is at least one boy, one girl, who should be in one of our church schools. Every pastor has a magnificent opportunity to render a service that will endure through the ages by picking out some of these choice spirits and putting them in the way of securing a college education. In many cases the mere sending of the name of the prospective student to the college authorities for a catalogue will be sufficient; in others, personal solicitation will be necessary. No matter what the necessary steps may be, it is time well spent, and the rewards will be great.

FOR THE CREDIT OF THE CHURCH.

It is well known that our Representative Church in Washington, D. C., has been phenomenally successful in reaching large numbers of people with the message of the gospel and in bringing them into the membership of the church. More than once we have been told that visitors are turned away at almost every service for lack of room, and the religious influence of the institution is strongly felt in the national capital. It is not too much to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has gained a commanding position in Washington largely through the establishment of this great connectional enterprise.

It is to be regretted that a considerable debt still hangs over this building. It was so well understood in the beginning that the local congregation could not erect the building and provide for its running expenses, that the church at large assumed the responsibility of providing the building fund. As payments on notes became due, these pledges made by the Annual Conferences have been relied upon to meet the obligations. It seems that these pledges have not been promptly met, and considerable embarrassment has resulted to the Commission that was in charge of the work. We take the liberty of calling attention to a communication in this issue of the Advocate from

Rev. W. M. Williams, President of the Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference, in which a letter from Bishop W. A. Candler, chairman of the Commission, is given in reference to this important matter. For the credit of the church we trust all the Conferences will arrange to meet their obligations at the earliest practicable moment.

THE JULY REVIEW.

The July number of the Methodist Quarterly Review, designated as the "Midsummer Literary Number," has come to our desk. It presents an attractive table of contents, as follows: "Dante: Poet, Patriot, Exile," by Davis Wasgatt Clark; "The Passing of John Burroughs," by Edwin Ridley; "Immortality: The Basis of Hope in Browning's 'Saul,'" by Henry T. Carley; "Science: The Yeast of Religion," by Carl Holliday; "The Real Edgar Allan Poe," by Mrs. Evelyn Baker Dodd; "The Religion of Emerson," by Jay William Hudson; "Tolstoi on Shakespeare," by Clough A. Waterfield; "Compensation and Quarrels of Early American Writers," by Will T. Hale; "The Literary Artist," by J. M. Hawley; "A Southern Methodist Poet," by Watson Boone Duncan; "Robert Burns: The Poet of the Heart," by James Ruddick Laughton; "O. Henry: Man and Author," by Mrs. F. L. Townsend. There are also the usual departments of Exegesis, The Editor's Table, Book Reviews, and Devotion.

We have had time thus far to read only the article on Browning's great poem, by Henry T. Carley, which we greatly enjoyed. We are sure, however, that a treat is in store for us as we read the other articles.

The July number of the Review was edited by Curtis B. Haley, assistant to the editor—a man thoroughly qualified to do the work that fell to his lot during the illness and following the death of the lamented Dr. Thomas.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are having a good year on the Escatawpa charge," writes Rev. R. G. Williams, of Escatawpa, Miss.

According to recent statistics, one student out of every four in the State universities of the United States is a Methodist.

Dr. Andrew Sledd, of Emory University, will spend the summer in the city of Prague, doing evangelistic work under the auspices of the Board of Missions.

The School for Sunday school workers at Lake Junaluska, N. C., enrolled 455 students. There were fifteen from the North Mississippi Conference who took regular work.

The Pacific Conference leads in the percentage of collection of Centenary funds, the record being 45.7 per cent. The South Georgia Conference has the lowest record, 22.1 per cent.

The contract for the new church building at Algiers, Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, has been let, and construction will begin at once. This will greatly strengthen Methodism in that strategically important part of New Orleans.

Mrs. F. M. Williams, widow of the late Rev. F. M. Williams, an honored member of the Mississippi Conference, will celebrate her ninetieth birthday on August 11. She makes her home with her daughter in Oak Ridge, Miss.

Our First Church, Columbus, Miss., has had a splendid growth this year under the pastorate of Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb. Sixty-four new members have been received to date. An evangelistic campaign is being planned for this fall.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, this city, assisted Rev. P. O. Lowrey in a meeting on the Indian Bayou charge, Louisiana Conference, last week. The congregations were unusually large, as many as two thousand people being estimated as present at some of the services. There were one hundred additions to the membership of the church. Twenty-five infants were baptized.

Bishop Warren A. Candler has announced that he will not attend the Ecumenical Conference in London.

Dr. C. I. Scofield, editor of the Scofield Reference Bible, died recently at his home in Douglass, L. I.

A note from Rev. W. J. Wood, of Duck Hill, Miss., informs us that all goes well on the Duck Hill charge.

Rev. S. J. Davies, our pastor at Grand Cane, La., is enjoying the air, scenery, people, etc., at Lake Junaluska, N. C.

President Charles F. Thwing, of Western Reserve University, has resigned his position, effective in November. He has served the institution for thirty-one years.

A Massachusetts Congressman has complained that it will take $88,000,000 a year to enforce nation-wide prohibition. It will cost many times that sum not to enforce it.

Dr. C. W. Gordon, widely known as "Ralph Connor," author of "The Sky Pilot" and other novels, was elected moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, held recently in Toronto.

Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League Board, left Nashville on July 22 for San Francisco, where he will take ship for the Orient. He is going abroad in the interest of the work among young people.

Rev. George G. Rice, of Council Bluffs, Ia., claims to be the oldest living graduate of an American college. He was one hundred and one years old on September 22, 1920, and was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1845.

The brethren of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, are enthusiastically at work in their revivals now, and the reports are most encouraging. The presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, has held two meetings himself, and will do in several others.

Rev. A. W. Turner, superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, spent last Sunday in New Orleans. He occupied the pulpit at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church at the morning service and delivered a strong address in the interest of prohibition and law enforcement.

October 27 will be celebrated as the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the arrival of Francis Asbury in America. Those who are interested in observing the day are invited to communicate with Rev. H. K. Carroll, LL.D., 145 Westervelt Avenue, Plainfield, N. J., for suggestions.

The Advocate office greatly enjoyed a call by Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, our pastor at Rayne, La., on Monday morning of this week. He was on his way home from Amite, La., where he had been assisting Rev. Lastie N. Hoffpauir in a ten days' meeting. Gracious results attended the meeting.

We greatly enjoyed a call on Thursday of last week by Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, La., one of the outstanding Methodist laymen of the State. He was in the city to visit his business partner, Mr. W. P. Barnes, who had just undergone a serious operation at the Presbyterian Hospital.

This good news comes from Rev. R. E. Rutledge, Lake, Miss.: "On the 22nd inst., we closed our revival services at Conehatta, which resulted in the addition of ten members to the church, six by baptism and four by vows. The Holy Spirit was present and many were blessed. Brother W. T. Griffin did the preaching."

The permanent address of Rev. R. A. Bozeman, evangelist, is Pleasant Hill, La. Those interested in securing his services may address him at that place. Brother Bozeman has just closed a great meeting at Spring Hill, La., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux. Sixty-two people joined the church, and fifty were baptized.

Rev. and Mrs. Lyman Carley, of Ellisville, Miss., will celebrate their golden wedding on August 9. All their children are planning to spend Sunday, August 7, with them in connection with that happy occasion. The editor of the Advocate will be pardoned for saying that these godly parents have been a blessing beyond measure to all their children.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, the presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, announces that, after consultation with the pastor, the place for holding the third quarterly conference for the Topisaw circuit has been changed from Holmesville to Topisaw, and the time of holding it will be Monday, August 16. This will put the quarterly conference in the midst of the camp meeting.

Recent figures given by Dr. Ernest L. Bogart, professor of economics in the University of Illinois, put the total cost of the World War at $186,000,000,000. These figures include the expenditures of both the Allies and Germany and her allies. Of previous wars, the cost of the Napoleonic wars was $3,070,000,000, of the American Civil War, $7,000,000,000, and of the Franco-Prussian War, $3,210,000,000.

Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, is "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." At the third quarterly conference of the Ellisville charge, held at Mt. Zion, he preached in the morning, partook of the bountiful dinner "on the ground," preached in the afternoon, held the conference, ate watermelons at a nearby farmhouse, and preached again at night at Ellisville. The sermons were all good ones, too, says a competent critic.

We want to call attention to the Standard District Training Schools to be held in the North Mississippi Conference during this month. One will be held at Corinth, August 15-20, and one at Sardis, August 22-27. These schools furnish a magnificent opportunity for Sunday school teachers and workers to secure real training for their work, and we hope they will be largely attended. Those interested in the school at Corinth should write to Rev. J. B. Randolph, Corinth, Miss., and those in the Sardis school to J. W. Kyle, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, died at Augusta, Ark., on July 30, and was buried from the First Methodist Church, Little Rock, Ark. Brother Ramsey was a son of the later Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, of the North Mississippi Conference, and his own early ministry was spent in that Conference. He was 71 years old at the time of his death. He has many relatives and friends in Mississippi, several brothers and sisters living at Durant, where his father is buried. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the loved ones of this devoted servant of the church in this hour of sadness.

After distributing sets of the Inter-Church World surveys to the ministers of the church, the Centenary Commission still has a small supply on hand which it is offering to the membership of the church for the cost of postage—twenty-five cents. These surveys are of special interest to Sunday school superintendents and members of the various missionary committees in the local church. Those desiring them should address the Service Department, Centenary Commission, M. E. Church, South, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn. Orders will be filled in the order in which they are received as long as the supply lasts.

Rev. Frank C. Collins, of Lake Charles, La., is now at Emory University taking work leading to the B. D. degree, which degree he expects to receive after the spring term. He has had considerable experience in the pastorate, and has made a specialty of church music, having received a full course of training while at Emory. He is highly recommended by Mr. J. Douglas Swagerty, voice instructor in Emory University, and by pastors whom he has assisted in meetings. He will have time to assist in two meetings in Louisiana during September, and would be glad to get into communication with those who may desire his services. He may be addressed at Emory University, Ga.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. G. A. Morgan, Jonesboro, La., 3; Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, Columbus, Miss., 6; Miss Addie M. Barnhart, Saline, La., 2; Rev. W. M. Williams, Purvis, Miss., 5

WHY I GO TO CHURCH ON RAINY SABBATHS.

By Frances R. Havergal.

I attend church on rainy Sundays because—

1. God has blessed the Lord's day and hallowed it, making no exceptions for hot or cold or stormy days.

2. I expect my minister to be there. I should be surprised if he were to stay at home on account of the weather.

3. If his hands fall through weakness I shall have great reason to blame myself, unless I sustain him by my prayers and presence.

4. By staying away I may lose the prayers which may bring God's blessing, and the sermon that would have done me great good.

5. My presence is more needed on Sundays when there are few than on those days when the church is crowded.

6. Whatever station I hold in the church, my example must influence others. If I stay away, why may not they?

7. On any important business, rainy weather does not keep me at home, and church attendance is, in God's sight, very important.

8. Among the crowds of pleasure-seekers I see that no weather keeps the delicate woman from the ball, the party, or the concert.

9. Such weather will show me on what foundation my faith is built; it will prove how much I love Christ. True love rarely fails to meet an appointment.

10. Those who stay away from church because it is too warm or too cold or too rainy frequently absent themselves on fair Sundays. I must not take a step in that direction.

11. Though my excuses satisfy myself, they still must undergo God's scrutiny; and they must be well grounded to do that.

12. There is a special promise that where two or three meet together in God's name he will be in the midst of them.

13. An avoidable absence from the church is an infallible evidence of spiritual decay. Disciples first follow Christ at a distance, and then, like Peter, do not know him.

14. My faith is to be shown by my self-denying Christian life, and not by the rise or fall of the thermometer.

15. Such yielding to surmountable difficulties prepares for yielding to those merely imaginary, until thousands never enter a church, and yet think they have a good reason for such neglect.

16. I know not how many more Sundays God may give me, and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sunday in heaven to have slighted my last Sunday on earth.—Exchange.

A WORKMAN WITHOUT SHAME.

It is a splendid thing to be able so to conduct our life and to do our work that when we come to review it we shall not be ashamed of it, even when we make that review in the light of the highest truth we have learned. Our first need is an ideal. Walter Pater deplored "the selfish vulgarity of the finite aims and ends which stand in place of an ideal in most lives now." There is no doubt that when finite aims and ends do take the place of an ideal, life falls into fragments and becomes vulgarized. On the other hand, no life, however humble, can be other than highly dignified when it is in the conscious service of ideal ends.—Christian Work.

MAGGIE A. YARBROUGH, nee Breeden, was born December 25, 1869, near Darlington, P. O., St. Helena Parish, La. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Slaughter, La., in 1887, and was married to H. Q. Yarbrough on April 15, 1886. She took her departure from this world, Sunday morning, March 6, 1921, which was the regular preaching day at her church that she was accustomed to attend. Instead of attending church that morning, she went to heaven and joined that celestial choir. She was truly a good woman and did what she could for her Lord and his church. She was a patient sufferer for more than three years, but died in a triumphant faith. The writer, her pastor, has been inspired by his visits as he prayed with her and heard her feeble voice raised in shouts of praise to her blessed Lord. She leaves a husband, five sons, four daughters, three brothers, and two sisters, besides numerous other relatives and friends to mourn her going. However, they know where to find her if they live even as she lived.

FROM CORINTH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I recently closed a meeting of great spiritual power at Potts Camp, North Mississippi Conference, with Rev. M. A. Burns and his good people, resulting in a number of conversions and additions.

I am now with Pastor Teeter and his people at Hughes, Ark., in a genuine great revival. I have a date to begin with Rev. A. J. Henry at Ebenezer, Miss., on the first Sunday in August.

I have ordered a large gospel tent to be shipped from Atlanta to Sherman, Miss., where I have promised to hold a tent meeting with Brother

There is not anything else open but success for any man who has the culture, broad mind, solid piety, ability, unselfish brotherly kindness, and common sense that J. B. Randolph has. I have some open weeks in September and October, and might arrange a few more tent meeting dates.

"JUNALUSKA JINGLES."

Rev. Walt Holcomb contributes "Junaluska Jingles." Mr. Holcomb says: "Junaluska is the place of magnetic contact. The pastors and the evangelists who meet there August 14-21 will locate the short circuits. Our wires have been crossed a long time. Our carbon covered piston heads have fired separately and not functioned together.

"For years I have had the pleasure of preaching and lecturing at the great Chautauquas, on the same platform with Bryan, Folk, LaFollette, Johnston, Tillman, Hobson, Glenn, and many others among the political satellites along with the ministerial stars like Hillis, Gunsaulus, McIntyre, Hughes, Chapman, Stuart and Jones, and in turn have taken place in the audience and sat at their feet. These points of contact have charged and recharged the intellectual and spiritual batteries where the flame has glowed the longest.

"During my evangelistic career I have profited more by association with world characters than from any other source. While growing more appreciative of the superior help derived from college and seminary days, the impression is strong that our ministers should supplement their training by becoming integral parts of the inspirational conferences at Junaluska.

"While Junaluska is the youngest of the famed and near famed gathering places of Christian culture, it excels all others in sublime stratification. The Christian fellowship is tintured with the ozone from the loftiest mountain peaks.

"The speakers at the Bible and Evangelistic school have not reached the pinnacle of fame; but let us mountain side ministers join them at Junaluska and learn to climb together towards the tip-top, and then we shall be better prepared to serve our torn, tired, and troubled brothers in the crowded valleys below."

Religion must be the great business of our life. We must keep open all the avenues of the soul's approach to God. We must subordinate everything else to the main task of life, the deepening, strengthening and maintaining of our union with our Lord Jesus Christ. And we must jealously watch the growth of character, that outward expression of the inward life, that one possession which will still be ours when the night comes and we can work no more.—C. H. Ridsdale.

How Coca-Cola Resembles Tea

If you could take about one-third of a glass of tea, add two-thirds glass of carbonated water, then remove the tea flavor and add a little lemon juice, phosphoric acid, sugar, caramel and certain flavors in the correct proportion, you would have an almost perfect glass of Coca-Cola.

In fact, Coca-Cola may be fairly described as "a carbonated, flavored counterpart of tea, of approximately one-third the stimulating strength of the average cup of tea."

The following analyses, made and confirmed by the leading chemists throughout America, show the comparative stimulating strength of tea and Coca-Cola stated in terms of the quantity of caffeine contained in each:

Black tea—1 cupful.....	1.54 gr.
(hot) (5 fl. oz.)
Green tea—1 glassful.....	2.02 gr.
(cold) (8 fl. oz., exclusive of ice)
Coca-Cola—1 drink, 8 fl. oz.....	.61 gr.
(prepared with 1 fl. oz. of syrup)

Of all the plants which Nature has provided for man's use and enjoyment, none surpasses tea in its refreshing, wholesome and helpful qualities. This explains its almost universal popularity.

The Coca-Cola Company has issued a booklet giving detailed analysis of its recipe. A copy will be mailed free on request to anyone who is interested. Address:

THE CHURCH THE POLE, NOT THE SERPENT.

I believe that one reason why the church is ineffective in performing the duty devolving upon it, is that the laity has mistaken the pole for the serpent. The Bible says very little about the pole that lifted the serpent up, and the bitten Israelites were not commanded to look at the pole; it was the serpent in which the command centered. Moses commanded the bitten Israelites to look at the serpent and be healed.

The great majority of folks to-day are church admirers, they are good servants of the church, do anything and everything for the enlarging and beautifying of the church. They boast of a large and magnificent building, a large, growing, educated, refined congregation, a live Sunday school, a good Epworth League, an efficient, well-trained choir, and above all a well-organized team to carry out their many drives. These auxiliaries are all well and good as such, but they only contribute to the lifting up the mighty refining power. Jesus said, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." This is the truth, and must be believed. The church that fails to lift up Jesus fails to be the means in God's hands to accomplish His purpose.

HOW WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Escape the Dreaded Sufferings of that Period by Taking Mrs. Block's Advice

Hopkins, Minn. — "During Change of Life I had hot flashes and suffered for two years. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the paper and got good results from taking it. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish this fact as a testimonial." — Mrs. ROBERT BLOCK, Box 542, Hopkins, Minn.

It has been said that not one woman in a thousand passes this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, sinking spells, spots before the eyes, dizzy spells, nervousness, are only a few of the symptoms. Every woman at this age should profit by Mrs. Block's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., about your health. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

TETTERINE

ENDS COMPLEXION WORRIES.

Healing, Antiseptic, Soothing, Fragrant.

60c at your Druggist's, or from The SHUPTRINE CO., SAVANNAH, GA.

Rub-My-Tism is a powerful antiseptic; it kills the poison caused from infected cuts, cures old sores, tetter, etc.

The sermons of the day in many instances are masterpieces, and do credit to the ministers that deliver them, and confer honor upon their Alma Mater, but fail to stir the people. What can be the matter? I will let God's Word answer: "For the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of the soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart." When the Word of God is rightly preached, there must be results. Though all men are liars, God is true. His word must be believed and preached, not from the lips, but from honest hearts.

One of the greatest evidences of the church's weakness is its great effort to find a physical prop. She is trying to do mighty things in these late days in a material way. These big material drives can but be evidences of uneasiness somewhere. Let us remember Gideon and his few. The power was not in the large army, but his power was in God, and his obeying God. Abraham went upon the mountain without a sacrifice, but moved according to God's orders. God does not want money—He wants men filled with the Holy Ghost and fire. Education is power, and wisdom is power, and we should by all means get wisdom, but either without godliness is dangerous to the longevity of the world. And one thing the church should bear in mind is that you can not educate a man into godliness. Christ gave us the best example of this wonderful fact in His instruction to Nicodemus: "Marvel not, Nicodemus, when I say unto you, ye must be born again." I am glad this was said to Nicodemus, and not to the Samaritan woman at the well, Zaccheus, or the publican, for we all would have said, "Surely he needed to be born again," but the very best man in all Jerusalem, a judge of the law, and one of the men at the head of the Jewish church. If the angel were to visit John on the Isle of Patmos again, what would he tell him of the churches of to-day? I thank God that we still have with us the old family altar, and a secret closet in which we can meet and worship God.

LUCK AND DIAMONDS.

The sheerest luck guided the men who discovered certain of the most famous diamond mines in South Africa. Here are the stories of two of them:

One day, fifty years ago, says a British magazine, a poor Boer farmer named Van Wyk, saw one of his children trying to pick out a pebble from the mud walls of his rough house. He looked at it and found it to be a tiny crystal that emitted varicolored lights. Turning to the walls of his house, he saw in them scores of similar pebbles. He picked out a few, showed them to an expert and learned that they were diamonds. The walls of his house were literally incrustated with them. Thus was discovered the famous Dutoitspan mine; which in a single generation was destined to yield tens of millions of dollars' worth of diamonds.

Riding out one day at sundown to bring in his horses, a Boer farmer saw a meerkat scraping earth from its burrow. The earth had an odd look that led the Dutehman to start to fill his handkerchief with it. To his astonishment he presently found in his fingers a three-fourths' carat diamond. He plowed over more of the earth and found more diamonds. He had found the Wesselton mine.—Youth's Companion.

Ask any school boy up to the age of fifteen where he would spend his holidays. Not one in five hundred will say, "In the streets of London," if you give him the option of green fields and running waters. It is, then, a fair presumption that there must be something of the child still in the character of the men or the women whom the country charms in maturer as in dawning life.—Bulwer-Lytton.

Loss of Appetite is commonly gradual; one dish after another is set aside. It is one of the first indications that the system is running down, and there is nothing else so good for it as Hood's Sarsaparilla—the best of all tonics.—Adv.

Teaching Points.

1. Just as the early church had different kinds of workers, so to-day there are men with diversity of gifts.
2. The influence of the Holy Spirit was very definite in those early days; so may it be to-day.
3. All great undertakings should be enterprised only after religious devotions.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past week was spent at Adams Camp Ground. We were teaching "Organization and Administration." We had a most interesting class and have every assurance of much definite good coming from the week's work.

Brother A. S. Oliver, of Summit, was doing good preaching. He was doing some mighty good work.

We had the privilege while there of organizing the young people into an Epworth League. They have an unusually attractive set of young people and I feel that with encouragement they will be reaping from the sowing of the Epworth League in this community for years to come.

Brother Murry is getting along fine with his work and bids fair to have a better report than last year.

While on this trip we had the privilege of spending the night at Summit and of speaking to the Summit people at their prayer meeting service.

This school is doing a good work and is showing signs of progress and development.

We will be pleased to hear from all the schools both as to your success and failures. Let us help you.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you and yours.

Your friend and brother,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,

Sunday School Field Secretary.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Standard Training School for Sunday school teachers will be held at Corinth, August 15-20, for the benefit of our workers in the Corinth District. This is not an institute, it is not a convention, it is not a normal, but a school. Every teacher is a college graduate and has specialized in the subjects each is to teach. Only one course can be taken during the week. Upon the completion of the course the student is awarded a certificate.

The courses and teachers for the Corinth District S. T. S. are as follows:

Beginner Organization, Administration and Worship, Mrs. W. W. Adams.

Primary Organization, Administration and Worship, Miss Lynda Ramey.

Adult Organization, Administration and Methods, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt.

The Pupil, Mrs. J. B. Randolph.

The Teacher's Study of the Life of Christ, Dr. A. W. Mildren.

Organization and Administration of the School, Rev. M. Johnson.

The date of the Sardis District S. T. S. is August 22-27. The place is Sardis. The courses and teachers are the same as for the Corinth school for the first three teachers. The other courses and teachers are as follows:

The Bible and Missions, Rev. E. S. Lewis.

Organization and Administration of the School, Rev. J. Q. Schisler.

This last mentioned course in both schools is for preachers and superintendents.

Arrangements have been made to care for those who attend at cost, about $1 a day.

The Sunday schools are well able to help send at least two people who are willing to study and return home to teach all the teachers. The church for the first time in its history is aiming to give the principles of religious education to all her people. The church will succeed in so far as the people are willing to receive this instruction.

Those who expect to attend the Corinth District School should write to Rev. J. B. Randolph, Director, Corinth, Miss. Those who are planning to attend the Sardis District School should write, Hon. J. W. Kyle, Director, Sardis, Miss.

Not Feeling Much Better.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Notwithstanding much outdoor life, they are little if any stronger now than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well.

What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates an appetite, and makes sleep refreshing. In other words, they should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils, teachers, and others generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which "builds up the whole system."

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, Hood's Pills will give entire satisfaction. It is difficult to conceive of anything better for biliousness or constipation.—Adv.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The opening service of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Meridian District, in session at Scooba, was held at the Methodist Church, Tuesday night, July 12, 1921. The district secretary, Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, presided.

After singing hymn number 272, Mrs. R. W. Hare read the twelfth chapter of Romans, and Miss Lillian Noble led in prayer. The welcome address was made by Mrs. Lathram, of Scooba, the response by Mrs. J. I. Hunnicutt, of Meridian.

Miss Ormond's annual message to the conference was inspiring and helpful. Special music was furnished by Misses Kimbrough, Johnson, and Mrs. Boyd. Miss Lillian Noble gave a most interesting and instructive account of the Scarritt Bible and Training School.

Hymn number 227 was sung. Miss Ormond made announcements, and the closing prayer was made by Mrs. Huntley.

Wednesday, July 13, 9 a.m.

The Devotional service was conducted by Mrs. W. H. Huntley. Election of Secretary was then called for; Mrs. Huntley was elected.

The following Auxiliaries responded to roll call: Sbuuta—Adult and Junior; Waynesboro—Adult and Young People; State Line; Scooba—Adult, Young People, and Junior; Lauderdale; East End Meridian; Watkins Memorial—Woman's and Young Woman's.

Reports were called for, the responses giving evidence of excellent spirit and progress. Delegates from Watkins Memorial, Fifth Avenue Poplar Springs, of Meridian, were recognized and gave good reports.

Mrs. W. L. Huntley, District Secretary of Newton District, and Mrs. J.

SOUTHERN DESK CO., Hickory, N. C.

M. Smith, Conference Superintendent of Young People, were introduced.

Miss Ormond made oral reports for auxiliaries not represented. Value of Social Service work was stressed, and all auxiliaries were urged to report progress in this department to Mrs. Alford.

Hymn number 296 was sung. Mrs. J. M. Smith, in charge of the Bible Study Hour, reading from Matthew 5:1-12, drew excellent spiritual lessons, mainly from the sixth verse.

Miss Ormond then announced committees. Mrs. T. H. King announced that the ladies of Scooba would serve dinner and supper to the members of the conference at the Masonic Hall. Prayer was offered and the benediction pronounced by Rev. W. A. Hays.

Wednesday, 2 p.m.

Mrs. King read Psalm 19 for Scripture lesson, followed by prayer by Rev. W. A. Hays. The minutes of morning session were read and approved.

The Secretary read a letter from Miss Marzie Hall, now at her station in Africa. Her report of her work held particular interest for the conference, bringing it prominently, making it vital.

Miss Ormond discussed needs of Meridian Wesley House, and asked the auxiliaries to be prompt in sending funds on pledges made. Mrs. Dobson, President of Meridian City Mission Board, furnished interesting particulars concerning the work done at the Wesley House.

A vocal duet by the Misses Williams, of Poplar Springs, was sung and all appreciated the music. At this point, a handsome steamer trunk was presented to Miss Lillian Noble on behalf of the District by Miss Ormond.

Next followed Round Table discussion of the work of different Departments—Study and Publicity, Mrs. Olin Green, Meridian; Junior Work, Miss Ormond. Miss Nellie Smiley, from Watkins Memorial Junior, delighted the congregation with a missionary reading. Young People's Work, Mrs. J. M. Smith.

Reports of committees were called for.

Waynesboro was selected for next year's session of the Conference. The service was closed by a thoughtful talk by the Secretary, urging the observance of the Wesley House Drive in September, the Membership Campaign in October, Week of Prayer in November. The standard of excellence was stressed, auxiliaries to move into line, all to attain it. Hymn number 6, followed by prayer by Miss Noble, closed the session.

Wednesday, 8 p.m.

Rain interfered with the program set for this hour.

After devotional services, Miss Noble occupied the time very profitably with an account of her work in China. She anticipated what her work was to be, drawing warm interest towards her mission, in which she herself was so interested. The conference was indeed benefited by the presence of this gifted, spiritual woman. Her intelligent comprehension of the matters on band, and helpful suggestion on occasions, was felt thoroughly. The district is blessed in furnishing such efficient, satisfying Christian young women, of whom Miss Noble is a worthy representative.

This session closed the regular program.

YOUNG PEOPLES' INSTITUTE, MERIDIAN DISTRICT, SCOOPA, MISS.

Thursday, July 14, 1921.

Hymn, "To the Work." Prayer, Rev. T. H. King, pastor. Mrs. J. M. Smith read 1 Peter, 5th chapter, and drew helpful lessons from it. As Superintendent of this Department, Mrs. Smith, presided and moved the conference with her strong presentation and appeal for developing and expanding its usefulness among the young people.

Miss Ella Wayne Ormond explained the duties of the officers of the Young People's Missionary Society. In Round Table discussion following, Mrs. Smith declared the success of this work was dependent upon the Superintendents, and the lack of interest in the young people could often be traced to lack of efficiency and devotion in Superintendents.

Report of the committee on Young People's Work was read and adopted. The Conference sang, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," and went into a consecration service, closing with prayer by Miss Ormond and Mrs. Huntley.

Appropriate resolutions expressive of appreciation by the conference of Scooba's hospitality were adopted viva voce.

A TEACHING MINISTRY.

Teaching, according to the New Testament, is a large part of the work of the Christian minister and that for which the church is organized. It is easy to overlook the need of this instruction. The words of the Master to the Pharisees "They that are whole have no need of a physician," parallels the suggestion that they that are learned have no need of a teacher. Sometimes the minister forgets that people become members of the church in order to be taught in religious things and not because they have no need of learning.

Recently we heard of a person who had joined a church and shortly afterwards remarked to a friend that she thought she had made a mistake. The reason for this remark was that in a zealous exhortation the pastor suggested to the members of the congregation that if they did not do what he told them to do, they had better leave the church. A minister who cannot inspire his members to better living and a desire for Christian knowledge will not be able to drive them to it. If he suggests that they leave the church, he totally misunderstands the functions of his office. He should be thankful for the privilege of teaching any one who is willing to wait on his ministry.—California Christian Advocate.

The knowledge of God grows in every generation, and with larger knowledge there will be larger laws. God said of old: "Thou shalt do no murder." God says now: "Make common what is best." Give by sharing.—Exchange.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND THE CENTENARY.

A feature of the Centenary Movement that promises great things for the church of the future is the part the Sunday schools of Southern Methodism are having in this great enterprise. More than fifty per cent of our Sunday schools made Centenary pledges and to date they have paid on these pledges $690,712. Only a few years ago the entire church did not pay as much for foreign missions during any two-year period as have the Sunday schools since May, 1918. It is an encouraging showing, but the Sunday schools should carry that total to $1,000,000 by January, 1922. It will be done and even more if all of the schools that have made pledges will bring their payments up to date within the next few months.

ON LOVING OUR NEIGHBOR.

When we are admonished to love our neighbor as ourselves the command at once suggests the wisdom and necessity of looking into the question of how after all we really do love ourselves. In putting his admonition in that form the Master evidently intended to put us at once right up against that question. Clearly, if our love for ourselves is not a fine, strong, clean, noble thing, we cannot even understand what it is that Jesus is talking about, much less measure up to the thing which he asks us to do. If I do not think well of myself, if I do not cherish in my own soul the sentiments and ideals that will allow me to think well of myself, there will not be much chance that I will have that esteem and respect for my fellow-man without which anything like real love toward him would be impossible. I cannot love my neighbor except as a noble, unselfish affection is an instinct of my own soul. Evidently Jesus intended to teach us that the task of loving our neighbor, difficult as it is, has to be preceded by the harder task of growing a soul that would make it possible.—Selected.

LLOYD GEORGE AND HYMN SINGING.

"I am thankful," he says, "that I was taught to sing those glorious hymns, which have been the means of much comfort and strength to me, especially during the years of the war. In 1918, when things were in the balance, a fellow-countryman came to me in Downing Street one evening, and asked what I was doing. I said I was singing

"I come through the wilderness I'll wonder at Thy grace."

"When I was at Lucerne recently the Mayor offered to get any music I liked played on the great organ—one of the finest in Europe. I said I would like some Welsh tunes (I always take some when I go from home), and they were gloriously played."—The Christian Guardian.

NEW AND GOOD ROADS.

Wonderful progress is being made in constructing a great network of good roads throughout the country. The needs of commercial interests, of tourist, as well as the farmer, have been consulted in designing this system. It has long been a reproach that American roads were inferior to those of most European countries but this condition of affairs is now being corrected. In 1916 the Government appropriated $75,000,000 to be spent in five installments, the last of which, amounting to $25,000,000, was to be released July 1, 1919, and this has since been increased by an additional $200,000,000. Up to May 1, of this year plans had been approved for building 27,976 miles of road or nine times the distance from New York to San Francisco and of this 13,540 were actually under construction.—Boys' Life for September.

A FINE MEETING AT COALVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our meeting at Coalville closed last Sunday night, with one of the largest congregations in attendance we have ever seen at old Coalville church. The preaching was done entirely by our beloved pastor, Rev. G. W. McLain, with the exception of two services, when Brother McLain invited the pastor of a neighboring Baptist Church to hold the service. When we say Brother McLain did the preaching, we mean preaching. While there was nothing flowery about his language, he preached the plain gospel truths in such terms as could be understood by small children. Time can only tell the amount of good done during this meeting, which lasted for fourteen days. The visible results are these: four were taken into the church on profession of faith, and more than a hundred dedicated their lives to God and promised to pray daily and, where it is convenient, have prayers in their home. Our hearts were made to rejoice when those four little fellows gave their hearts to God, for it is these children that keep us encouraged in our Sunday school work.

We can not fail to make mention of a scene that took place on the last night of the meeting—one that made our cup run over. Two little fellows joined the church. There was another little fellow who had joined just the Sunday before who stood anxiously waiting to give these others the right hand of Christian fellowship. When the proper time came, the way little G. W. Scarboro welcomed little Jeff Reid and this other little fellow whose name I can not recall into the church, was a scene that was calculated to make the angels in heaven rejoice. Away with the idea that children do not know what they are doing when it comes to the things of God!

Pray for us, brethren, that the good seed that was so earnestly sown by our beloved pastor may spring up and bring an abundant harvest into the kingdom of our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Praise his name forever. Amen!

NEWS FROM CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Lumber is being put on the grounds now for the new School of Commerce and a new dining room. Contracts have also been let for two new professors' houses. These buildings will be rushed to completion and ready for the opening of next session, September 14.

The School of Commerce will be thoroughly equipped and prepared to teach Banking, Bookkeeping, Short-hand, Typewriting, and all branches taught in any good business college. This Department will be a great addition to Centenary College, and will mean much to careful parents who hesitate to send their sons off to the average business college.

Think how much it will mean to your boy to have the opportunity to associate with all the college teachers and students while taking his business course. Without losing any time from his Commercial Course, and without extra expense, he gets the benefit of the uplifting religious influences of Centenary College. We can give ALL that a business college can, and a good deal that it cannot—and save you money at the same time!

The Centenary Summer School is now closing a most successful term. The students have made fine records; the teachers are proud of the work done, and Centenary has gained a good reputation for thoroughness and industry.

Quite a number of the brethren have visited us recently. We are always glad to see our ministers, and especially invite them to call when in Shreveport. Don't pass through without visiting your college.

The new catalogue is being mailed out daily. It is receiving many nice compliments. If you want a copy, send us your name and address and it will come to you free for the asking.

R. E. SMITH, Dean.

Christian living does not require the sacrifice of present joy for the sake of eternal life. True Christian living makes eternal life a present possession. Petty worries and anxieties cannot vex the Christian; he is superior to them, for he is living "after the power of an endless life."—John T. Faris.

The loneliness of my soul was meant to drive me to the Friend of my soul. If I walk with God, and talk with God, I can never be utterly desolate. It is the mystic, indwelling Presence that inspires my song. It is the unseen Friend who journeys with me, who relieves the tedium of my way. And so it comes to pass that the soul which is God-possessed never loses its music. In the most wretched and devastating night of loneliness His song shall be with me.—William Gilbert.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE WORLD NEEDS WORKERS.

The prevalence of a food shortage in Russia has brought about a situation which is as tragic in the suffering it entails and in the results it threatens as the famine in China. There is a great difference, however, in the causes that produced the famine in China and those that are now operative in Russia. In China, drouth succeeding drouth for several seasons made the raising of crops impossible; in Russia, while there has been a drouth of unusual severity, the chief causes of the threatened famine are said to be general decadence of agriculture, delay in transportation, and a decrease in general industry of more than ninety per cent as compared with the pre-war period. In the face of revolutionary political experiments, accompanied by ruthless warfare against those who have opposed the parties in power, the peasants seem to have lost interest in productive industry—and people cannot eat without working. It may be that out of the bloody experiences of the past four years the world will learn the lesson of work. If it does not, we cannot hope soon to see a stabilization of the economic forces that have been so badly upset. The ancients were about right when they declared that "Labor conquers all things." Work does not, of course, take the place of moral character—but it is a mighty hard matter to make a good man out of a lazy one. The world needs workers—parasites are plentiful pests.

THE POWER OF MUSIC.

Caruso is dead! That message flashed from Naples on Tuesday of last week sent a wave of sorrow around the world. Caruso was not a captain of industry, or a prince of commerce, or a great political leader, or a great military genius—he was simply a man with a golden voice who had sung his way into the hearts of all classes of people of every nation. With nothing to encourage him but his musical genius, he rose from the obscurity of a simple Italian lad to the highest pinnacle of the mountain of fame through his ability to sing to the hearts of men and women. We know nothing of his technical excellence in his chosen field of art; but there was a vibrant quality in his voice that stirred responsive chords in the hearts of all who heard him—rich and poor, high and low, learned and ignorant. He appealed to the innate sense of beauty and love of harmony that characterize humanity everywhere, and his reward was the affection of multiplied thousands who never saw him. His genius found its expression in operatic compositions that are produced in the great musical centers; what a minister of the Kingdom he might have been if his soul had been aflame with the compelling passion of infinite love!

TOO MUCH SPEED.

When prices were sky-high, all sorts of schemes were proposed to bring them down; when they began to fall, a great cry went up that business was going to smash. It's a funny world! When Henry Ford bought the Toledo, Detroit and Iron-ton Railroad, he shortly thereafter announced a reduction of five cents a hundred on stone from Sibley, Mich., to Detroit; a few days ago he applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to reduce the rate still further—and his request was refused because it is a rule of the Commission that thirty days must elapse before additional reductions can be made. This might be another good place for Mr. Dawes to cut some red tape.

THE COTTON CROP.

According to a recent report from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the cotton acreage of the ten leading cotton producing States, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, and Texas, has been reduced 10,194,000 acres, or 23 per cent. This reduction was brought about, according to the Department, by the unsatisfactory price for last year's product, cotton producers finding themselves unable to cultivate as extensively as formerly with the burden of heavy losses resting upon them. To offset the reduced cotton acreage, there has been a considerable increase in the amount of land devoted to raising corn, wheat, oats, and other foodstuff crops.

MORE FOR TOBACCO THAN FOR TEACHERS.

The statement was made at the meeting of the National Education Association, held in Des Moines, Iowa, early in this month, that the people of the United States spend more annually for tobacco than they do to pay the men and women who instruct their children in the public schools. If the statement be true, and we presume it is, it is simply another illustration of the fact that we not only have not yet learned to "put first things first," but that we regulate our expenditures by appetite rather than by principle. We are willing to pay the price for things we want, but we have not yet learned to want the things we need. When we really want public schools that can do what they ought to do, we will find the money to pay teachers who know how to train them in the things that make for success and happiness. A child worth less than a chew—what a thought!

A BLACK HERO.

"Mrs. Emma Cobb, 30 years old, 2122 D'Abadie Street, and her three small children were saved from death by asphyxiation Tuesday morning by Luke Knight, 16-year-old Negro who rushed into the house and dragged the woman and the children to the sidewalk and then summoned a Charity Hospital ambulance." This item, taken from a daily newspaper of this city, recounts an act of heroism that is none the less heroic because it was performed by a colored boy. This particular deed was accompanied by none of the spectacular and inspiring circumstances that sometimes fire the spirit and appeal so strongly to the emotional nature that valorous acts are performed by the naturally timorous; it was a simple act of bravery in the face of urgent need when there was no time to wait for opportunity and no chance to play to the gallery. Luke Knight's name must be added to the roll of those who do their duty promptly, cheerfully—and thereby gain for themselves a high place in the esteem of their fellow-men.

NO LAW NEEDED.

It seems that the Travelers' Protective Association is determined to wage a campaign against tipping employees of Pullmans, hotels, restaurants, barber shops and the like, and one feature of the campaign is the effort to get Congress to pass laws making tipping illegal. Well, that might help a little; but the traveling public itself could end the evil within a day simply by declining to give tips. Most of us, though, are so much afraid of the scornful look of the lordly porter that we dare not withhold the tax he levies for a service we have already paid extra to have rendered. There are a good many things we could do without laws if we had courage enough to do what we know ought to be done.

KEEP THEM LOCKED UP.

Reckless driving of automobiles is so productive of serious accidents and tragic fatalities that we feel very little sympathy for those who are arrested and put in jail for speeding. In these days when the streets are crowded with vehicular and pedestrian traffic it is nothing short of criminal recklessness for the driver of an automobile to "step on the gas" just to see how fast he can make his machine go. A man may be in a hurry, but no hurry can be so great as to justify endangering the lives of those who are trying to go quietly about their business. Our observation leads us to believe that there is a mania on the part of many drivers just to "get ahead." It is well to lock such speed maniacs up—it would be better to keep them locked up.

THE FOG SHALL LIFT.

By the deep sea sands I silently muse as I list to the ocean's roar,
And mark the delicate rim of lace-foam curling on the shore.
Beyond are the valleys and crested peaks of a boundless, billowy sea,
Though at my feet falls a vale of mist that hides them all from me;
But the mists will drift, and the clouds will rift,
And the curtain of fleecy fog will lift.

Ah! wondrous fair are the castles we build, as we stand on the threshold of life,
And little think we of the cares of the world, with its sorrows, its toils and its strife;
Of its valleys to cross, of its mountains to climb, of the perils that often befall;
'Tis well that a hand all wise has let down a curtain concealing them all;
But the mists will drift, and the clouds will rift,
And the curtain of fleecy fog will lift.

Ah! a time will come, for come it must, when each shall be standing alone
With trembling hand and faltering foot by the shore of a land unknown;
From the ken of man concealed, there lies a region beyond the skies,
And soon shall break that light divine on my wondering, raptured eyes;
For the mists shall drift, and the clouds shall rift,
And the curtain of fleecy fog shall lift.

A STUDY IN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Rev. S. X. Swimme, of Midland, Texas.

The Use, or Purpose, of a Constitution.

The reasons for the adoption of a Constitution by any body, either civil or ecclesiastical, are three:

- First—To state in order the objects for which the body is founded, organized, or instituted;
- Second—To define its powers; and
- Third—To prescribe its limitations.

In considering the application of these principles to the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we naturally proceed to inquire,

First—What was and is the object of the organization of this church? There are two objects:

- (1) The promotion of the Kingdom of God by the teaching of those doctrines which the founders deemed best calculated to "spread Scriptural holiness over" the world.

(This logically calls for the statement of a system of doctrine, with rules for the religious conduct and life of the members; and that is done in the Articles of Religion, the General Rules, and the Ritual of the church.)

(2) The second object sought in the organization of the church was and is:

The formulating of the government of the church in such way as best to promote the growth and stability of the church.

(This brings under consideration the KIND of government which should be chosen: whether a congregational, presbyterial, or episcopal form of government and administration.)

In determining and establishing the FORM of government and administration the fathers chose the episcopal form. This is a federal organization; one in which there is—NOT a federation of many local and independent churches, but—ONE church, connectional in its character and federal in its administration.

For the purposes of administration there of necessity must be a division of powers, therefore, we have the

- (a) Executive; the
- (b) Legislative; and the
- (c) Judicial, departments of church government.

(However, by reason of the interlocking nature of the government, there is more or less of overlapping in these various departments of church government; so that the executive branch becomes under certain circumstances to a limited degree judicial, and, as in the case of the "episcopal veto," in a sense legislative; or, to be more precise, a check upon the legislative branch of the government.)

(a) The executive branch of the government of the church is administered by its ministry: beginning with the bishops, and continuing down through the presiding elder to and including the preacher in charge.

These must of necessity be protected in their functioning; therefore the official status of each, bishops, presiding elders, and preachers in charge, comes under the category of constitutional provisions and protection.

(b) The legislative branch of the government of the church is the General Conference.

Its powers must be defined and its limitation of power definitely prescribed; so that it may not at any time overstep its powers or be interfered with in its rightful procedure.

(Under certain conditions the General Conference is also a judicial body; and these conditions should be specifically defined by the Constitution, with adequate protection in its discharge of these duties.)

Hence, all that deals with the powers and limitations of the General Conference in its functioning either as a legislative or judicial body of necessity is part of the Constitution.

(c) As in the case of the General Conference, so with the Annual Conference, the district conference, the quarterly conference, and the church conference (should this last be retained as part of the machinery of the church). Each is protected in its judicial functioning by provisions of the Constitution.

(d) There is yet another branch of the government of the church: that which is purely administrative. (It can hardly be called a "branch"; more truly it would be called a "duty.") This, however, does not properly fall under the protection of the Constitution, inasmuch as changing conditions sometimes call for modifications of the plans of administration; and as the administration of the purely business affairs of the church does not necessarily involve constitutional principles, it should be governed simply by legislative act.

So, with regard to the procedure of each of these various conferences; what questions shall be asked, what activities shall be pursued, and its forms of procedure generally; none of these can be considered constitutional.

The Constitution, Then,

First—Declares what are the essential doctrines of the church, and makes adequate provision for their protection.

Second—Creates the various branches of the government of the church: (1) Executive; (2) Legislative; (3) Judicial; defines their powers and prescribes their limitations.

The machinery of administration of these various branches (which might by courtesy be called the "Administrative Branch") is in no sense constitutional. It should be in the hands of the legislative branch, with full power to act as the exigencies of new conditions indicate.

The Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

What, then, IS the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?

The Commission, quoting and endorsing Bishop Bascom, says: "THE BOOK OF DISCIPLINE OF THE CHURCH."

The Commission further recommends that all the forms of administration of the Sacraments, and of Ordination, and of Consecration, be restored to the exact form and language used in the Book of Discipline of 1808; suggesting that if it is the pleasure of the church at present to change any of these forms it should be done "in the manner provided for changing the Constitution."

In this proposition the Commission is technically correct, in the opinion of this writer, inasmuch as he believes that the Ritual is part of "Our * * * established standards of doctrine," protected by the First Restrictive Rule. However, as a matter of practical utility, it does not seem necessary, inasmuch as the church has without question accepted the changes that have been made, and would most likely accept and adopt "in the manner provided," etc., all the changes that have been made if such changes were proposed in the "manner provided for the amendment of the Constitution."

One may ask, "If that be the case, then is it not a fact, as the Commission decided, that the entire Book of Discipline is the Constitution of the church?" By no means necessarily. Hear the authority in New Int. Enc., still discussing "Constitution":

"Not infrequently statutes have been passed which have contained both constitutional and ordinary legislation mingled together in one and the same paragraph."

So, then, even if an act shall have been adopted in the "manner provided for the adoption of constitutional changes," that would not make it a part of the Constitution. It is the CHARACTER of the matter, and not THE MANNER OF ITS ADOPTION, which makes it a part of the Constitution. Also, real constitutional amendments, abrogations or other changes of a Constitution of the sort of that of our church do not depend upon the MANNER of their adoption to make them valid (except, of course, those specifically mentioned in the Restrictive Rules); as is stated in the article referred to above on "Constitutions," which further says:

"* * * and the validity of its several provisions is not in the least dependent upon the manner in which the principles which they embody have acquired the form and content of legal authority."

This further supports our contention above that the changes made in the Ritual need not be at this time discarded, nor need they be submitted to the Annual Conferences for ratification.

Reverting, then, to the question,

"What, Then, Is the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?" allowing, for the sake of argument, that the church really has a Constitution, and proceeding on that assumption, the logical conclusion, as this writer sees it, is that it is:

"Such parts of the Book of Discipline as STATE IN ORDER THE PURPOSE FOR WHICH THE CHURCH WAS ORGANIZED, DEFINE ITS POWERS, AND PRESCRIBE ITS LIMITATIONS."

Hence, it is concluded (with all possible deference to and respect for those who may hold a different opinion), that the Constitution of the church consists of

First—THE GENERAL RULES, in the preamble of which is found the only statement of "the purpose for which the church was organized," and in the Rules is stated the manner of life by which that purpose can be attained; and the inward faith upon which that outward life must be founded.

THE RITUAL, which contains statements of belief in the doctrines set forth in the Articles of Religion and expressions of fixed purpose to conform to the principles enunciated in the General Rules, while not a part of the Constitution (always admitting that we really have a Constitution), is protected by one of the Restrictive Rules, and can only be changed in like manner as changes are made in the Constitution, being part of the "standards of doctrine" of the church.

(The Commission has shown conclusively from the records of the proceedings of all the conferences of Methodism—including the early English conferences—that there has been no authoritative deliverance defining any other as "standards of doctrine" of the church.)

Second—Those parts of the Book of Discipline which CREATE THE VARIOUS BRANCHES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CHURCH. In other words, those parts of the Book of Discipline which provide for the various conferences of the church and define their powers; for the ordained ministry of the church, deacons and elders, prescribing their terms of probation and the manner of their election and ordination, and for the office of bishop, defining the qualifications for that office and prescribing the manner of their election and consecration.

Third—Those parts of the Book of Discipline which PRESCRIBE THE LIMITATIONS OF POWER OF THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH OF THE CHURCH (the General Conference), to-wit: The Six Restrictive Rules.

The other parts of the Book of Discipline, which provide for the machinery for the carrying out of the plans of the church, are purely administrative, and can never by any stretch of courtesy be denominated parts of the Constitution.

Conclusion and Recommendation.

The writer is ready to confess frankly that even these conclusions are very unsatisfactory, because if they should be adopted they would leave the church little better off than at present—inasmuch as it leaves the "Constitution" and many of the "statute laws" of the church hopelessly mixed together, with no authoritative deliverance "unscrambling" them.

It would be decidedly better for the church to formulate and adopt a distinct CONSTITUTION—one which states within itself that it is the Constitution of the church—and by legislation bring the other parts of the Book of Discipline to conform to its provisions.

TRAVEL LETTERS FROM DR. AND MRS.

I. W. COOPER.

I.

Dear Dr. Carley: The principle of sharing the good things that come to us is one on which we like to work. We are, therefore, anxious to share with you, with the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, and any readers of the Advocate who may be interested, the pleasures of our trip to the Holy Land, to several European countries, and to the Ecumenical Conference in London. So we shall send you a series of letters which we hope may prove entertaining.

When our great church honored us with an appointment as delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, we immediately made up our minds that since we must cross the waters, we would embrace the opportunity of going early and making a visit to Egypt and the Holy Land. And, after considering various itineraries offered by different companies, we decided to join Tour 36, of the Temple Tours, conducted by Dr. Van Riper, Professor of Modern Languages at Rockford College, Ill. This, by the way, is Dr. Van Riper's sixth trip to Europe and the Holy Land, so he is thoroughly acquainted with the ground over which he is to take us. He is not only competent to direct, but is a very affable, accommodating gentleman, whose very presence assures us of a pleasant time.

Our first surprise was to find that instead of taking a ship which would take us direct to the Mediterranean, we were to take one which would land us at Havre, from which place we would go to Paris and thence to Venice, where we would take another ship for Egypt. This, it seems, is a quicker and less expensive route than the Mediterranean course.

This particular Temple Tour had proved so popular that the tourists numbered forty-nine, and had to be divided into two sections, the second of which is under the management of Mr. Bush, Professor of Romance Languages at Iowa State University. The two sections visit the same places at the same time, but are divided when they go to hotels and take small conveyances. The personnel of the party is very interesting—made up, as it is, very largely of teachers and college students.

About half of our number sailed from Montreal on the 18th of June, while half the crowd took the good ship Rochambeau, at New York, on the same day. The boat proved to be one of the steadiest and most comfortable of the French liners. It is tasteful in its arrangements and cleanly to the last degree. Our only objection to it was that of the 500 cabin passengers, more than three-fourths of whom were French. We heard that language on every side, for all the ship's officers and crew were French. We sometimes had rather funny experiences making our wants known to the steward and stewardess. But, as a whole, we enjoyed this experience with French people and fell quite in love with their soft voices and pleasant manners—not to mention the good French cooking.

Our ship took the northern route, so that most of the time we were in rather cold waters. In fact, one evening we sighted three icebergs on the northern horizon. The cold kept us from spending as many hours a day on deck as we would have liked and as many as the bright skies tempted us to spend. Except for one day and one night of fog and misty rain, we had glorious weather and almost no seasickness aboard.

Our fellow-travelers of the other section, sailing from Montreal, were far less fortunate. They were due to land at Havre shortly after we did, but were delayed for more than two days and nights by fogs and icebergs. One member of the party, who suffered greatly from the cold, declared that the Ancient Mariner now had nothing on him.

After some delay, occasioned by red tape connected with the passports, we took train at Havre for Paris. The day was beautiful and the country through which we passed was enchantingly lovely. One gets from this ride alone an entirely new idea of the industry and orderliness of the French race. Even the hillsides are cultivated to the very top. The fields of different colored grains, fruits, flowers and vegetables—all laid out with mathematical precision—were marvels of beautiful embroidery. We were quite impressed with the number and variety of the flowers, both wild and cultivated. Whole fields of red poppies brightened the way. They seemed to grow everywhere, even on the railroad track—and spread themselves through the fields of grain much like our "tie-vines" grow in Southern fields.

The "different" aspect of familiar things can not fail to make its impression. The houses are quite unlike ours. To begin with, very few dwellings over here are of frame construction, as wood is very scarce throughout these thickly populated countries. One finds even the peasant living in brick and stone houses. The style of architecture, too, is quite unlike ours, for the houses are long and narrow and "straight up and down," with no porches and few and narrow windows. This does not sound beautiful, but the effect is very pleasing, probably due to the tiled or stone roofing and the soft colors of the painter—where any paint is used. These people must be born artists, for even in the dwellings of the poorer classes we find no glaring color—just a soft toning of buff, or gray, or blue-green. Even their "section houses," also the rail cars, are a delight to the eyes.

The scarcity of wood, which I have just mentioned, is responsible for the fact that most of their trees are without any leaves, and all lower branches are trimmed off, every year, for fuel.

We passed through many villages and small little cities, the houses and streets of which were built into the hillside. The age and its historic associations were everywhere. All of these French villages and towns are prospering, for war did not touch them. The country, save to the extent of the loss of men that now were in the army, is the same. There are ten women in the

After this ride from Havre to Paris, one does not wonder that Frenchmen are so patriotic and willing to die for "La Liberte."

In Paris, we had to wait two days for the rest of our party—those who came by way of Montreal—so we had a little while for sight-seeing—not half time enough if we had not been planning to return that way.

Here, too, one is impressed by the symmetry of everything. In America we have nothing to equal the beauty of the architecture of Washington, in the course of a year. The symmetry of comparison with it. It goes all the way to the symmetry of its proportions and the coloring of its stones, black and white. One may stand at the Arc de Triomphe and look in almost any direction, from the top of this wheel, and see wide spreading avenues bordered by beautiful trees and high buildings, which rise to dignified height without offending the skyline with "sky-scrapers."

The Arc de Triomphe is a worthy starting point for a sight-seeing expedition. It is not only an intense admiration for the genius of a race of people who have constructed this wonderful city, but one's admiration for Napoleon is increased ten-fold. We realize, however, that to him is due the plan and symmetry of this great city and that the monument that bears witness for the triumph of France is built more loudly for the possibilities of peace.

There is so much of interest connected with the history of the construction and the use of this great arch that I must not try to begin to write of it. But I must not pass over the impressive and pathetic point of its present use. Just at the entrance of the arch, beneath a marble slab, lie the remains of An Unknown Soldier, who died for France in the recent war. Here thousands come each day and all their tears and floral offerings to the numerous wreaths and tablets sent on the occasion of the anniversary. Here fathers, mothers, sweethearts and wives who have lost their dearest at the hands of the Hun, come to weep, to pray and to wonder if this can be the resting place of him whom they love so dear. It is such sentiment as this that keeps alive the divine spark within us.

To tell of our visit to the Louvre would require too much time and space. It is, of course, the largest and greatest of the world's treasure stores of art. The building which contains this treasure is a worthy one—though a conglomerate of several periods of architecture. The grounds around it are very lovely. Indeed, we think they represent the acme of the landscape gardener's art.

Inside, we walked through an after room of exquisite paintings and sculpture. But the thing which attracted most admiration from our party was not one of the great paintings, but a diamond, in the Hall of Jewels—one which is of immense size and valued at one million dollars. How typically American!

Notre Dame de Paris was very impressive, particularly in its massive, Gothic exterior. We have only served to soften and enrich its interior treasures. While we were there a funeral service was in progress, so we had the rare opportunity of hearing its magnificent organ.

From Notre Dame, we went to a little less interesting Cathedral—Sainte Chapelle, built in the thirteenth century. This chapel is no longer used for public worship but is kept as an example of what is most perfect in Gothic architecture. Its walls are made entirely of wonderful stained glass—with the exception of certain narrow sections which serve as rests for the flying buttresses on the outside. In this chapel, many of the Kings of France used to worship and tradition has woven some interesting stories about it. One unique feature is that the chapel proper, where kings and nobility worshipped, is upstairs—and very narrow, winding stone steps, at that—while an equally spacious assembly room is provided down-stairs for the servant class.

Next to Sainte Chapelle is the Hall of Justice, an impressive modern building which is the seat of the higher French law courts. We saw the hall through which the lawyers promenade as they wait between the hearing of cases. While we were there, one of the lawyers passed through and we were surprised by the dignity of his garb—which is much the same as that worn by our Supreme Judges.

But far more interesting than this modern hall of justice is a neighboring building—La Conciergerie—which contains the Ancient Hall of Justice and the State Prison of former days. Here we saw the door through which over two hundred prisoners, of the nobility, passed on their way to the guillotine; the room where the women had their hair cut off before going to the block, and the shrine, the chair and the room used by Marie Antoinette just before she was beheaded. The whole place seemed to be thrilling and palpitating with the spirit of the past!

Not many blocks from the Conciergerie we came to the famous Latin quarter of Paris. It is picturesque and interesting beyond words, with its narrow streets, strident sounds and century-old buildings. We walked through several of these streets until we came to an old Roman palace—later used as a monastery. Some of the walls are said to be over two thousand years of age—and they look it. It is strange indeed to see this "space of quietness," a block or more in size, surrounded by its wall of iron and masonry, and enclosing trees, shrubbery, fountains and statues as old looking as the walls—to see all this in the midst of busy, populous streets.

Our last visit in Paris was to the Hotel des Invalides, and the Tomb of Napoleon. Hotel des Invalides was originally built as a home for worn-out French soldiers but has long since been converted into a war museum—the greatest of its kind to be found in the world.

Of the hundreds of things seen here, perhaps the most interesting to us were those assembled in the entrance court—the different types of army air-planes and the Armistice Car, a railroad dining-car of typical German make. This car was, on the eleventh of November, 1918, converted into a council chamber, where the leaders of many great nations signed one of the greatest documents in the world's history.

The Tomb of Napoleon has so often been described and pictured that I will not attempt to tell you of it. Its magnificence is so impressive that one can not fail to feel the admiration and even adoration which float in the air, as Frenchmen all around pronounce the great name—Napoleon. Indeed, both the tomb and the museum so deify Napoleon that it makes us wonder if this kind of a memorial is not a menace to the world. Does it not strive too much to immortalize the mortal? Does it not keep alive the spirit of warfare? Does it not indicate that such hero-worship may some day result in a return to an Empire, rather than to the firmer establishment of the Republic?

On our return to the hotel that evening, we were told of the arrival of the rest of our Temple Tour Party, so we had to prepare for an early departure, next morning, for Venice.

Our next letter will describe our trip from Paris to Venice. Sincerely your friends,

I. W. COOPER, and

JANIE DRAKE COOPER.

OUR SUMMER REVIVALS.

When I left Nashville letters by the scores and hundreds were pouring into my office from circuit preachers concerning the revival campaign this summer. I am quite sure that hundreds and even thousands of meetings will be held during the summer according to the Centenary plan. Both at Conway, Arkansas, and at Junaluska, North Carolina, the circuit preachers showed intense interest in the official plan of the church for revivals. At Junaluska, one brother asked: "Has this plan ever been tried in the country?" whereupon more than twenty circuit preachers announced that they had tried it out and found it workable. My native modesty prevents my repeating what these men who have worked it in the country said about the plan. Suffice it to say that hundreds of circuit preachers have tested it out and found it suited to country work. Several thousand will use the plan this summer. We ought to have the greatest revivals in the rural districts this year that we ever had in our history. The time is ripe for it. The pastors want it. God is willing, yea, anxious to bless us with victories.

I am now in mid-ocean having a quiet, uneventful voyage. I am looking forward with great hopes to the work in Czecho-Slovakia. But as absorbing and fascinating as that may be, daily my mind and heart turn back to the Southland in my own country, and a prayer goes up to the Father for such a Pentecostal power to come down upon our pastors and people as will enable them to do wonders in saving lost humanity. My daily prayer is that more people may be brought to Christ this summer than ever were during any other summer in our history. My office is rendering every possible help to the circuit preachers. Whatever we have that will be helpful to them is at their command. Never before was the office so overwhelmed with letters and requests from the rural men for helps, literature, etc., in their work. It is a joy to us to respond to these requests to the best of our ability. By the time this is published, our brethren will be right in the midst of their summer campaign, and I will be (Providence permitting) in the midst of our revival campaign in Czecho-Slovakia. While I am praying for my brethren at home, I sincerely hope they will be praying for me, that I may preach as I ought to preach in Czecho-Slovakia.

These are wonderful times and these unparalleled and fleeting opportunities must not be neglected. My only trouble on the ship is that I am sitting idly here waiting for the ship to reach the other side. What a pity that I could not transfer myself to the field at once! Let all Southern Methodists pray and work for the greatest religious awakening and the greatest gathering of souls we have known in our history. Blessings upon the rural pastors and their helpers in their summer campaigns.

O. E. GODDARD.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: Wondering whether I could find out just what the Louisiana Conference thought of the Christian training of the Methodist children of the State, I took the minutes of the Conference for the last ten years and dug out the following information:

Gain in Conference membership in ten years	9,819
Gain in Sunday school membership in ten years	9,618
Number of Sunday school pupils joining the church in seven years	9,329
Total additions to church on profession of faith in ten years	24,591
Amounts raised by Sunday school in ten years:
For Missions	$ 31,027.00
For Sunday School Day	8,944.00
For Sunday School supplies	115,417.00
For Orphanage and other Specials	179,736.00
Total for all purposes	335,124.00
Amount raised by the Conference in ten years	$4,373,087.00

Of this sum there was given for Sunday school support 9,597.32

Please observe that the net gain in the Conference membership for ten years was practically the same as the number reported as joining the church in seven years. (The minutes of the first three years did not report this item.) You will observe that the total number of additions on profession of faith for ten years was 24,591. Deduct those reported from the Sunday schools and you have left 15,262. How many of these really came through the Sunday schools we do not know, but figuring 85 per cent—a conservative estimate—we have 12,973, leaving only 2,289 from all sources outside of the Sunday schools.

During the ten years, the Sunday schools raised for all purposes $335,124. This sum was used as follows:

For support of local Sunday schools....$115,417.00

For support of General and Conference

Boards (Sunday School Day) 8,944.00

For Missions 31,027.00

For Orphanage and other Specials..... 179,736.00

Or, stated in another way:

For themselves$115,417.00

For others 219,707.00

It is stated that there are many thousand children and young people of Louisiana not in Sunday schools. A large proportion of these should be allotted to Methodism. I make bold to assert that if the church would give her Conference Board $20,000 per year so that we could have permanent, paid, expert workers for every district—workers to go out to the country circuits and stay with the Sunday schools until they were at least as good as the city Sunday schools—the membership of the Conference could be doubled or trebled in the next decade.

I am convinced that our field is with the rural Sunday schools. If the church would really devote herself to the children and young people for the next ten years, many of our problems would be solved.

WM. SHIELDS HOLMES,

Chairman La. Conference Sunday School Board.

THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, AND INTER-RACIAL RELATIONS.

By Mrs. Luke Jolinson, Chairman, Commission on Race Relationships, Woman's Missionary Council.

We hear much these latter days about "Racial Relations" and "Inter-Racial Co-operations." Occasionally some things appear in even our church papers which indicate a misunderstanding as to the traditional position and present attitude and participation of the M. E. Church, South, in these lines of work.

Therefore, we here present a few of the outstanding facts regarding our church and its relation to this matter.

Perhaps no one has more clearly spoken the principle by which our church has long been guided than the late Bishop Galloway in the following words:

"The race problem is no question for small politicians, but for the broad-minded, patriotic statesmen. * * * All our dealings with these people should be in the spirit, and according to the ethics of the Man of Galilee. What is best for them now should be the measure of present duty, leaving the future to His hands who knows the end from the beginning. And we must insist that the Negro has equal opportunity with every American citizen to fulfill in himself the highest purposes of an all-wise and beneficent Providence.

"There is nothing so unprofitable as injustice. There is nothing which will react with such deadly effect upon the character of any people as the practice of wrong and oppression upon the weak and helpless. The denial of opportunities for education to the Negro can be justified upon no good ground. It ignores the teachings of Jesus. It is contrary to the genius and spirit of Christianity. It proposes a solution of the problem which is at variance with the fundamentals of our religion. Nothing could ever justify it, even to our consciences."

These words but reiterate the spirit of Capers, Galloway, Haygood, Walker and others who have followed after them.

Paine College is a demonstration of the policy which was established for us by our fathers. There we find, not only the spirit, but the actual practice of the principles of co-operation between white and colored leaders. Paine College—founded by Southern Methodists and administered by a Board of white and colored people—has from the beginning had a faculty composed of Southern men and women of both the white and Negro races.

Our Board of Education, Board of Missions, and the College of Bishops have proceeded upon this basis. Indeed, our church has been a pioneer in the field of inter-racial co-operation.

The General Conference.

Our last General Conference, through its Committee on Social Service, interpreted these principles for the church in the following words:

"In order to obtain the best constructive results, there must be a real sympathetic co-operation between the leaders of the two races; national, State and neighborhood conferences should be held, at which there should be frank interchange of opinions concerning traveling, housing, educational, moral and religious conditions; followed by an earnest effort to understand the causes of bad feeling and open friction, the prompt and positive condemnation of all acts of injustice by whomsoever committed, whether white or black. In its attitude toward the Negro, the white Christian citizenship of the nations must be dominated by the Scripture teaching, 'We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak.' The thoughtful Christian leaders of the two races must not permit the excesses of radicals and extremists to prevent the development of plans for larger sympathy and closer co-operation between the white people and the Negroes. The religion of Jesus Christ is the only hope, and it can settle this as well as every other question."

Methodist Women.

The policy of co-operation between white and colored women is no new thing for the women of the church. For years the Woman's Missionary Council has followed these principles. Sharing in the co-operative, educational work at Paine College, it has also established in different cities Christian community centers, which are administered by local Boards composed of both white and colored people. It has also led its constituency in local communities in enterprising work with Negro women and children in Mothers' Clubs, Kindergartens, etc.

In line with the policy of the church, a Commission on Race Relationships was established by the Council in its annual session of 1920, with the following objectives:

"The study of the whole question of race relationships, the needs of Negro women and children, methods of co-operation by which better conditions may be brought about, and the bringing of our Methodist women to a better understanding of their task."

In the 1921 session the Council took action that the missionary societies should make a study of the present day situations, "seek a knowledge of the Negro women leaders of the community, and adopt such methods of co-operation with them and with other agencies as would create better community conditions."

So vital did this whole question seem to the Council, that it voluntarily and unanimously appropriated the sum of $5,000 for the use of the Commission in "its work of study, investigation and education in this most difficult and delicate task."

Such, in a word, has been our history. It is not surprising, therefore, when a new racial situation confronted us at the close of the world war, that Southern Methodist men and women were among the most conspicuous leaders in the efforts to apply Christianity to this new racial situation.

Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation.

Perhaps the most outstanding group dealing directly with this present day problem is the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation, which was organized immediately after the close of the war.

This Commission is composed of white Southern men and women and colored men.

It has for its object, co-operation between the white and colored leaders in local communities, with special emphasis on the cultivation of better relations between the races, the prevention of crime, mob violence, race riots and the securing of better living conditions, better educational facilities and justice in the courts for the Negro.

Our Methodist membership on this Commission is: Dr. O. E. Goddard, Secretary Home Department, Board of Missions; Dr. J. H. Reynolds, President Hendrix College, Director Educational Campaign; Dr. H. N. Snyder, President Wofford College, Associate Director Educational Campaign; Dr. Plato Durham, Professor Emory University; Mrs. J. D. Hammond, Author; Hon. E. Marvin Underwood, Attorney, Former Assistant Attorney General, U. S.; Mr. Walter B. Hill, Special Supervisor Georgia Rural Schools; Dr. C. W. Crisler, Pastor, Jackson, Miss.; Dr. Edwin Mims, Professor, Vanderbilt University; Dr. W. D. Weatherford, President, Southern Association of Colleges; Mr. Arch Trawick, Manufacturer, Layman, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. W. W. Alexander, Minister, Y. M. C. A.; Dr. R. E. Blackwell, President, Randolph-Macon College; Mrs. Luke Johnson, Woman's Missionary Council.

This Commission has organized about 800 Committees of both white and Negro men in the counties of the South, who are seeking to maintain peace between the races by the application of justice and good-will.

There are also a number of State Committees composed of both races, church men and women, educators, jurists, public officials, professional and business men, who are standing for justice and righteousness in their several States, and for the support of the laws of both God and man. On all of these Committees Methodist people occupy places of conspicuous leadership.

Federal Council Commission.

The most recent group is the COMMISSION ON NEGRO CHURCHES AND RACE RELATIONS of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which was organized in Washington City on July 12.

Mr. John J. Eagan, a leading manufacturer and Presbyterian layman of Atlanta, Georgia, is the Chairman of this Commission. Mr. Eagan is also the Chairman of the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation and has been since its organization.

The members of our own church who are members of this Federal Council Commission are: Bishop John M. Moore, Dr. O. E. Goddard, Miss Belle Bennett, Dr. R. E. Blackwell, Rev. W. W. Alexander, Dr. Stonewall Anderson, and Mrs. Luke Johnson.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, the President of the Federal Council of Churches, in the organization of this Commission, expressed the opinion that only the Gospel of Christ can heal this world sore of race antagonism and hatred, and that it is a task for the churches. He voiced the sentiment of many by saying that unless the solution of this problem is demonstrated on American soil by the American church, our Gospel message to races on foreign soil will most surely be weakened.

It is the hope of men and women of our denomination that there shall be such a demonstration of the efficacy of the Gospel of our Lord and Master in solving this most difficult human problem in our midst, that all the nations of the earth shall know that "He is God." To that end, let all who name His name, pray and work.

"DEAD-WOOD."

By Ellis Evans.

The church service had come to a close and the minister had gone to the vestibule to shake hands with as many as he could while the people were leaving. A simply dressed young couple tarried until all the others had gone. The minister went up to them, extended a hand and said:

"You are Mr. and Mrs. Blank who united with us last Sunday. I am so glad to see you. I have you down for a call this week. I noticed you at both services last Sunday and at the weekly prayer meeting. I think I saw you also at the special missionary meeting we had on Friday night. I am sure that you have a real interest in the church."

"We should have no right to be members if we did not have a real interest in the church," replied Mr. Blank. "We have waited until now to tell you that we are both at your service in any way in which you can use us. We have had experience as teachers in the Sunday school and in different kinds of church and Sunday school work. We should not be satisfied to be classed with the dead-wood members. We want to help."

The minister gave each of them a hand and said gratefully: "You don't know how glad I am to have you come into the church in that fine spirit. It cheers my heart, especially when there is the note of absolute sincerity in it that there is in your voice. One reason why the church is not functioning to-day as it should and could is because of the overlarge number of its members who must be classed as dead-wood. They are a source of regret to every minister and I sometimes wonder if they do not create a mischievous influence by making it possible for others to cite them as examples of church members who are no more useful and no better than those who remain out of the church. Litter inactivity retards the development of the spiritual life in the same ratio in which your willingness to help in all the work of the church will be sure to strengthen your spiritual life."

There are hundreds of ministers who are fairly hungry and thirsting to hear those four cheery and significant words, "We want to help." It is because this spirit is lacking that some of the churches of the land are in such an unsatisfactory condition and Christian work languishes. No church can ever take on its divinely appointed honor and glory while it has a lot of dead-wood in it. And no church can possibly fail to take on this honor and glory when every member can say in his or her sincere eagerness for service, "I want to help."—Zion's Herald.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS, PASTORS, AND CENTENARY TREASURERS.

My Dear Co-workers: June's report of Conference percentages on payment of Centenary pledges shows our Conference occupying the eighth place in the list, and though we have not as yet received report for July, we fear that the result will not be better.

It is going to require united effort on the part of every one of us to pull up to the place we formerly occupied, and climb still higher, and we are writing to you, urging that each of you do all he can to make our collections for August as much as possible, and help to regain the lost ground. We want to ask each pastor to co-operate with the treasurer, and urge all those who have not paid their pledges to pay them NOW, so that their money may go to further the work of the Centenary.

Now, while the "revival fires" are burning brightly in your church, and every one has "renewed his vows," let's not forget the Centenary, and the wonderful work being done. Rather, let's go to work with renewed zeal and enthusiasm, and collect all our pledges that are due, and make our Conference "go over the top" in the Centenary.

DR. JOHN A. RICE AND HIS BOOK, "THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE LIFE OF TO-DAY."

By Bishop E. D. Mouzon.

As one member of the Board of Trustees of Southern Methodist University, it may not be out of place for me to say a few things in reference to Dr. John A. Rice and his much-discussed book, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day."

I was living in Dallas and was a member of the Executive Committee at the time Dr. Rice was invited to come to the School of Theology as Professor of Old Testament Literature. The Committee knew that Dr. Rice's view of the Old Testament was the view of all Old Testament scholars at the present time. The Committee also knew that Dr. Rice was a man who had been born and brought up in the lap of Methodism, and that he was true to the great doctrines of Christian experience which are the essential doctrines of Methodism. For these reasons Dr. Rice was chosen.

The publication of Dr. Rice's book has brought forth so much heated criticism that it may be worth while for us to consider certain things calmly and carefully.

1. And first of all, let it be remembered that not the Old Testament, but the New Testament is the supreme and final book with Christians.

If the Old Testament had been all-sufficient, there would never have been need for a New Testament. "The Law was given through Moses; grace and truth came through Jesus Christ." "God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his Son." And just as there is a difference between the Old Testament and the New, so also is there a difference in value for religious faith and practice, between books of the Bible. Some parts of the Old Testament, for instance, are of much greater value to the Christian than are other parts. This is illustrated by the way in which we print the New Testament and Psalms in one volume for Christian use. And some of the psalms are worth far more to us than others are. John Wesley, it will be remembered, in his arrangement of the psalms (which we have printed in the back of our hymn-books and use every Sunday), left out entirely the imprecatory psalms, assigning as a reason that it was highly improper to read them in a Christian congregation. Furthermore, when one reads the historical parts of the Old Testament contained, say, in Joshua, Samuel, and Kings, he sees at once that he has before him a record of the religious life of a primitive and only partially educated people, whose ideas of religion and morality were as yet very imperfect. If one does not see this, it can only be because he has not read his Old Testament carefully or because he has failed utterly to understand the true spirit of the religion of the New Testament. One does not understand his Bible at all who imagines that all the books of the Bible are on a dead level, and a passage taken from one book is of equal value with a passage taken from any other book. If the readers of Dr. Rice's book will keep this in mind, some of the things which have shocked them will not shock them any more. For instance, Dr. Rice says that after Samuel had anointed Saul to be king, Saul met a band of prophets and "Saul raved among the prophets." That word "raved" seems to have given great offense. Well, that is certainly what he did. And any man can read about it who will take the time. The Bible is the record of God's progressive revelation in history and in experience; and it is a far cry from King Saul to Isaiah, as it is also a long way from Isaiah to Jesus.

2.—The next thing that I wish to call attention to is the very fine discussion of the work of the Old Testament prophet, and the most illuminating outline of the Messages of the Prophets which one will find in Dr. Rice's book.

The question is raised: "How did the prophet get his message." Dr. Rice mentions three answers which have been given: First, the naturalistic, which he instantly rejects; next, that the prophet had little connection with the times in which he lived, but that his work was chiefly to foretell events—this he also rejects. The third answer, which is the answer Dr. Rice makes, is as follows:

"The prophet was a man in close touch with the times, thoroughly conversant with the principles underlying the moral order of the world, alert to spiritual currents, intimate above all with God, who revealed Himself personally to him. The reaction of the Divine personality to the human gave a new viewpoint, a new insight, a new outlook. The prophet stands between God and his age." This, I may add, I consider a very fine putting of the matter. Such was the work of the prophet, and we will never understand the prophecies of the Old Testament until we get this viewpoint. How long will we go on having our own notions of the Bible? Why will we not go to the Bible to find out what it really is?

I earnestly recommend to our preachers that they make a careful study of the messages of the prophets with Dr. Rice's book in one hand and their Bible in the other. I do not know where, in so short a compass, one will find so much important information packed, as in Dr. Rice's brief discussion of the prophetic books of the Old Testament.

3. I will take time to mention only one other important thing. Dr. Rice's study of "Apocalypses" has special value just at this time.

Every great war has brought about a revival of premillarianism. But modern premillarianism is the worst form of that doctrine that the world has ever seen. It is a heresy that strikes at the very heart of Christianity. It might find a place in some forms of Calvinism, but is utterly out of harmony with Methodism. Its conception of God is out of harmony with the teachings of Christ; its doctrine of the Kingdom of God is contrary to the New Testament doctrine; its teaching of salvation by force is subversive of the spiritual principles of the gospel; its doctrine of the church contradicts St. Paul. It glorifies Judaism, and looks forward to a time when all the world shall be under the sway of the Jesus and of the Jewish religion. Its use of the Old Testament is contrary both to reason and to the plain sense of the Scriptures. As everybody knows, premillarians spend much time reading the Book of Daniel, and using arithmetic. A study of the "Apocalypses" of the Old Testament as presented here in Dr. Rice's volume, will greatly assist one in coming to a proper understanding of the purpose of these writings, and will cure most effectively the nervous disorder which has upset certain well intentioned people.

4. No reference has been made in this paper to the attempt of scholars to dissect the historical documents of the Old Testament and assign different parts to different sources. In this field Dr. Rice is just going over ground which has been worked by others. I do not pretend to be scholar enough to pass judgment on many of these things. Some of them are self-evident; some of them are not so evident; and some of them do not commend themselves to my judgment. But none of them alarm me, as they do not touch the foundations of Christian faith. Matters of science must be left to the scientists; matters of scholarship must be left to the technical scholars. But matters vital to Christian faith are matters open to all. In such things the saints have a right to judge the critics. Here are some things that are vital and fundamental: The Old Testament contains a revelation from God, preparatory to and leading up to the revelation in Christ; God is incarnate in Christ; Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and rose again, and ever liveth; salvation is through faith in Him; and Christ came, "not to destroy the law and the prophets," but, "to fulfill"—and as every one knows who reads his Greek Testament, this word might more properly be translated, "to fill full." Christ fulfills the Old Testament as the day fulfills the dawn, as the fruit fulfills the flower.

I remember a passage from an address made before the Ecumenical Conference in London twenty years ago by that fine scholar, Bishop Hoss. It is as follows:

"Is it too marsh a judgment to affirm that the greatest enemies of a conservative orthodoxy are those belated dogmatists who still cling with a devout stupidity to the very letter of the creeds and symbols of other days? The Methodist who insists on measuring everything in heaven and earth by Watson's 'Institutes' or Wesley's sermons is a pestilent breeder of heresy. We are living in the twentieth century; and unless we wish to incur the just suspicion of idiocy, we must gather and use all that is offered us by the master workmen who are toiling with infinite diligence in this end of the ages to find out whatever may be discovered concerning the mind and purpose of God toward our lost world."

There are two additional remarks which I wish to make, and I put them last for the sake of emphasis:

The first is this: There are some things in Dr. Rice's book which I wish he had not said. I hope he will leave them out of future editions of the book, and I hope he will be careful about saying such things to immature students who are not able to judge of such things for themselves.

The other remark is this: It should not be overlooked that this attack on Dr. Rice and Southern Methodist University began with certain well-known Baptists whose chief interest just now is in looking after other people's business. We should let them know that we are well able to attend to our own affairs. We Methodists are not in the habit of trying to manage the affairs of the Baptist Church.

THE LIFE STORY OF A FIVE-DOLLAR GOLD PIECE.

An Unusual Stewardship Sermon.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes tells the "life story" of a five-dollar gold piece once given him by a good Methodist woman at Shrewsbury, Mass.

"Where did you get this coin?" the woman was asked.

"From the First National Bank at Worcester, Mass.," was the reply.

An official of the bank upon being asked where the institution secured the gold, gave the information that it had arrived there as part of "Consignment 984" from the San Francisco Mint.

The director of the mint was communicated with and asked the same question, "Where did you get this gold?" He replied that the bullion from which it was made at the mint in San Francisco was received in 1910 from the Grass Valley Mine, California.

In search for the source of this gold, let us go to Grass Valley. Here we find Noah James, manager of the mine.

"Mr. James, where did you get the bullion of 1910?" we ask.

He leads us down, down a measureless distance into the bowels of the earth. And he points to a glistening vein. "About here we mined the 1910 bullion," he says.

Then in the dimness, in the silence, in this secret retreat of the earth, we whisper the question, "O mine—O mine that was aged before man ever trod the earth—whence came your wealth of gold?"

To the reverent heart there can come but one answer out of the deep interior of the earth—"From God."

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth."

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein."

"The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of Hosts."

"Draw, if you can, the mystic line
Severing rightly His from thine,
Which is human, which divine."

The Home Circle

TWO LITTLE MEN.

Worry and Fret were two little men
That knocked at my door again and again.
"O, pray let us in but to tarry a night;
And we will be off with the dawning of light."
At last, moved to pity, I opened the door
To shelter these travelers, hungry and poor;
But when on the morrow I bade them "Adieu,"
They said, quite unmoved: "We'll tarry with you."
And, deaf to entreaty and callous to threat,
These troublesome guests abide with me yet.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE OLD BARN.

There were many things besides the pair of wheels, the box, and the bean pole, in a certain old New England barn. There were the tools, the harness, and the work-benches, and dozens of farming implements; but this is a story of the wheels, the box, and the bean pole.

The barn was no longer used to shelter horses. The man of the house was too old to do farm work, but he pottered round the place and took care of the garden and kept everything in order.

One still moonlight night the objects in the silent old barn suddenly began to talk to one another.

"I wish you wouldn't lean against us so hard," said the pair of wheels crossly to a ladder. "We were not built strong enough to stand a very great weight."

"Is that so?" said the ladder in surprise. "Then what were you built for, may I ask?"

"We were part of a baby-carriage," one of the wheels replied, "and a very beautiful carriage it was, too—of fine willow and lined with lovely green velvet. When the baby went riding, dressed in his best, every one stared at us. But the carriage wore out, and then we were taken off and put out here"—he sniffed—"with this crowd of common things."

"That sounds very fine," remarked a box, "but you haven't traveled very much. Look at me: I came all the way from Cuba with a load of oranges."

Since none of the objects in the barn had ever heard of Cuba they kept still for a moment, trying to think of something to say. Far over in a dim corner stood a bean pole, rough and untrimmed just as it had been cut in the woods. There had been many other bean poles in that corner, but from time to time the man had come in and carried them away for use in his garden.

"How fine to be beautiful and to travel!" the bean pole murmured timidly.

The box gave a squeaky laugh. "It's safe to say, bean pole, that you will never travel much," he answered. "No farther than the garden yonder."

But the bean pole made no reply.

The next day a little city boy came to stay at the old house. He had had few playmates in his short life and even fewer playthings. When he caught sight of the big two-horse wagon in the outer shed he gave a sigh.

"I wish I had a wagon," he said.

That set the man to thinking. Why should not the boy have a wagon? He went to the barn and looked round. The boy watched him.

"There might be the making of a wagon here," the man said to himself.

The boy, overhearing him, gave a skip and a jump.

The wheels were chosen first, as they were ever afterwards proud to remember.

Then the man looked at the box. "With a little paint," he said, "that would be fine."

The box thought privately that it was fine just as it was, all covered with pictures of orange groves; but it said nothing.

"Take this to the pump and scrape off the pictures," the man said. So the boy took the box away and scraped and scraped until it was entirely bare. Then he stood it beside the wheels.

"We shall need a handle next," said the man.

"And here it is." With that he walked over to the corner and picked up the bean pole.

"My!" said the wheels in surprise. "What on earth can he do with the bean pole?"

Even the boy looked puzzled. "Isn't that too rough for a handle?" he asked.

"Rough things are sometimes fine inside," said the man.

He fastened the bean pole in a vise and began to draw a sharp spoke-shave along the length of it. The boy, watching eagerly, saw the bark curl up and drop to the floor in little coils.

Round and round, from one end to the other, the man drew the spoke-shave. Now and then he passed his thumb slowly over the surface of the pole. "There mustn't be even a sliver left," he said.

Even after the wood looked white and smooth he was not satisfied. He brought some sandpaper from the house and smoothed and smoothed the pole until it shone and glistened. When he was done no one would have guessed that the slim white handle had once been a bean pole.

Afterwards the man found some bolts and fastened the wheels and the handle to the box. At the end of the handle he fastened a little cross-piece of wood.

"It is a real, real wagon!" cried the boy.

"Wait a minute," the man said. "The handle is perfect, but the box and the wheels need something more." Then he varnished the box and the spokes of the wheels and set the wagon in a corner to dry. When it was quite dry the boy drew it up and down all over the place.

"What a beautiful handle!" remarked some one, meeting him.

"It was just a common bean pole once," the boy replied.

"Well," said the wheels to the box, as the wagon moved on, "you never can tell what may happen to people in this world."—Eleanor Fairchild Pease, in The Youth's Companion.

"LOOKING INDIANS."

Aunt Alice dropped a stickpin in the hall the other day and had hard work to find it. She hunted high and low, and even went down on her hands and knees and looked for it with a candle, but it was of no use. The pin was very small and insignificant, its value being rather that of association than of size or brilliancy. Finally, Aunt Alice, after a last shake of the rugs, was about to give up the search, when her little nephew, Harold, who lives in the West, happened to come downstairs.

"Why don't you 'look Indian' for it?" he asked, when he knew what the trouble was.

And before Aunt Alice quite realized what was meant, he was down on the floor, his head and body lying sidewise, and just as nearly level with the carpet as possible. In this position his eyes quickly took in the whole floor surface.

"I have it!" he shouted; and, sure enough, right in the middle of the floor, in so plain a place that the wonder was that it had escaped notice, was the missing stickpin. Harold then explained that "looking Indian" meant putting the head level with the ground in order to catch sight of the smallest object between one's self and the horizon.

"The Indians and plainsmen always do it," he said, "that is why they can always tell when any one or anything is coming. But it works just as well indoors as out on the plains; and when we lose anything in our home we just 'look Indian' and find it right off."—Sunday School Messenger.

A CHALLENGE TO THE CHURCH.

We have previously commented on the fact that there seems to be now a response to the appeals of the gospel such as we have not seen before. Reports from revival meetings being held continue to show that unusually large numbers of people are attending the services, and that many members are being added to the church. It is a situation that is altogether inspiring; yet it constitutes a challenge to the church that we cannot afford to pass by.

If the people are ready to hear the gospel and to respond to it, certainly the church cannot do less than carry to them the message of salvation. It may be that we are on the eve of one of those great revival periods which have blessed the church throughout its history. The world, after long and weary years of warfare and the consequent disruption of the normal order of things, may be yearning after those spiritual verities that along can satisfy the longings of heart and soul. That there is a kind of spiritual unrest, no observant person can deny, and that the gospel will allay that unrest if it can be made operative in the life of the people is manifest. If this be the case, now is the time to press our evangelistic work.

In all our charges there should be diligent effort to reach the unsaved through the regular service of the church, through special services, and through personal work. Not to do everything possible to extend the Kingdom at a time like this is to be blind to an opportunity which does not often come, and to ignore a challenge that ought to stir us to such evangelistic activity as we have not known before. Let us seek the Lord while he may be found and call upon him while he is near.

BISHOP MOUZON REPLIES TO DR. JOY.

In the Advocate of July 23, under the caption, "Unification From a Northern Editor's View Point," we gave, on this page, a recent statement by Dr. James R. Joy, editor of the New York Christian Advocate. That our readers may have an authoritative statement from the side of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we give here with the reply of Bishop Mouzon, chairman of the Southern Commission, to Dr. Joy's statement.

Bishop Mouzon's Reply.

Dr. James R. Joy, Editor Christian Advocate, New York.

Dear Dr. Joy: I note that in your editorial entitled "Unification—At a Standstill" you quote my letter to Dr. Harris, Secretary of your Commission, in which I say that it is the opinion of the Southern commissioners that we are without authority to do anything more until we hear from our General Conference which meets in 1922. You say you "regret that any technical consideration deters the Southern commissioners from making possible any further contacts on the subject."

Let me assure you that "technical considerations" do not have any weight with us in this matter. May I be permitted briefly to state the facts as I see them?

1. For many years representatives of the two churches had been meeting and exploring the field, seeking to find a way by which the two Methodisms might get together.

2. At last the Joint Commission on Federation, meeting in Chattanooga in May, 1911, prepared a plan which commended itself to large numbers in both churches.

3. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, meeting in Oklahoma City in May, 1914, approved the Chattanooga plan as "feasible and desirable," and invited the Methodist Episcopal Church to consider the unification of American Methodism on the basis of that plan.

4. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, meeting in Saratoga Springs in 1916, approved the Chattanooga plan as "feasible and desirable," and ordered the appointment of a commission to take the matter up with the commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the basis of the "Chattanooga plan."

5. It should be added that in giving approval to this "plan" the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, made certain "recommendations," and so did the Methodist Episcopal Church.

6. After three years' discussion, and after many meetings, the Joint Commission, representing the two Methodisms, did agree upon a plan to be submitted to the two General Conferences, and this plan has been submitted to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

7. We understand that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church did not take any direct action touching the report submitted by the Joint Commission, but appointed a new commission, with personnel largely changed, and with new and different instructions from those given the former commission.

8. The commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have as yet had no opportunity to submit their report to their General Conference and must wait another year before that report can be submitted. It is, therefore, no merely "technical consideration" which leads the Southern commissioners to feel that they are without authority to meet a new and different commission with new and different instructions.

We must, therefore, wait until we hear from our General Conference. I suppose it is known that the large majority of Southern commissioners favored the report adopted at Louisville. I do not say that they approved every item in that report. To speak only for myself, I did not. I knew perfectly well that some of the things said against that plan by my colleagues were well founded. But I and many of those associated with me were so deeply interested in Methodist union that we were willing to take some risk—or, to use Christian language, to walk by faith. We believed that many rough places would be ironed out when once we got together.

May I add that I hope my brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will not take too seriously the strange silence of your bishops and your church press since the Des Moines General Conference? And I hope also that the new commission appointed by your recent General Conference will follow the suggestion contained in your editorial of July 14: "They should meet, become acquainted with one another, take a serious look at the great problem, and determine on a course of action."

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS HEADQUARTERS.

Since we recently suggested on this page the desirability of a statement from the Board of Missions concerning the investment of a large amount of money in a building to be used as headquarters for the Board in Nashville, we take pleasure in reproducing such statement, furnished us by Dr. John S. Chadwick. It is as follows:

The Statement.

(Knowing that our people will wish to have some definite information concerning the purchase by the Board of Missions of an office building in Nashville, I secured from an authoritative source the following statement which sets forth all the facts in the case.—John S. Chadwick, Publicity Secretary, Missionary Centenary.)

The Board of Missions has just purchased a building for its use as headquarters. This meets a need which has long been realized and has recently grown very acute. The Board of Missions has had, like the other Boards, free use of rooms in the Publishing House all these years. The growth of all the Boards, notably the Sunday School and Educational Boards, has made it necessary for a large part of the Board of Missions' personnel to move their quarters. This necessitated renting a building at a high rate of rental, and this is in addition to the rent being paid by the Centenary Commission for office rent.

The Centenary Commission provided for this need in its askings, and in August, 1919, the Board of Missions appointed a building committee consisting of W. F. McMurray, W. B. Beauchamp, W. W. Pinson, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, and A. B. Ransom. This Committee had under consideration from almost every conceivable angle the providing of a home for the Board.

The building purchased is a modern steel fire-proof structure facing 127 feet on Church Street and 150 on Polk Avenue, and is three stories high. This lot sold in 1903 for $60,000 and in 1913 sold for $200,000. Being in the heart of the city and on the leading business street, it is entirely occupied so that the committee was able to purchase not only a suitable building but a commercial going concern. There are five stores on the first floor with possibilities for a sixth in the lobby. The purchase of this building enabled the Board to secure a property which was built during the period of cheap materials and labor. It would cost now to build from the ground 40 per cent more than when it was erected five years ago. Competent judges estimate it would now cost $500,000 to reproduce.

The price paid is $385,000 on good and easy terms, with a cash payment of only $50,000. The income from rent is now $49,038 per annum. At this rate the building will yield 8 per cent net allowing for depreciation of building, which it is highly probable will be more than offset by increase in the value of the lot. It is the largest lot occupied by an office building in the city of Nashville.

Plans have been secured for three additional stories, two of which will be occupied by the offices of the Board of Missions, leaving a fourth additional story for rent. This furnishes up-to-date and carefully planned offices for the Board at an actual cost of about $200,000 or less. It is the belief of the committee that the four stories which are to be rented will pay a reasonable income on the total investment and leave the Mission Board its rooms free of cost and upkeep.

With deferred payments at 5½ per cent on long time, the building is now yielding more than satisfactory income on the amount of cash which the Board has invested. It is estimated that the additional stories will cost something over $200,000, making the total amount of the building around $600,000, and when completed it will be one of the handsomest and best located office buildings in the city.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Board of Control of the Memorial Home held a meeting in New Orleans on Thursday of last week. Several representatives from the three supporting Conferences were present.

Rev. W. L. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, has been given a vacation during the month of August by his appreciative congregation. He will spend the month with his family on the Seashore Camp Grounds.

We are grateful to Rev. W. J. Porter, Ruston, La., for two subscriptions, and to Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., for three subscriptions to the Advocate.

Through the kindness of Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of First Church, this city, in assisting with the work of the office, the editor was able to spend a few days this week with his father and mother at Ellisville, Miss.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., accompanied by his father, has recently been on a visit to Davis, Oklahoma. In the "Big Brother," the official organ of the "Big Brothers' Class," he gives an interesting account of his visit.

Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., has given the pastor, Rev. J. T. Leggett, a vacation through the present month. Rev. W. W. Graves, the presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, is providing for the services of the church during the absence of Brother Leggett.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer filled the pulpit at Louisiana Avenue Church on the last Sunday in July, the pastor, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, being engaged in the Memorial Home campaign in the Brookhaven District. He reported preaching to a fine congregation of attentive listeners.

The Bluff Creek (La.) Camp Meeting will be held this year, August 12 to 21 inclusive. The Editor acknowledges with pleasure an invitation from the presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Rev. J. W. Lee, to attend this meeting and "to eat fried chicken, preach some, rest some and enjoy the good fellowship."

The recent revival meeting at Pontotoc, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. H. P. Lewis, was assisted by his brothers, Rev. Osmond S. Lewis and Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, was one of the best held in that city in a long time. Many were happily converted, the whole church was revived, one man answered the call to the ministry, and several consecrated themselves to God for life service.

Rev. J. B. Grambling, who is devoting the most of his time to the work of the Epworth League in the Louisiana Conference, called at the Advocate office Monday and the Editor regrets not seeing him. Brother Grambling was with the League of First Church Sunday night. He also attended the meeting of the Union Epworth League of the city, held in First Church on Tuesday night.

A revival meeting, which closed July 31, at Walnut Grove church in Mississippi, had fine results. Eleven persons, a number of whom were choice young people of the community, were added to the church upon profession of faith, while the church and whole community were greatly blessed by the services. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Price, was ably assisted in the meeting by Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, of Biloxi.

We take the liberty of quoting a sentence from the letter of Dr. J. Reese Lin, of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate: "I always pay this subscription cheerfully. I am in favor of including the Advocate in the budget of every church. It is indispensable to every one who seeks to keep up with the work of Methodism in Mississippi and Louisiana, and with the general plans and enterprises of the church at large."

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He was en route to Lake Junaluska, N. C., to attend a meeting of the presidents of Conference Boards of Missions. Brother Holmes and his family are planning to make a trip to Denver, Colo., in their Ford, leaving Lake Charles about August 15 and being absent about three weeks. Mr. Seamon Mayo is also planning to make the trip in the same way at the same time.

We are beginning this week the publication of a series of travel letters by Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper, which we are sure will be of much interest to our readers. They are collaborating in the writing, so we may be sure that all points of interest will be thoroughly covered. They expect to reach London for the Ecumenical Conference on August 28. Their address in London will be the Bonnington Hotel, South Hampton Row, where they will be glad to receive letters from their friends.

FROM REV. H. M. ELLIS.

Please announce that, at the request of the pastor, the date and place for holding the third quarterly conference of South and East McComb has been changed from Sunday, August 28, at Bethany, to East McComb, Thursday night, August 25, at 8 o'clock. I will also preach at East McComb Sunday night, August 28.

I am holding a meeting at Ebenezer, on the Adams circuit, this week. The two services to-day were fine and the start is promising. I was pastor on Adams circuit in 1890 and 1891, and some of them haven't gotten over it yet. We had a great audience out to-day.

Come to see me whenever you can—a welcome any time.

Best wishes and sincerest regards.

Most cordially,

H. M. ELLIS.

Brookhaven, Miss., August 7.

FROM REV. W. W. MOORE.

We organized the Back Bay Methodist Church yesterday with twenty-one members, five of them young men. We have sixty enrolled in the Sunday school. Seventy-five dollars will finish our church and pay all indebtedness on our building. Brethren, you have helped us nobly; help us finish the job.

ON THE SIN OF FUSSING.

The dictionary describes this sin as consisting in showing an uncalled for and annoying display of activity or energy about trivial matters. That seems in the first place to set it down as a wasteful performance. Time, thought and worry are given to things which do not at all merit them.

Well, that is a rather serious affair, to waste the vital forces of life over things which do not matter much. After all, we only have so much nerve and energy and opportunity, and life is full of worthwhile things that need doing, and it takes about our best to make the days count for anything like what they should. The fusser, by his, wrong emphasis and his worry over trifles, frays life out over unimportant things, and makes fine achievement impossible.

And then, as our dictionary reminds us, fussing is annoying as well as wasteful. Besides wearing out his own nerves over things that do not count, the fusser gets on other people's nerves as well. He is an exasperating, tiresome kind of individual and, if his fault reaches serious proportions, a real nuisance to his friends and intimates.

And no man ought to allow himself to become that, for it is a serious matter to add anything to the exasperations and annoyances of life. The most of us have enough to worry us and to try our patience, and find poise and quietness a difficult enough achievement, without having to look at some exasperating fusser laboriously and ostentatiously engaged in doing nothing.

And then one of the most serious sides of the sin of fussing lies in the fact that the fusser, because he is so taken up with little things, inevitably tends to grow a little soul. One of the worst things possible that can happen to any man is to come to the place where he cannot see any of the fine, big, important things of life because his eyes and his heart are so full of the things that do not matter much. It is truly a tragic thing to see a man so busy fussing over little things that the things that are really important do not exist for him.—Christian Guardian.

REBUILDING CIVILIZATION.

By Dr. James I. Vance, Nashville, Tenn.

The only figure on the horizon big enough for world leadership is Jesus Christ. His humanity is spacious enough for all nations and races to find themselves in Him. I am glad I am a minister because the Savior I proclaim is certain to be increasingly the world's hero.

If civilization is rebuilt, it must be by religion. The Gospel is the only thing that will meet the situation to-day. Old restraints have broken down. The world must be held by new attachments, and these must be of a kind that will make men friends. Force has played out. War has fired its last shot and missed the mark. What the world needs to-day is good will. It takes the Gospel to make men brothers. Because my message is the only hope of the new world, I am glad I am a preacher.

But society, at last, is what the individual makes it. Society can never be bigger than the social units of which it is composed. If we are to have a better world, better legislation, better trade, better industry, better labor conditions, better race relations, we must have better people. The human heart must be changed.

I am glad I am a minister because the message I proclaim is an emancipator. It is the truth that makes men free. Character is a better dividend than money.

I am glad I am a minister because it keeps me optimistic. My business is to make men hope, and I get a reaction in my own soul that at midnight seems to shout: "The morning cometh!" I am in the cheering up business, and my work secures to me a place in the sun. I can tell men that God is on the throne, and that because He is, evil is doomed, and right and justice decreed to win.

Because I believe that Jesus is the Son of man, humanity's Hero, because I believe the Gospel can meet and solve all our problems and save the world, because I know it can regenerate the individual and make men free, because it is my own hope for time and eternity, I would not quit preaching to change places with any man that lives.—Exchange.

A PSALM.

By Henry Van Dyke

O Thou whose boundless love bestows
The joy of life, the hope of heaven;
Thou whose uncharted mercy flows
O'er all the blessings thou has given;
Thou by whose light alone we see;
Thou by whose truth our souls set free
Are made imperishably strong—
Hear thou the solemn music of our song.

Grant us the knowledge that we need
To solve the question of the mind;
Light thou our candle while we read
And keep our hearts from going blind.
Enlarge our visions to behold
The wonders thou has wrought of old;
Reveal thyself in every law,
And gild the towers of truth with holy awe.

Be thou our strength when war's wild gust
Rages round us, loud and fierce;
Confirm our souls and let us trust,
Be like a wall that none can pierce;
Give us the courage that prevails,
The steady faith that never fails,
Help us to stand in every fight
Firm as a fortress to defend the right.

O God, make of us what thou wilt;
Guide thou our labor of our hand.
Let all our work be surely built
As thou, the architect, hast planned;
But whatsoever thy power shall make
Of these frail lives, do not forsake
Thy dwelling. Let thy presence rest
Forever in the temple of our breast.

In early morning of March 11, 1921, Mrs. AUGUSTA JANE GOFF went to rest, being 73 years and 20 days of age. Aunt Gusta, as we all knew her, joined the church at Old Salem Camp Ground on the second Sunday in October, 1862. She was married to W. N. Goff on October 30, 1872. Though a great sufferer from a cancer on the face for many years, Aunt Gusta was always cheerful. She loved the church and was an inspiration to her pastor. She leaves four daughters, three sons, a number of grandchildren, and several brothers and sisters, together with many dear friends to mourn her going, but all hope to meet her again some sweet day. Assisted by Rev. Van Landrum, we laid her body in Big Point cemetery "till we meet again." May the Lord bless all her loved ones. Her pastor,

FROM TYLERTOWN, MISS.

We closed recently at Tylertown, Miss., a most encouraging revival meeting. The preaching, which was done by Rev. H. M. Ellis, was earnest, forceful and deeply spiritual, and made a splendid impression.

In spite of the very warm weather, the attendance was large, all the other denominations heartily co-operating with us, and the result of the meeting was a great spiritual uplift to the entire community.

At the close of the meeting our third quarterly conference was held, the reports showing the condition of the charge very satisfactory, the finances being considerably ahead of this same period last year. C. F. EMERY.

FROM ZWOLLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just closed a very successful meeting at Anacoco, La., in the old Holly Grove church. Although there were only twelve accessions, all on profession, the meeting in my estimation should be counted highly successful. Under the straight-forward, old-fashioned gospel preaching of Brother J. C. Price, of Bernice, La., practically the entire church was revived. It is my honest conviction that Louisiana Methodism will reap at least one preacher as a result of this meeting.

Holly Grove is one of the oldest churches of the Methodists in western Louisiana and has among its membership two good old local preachers (deacons), Brother John Franklin and Brother Robert T. Wright. These men have been very faithful to their old church this year and mighty loyal and helpful to their young pastor in everything pertaining to his pastoral duties. One of the features of the recent meeting was a good old-fashioned Methodist class meeting, conducted last Friday morning by Brother Franklin. It is doubtful if one-tenth of the Methodists in the State of Louisiana, or of the entire South for that matter, have ever been in one of these class meetings, which are distinctively Methodist. Uncle John (everybody calls Brother Franklin "Uncle John"), began the meeting by leading in the singing of one of the old-time gospel songs so dear to the hearts of all those good people who have been living by the principles and in the singing of the Wesleys for years, and followed this with an earnest prayer. Then began the class meeting proper. First, many of those whose lives had been living, progressive monuments to the faith of their fathers made testimonies to that same living faith. This consumed some time and was very much like some of our prayer and praise meetings. Then Brother Wright and the pastor went to every person in the house and questioned him or her concerning the condition of their souls. As result, some had the gospel presented to them personally and individually who had never been touched before, and the expressions from hitherto indifferent persons were marvelous. This last was the purpose of our old class meetings, the passing of which has weakened Methodism considerably, I believe.

The people of the community have been mighty good to their inexperienced pastor this year, and he is grateful to God for having such a field to labor in and such a people to work with.

Fraternally yours,
CLELL C. GRAY, P. C.

SLEEP, THE RESTORATIVE.

Sleep is one of the best means of accumulating energy. During sleep, or even during the rest that comes from relaxation, the vitality capital is continually drawing interest. There are some men more dependent on sleep than others and allowances should be made for these idiosyncrasies. Some men, no matter how great the physical effort of the day before, can get up from bed completely restored if they have been able to get enough sleep. Another important help storing up energy is the rest that comes from an occasional day off from practice, especially if this day is filled with a complete change of scene and surroundings so that the mind as well as the body gets a chance to shift from the all important subject. The wise trainer who watches his men carefully will know immediately when this is needed for particular men and act accordingly, not hesitating to increase the time of this "vacation" if he thinks it necessary. It is better for a man to lose two or three days of practice than to take any chance of cutting down his reserve, so that when he comes to draw on it in the final contest he will fail because there is none left.—From "Training for Sports," by Walter Camp, Scribners.

REACHING THE MASSES IN A UNIQUE WAY.

Central Presbyterian Church, Denton, Texas, A Reilly Copeland, pastor, has a unique way of reaching the masses with the gospel.

The church has placed literature bags in prominent places throughout the city and elsewhere. These bags have thirty pockets each, and are filled with the best tracts that teach spiritual, patriotic and educational truths.

For instance, in Denton, these bags are placed in the church, Sunday school annex, schools (two State colleges), city hall, central office, court house, barber shops, hotels, cafes, mills and the depot.

In addition to this, Central Church has these bags in the depots along the railroads out of Denton, and plan soon to extend the work as funds permit. Funds are secured in a very simple manner. Mr. E. Hugh Egan, a layman, of Denton, is chairman of the work, and all offerings are strictly voluntary. This means free will in spirit as well as in name. Most of the funds come from members of the church, yet it is left open to any one who is interested in this program of the work. Mr. Copeland says it is marvelous how all classes read these tracts in great quantities. He thinks it is the most effective and the most economical form of evangelism known to the church to-day.

As this is an age of propaganda, it is a timely suggestion to pastors and churchmen to avail themselves of this method of gospelizing, which carries on night and day. Only evangelical tracts are used. The work is non-sectarian.

Any one desiring information as to how to put on the tract work, may write the Denton pastor, who will cheerfully give particulars concerning it.

Several large publications in America and elsewhere have given news articles of this work as it is being carried on by this church. Since then, quite a number of people in the United States have written the pastor about it.

Tract messages reach all classes of people, because they can be secured in any language, and can go anywhere. They are always polite and never talk back. Their impressions are permanent and results are sure from these heart-gripping evangelistic truths.

In addition to the spiritual, patriotic, and educational features of the tracts, the church announcements can be attractively displayed on the space at top of literature bags, thus making a permanent ad for the church doing the work. The beautiful green canvas bag looks well anywhere.

Central Presbyterian Church also has a free book table in the vestibule supplied with an assortment of the best ten leading subjects. These books are also paid for by voluntary offerings from those interested. There are two book tables near the main entrance, loaded with a large assortment of orthodox books with printed prices on outside of covers. One can select books desired and leave money in the plate.

By these methods, the sermons and the church's ministry are increased a hundred fold.

TALKING AND DOING.

Eloquence, is a gift any man might crave, and yet it is a gift with limitations, and even with some dangers. To be able to win men with fair and impassioned speech is to sway the very sceptre of a god, and yet the lasting value and worth of the performance are not always in keeping with the immediate results produced. Perhaps there are few things that run to waste to such a degree as does eloquence. How often, with fine phrases and round periods, has the world been told what it ought to do, and how it ought to do and be it! But alas! to do and to be are not nearly so easy as to say, and even to say eloquently.

It sometimes really looks as if we talked too much, and too well. The fatal thing about the gift of good speech is that, just because it is so good, it pleases us in itself, and is accepted as a substitute for something else. There is such a thing as mere talk, or talk for talk's sake, and even though it be excellently well done, it is a rather empty and useless affair.

To say many things well, and to be able to talk very wisely and eloquently about what needs to be done, is not, as a rule, nearly so good or so useful a performance as to do well some simple, necessary thing at the right time and in the right way. Talking, even of the most eloquent sort, is idle, save as it is only introductory, leading up to real achievement.

There are only a few men who have done much. And the strange thing is that these are the very men who are not much given to talking. They seem to think that it is about enough to let the things they do, and are, speak for them. Perhaps there are some of us who ought to take a leaf out of their book.

No, we ought not to despise the gift of speech; indeed we ought to use and cultivate it to the full, but we ought to remember its purposes and limitations. We speak of the silver-tongued orator, but it is the deed that is golden, nay, the very gold itself. If we are filling life's book with these—well, we may not have so much time for mere talk.—Selected.

Hesitancy casts dishonor upon the Lord. It throws suspicion upon the adequacy of His resources. He has imposed a task for which He has not provided the strength! The mission is appointed, but the needful equipment is withheld! We are ready, but God is lacking! Thus do we sit in judgment upon the Lord, while all the time our apparent prudence is disloyalty, and our seeming wisdom is only the deadliest unbelief.—J. H. Jowett.

Moundsville, W. Va.—"I had taken doctor's medicine for nearly two years because my periods were irregular, came every two weeks, and I would suffer with bearing-down pains. A lady told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how much good it had done her daughter, so I took it and now I am regular every month and have no pain at all. I recommend your medicine to everyone and you may publish my testimonial, hoping that the Vegetable Compound does some other girl the good it has done me."—Mrs. GEORGE TEGARDEN, 915 Third Street, Moundsville, W. Va.

How many young girls suffer as Mrs. Tegarden did and do not know where to turn for advice or help. They often are obliged to earn their living by toiling day in and day out no matter how hard the pain they have to bear. Every girl who suffers in this way should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and if she does not get prompt relief write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts, about her health. Such letters are held in strict confidence.

LESSON FOR AUGUST 14.

Topic: Examples of Paul's Missionary Methods.

Scripture Lesson: Acts 14:1-7, 21-28.

Golden Text: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve." Matt. 4:10.

Home Readings: Monday, Paul at Iconium, Acts 14:1-7; Tuesday, Paul's Adventures at Lystra, Acts 14:8-18; Wednesday, Jewish Opposition Becomes Violent, Acts 14:19-23; Thursday, The Return to Antioch, Acts 14:24-28; Friday, "I Am the Lord Thy God," Exodus 20:1-7; Saturday, "Worship God," Revelation 22:6-9; Sunday, "Look Unto Me and Be Ye Saved," Isaiah 45:18-24.

Teaching Points

1. Paul usually began his work in the religious center already established—the synagogue. There is no better place for us to work than in the church.

2. Wherever a great work of grace is wrought, there is likely to be strong opposition developed. This should never discourage the faithful worker.

3. It may sometimes be the part of wisdom to withdraw temporarily from fields where persecution becomes violent, but the gospel should still be preached wherever we go.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Let every superintendent in the Corinth District, write these figures on the blackboard Sunday morning and make a speech in behalf of the training school at Corinth, August 15-20.

Here is a text for the superintendents in the Sardis District, put it on the blackboard and preach long and loud: Training School at Sardis, August 22-27.

Mr. J. R. Pepper, the prince among Sunday school superintendents, is expected to give an address to the teachers at the Corinth District Training School. The local school at Corinth will give a reception and a trip to Shiloh Park. Come on with us and we will do you good.

Mrs. J. B. Randolph has recently taught a class at Iuka using as a text, Organization and Administration. She has been called to teach a class at Myrtle. Fortunate is that school that secures her services.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear. While the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is said that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Headaches Vanish

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, women's aches almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy Capudine. It stops the pain by removing the cause. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists, 10c, 30c, 60c. Insist upon getting CAPUDINE

Mrs. Nellie Doty has organized a class of thirteen at Richland on the Pickens circuit. This class will use Life in the Making. The effects of the Grenada Training School abides and will continue to bless all who attended.

Mrs. S. J. Bell, of New Albany, had some trouble with her eyes that prevented her from reading and writing. She was so determined to take the course under Miss Hansen that she secured the permission of her teacher to have a friend read to her and write her papers. She did the work, made a fine grade and secured her certificate. You will have to take off your hat to a noble soul like that.

Our Mississippi people did the best kind of work at Lake Junaluska during the recent session of the school of the prophets. Our Mrs. Wyatt was called to teach Dr. Barclay's class the last day of the school. In a few years we shall have a number of trained teachers to help train the leaders for all our schools.

Notice has been sent to pastors and superintendents who have failed to make a report as to the observance of Sunday School Day. So far very few have paid any attention to our appeal. The Sunday School Board is in need of every dollar that has been collected. Heretofore money could be borrowed to tide us over until Conference. This year the banks have no money to lend us. The two district schools will cost about two hundred dollars each. Be fair with us and send the money that has been given for this work.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Fernwood charge has now been added to the Honor Roll, the Board having received an offering from each Sunday school on the charge. We are anxious that more of the charges win a place on the Honor Roll.

The past week was spent at Mt. Pisgah. On Sunday the Sunday School Institute for the Harrisville charge was held. Three of the Sunday schools were represented. The reports of the Sunday schools showed an increase over the last quarter. This was very gratifying.

They set the following goal for the present quarter:

1. A social for the young people in each community.
2. A map and survey for each community.
3. The regular attendance of officers and teachers.
4. To hold at least one Workers' Council.
5. The observance of Clean Up-Fix Up Day.

The Sunday school at Mt. Pisgah, while small, is doing a good work. I stayed through Thursday and taught a class in "The Pupil." I will give the program we used at this place and the results obtained for the benefit of those who might be interested.

We met at 11 o'clock promptly and had a session of the class. At the conclusion of the class session we had prayer meeting for fifteen or twenty minutes, in most cases led by those who had never led prayer meeting before. At the conclusion of prayer meeting we had preaching. We then had dinner, another session of the class, another prayer meeting and another preaching service.

We had four conversions—two remarkable ones. One fine young woman gave her life to definite work anywhere the way would open for her. Two were received into the church on profession of faith. Three will take the examinations. Money was made up to ceil the church. A prayer meeting was organized. The membership of the church pledged support to the superintendent and pastor. A cradle roll was organized.

I feel that a like program can be carried through in almost any rural community where an effort is made. The only suggestion that I would make in the way of change would be that we meet earlier and not have so much dinner, serving sandwiches to the old folks and the women bringing what they know the children will need and seeing that they are properly cared for and letting the old people deny themselves at the noon hour for the sake of the services.

We are anxious for every Sunday school to observe Sunday School Day. Won't you please observe the day either with a program or by a collection, and send us the money?

We are anxious to help you in any way that we can. Pray for us.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

The Hot Weather Test makes people better acquainted with their resources of strength and endurance. Many find they need Hood's Sarsaparilla which invigorates the blood, promotes refreshing sleep and overcomes that tired feeling.—Adv.

This word of Christ must be adopted by each of His followers. Nothing will help us to live in this world, and keep ourselves unspotted, but the Spirit that was in Christ, that looked upon His body as prepared by God for His service; that looks upon our body as prepared by Him, too, that we might offer it to Him. Like Christ, we, too, have a body in which the Holy Spirit dwells. Like Christ, we, too, must yield our body with every member, every power, every action, to fulfill His will, to be offered up to Him, to glorify Him.—Andrew Murray.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE.

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work to-day;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to his side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel;
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word:
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other work than his?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things his lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help him
And hasten his return?

man-Examiner.

OVERCOMING EVIL WITH GOOD.

This impressive reminiscence of war days in France comes to us from an English Y. M. C. A. worker. A young lieutenant, fresh from a Christian home, arrived at his camp in France to find that the officers' mess was not conducted in a seemly way. The men not only talked in an objectionable way, but they had put on the walls of the mess room pictures that were far from decorous.

The lieutenant was young and unfamiliar with army life; though his whole soul revolted, he hardly dared to protest. For several days he tried to think of some way by which he could lead his companions into a better mode of life. Then one afternoon, when he was going through his luggage, he found in his valise a small but beautiful picture. It was a head of Christ by that master of masters, Leonardo da Vinci, a copy of that head which he had sketched again and again before painting it on the canvas of his great picture, the Last Supper. It gave the young man his inspiration. Creeping into the mess room late that night, he hung the picture on the wall. There it was, a point of goodness and beauty and inspiration amid the tawdry, evil stuff that hung there.

The young officer was not the only one to creep into that room when no one was watching. Within twenty-four hours, picture after picture mysteriously disappeared from those walls until only the picture of the head of the Savior remained. Before those pure and tender eyes sin fled away. The simple uplifting of Christ was enough to drive evil away in headlong flight. Evil cannot be overcome of evil—it must be overcome by good.—Selected.

LONELINESS.

There are moments when the soul feels itself to be alone in the universe. The neighbor across the way and the faintest star in the sky seem equally remote, equally uncomprehending. Every great inward crisis reveals the eternal separateness of the individual.

We are a part of all that we have met, indeed, but we are also strangely aloof from all other created things. It is when this sense of the soul's separateness presses hard that we cry out for a Savior who can recover us from loneliness. Loneliness and temptation often come together. Indeed, loneliness is in itself a temptation to discouragement, despair, and the loosening of all sense of obligation. "Who knows?" and "Who cares?" are dangerous questions for the soul to ask.

It is at such times that we learn the meaning of the great withdrawal of Calvary. Theology has tried to explain away the loneliness of the Master, as it has tried to explain away the other elements of his divine humanness. But it is to the solitary Figure of the Cross that we must go when the need of the soul is most profound. It is He who trod the wine press alone of whose sympathy we are sure when we pass through experiences which those about us cannot be expected to understand. It is the loneliest One, looking from a careless world to a darkened heaven and finding no evidence of companionship, to whom we cry out in life's hardest hour. To him, in some supreme experience, every believing soul must say: "But for thy cry, 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' thou couldst not be my Savior now!"—Christian Century.

It is not the last drink that makes a man a drunkard.—Exchange.

NORT MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Foreign Mission Day.

The following, taken from the Senatobia Democrat, tells of the way the Coldwater Auxiliary created more interest in the work on foreign fields:

Twenty-three members enjoyed the hospitality of our wide-awake enthusiastic mission leader, Mrs. A. Y. Wilburn in her lovely home, observing a special Foreign Missionary program with a "Joyride around the world." On this page there are records, not only of daring deeds of martyrs to the cause in foreign lands, and the self-sacrificing efforts of laborers on the frontiers, and the sacred fields of home mission work, but there are chronicles which bear testimony to missionary zeal of local nature. The spiritual inspiration and attending social feature was seen on this occasion. There were but few present who maintained a complete and perpetual silence, for during the program period each seemed delighted to mingle her ideas with those of the leaders. The program was prepared by our mission leader, Mrs. A. Y. Wilburn. The following musical program was rendered:

Piano duet, selection, Mesdames C. W. Veazey and W. G. Durley.

"Immortality," from W. J. Bryans "Prince of Peace," on the Edison; vocal selection, "Missionary Bells," by Mrs. W. G. Durley.

Each guest entered into the "Joyride Round the World," to eight different Missions, with much enthusiasm, each lady telling something to illustrate her country, this causing a guessing contest, full of interest and offering much merriment. Mrs. C. W. Veazey, representing Mexico with her huge Mexican hat, gave a most interesting outline of mission work in that country. Mrs. A. S. Raper, with her beautiful corsage tied with red, white and blue ribbons, in her attractive way told us of Cuba missions. Missions in Brazil, by Mrs. T. J. Cooper, was illustrated by a green twig, with coffee on same. The talk on "Batetelas" missions by Mrs. J. L. Christy, with her bright vivid colors, was most interesting. Mrs. J. D. Turley with her rice and chopsticks, was an easy guess before her interesting paper on China was read. Miss L. Coleman last told of our very young mission, "France and Belgium," representing same with a beautiful lily. Variations of "Star Spangled Banner," was next rendered by Mrs. T. J. Cooper, after which our President, Mrs. C. L. Graham, in her delightful manner brought us back into "America," first back in the hospitable home so beautifully and tastefully arranged for this occasion. The large and spacious living room presented a brilliant ensemble of many beautiful colors, huge bowls and vases of sweet peas and nasturtiums, characterizing all the appointments. Mrs. Graham dwelt on results of missions, Christian schools, etc., and endeavored to impress on each one present after our visit to foreign lands that the divine blessing doesn't only come to the ones who receive but the ones who send.

The guest of the afternoon was Mrs. G. H. McCain. At this time we were indeed delighted to have her in our midst once again. After thanks were extended by the leader to ladies who furnished the program, we were dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Moore. The farewell words to our hospitable hostess were that: "Memories of this season of refreshing will abide with those present until the recurrence of a similar occasion."

A LETTER FROM AFRICA.

Wembo Nyama, April 25, 1921.

Dear Friends Back Home: You are interested, I am sure, in our little boat, the Texas, which was given by the Texas Leaguers. It has made two trips. The first one was from Kinshasa to Luebo and from there to Lusambo with the Lapsley, the Presbyterian's boat, a distance of about 800 miles. The second was an effort to come up the Lubefu River as near this station as possible. Dr. Mum-power was with the explorers part of the way. He left them early this morning within six hours of the village they hope to reach. He says the boat made the trip up stream O. K. but he is a bit uneasy about its going down stream, as the current is very strong. But I think no better man could have been chosen for this work than Mr. Shadel, and we believe that if it can be managed, he will put it through. We have made this work a special subject of prayer. No one can realize just what it will mean to the work here until they have made the trip from Lusambo by hammock to Wembo Nyama. And the freight problem is a bigger item than travel. I positively cannot see how men can climb some of those terrible hills with a heavy box. We had to be helped up and down some of them. You will no doubt see an account of the expedition in the Missionary Voice. They had some hazardous experiences. We are indeed grateful for what has been accomplished.

Interest in the school work seems to be on the increase and the children are doing fairly good work. More boys come begging for admittance than we can possibly accommodate. This phase of the work has grown beyond expectation, so that now what was asked is inadequate. Some of us have assumed the support of two boys each in school. It takes about ten dollars a year to support one. Maybe some who read this would like to support one or more boys. Some of them walk many miles to the mission, hoping to be admitted. It is no easy matter to turn them away. These boys are the real foundation stones for the work here. They are trained here and go out to other villages to preach the Gospel and teach the people.

The evangelists from the out stations come in each quarter to conference. They bring their candidates for baptism with them. After the baptismal service the Sacrament is administered. Last quarter seventy-five were baptized. Two of Chief Wembo Nyama's wives were baptized. They had been ready for a long while, but his majesty would not give his consent. Perhaps he feared they would leave him. But a woman is not required to leave her husband, though she may be one of many wives, to become a church member, for she cannot help herself since she is bought and sold as other property. But a man is required to have only one wife. We are glad to have these two women in the church—they are fine women.

Another interesting feature of the last quarterly meeting was a social evening for the evangelists. They met in the new gymnasium which Mrs. Shadel was instrumental in having built. Mr. Lynn, the head of the Evangelistic Department, carried a number of his college annuals for them to look through. They enjoyed the pictures very much. Now and then we would hear one of the evangelists call out, "Here is So and So," naming one of their own number. A number of good records were played on the Victrola, which they also appreciated. When a song was sung which they knew they joined in the singing. While the Victrola was playing we heard Old King "Tawny Mane" join in with his strong bass voice at no great distance from the all but open house in which we were gathered. This sent thrills down our backs but did not prevent the refreshments being served, which consisted of bananas, cookies, and lemonade. We were dismissed with a prayer. It was a good, wholesome evening for them. All went away happy, but all eyes on the lookout for that uninvited, unwelcome baritone.

When I have been here longer and have had time to look into the family life of the people more thoroughly, I will write you about it. They seem to have many customs peculiar to themselves.

One of the things that are nearest my heart is my Sunday school class, which is composed of mothers. It has met only two Sundays. I felt that I would so much love to do something for the women who attend the village church that two of us attend Sunday mornings. Consequently the announcement was made that if they wished to come, there would be a teacher for them. They were attentive and appreciative. You will join me in prayer for them, will you not?

Do not think of us as martyrs. We have a comfortable home, plenty of good food, a Victrola, some good magazines, and opportunities to serve humanity so abundant and urgent that were we each multiplied by a hundred we would still be inadequate to meet the need; and, best of all, the one who Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

called us and sent us forth is with us. Of course we miss our civilization and friends and there are a good many inconveniences, but we have no desire to leave our post. I only wish I had more than one life to spend in this work for the Master.

The medical workers are rendering a beautiful service. I wish you could visit the hospital. We have all read descriptions of cases in mission hospitals, but none of those I read caused me to realize what it is like. I thought the pictures were overdrawn. But they must have been literally true. Non-Christian peoples suffer untold miseries.

Your gifts are adding more to my comfort than I am able to tell. I appreciate them with all my heart.

If you have picture post cards, old or new, Sunday school picture cards or rolls, or any other pictures that you would like to send as missionaries, they will find a big place to fill here.

We are grateful for your prayers. You are helping us in the most effective way when you are interceding for us.

Sincerely yours,

FROM SPRING HILL, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: We closed out our meeting here last week and will say it was the greatest meeting I've ever had since I've been in the pastorate. I baptized 52 persons, nearly all of them young men and ladies. All could be classed as adults excepting two or three children. We received 62 on profession of faith. We got practically several entire families; Bozeman and I went to see one family and were informed that we were the first preachers ever in his home—he is 48 years old and has a wife and nine children. The man and his wife and three fine looking young ladies knelt at the altar and prayed through to victory. They are fine material, so are all of them that we got this time. We had the satisfaction of seeing the mill foreman, the sawyer, the saw filor, and the chief engineer, all four of the biggest men in the big mill here, converted at the altar; they were all baptized and received into the church. I congratulate myself and praise God that I got the right kind of help here in the person of Rev. R. A. Bozeman, of Pleasant Hill, La. He has helped me before this, and then as now he does not mince words in denouncing sin. He gets where people live, and God blesses his efforts. He uses the altar, and makes an honest effort to get penitents into a real experience. I do not know when I have been so fortunate as to see the workings of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of men. No theatres, picture shows, Sunday ball games, no public dance halls—I want everybody to sit up and take notice—the absence of these things creates an atmosphere in which the Holy Spirit can work. I do not remember seeing such awful cases of conviction—one case of a man who had not been to meeting at all, but who was driven from place to place, seeking help, till finally he came to the parsonage, then to the altar, and when he broke down, and gave himself to Christ, the burden was rolled away.

We began by giving the Holy Ghost complete charge, went through and ended that way, and now give all the glory to Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Fraternally,

J. CUDE ROUSSEAU.

THE COST OF GETTING ON.

Every reasonable man has a desire that life should move along with as little friction as possible, and that the world in which he lives should enjoy as far as may be the sunny smile of peace and comfort. But any one has not had much experience of life who imagines that absolute ease and relief from disturbance and worry are possible, and the one who is insisting on these things too strongly is not counting for much in the progress and climb up of things human. Somehow we get on by means of friction and struggle, and the successful life, even from the highest point of view, must have much experience of these things. Life, among other things, is to fight a fight against many foes to its truest good, and fighting does not suggest uninterrupted comfort and unbroken slumber through every night. And it is one of the strange anomalies of life that after all we get most real comfort out of not trying to be too comfortable, but by just forging ahead and doing the things that seem to need to be done, even at the cost of great sacrifice and loss and struggle.—Christian Guardian.

"LET'S GO CAMPING."

"Who hath smelled the wood smoke at twilight;
Who hath heard the birch log burning.
Let him follow with the others
For the young men's feet are turning
To camps of known desire and proved delight."

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone"
Man, Responsible for Change
for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

THE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE OXFORD CAMP GROUND.

Dear Brother Carley: We desire through the Advocate to inform your readers, many of whom have labored among and learned to love the people of the Oxford Camp Ground and adjacent communities in other days, that we are, on the second Sunday in August, beginning our annual camp meeting and celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of this sacred and much-loved encampment, which was chosen and dedicated to God fifty years ago by our forefathers.

The tent-holders and other friends began early in April to pray and to plan for its upbuilding and perpetuation, and God so wonderfully blessed their efforts that friends everywhere rallied to the cause, and to-day the appearance of the blessed place is completely transformed: grounds enlarged, springs concreted and a deep-well pump installed; tabernacle and preachers' lodge repaired; all old tents put in good condition, and several new ones built.

From fifty to a hundred men, women, young people and children have met from week to week and labored diligently to bring about these beautiful results.

We have been wonderfully helped and encouraged on every hand. Our local pastors, Brothers L. M. Lipscomb and T. J. Hopper, of the Methodist Church, and Brothers Christian and Lorance, of the Presbyterian Church, helped us by generous donations of money, prayerful co-operation and the labor of their hands. They have demonstrated to us very convincingly that they can wield an axe or a hammer with as much vigor as they wield the "sword of the Spirit." God bless the preachers who, like the blessed Master, do not find a pulpit essential to the most eloquent preaching. Our greatest preachers are those who live, and love, and serve best.

Brother Lipscomb has secured Brother Wilson, of New Albany, Conference evangelist, to do the preaching, and Prof. Williams, of Water Valley, will direct the choir and lead the singing.

Indications now are that we will have in many respects the greatest meeting in the history of the camp ground. This is home coming year for this hallowed place, and friends from several States who know and loved it in days gone by have signified their intention of meeting here at this time for a glad reunion and celebration.

We especially and cordially invite all the old Oxford and Abbeville pastors to come and share with us the good things that the Father has in store for us at this time. The old Oxford Camp Ground, in her charming new attire, will receive you with open arms; so "Come one, come all; there is room in the greenwood if not in the hall."

EDITORIAL COMMENT

IF NOT READY—GET READY.

Making excuses is a mighty poor business. When a man agrees to do a certain thing, he is expected to do it—that is all there is to it. It may save his own feelings somewhat to go into lengthy explanations of why he could not or did not do the task assigned and accepted, but it does not make amends for the failure to "deliver the goods." People are not so much interested, anyway, in the "why's" and "how's" of our actions as they are in the "what's." If we are not ready to do what is expected of us, there is but one thing to do—get ready. If we cannot get ready, we are at fault in accepting the assignment.

FOR THE FOOLISH RICH.

A news item from the Retail Merchants' Congress, in session in Chicago recently, was to the effect that the milliners are going to try to effect a change in styles in hats so that a new one will be required for each month in the year. "It used to be that there were only two hat seasons," said the chairman of the meeting. "There were for spring and fall models. Then the summer and sport styles were made popular. But there is no reason why there shouldn't be a change in hat styles every month." Yes there is—for sensible folk; others may do as they please, including the foolish rich, who spend their time in nothing else but either to buy some new thing or pull off some new stunt. The dispatch referred to above added: "The milliners cheered delightedly, but a family man who had wandered in groaned"—as well he might.

NOT WHAT IT SEEMED.

It is a sad thing that things are not always what they seem. (It is not always so sad, either, when we come to think of it.) When a package said to contain more than $57,000 arrived at its destination in Chicago and was opened, only a block of wood was found. The wrapping of the package indicated that the small fortune was within; but its appearance was deceptive. This is true in many cases. Many a gold brick has been sold to an avaricious "come on" because it looked like the pure metal from without; many a pernicious theory has gained currency because it was plausibly presented; many a false doctrine has become established because it had the marks of truth; many a sad mistake in life has been made because conclusions were jumped at. A fair face may hide a foul heart. On the other hand, a rough exterior may conceal a diamond of the first water. We have done well when we have learned to look upon the heart of men—as God does.

THE FORTH-SPEAKING MAN.

It was the glory of the prophets that they spoke forth the will of God as that will was revealed to them in their intimate spiritual fellowship with the divine. They were too good not to accept the message that came to them through this revelation and too brave to withhold it for fear of what their hearers might say or think about them. They were not exponents of expediency, but teachers of the truth. That their discourses might not be acceptable to those who did not think as they did, did not trouble them at all—they were laboring under a divine compulsion to make God known to men. If there was ever a time when forth-speaking men were needed, it is to-day. Sincere lovers of the truth and devout students of the Word of God owe a debt to the world that cannot be paid by keeping silent while their hearts are burning within them because of the commission they have received. The truth needs proclaimers, but it will maintain itself whether it has defenders or not. Truth is self-authenticating and self-propagating. Even if it should be temporarily crushed to earth, it will rise again, and those who feared that it had been destroyed forever will be amazed to see the vigor with which it goes on its way. If the Bible cannot be interpreted in terms of present-day life, it has no message for the present. It is the Book of all ages, the present and future as well as the past; and the forth-speaking man attempts to make available its riches for his own generation, while he strives to interpret its lessons that are universally valid. There will always be different schools of interpreters, and there will be warfare between them—but the truth will triumph in the end. The tragedy of the crucifixion was followed by the transcendent glory of the resurrection.

WHERE ARE THEY GOING?

As we sit near a window overlooking the street, we see hundreds of people—men and women, boys and girls, well-dressed and shabbily dressed, of all classes of society evidently—passing. Some of them are walking briskly, as if they know exactly what is before them and are anxious to get to their destination; others move aimlessly along, apparently with nothing to do and in no hurry to do it. It is none of our business perhaps—but we cannot help wondering sometimes where they are all going. They must have some objective—definite or indefinite—and in their own way and in their own time they hope to reach it. And so it is with the stream of life—ever flowing onward to the great ocean of eternity, whence it cannot turn again. Where are all the people going after they leave this world? Are they bound for heaven and happiness, or are they headed toward destruction? Does it make any difference to us where they are going? Have we ever raised a hand to warn them of approaching danger, or uttered a word to put them on the right way? Have we called to even one traveller to offer assistance that will help him over the rough way? Do we know where WE are going?

FAMINE AND DISEASE IN THE SOUTH.

According to a report of the Public Health Service, the South is threatened with a scourge of famine and disease an estimate being made that there will be 100,000 cases of pellagra in the country this year, most of them in the cotton-raising States. The cause of this threatened condition is said to be in the fact that the tenant farmers of the South devote practically all their land to the raising of cotton, making no provision for raising vegetables and poultry, and that, as a consequence, since the price of cotton was so low, most of them are having to subsist on a diet that is lacking in certain elements that are absolutely necessary for the prevention of pellagra. We do not know where the Public Health Service got its information, and we will not presume to deny its conclusions; but if this section of the South is threatened with famine or an epidemic of pellagra, we have not seen any indications of it. It is well known that all our farmers are practicing the most rigid economy in making this year's crop, and that sources of credit that were formerly available have been greatly restricted. Let our State health authorities declare that the situation is not at all critical. It is, reasoning, however, to know that President Harding has become interested in the situation and that he has declared that every possible step will be taken to render such assistance as may be needed.

A HEAVY PRICE.

According to statistics recently given out by Germany, that country lost in the war 1,792,368 killed and 1,216,571 wounded. In addition to these, 200,000 men are still reported as "missing," and these probably will ultimately be added to the total of those killed. This was a heavy price to pay to gratify the ambition to rule the world—a price that many years of peace cannot offset. As we are beginning to realize what war actually costs, we are more and more convinced that it is the most frightful calamity that can afflict the world. Even those who are not professedly religious can well afford to pray that the approaching conference of the nations looking toward international disarmament may be fruitful of result—and those who profess to be Christians should pray without ceasing that out of it may come permanent and universal peace.

A STUDY IN THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Rev. S. X. Swimme, of Midland, Texas.

The following—while the writer recognizes that it is far from being a perfect document—is presented as a possible working basis from which to start in the task of formulating a Constitution for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Proposed Constitution for the Methodist Church.

WE, "THE PEOPLE CALLED METHODISTS," grateful to Almighty God for the "wondrous love wherewith He has loved us," and for the marvelous grace and mercy He has manifested towards us; praying that He will continue so to guide us by the wisdom and comfort of His Holy Spirit that our chief and only aim and ambition as a church, and as individual members of the same, shall unceasingly be the glory and honor and dominion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; and to the end that all things "may be done in decency and in order" in the church and by the members thereof; do hereby ordain, promulgate, declare and adopt this CONSTITUTION.

Section 1. NAME. The name of this church is and shall be "THE METHODIST CHURCH," a body corporate, incorporated under the laws of the State of ———, and it is "a company of men (and women) having the form and seeking the power of godliness, united in order to pray together, to receive the word of exhortation, to watch over one another in love, that they may help each other to work out their salvation, and to unitedly labor to spread Scriptural holiness over all the world.

2. THE LEGISLATIVE BRANCH. The legislative and chief governing body of this church shall be a General Conference, which shall meet in the month of May, once in four years perpetually, on each succeeding fourth year from the year 1846.

3. CONFERENCES. There shall be four difference Conferences: (1) The General Conference; (2) Annual Conferences; (3) District Conferences; (4) Quarterly Conferences.

4. THE GENERAL CONFERENCE. The General Conference shall be composed of one clerical and one lay member for each forty-eight members of the several Annual Conferences of the church: said members to be elected at the last session of the said Annual Conferences held before the sitting of the General Conference. Of the lay members, one may be a local preacher.

The manner of the election of the members of the General Conference, and their qualifications, shall be determined by the General Conference, which shall be the sole and only judge of the legality and regularity of the election and qualifications of its members.

5. The General Conference shall adopt such rules and regulations as it may deem proper for the government of its body and for the transaction of the business which comes before it.

6. It shall require present a majority of all the members from each of the Annual Conferences to constitute a quorum of the General Conference.

7. ANNUAL CONFERENCES. The Annual Conferences are divisions of the church for administrative purposes. The General Conference shall determine the number and boundaries of the Annual Conferences.

The Annual Conferences shall be composed of all the traveling preachers in full connection within the bounds of the Conferences, and of laymen—the number of whom and the manner of their election to be determined by the General Conference.

8. DISTRICT CONFERENCES. District Conferences are sub-divisions of the Annual Conferences, and their number and bounds shall be determined by the presiding bishop and his cabinet.

The District Conferences shall be composed of the presiding elder of the district and all the preachers in charge within the bounds of said district, the supernumerary and superannuated preachers residing within the district, all the local preachers residing in the district, and laymen—the number of whom and the manner of their election to be determined by the General Conference.

9. QUARTERLY CONFERENCES. The Quarterly Conferences are the business and administrative bodies of the various stations, circuits and missions. They are composed of all the members of the charge for which they are being held who have attained the age of fifteen years.

The duties of all these conferences, and the manner of their administration, shall be determined by the General Conference.

10. PRESIDING OFFICERS. The Bishops shall be the presiding officers of the General Conference; but in case there should be no Bishop present, then the General Conference shall elect from its members a president pro tempore, which said president pro tempore shall, during such time as he is such officer, be vested with all the powers which would be held and exercised by a Bishop of the church.

In the Annual Conferences a Bishop shall preside, but in case no Bishop should be present, then the Annual Conference shall elect from among its members present a president pro tempore, who during his presidency shall exercise all the powers of a Bishop, except that of ordination.

In the District Conferences a Bishop shall preside, and in the absence of the Bishop the presiding elder is ex-officio president. Should the presiding elder be absent, the conference shall elect from among its members a president pro tempore.

In the Quarterly Conferences the presiding elder is president, and in his absence the preacher in charge shall preside.

11. THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH. The executive powers of the church shall be vested in the Bishops, who are the chief executives thereof; and in the presiding elders and the preachers in charge, who are subordinate to the Bishops in their executive capacity.

12. THE JUDICIAL BRANCH. The judicial system of the church consists of all its conferences.

The General Conference shall have original jurisdiction in the trial of a Bishop, and appellate jurisdiction as may be determined by the General Conference.

The Annual Conferences shall have original jurisdiction in the trial of ministers in the traveling connection, and appellate jurisdiction in the case of local preachers and of probationers in the traveling connection.

The district conference shall have original jurisdiction in the trial of local preachers and of probationers in the traveling connection, and appellate jurisdiction in the case of members of the church.

The Quarterly Conference shall have original jurisdiction in the trial of members of the church.

The General Conference shall by suitable legislation prescribe the manner of conducting all trials.

13. OF THE MINISTRY. There are two orders in the ministry of the Methodist Church: Deacons and Elders.

DEACONS shall perform all the offices of the ministry in the church, except that of administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The period of probation for ordination as a deacon in the traveling connection shall be two years.

ELDERS shall perform every office of the ministry of the church. The period of probation for ordination as an elder in the traveling connection shall be two years after the candidate shall have been ordained a deacon.

The General Conference shall prescribe the course of study and educational qualifications of candidates for ordination; and may provide that in the case of candidates for work in the missionary fields the period of probation may be waived.

BISHOPS. The Bishops are the chief executive officers of the church. Any traveling elder is eligible to the office of Bishop.

14. POWERS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE. The General Conference shall elect the Bishops of the church, provide for their consecration, prescribe their duties and fix their salaries, and hear and try all charges and complaints against them; it shall elect the Connectional officers, prescribe their duties and fix their salaries; and it shall have full power to enact laws and make rules and regulations for the transaction of the business and the pursuit of the ends for which the church was organized and exists, subject to the following restrictions and limitations:

"The Restrictive Rules."

(1) The General Conference shall not revoke, altar, or change our Articles of Religion, or establish any new standards or rules of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine. "Our present existing and established standards of doctrine" we understand to be the Articles of Religion, the General Rules, the Forms of Administration of the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, and the Forms of Ordination and Consecration. Neither shall it establish or recognize other Orders of ordained ministry than those now recognized by this Constitution, or abolish either of said Orders, nor alter the terms of probation for Orders.

(2) The General Conference shall not allow more than two representatives—one clerical and one lay—for each thirty members of the several Annual Conferences in the connection; nor provide for a less number than two—one clerical and one lay—for each one hundred members of such conferences. Provided, nevertheless, that where there shall be in any Annual Conference a fraction of two-thirds of the number which shall be fixed for the ratio of representation, such Annual Conference shall be entitled to two additional representatives—one clerical and one lay—for such fraction; and provided, also, that no Annual Conference shall be denied the privilege of two representatives—one clerical and one lay.

(3) The General Conference shall not alter any part or rule of our government so as to abolish episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency; nor shall it abolish our plan of a limited term itinerant pastorate.

(4) The General Conference, Annual Conference, District Conference and Quarterly Conference are integral parts of our system of church government and administration; and there shall be no law passed by the General Conference which shall take away from any of these conferences their existence, or curtail their constitutional powers, or destroy their usefulness. The General Conference shall by suitable laws provide for the exercise of their proper powers and functions, prescribe their duties and determine the limitation of their powers.

(5) The General Conference shall not deny or attempt to curtail the privileges of our ministers or preachers of the right of trial by committee or before the conference of which they are members (the accused having the right of choice) and of appeal; neither shall it deny or take away the privilege of our members of trial before the church or by committee (the accused having the right of choice) and of appeal.

(6) The General Conference shall not appropriate the produce of the Publishing House to any purpose other than for the benefit of the traveling, supernumerary, superannuated, and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children.

PROVIDED, NEVERTHELESS: (Let paragraph 43 stand as it is in the present Discipline; although this writer cannot see the real necessity of the veto power therein conferred upon the Bishops. However, with a written Constitution there can never be any doubt as to the constitutionality of the acts proposed. Its chief effect, perhaps, will be to make some legislation slower).

As to the Foregoing Tentative Constitution:

The foregoing has some merits which should commend it to favorable consideration:

1. It is brief—containing less than two thousand words.

2. It succinctly states what IS the Constitution, and by process of elimination, shows what is NOT the Constitution.

3. It will be observed that there are some changes made in the "Restrictive Rules;" but, on the whole, every principle enunciated in the rules as they stand to-day is included, and there is added one: protecting the conference system.

There is also added protection of our itinerant system, which this writer considers one of the most vital parts of our church government.

Personally, this writer thinks that the veto provision should be stricken out, because it carries with it the same possible menace which to-day threatens the civil government of the United States: that of the legislative branch of the church being dominated by the executive branch. It may be said that there is no probability of such a thing being done, to which there may be a very general agreement; but the possibility of such a thing remains, nevertheless.

"MY SONG IN THE NIGHT."

By Rev. Arthur M. Shaw.

God bless the men who have given us our songs, and the men who have preserved them and brought them down to us! What would the world be without its songs? How could the heart solace itself if the inspired ones of the race had not given us songs as vents for the deepest springs of emotion, passion and sorrow? Poems are Nature's varying moods made vocal in rhythmic melody. Poetry is as deep in content and as universal in sympathy as Nature herself. Like Nature, it speaks to the responsive heart, "a various language;" for his gayer hours.

"It has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty, and it glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness, ere he is aware"

Every life-story, if it could be told, would be an epic song. For every life is a drama: all have much of comedy; all have a touch of tragedy; while a few have a grand plot of heroic action. He who can "hold the mirror up to nature" is the real historian of the race. He who can voice the soul's fears, longings, aspirations, passions, discords, agonies, hopes, triumphs and joys, in song, is the true prophetic soul.

Personally, I never can give due meed of praise to the tender songs that have been the companions of my reveries, and oft in wearisome night watches, have come like spirits out of the vast unseen, and rendered vocal the unutterable musings of my heart. "I call to remembrance my song in the night." Such visitants I have had, and knew not their earthly parentage. But it matters not who put them into words, they came out of the great deep; and to my troubled heart they are as "deep calling to deep." In "Martin Eden," Jack London quotes an anonymous poem, used as the swan song of a broken spirit, which voices the pathos of the despairing genius whose message the world does not want. Who that ever felt "an inbreathing of the Almighty One" and sought to give his message to the world, has not sometimes felt like singing it?

"I have done—
Put by the lute.
Song and singing soon are over
As the airy shades that hover
In among the purple clover.
I have done—
Put by the lute.
Once I sang as early thrushes
Sing among the dewy bushes;
Now I'm mute.
I am like a weary linnet,
For my throat has no song in it;
I have had my singing minute.
I have done.
Put by the lute!"

But when this song comes to me, as it sometimes does, it comes as a voice from across the abyss. It is a wail of warning and not a call from the heights. It presages self-destruction. It is at war with a sane philosophy of life. A man of earth may perish, but his heaven-born work can not. You may kill the singer, but you can not kill the song. "Truth crush'd to earth shall rise again: the eternal years of God are hers." What are time and sense to an immortal spirit? What is "success" to a prophet of God? What are the changing hues of reputation, and the flowing and ebbing tides of men's praises, to one who knows that his life can not perish, his influence die, nor his message go unheeded? Victor Hugo, who felt himself to be "the tadpole of an archangel," sang,

"Let us be like the bird for a moment perch'd
On a trail branch while he sings:
Tho' he feels it bend he continues his song,
For he knows that he has wings!"

After all, life is not all tragedy. Its songs are not all in minor key. Its blackest clouds have a fringe of light if we have eyes to see. From its bitterest wells sweet waters may be drawn, if only we sink the bucket deep enough. As the "hopes of youth fall thick in the blast" and bitter memories crowd upon me "from out the phantom years" of the dead past, oft in the still night, this strain from a singer to me unknown, tells my own heart-story, and interprets my philosophy of life

"I've had a good time:
Life came with rosy cheek and tender song
Across the morning fields to play with me;
And oh, how glad we were, and romped along,
And laughed, and kissed each other by the sea!"

"I've had a good time:
Love came and met me half-way down the road,
Love went away, but there remained with me
A little dream to help me bear my load,
And something more to watch for, by the sea."

"I've had a good time:
Death came and pluck'd a rosebud from my yard;
But ever since, it seems there walks with me,
To prove me how the thing is not so hard—
An angel here of evenings, by the sea"

"I've had a good time.
A good, good time:
Nobody knows how good a time but me—
With nights and days of revel and of rhyme,
And love, and tears, and longing—by the sea!"

Was anything more sweetly, tenderly, pathetically soulful, ever penned by man? It is a life-philosophy: but it is the philosophy of faith. Only a firm trust in God can thus fortify the heart of man. Jesus on the way to Gethsemane offered to his disciples comfort, peace and joy, and bade them "be of good cheer." Paul could have shouted back from the headsman's block, "I've had a good time!"

In those night meditations which for many years I have been wont to indulge, these and a hundred other sweet "songs in the night" have come to me out of the hidden song-world. Sometimes the poets are silent, and the Muses bring me my own "song" in the night. One such came recently, when, wearied by a long day, leaning upon a simple bed, I fell into a deep sleep. Thus, I had conceived my song to end and slept—and wakened to find that the sleeper had "restored my soul." Walter Maecius said, "At sunrise every soldier is born again." With a kernel I thought, I named this little poem "My Correction."

I rose; I rose with courage strong,
I gained no ground the following day,
Plan, skill and labor all went wrong,
And failure were my lot, away.
Sadly I saw the day come on,
No task achieved, no portion won,
I sought repose with anxious heart
For hope had died at set of sun.

I prayed, I slept; I slept and dream'd:
A ladder form'd of golden bars
Slip downward where the moonlight shone,
My spirit climb'd beyond the stars!
I felt the thrill of buoyant joy;
Fair, restful fields all night I trod—
Celestial fields of love and truth,
My soul walked hand in hand with God!

I woke, I walked abroad at dawn,
And met the sunlight on the hills;
I dared, for lo, my way was gone!
And triumph wait on him who will!
I ran my race, the prize I won,
Nor paused till I had reach'd the goal—
For at the rising of the sun
Hope, born anew, had fill'd my soul!

WALKING BY FAITH.

By William C. Allen.

"We walk by faith, not by sight" Paul.

Life is like an amazing highway. Ofttimes it is smooth to our easy-treading feet, again it is cruel and rugged to every weary step. One moment we rejoice in the glowing sunlight, again we lament amid darkness and tears. We are glad when the scene is illumined before us, we are despondent when walls are around us and, like blind men, we grope for a gateway that is hidden from our view.

Yet it is a great achievement to walk by faith. No financial or intellectual support can equal it. No philosophy or argument can become a substitute for it. No mental or physical equipment can excel it. Faith is in a class by itself. Faith transforms the unreal into the real. Faith is superlatively the willing co-operation of humanity with the graciousness of God.

Think of the men and women who have triumphed through faith. Think of the prophets and statesmen, the inventors and poets who have wrought and sung as they walked through the country of doubt toward the land of better things. Think of the countless millions of every generation who, whilst apparently helpless in the stress of their environments, have with unconquerable hope pressed toward their goal! These all enrich the world because they dared to believe they proved that with all material or spiritual riches faith is supremely good!

Why then do we not cultivate faith more than we do? Why does it so often seem foolishness to us? Why do we only yearn for sight when sight is so frequently denied us? Why do we not ardently long for faith when it is profitable at noonday or in the depth of the starless night? Why do we not consent to be refreshed with the serenity that comes from reliance on God as we tread the pathway of life?

There are different kinds of faith. There is a faith that overcomes the world and there is a faith that is overcome by the world. The first is the faith of Jesus—it is the abiding faith. Happy is the man or woman who lives a life made buoyant and strong by faith in the Son of God!

There is wonderful heartiness in this truth. We learn that we deal with a Father of infinite for-givenness and love. When the clouds lower all about us and the storm breaks, and our sight is dim, we with faith valorously step into the darkness, armed that we can not fail. The abundant strength of God upholds us, and His unseen hand guides us on our way. The highroad of faith leads to the wide-open portals of the Heavenly City. We walk by faith, not by sight, up to the eternal verities of God.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

In this paper of August 4 there appeared an article from Rev. G. M. Gibson, D.D., under the title, "The Faith of our Fathers." In that article Dr. Gibson brings various and sundry charges against me, the sum and substance of which is that I am an old foggy, opposed to progress, verging on senility, a sort of religious Rip Van Winkle, who has been asleep for a generation, and deserves sympathy. I expect a lot of folks wish I would go back to sleep and not pester them in their latter day follies. Well, I'll let that Dallas "modern prophet" know that if I am old Rip, my hair long, my shoes about gone, and my old gun rusty, I'm awake and can shoot yet. So stand up, Mr. Gibson, and see if my aim is good.

When I was a boy on the farm, my father and I were going to the field one morning to work. Our path ran for some distance along the edge of a pretty little lake. As we came out at the lake, we saw a wild duck with her brood of ducklings feeding among the water lilies close to the shore. The mother-bird rose and flew just ahead of us, and suddenly dropped in the path as if she had been shot. Dropping my hoe, I ran to pick her up; but she fluttered and limped away, just keeping out of my reach, until she had led me some distance, then she rose and flew out over the lake. I returned to where my father was, crest-fallen, of course, and found him laughing heartily at "the joke the old lady duck" had played on me. He called my attention to the ducks that had dived and gotten away while I was after the mother. They had come up at a safe distance and were swimming away with the old bird, and if ducks can laugh I expect she was laughing at me too. As we went on to our work, my father made the incident the text of a beautiful talk about the goodness of God, who had put such wisdom in a bird. I remember the incident because of the use he made of it to teach me a lesson about God. Thank God for such a father!

Now Dr. Gibson is trying to do exactly what that old duck did that day, divert attention from the main point, lead the public away from the real issue, throw sand in the eyes of the readers of the Advocate, and discredit me by making the public believe I defend Brother Wesley's belief in ghosts. I was goose enough to be fooled by the duck, but Gibson can't fool me so easily. The strategy of a false issue will not succeed in this instance.

What is the real point? Why, it is this, that I stand for the fundamental truth in which Methodism and all evangelical Christianity is founded, and am opposed to the modern liberalism that thinks one religion is as good as another, since you can't be sure about any of them; and especially that I oppose the rationalistic interpretation of the Old Testament as it is given in Dr. J. A. Rice's book. When that book appeared, I wrote a review of it, commending highly what is good in it, but as frankly condemning its error. I was the first to unsheathe my sword against it. I started the music that now threatens to become the roar of a tempest. Dr. Gibson's argument is that, "There is nothing to it. Why be misled by the vaporings of an old dotard in the Pelican pines, who is befogged by Romanism?" We superannuated Dr. Steel to eliminate him, and get him out of the way of progress!" Yes, that is true, but you forgot to screw the coffin lid tight enough.

Here are some of the things Dr. Rice teaches, and which I oppose as contrary to the sacred "faith of our fathers." Dr. Rice says that the narrative of the fall of man given in Genesis was a tale told to explain why snakes crawl; that Abraham's offering up of Isaac was simply an impressive lesson against child murder that was common among the heathen; that prophecy originated with the Canaanites; that Moses was a magician; that the prophets from Moses to Samuel were "little more than roving dervishes;" that during that period "the will of God was supposed to be learned from wizards, and necromancers," and so on. Now when I say that this is contrary to the belief of our fathers and subversive of "the faith once delivered to the saints," Dr. Gibson says: "O, pay no attention to that amiable old idiot in the Pelican pines. Wesley believed in ghosts. We must be broad-minded." There is logic for you! And mark you, it is "modern" at that. Hurrah for modernity!

If Dr. Gibson wants to champion the views of Dr. Rice, and they need a defender, let him do it like a man; and not resort to the ignoble ruse of trying to excite prejudice against me because I am a superannuated man. All that Dr. Rice says is in perfect harmony with his evolutionary theory of history; and just as contradictory of the traditional view of the Bible. The principles of Dr. Rice's interpretation applied to the New Testament will make that as mythological as it makes the Old Testament. The same critical process that makes the first Adam a symbolical character will make Jesus, the "second Adam," also a symbolical character. The whole work is an attempt to explain revealed religion on naturalistic principles. And when I say this is contrary to the faith of our fathers, Rev. G. M. Gibson, D.D., replies, "Pay no attention to that old foggy. He is opposed to progress." Brilliant answer that!

Dr. Gibson sneers at "the faith of our fathers." I am not ashamed to say, even at the risk of being thought only a relic of a vanished past, that to me "the faith of our fathers" is a hallowed heritage. That apostolic faith; the faith founded by Jesus and expounded by Paul; baptized with celestial fire and crowned with victory over all its foes; instinct with the power of the Holy Ghost and resplendent with the hope of heaven—that "faith" is worth the world. Personally, that faith has been to me a vital reality for more than sixty years. Its seeds planted in my heart as a child, by a godly father and mother, blossomed into a virtuous youth, attained maturity with manhood, and has made me a happy, and I trust a useful, man for more than half a century. In prosperity it kept me sober and in adversity it kept me steady, and has been an unfailing source of strength and comfort all along the Sunny Road of life. And now that I have climbed to a height sublime, and far-sweeping horizons unfold in radiant prospect all around me, I look down from the altitude to which this faith has lifted me, and see the enterprising modern engineers, like Kent and Rice, with their little cambric-needle crowbars of higher criticism, and wonder if they really think they can overturn with such instruments the Gibraltar of "the faith of our fathers!"

Carley, you are a young man; they can't say about you what they say about me, that you are old and reactionary, and opposed to progress. Let me tell you, my son, don't you exchange the faith of our fathers for the pallid speculations of Dr. Rice and Dr. Gibson. And don't you let Bishop Mouzon, shaking his corn-stalk scepter and making timid prophets skedaddle into the mesquite thickets, make you believe that Dr. Rice's destructive views of the Bible are the views of all Biblical scholars, or that a man is a fool if he don't believe in evolution. Brother Bryan says, and almost proves, that one is a fool who does believe in it. By the way, why don't Dr. Gibson take a shot at Mr. Bryan, who is standing up so bravely for the faith of our fathers? Is he scared to shoot at the "Commoner," and thinks it safer to tackle the fool in the Pelican pines!

Watermelons are fine, Carley, and Rockyfords delicious. Come up, old chap, and I'll tell you a lot of things that you won't learn from Arthur Brisbane, Dr. Barton, Norman Hapgood, John A. Rice or George Gibson. Ta ta. Mansfield, La.

A TELEGRAM NOT READ TO THE SENATE.

Louisville, Ky., July 28, 1921.

Senators Edwin Broussard and Thomas Watson, Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

As Chairman General Conference Commission on Temperance and Social Service of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, many thousand members of which church are among your constituents, I am wiring you information with which, considering your public position, I had supposed you were familiar, until your statements in Senate, printed in Thursday morning paper.

The Anti-Saloon League has been for over twenty years the national, official, active agency of prohibition advocates. As such the League and its officers, including Mr. Wheeler, have the positive endorsement and support of the Southern Methodist General Conference, the Southern Baptist Convention, and other great Protestant religious organizations throughout the country. Attacks upon the League and upon Mr. Wheeler are in reality attacks upon the great body of men and women whom Mr. Wheeler represents, including many thousands of your constituents, and are and will be in the future so regarded by them.

Inquiries made in Washington or in any town of Louisiana or Georgia would have informed you that public free-will offerings are made annually by nearly all Protestant churches to support the work of the Anti-Saloon League, including salary of Mr. Wheeler, whose ability as a lawyer, and trustworthiness as a sincere reform worker, are recognized by the great moral forces of the nation, and were especially recognized recently by Oberlin University with the Degree of Doctor of Laws, and whose salary for all his time with his recognized great ability and experience of twenty years, does not amount to more than that received by either of you gentlemen for the time you devote to your public duties as United States Senators, with opportunities to add to your income by private work.

I am glad to note that both the Rockefellers subscribe to the work of the Anti-Saloon League, along with other thoughtful, progressive Protestant Christians, who are intensely interested in the absolute overthrow of the abominable, destructive, insolent, law-defying liquor traffic, and in the development of sobriety, industry and morality, but the statement that the Rockefellers or any other small group or coterie of men finance the Anti-Saloon League, or pay the salary of Mr. Wheeler, is not only absolutely false, it is absurd.

Dr. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, and Dr. Chas. O. Jones, of Atlanta, both prominent Methodist ministers, can and will prove to you, if you request them, that the Protestant churches of the States of Louisiana and Georgia contribute freely and gladly to their share of the expenses of the Anti-Saloon League, including the salary of Mr. Wheeler, whom they rejoice to recognize as their able and trustworthy representative in Washington.

As your statements concerning the people whom Mr. Wheeler represents, and the source and amount of his salary were made on the floor of the Senate, I trust the above answer to your statements will be read by you on the floor of the Senate and thus be made a part of the official record. Representing in the above the views of a great body of our Southern men and women, I am,

Yours sincerely,

JAMES CANNON, Jr.

DO YOU MAKE PREACHERS?

Did any young man in your church decide during the past year to devote his life to the work of the ministry of the gospel? Did you ask any boy or young man in your church to do so? Do you know that the church is facing one of the most serious problems of its history because of the shortage of ministers and missionary workers? Jesus said, when the same problem of scarcity of laborers presented itself to the early church, "Pray!" Have you ever prayed that God will thrust forth more laborers into his harvest, perhaps your own son?—Exchange.

BEARING THE CROSS IN THE HOME.

We usually associate cross-bearing with church work, though there is no reason whatever why it should be restricted to this. The error arose probably in the long ago when Christian discipleship was interpreted chiefly as service to the church. This error has been abandoned, yet still unfortunately we seem very largely to gauge Christian service by its relationship to the church, and while we all admit that it means vastly more yet we still persist in undervaluing the service given outside the church. Christ, in His call for daily cross-bearing, hedged it about with no such limitations. From His point of view the disciple was a disciple everywhere and always, and wherever the cross presented itself he must bear it. We have seen a little of what this means in the church; and we may profitably ask what it means in the home.

If cross-bearing is a characteristic of the follower of Jesus Christ, how will it manifest itself in the home life? But some one may ask: "What, isn't it enough to do what you don't like in church work? Surely one can do as he likes at home!" Here is the old idea that Christ is a hard master and that the easy life is the only happy life. But this is all wrong. The man who is determined to have an easy time cannot honestly promise to follow Christ. If he wishes to save his life, then he must lose it. Even Christ can't save a selfish man, except by changing him. And Christians, young and old, must in their home take up their cross.

By this we mean more than one's saying his prayers, reading his Bible, singing hymns, and otherwise performing what we call religious duties. These are only a very small part of life, and few of them should be a cross at all. But apart from these there will be plenty of opportunities for bearing the cross. In the home, as elsewhere, there are certain kinds of work which to us may be disagreeable, and this we must accept, and accept cheerfully, as part of our cross. Dishwashing, sifting coal ashes, sweeping, getting the meals, entertaining troublesome visitors, and a hundred other things will be recognized very distinctly as crosses, that is as things we do not like to do, but perhaps it may be a revelation to some of us to know that these are some of the crosses which Christ's followers must learn to bear. The home life, with all its routine of small, and sometimes tiresome, duties is a divine order, and in the home Christ intends His disciples to show their real character as faithful servants of the common good.

And our experience is that in the home life people do not estimate our religion by our religious performances but by our all-round faithfulness and by the cheerful unselfishness of our common life. It is a great mistake to groan as we bear our cross. The fact that we do our duty will be almost obscured if we do it reluctantly. If we make light of our crosses, we shall find them wonderfully easy to bear; if we begin to pity ourselves, we shall find our lot wonderfully hard.

And, as in other cross-bearing, there is a good deal of comfort and satisfaction in the thought that by our labor others are being helped. There are few who carry so heavy a burden as the mother of a family, but her labor is made wonderfully light by the knowledge that all the hard things which she does are making life easier for those she loves. This is so true that a grumbling mother is almost a certain sign of a sick mother. And if a good brother reads this who always "bears his cross" in the church and never at home, we should like him to know that his religion is of far less value than that of his devoted wife who always bears her cross at home, but seldom at church. The religion which is to save our boys and girls must shine brightest at our own hearth fire, and if it doesn't shine there, it may not be an absolute proof that we haven't any, but it certainly is an indication that such religion as we have is a very imperfect and one-sided thing indeed, something of a caricature, that does religion in general almost as much harm in the long run as it does good. No amount of professing in church or anywhere else will make up for what we do not do at home.—Christian Guardian.

THE QUIET MINISTRY.

By Rev. Edwin A. Brown.

It is right to make such a distinction because there are other ministries which cannot be so designated. There is a ministry that never is so happy as when it has the enthusiastic approval of the crowd. Processions are organized, with bands and banners, so that the world may be duly impressed with its power and importance. Sometimes the leader is an evangelist who preaches his burning sermons and then goes on his flaming way. There are other ministries that are not counted successful until they catch the eye and ear of the world. Billboards are hired, newspaper space is secured, and the world is informed that on such and such a day the prophet will speak. Doubtless these render valuable service in the Kingdom's conquest of the world. But there is another ministry which, if it should be taken out of the world, would leave nothing but heartbreak and despair.

It was this quiet ministry that gave to the life of Jesus such singular sweetness and power. There were times when the crowd hung on his words and the multitudes followed after him. But a great glory was revealed when he stopped by the wayside and touched into sight the eyes of two blind men. There is something inexpressibly tender in his action when he met the widow of Nain with the body of her only son. Of what incomparable worth is that story of his loving the tiny children that ran to climb upon his lap. The great glory of his life was his passionate delight in being able to minister to needy folk.

This all takes on new significance to the writer, who has just spent a few days at Christ Hospital and felt the tender sympathy and skill of that great institution. There is no studied attempt here to gain applause. But from that ideal superintendent down to the newest student nurse the desire to minister to those who are suffering continually dominates. Not once in the very many times that the nurse was called to the bedside was there the least manifestation of anything but a rare devotion to this ministry.

Is there any finer manifestation anywhere of Jesus' deep compassion for men than that found in our great Christian hospitals? Who can measure the healing value of this indefinable thing we call sympathy? Who will presume to say that the surgeon's skill would be as great as it is without this spiritual healing that steals like a quiet fragrance up and down the corridors? It may be that Christ is not taught here, but few can linger many days without realizing that the contagion of his life can easily be caught. The Kingdom is coming, but we are going to see it not by heeding the "Lo, here" or "Lo, there," but by searching out those places where earnest souls daily enter into the sacrificial spirit of Jesus and minister to the sick.

Dr. Chas. E. Jefferson has written very beautifully of the shepherd's reward in his book, "The Minister As Shepherd." It is the reward of an abiding affection in the hearts of those who have felt the pastor's sympathy and love. Such a reward must inevitably come to the men and the women who count it worth while to minister to the fevered brow and aching limb. But an even greater reward awaits them. The story of the lad who waited a lifetime to see some one who should embody the likeness of The Great Stone Face, only to awaken to the fact that the years had chiseled that likeness on his own countenance, is no myth. There are some compensations that those who minister thus will never receive. It is a humble pathway at best, but if as the years go by the light of the Master's face begins to gleam in these faces that bend over our bed-sides, we need not be surprised—it is the well-won crown that time itself cannot take away.—Exchange.

A NOTE FROM DR. BRISCOE CARTER.

Dear Brother Carley: Much to my surprise and delight, I am going to the Ecumenical Conference. I had no idea of going, owing to the expense indent thereto, but on Monday I got a letter from Brother Brown in which he said I was to go ready, as the money was not to pay my way.

Therefore, owing to the kindness of my friends, and especially to the aid of the Ecumenical Conference at the home of Mr. Wynn, Dr. Stephen and Dr. Wynn of our local church, I will have no expense. I will sail from New York for London on August 24. I understand that the Ecumenical Conference will be on the boat.

I wish to express to the brethren and to every one who has taken part in this my deep appreciation for giving me this great opportunity and privilege. This is beyond my dream. I never thought of the Ecumenical Conference. I attended the second in 1891 as high priest in the year ranks, with privilege of the floor, but I sat with our delegation and did not have to sit in the gallery. I believe the most notable man I saw there and also heard, was Wm. Arthur, author of the "Tongue of Fire." That is the only time I ever saw a preacher get up before another and preach his sermon to him as well as for him. Arthur was to preach the opening sermon; he had written it, but "being in age and feebleness extreme," he was not equal to the task of delivering it; so Dr. Stephen on, his close friend, delivered it for him. Since then I have frequently heard one preacher preach another's sermon in his absence.

I am expecting much pleasure and profit from the trip.

My love to all the Advocate family.

"LEST WE FORGET."

By Mary Thompson Stevens.

You are giving your lives without shrinking
You loyal young men of our land,
You are hearing the call of your country,
You're eager for freedom to stand;
You're facing the dangers and perils,
You're ready to go at a word.
But, oh! young men of our homeland,
Are you hearing the call of our Lord?

And you, devoted maidens,
Are helping with hand and with heart,
And when duty demands, you are ready
And earnestly doing your part;
You're giving your time and your talents,
And many the offerings you bring,
But oh, our courageous young women,
Have you given yourselves to your King?

And you, our dear fathers and mothers,
With hearts sore troubled and sad,
Have yet gladly, ungrudgingly given
The dearest and best that you had;
As they left you, those sons and daughters,
To go you hardly know where,
Did they go with a faith firm and steadfast
In answer to your earnest prayer?

Yes, He's calling, and oh! let us hear Him,
It's Christ this sad world needs;
And they'll surely have peace and victory
Who follow wherever He leads;
So let's come to the help of our Master,
Let our wills with His accord;
As we "do our bit" for our country,
Oh! let's do our best for our Lord!

PURITY AND POWER.

It is said that the continued use of distilled water reduces the strength of the physical organism, because, while distilled water is chemically pure and free from germs, it contains nothing but oxygen and hydrogen. The fatty, pebbly mineral salts are left behind during the process of distillation. Morality may be pure and free from faults, but if the indispensable Christ is left behind in the process, there is a reduction in the strength and power of the individual.—The Expositor.

DOINGS AT SOOCHOW UNIVERSITY.

Dear Dr. Carley: This brief account of the splendid year's work which we have had at Soochow University will reach you a bit late, but I believe every Methodist will be interested to know something about what is being done in this great University in the Orient. I say great because there are no universities in the East that are doing better work than Soochow University in thoroughness or completeness of courses of study. There are few that have as large enrollment and none that have a better class of students with which to work. The enrollment of the past year increased 15 per cent over that of the year before, going well over the five-hundred mark. Twenty-seven were graduated from the College of Arts and Science, one with the M. A. degree and four from the Law School. We are compelled to make additions to the teaching staff, as well as enlargements in class room and dormitory facilities.

Soochow University has demonstrated her ability to rank foremost among the eight big colleges and universities of East China in scholarship, athletics and best of all in the building of Christian character for the great China of the future. Space will not permit me to introduce you to some of her graduates of former and recent years who have gone out into all parts of China and are creditably filling important positions in church, State, science and commerce.

The principal feature of the past year's work which I wish to report, however, is the results of a series of special meetings for revival work in the University during May. Consistent and persistent work on the part of the staff and Christian students had been in progress for several weeks previous. Daily faculty prayer meetings and student prayer meetings were held. So when the hour came for the special services we were all ready to work, to pray, to think as one. Splendid preaching was done by Rev. Kaung, University Chaplain and a former graduate of Soochow University.

On Friday night of the first week a call was made for decision for life work. Five students decided to give themselves to the ministry; ten to become teachers; three to engage in Y. M. C. A. work, and six to undertake other forms of Christian service. The following morning a call was made for accepting the Christian life, that is accepting Jesus Christ as personal Savior without deciding as to the matter of church affiliation. They were asked to stand on the chapel platform before the audience. There was spontaneous response. The platform was soon filled and overflowing with many standing about in a front line. It was an unspeakably happy hour. The scene reminded me of Billy Sunday's "trail hitting Revival." There was a profound manifestation of the Holy Spirit stirring with wonderfully strong feeling the hearts of the entire student-body. However, no high pressure methods had been employed and there was no sign of undue excitement. It was manifestly the work of the Lord. One big fellow who was among the last who "hit the trail" said afterwards that he had a terrible hurting in his throat and that after having squirmed about in his seat for some time he decided to get rid of the thing by lining up for Christ. All who went to the platform were asked to remain after the service, when cards were distributed—114 signed cards to become Christians.

On Sunday morning, one week after the close of the revival, sixty-eight persons were baptized in St. John's Church (the Methodist church near the University). Of this number, two were Chinese teachers, one the wife of a teacher, fifty-seven students and seven servants. Here was a remarkable instance of real democracy in China surmounting all lines of rank, or class distinction, and bringing men of all stations together in common fellowship under the banner of Jesus Christ. It was a tremendously impressive service. But this was not the end of the revival. Since then fifteen have been received into the church by baptism. In fact, we have had a "perennial revival" since Easter, when five seniors joined the church. During the entire year eighty students have been received into the church, and I might state that there are quite a few who were converted, and because of family restrictions have not made any confession of their faith.

At the request of the newly converted as well as the old Christian students we have been able to do splendid spiritual culture work through Class Bible Study Meetings during the week in the afternoons. Thus we have not only had the privilege of teaching Science and Literature in the classroom, but the joy and fine opportunity of giving Young China, viz., the students, the type of education that will fit them for the grave issues, the larger responsibilities of life, with which they will surely meet when they shall have gone forth from the halls of their Alma Mater. For China, as well as every nation, to know Jesus Christ and to possess His sacrificial, world-wide spirit is to be properly prepared for the larger, the more abundant life.

THE PRINCIPLE AND SPIRIT OF WORLDLINESS.

By Rev. C. E. McLean.

Worldliness is an extensive term. An unbiased study of its significance in the light of God's Word and will reveals to us that its meaning covers a great host of impulses and practices common in the lives of many who profess to be followers of Christ and exponents of His teachings. The love of the world, against which the devoted apostle so solemnly and emphatically warned, is not merely an expression designating a list of evil affections which bear upon themselves the trade-mark of the devil. It has to do with that realm of life, ruled over by the prince of this world, which extends to the very borderland of the zone wherein dwells the strongest character and the truest and highest spiritual life. In fact, so close does it come to the sphere of Christian living that the deceiver inspires frequent disputes over certain of the landmarks near the boundary line.

The principles for the definition and cure of worldliness are the same, no matter in what way it finds expression. To attack and condemn a practice of evil is legitimate, but is it effective or efficient? We might debate an act; prove its evil tendencies and might even suppress it without quite disturbing the spirit or impulse which makes it possible an act does not make a principle, but rather manifests or endorses it; so that one's conduct exposes his nature, but cannot of itself change that nature. The overthrow or uprooting of the mastering spirit of a heart marks the transformation of that life in all of its moral and spiritual relationships. The natural man is a worldly man, but renewed by the power of the Gospel of Christ he is given a different spirit and a new and holy life is expected of him. To that end the Divine Spirit and the Word stand as a sufficient rule for his daily walk, so that he need not misunderstand any impulses, act or influence of life. Thus is the Christian man impelled to close fellowship with his God and his Bible lest he should fall short of any blessing promised him or to others through him.

The fervent, faithful Christian never investigates the moral value of an act to justify his own deeds. His questioning involves his own highest duty, his highest good and his very safety itself. But many splendid people neglect the Bible and pay but scant heed to the influences brought upon themselves from all the sources embraced under the dispensation of grace. The result is that they have not a very refined ideal of the meaning of the Christian life and too often they seek to interpret Scripture in a manner which favors their conduct. At times certain of them call upon the ministers to prove the harm of some specific act, contending, as they do so, that neither Scripture nor reason justifies an attack upon the thing in question. It is hardly possible that such persons ever weigh the spirit or ponder the origin and trend of impulses, since those who do seek light rather than argument in all matters involving their souls.

All worldliness is kin—from its simplest form to the jealousy and hatred which burned in the hearts of those who murdered the Messiah. It is related because one common spirit fathers it all. Is it, then, a mark of sincerity or of intelligence for one to be irreverent when irreverence has such a bearing upon the staggering evils seen about us? The same question might be put with reference to all the kindred forms of ungodliness possible of conception. And yet, the ministry with its faithful ally, the Christian laity, finds resistance when it undertakes to establish a standard of conduct commensurate with the principles of the Divine Spirit underlying Christianity, and the strongholds of this resistance too often are found in the pursuits and affections of said-to-be Christian people.

Let us choose a representative phase of worldliness and work out a case against it; and, through it, against the ideal of life upon which it flourishes. If we find harm in either principle or act, both are involved, since the one could hardly exist without the other. But to be fair, we must choose something, the nature and influence of which are in question. Perhaps nothing is more familiar to all, in such a light, than the practice of dancing. Men and women of unquestioned spiritual insight have condemned the dance and have relegated it to that sphere where the god of worldliness holds sway. Others have defended it and declared it worthy of the endorsement of fair-minded Christian people.

The very nature of the arguments concerning dancing, together with the fact that perhaps no one would champion its utility as a spiritual asset, serves to indicate that it is in the shadows and that the light of truth falling upon it will never glorify it. This alone should be sufficient to cause serious, sincere people to forsake it. But what shall we say of those moral derelicts who drift in hiding under the surface water of our social life and who too often thrust their forbidding, loathsome natures into the range of vision? Do they prove the harmlessness of a practice wherein many of them came to grief? Are there no longer any moral vultures soaring about the dance hall to feast upon the weak and the faint? But let it not be thought that the main argument against dancing is from the standpoint of the harm it does the weak. If it is worldliness, no one, small or great, can practice it without injury to himself. The plea of super-strength or immunity from temptation by no means establishes one's right to act contrary to God's will. He is presumptuous who imagines that God gives him strength to exploit in worldly pursuits. Continued worldliness, even in the form of neglect toward God, saps out vital powers more quickly and completely than the average man realizes, and the hurricanes of temptation too often prove that strong men who lose their ideal of God, lose with Him their strength.

A real test of the dance is in the impulse which gives it being and in those which in turn grow out of it. The whole idea seems to be based upon instinct rather than the professed notion about culture and grace, for without the participation of both sexes, it would hardly be possible to secure attendance upon such functions. A major undercurrent flowing out of this misuse of instinct, is the development of irreverence. Self-reverence and God-reverence are essential things, going hand in hand, and none need boast of the one without the other. But when self-reverence is of such a nature as to allow promiscuous embracing, it is not to be commended in one one. Nor can the resulting or corresponding God-reverence be worthy of the name. Such physical familiarity can never develop respect for one's self or for God, but will ultimately cheat one out of his moral and spiritual power. The presence of regulations and of chaperons can in no case combat the tendency toward harm, since the Scriptural standard makes the motive and principle the basis of transgression, and not the act.

Every item in the catalog of worldliness must abide the same decision. There is no such thing as moral neutrality. Each deed, with the spirit inspiring it, must be either an asset or a liability, and the happy man is he who ponders the paths of his feet so that all of his ways might be established. At all events, the abundance of the heart will find expression and the deed will reveal the nature of that abundance.

The Home Circle

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

One day, in huckleberry time, when little Johnny flails
And half a dozen other boys were starting with their pails
To gather berries, Johnny's pa, in talking with him, said
That he could tell him how to pick so he'd come out ahead.
"First find your bush," said Johnny's pa, "and then stick to it till You've picked it clean. And let those go chasing about who will
In search of better bushes; but it's picking tells, my son—
To look at fifty bushes doesn't count like picking one."

And Johnny did as he was told; and sure enough,
he found,
By sticking to his bush while all the others chased around
In search of better picking, 'twas as his father said;
For, while all the others looked, he worked, and so came out ahead.
And Johnny recollected this when he became a man,
And first of all he laid him out a well-determined plan;
So, while the brilliant triflers failed with all their brains and push,
Wise, steady-going Johnny won by "sticking to his bush."

THE GREAT ELM.

Of all the trees that Billy knew, the very tallest was the great elm in the meadow lot near the river. He heard that the spire of the new church at the village was more than a hundred feet tall, and he felt sure that his tree was taller than that.

One day Billy and his cousin Robert were playing in the meadow. They sat down to rest for a minute in the shade of the great elm.

"I wish that I could find out how tall this tree really is," said Billy.

"Why, that is easy enough," said Robert.

They ran into the barn, where Robert picked out a small pole from a pile of lumber. With a foot rule which Billy brought from the house they found that the pole measured almost exactly ten feet in length. Taking both the pole and the foot rule, they hurried back to the meadow. "Now you sit down and watch me," said Robert.

He stuck the pole in the ground not far from the elm, but outside the place where its great shadow fell. Then he carefully measured the shadow that was cast by the pole and with equal care measured the distance from the base of the tree to the end of the shadow cast by its topmost branches.

"Your elm is one hundred and twenty-eight feet tall," he said.

"How did you do it?" cried Billy.

"There could be nothing easier," said his cousin.

"The pole is ten feet tall, and I found that its shadow is just five feet in length. Now that means that it takes two feet of pole, with the sun where it is now, to cast a foot of shadow. Of course it is the same with the tree. I found that the length of the tree's shadow is sixty-four feet.
This means that the tree itself is twice sixty-four feet, or one hundred and twenty-eight feet high.
Do you see? That is the way our teacher had us find out the height of our flagpole."

Billy was quick enough to understand, and before another day passed he had measured the height of a score of trees in the meadow.—The Lutheran.

GRAVITATION.

"I came," Olive Chandler said, "to answer your note in person, Dr. Holland. Please don't think me unappreciative, but I'm sure that I am not the one you need for the head of your junior department or of any department of the Sunday school."

"You didn't think so five years ago, Olive. Is that what college has taught you?"

Her pastor's voice had the old friendliness; but, in spite of herself, Olive's own voice hardened.

"College taught me nothing about my religion," she replied. "But it taught me to think for myself and not to accept ready-made traditions. I suppose that sounds foolish to you who know so much about theology. But that's it; they don't force you at college to be interested in any particular department. They leave you free to choose."

"If I understand you, you mean that religion no longer interests you?"

"That depends upon what you mean by religion.
I believe in the cultivation and refinement of personality."

"Suppose you explain a little more clearly what you mean."

"Why, mastering as much of life as you can, mentally, spiritually, physically and materially."

"But the 'spiritually' no longer means Bible spirituality?"

"Perhaps not; surely not in the old sense, for that is out of date to-day."

"Did you ever study astronomy at college?" Dr.
Holland asked.

"Why, yes; a little."

"Then you know that, whereas forty or fifty pounds would be about all you would care to carry on this planet, you could easily carry six times that weight on the moon, but that, if you fell, you would not be able to get up again—all because of the difference in gravity."

"Of course."

Dr. Holland's quiet eyes looked directly into her puzzled ones.

"Child, did you ever stop to ask yourself why the Bible does not interest you any more? Are you giving it a chance? Or are you deliberately putting yourself into a place where the pull of earthly things—good times, success, luxuries—is so strong that your spirit cannot stand erect among them? How is it, Olive Chandler?"—Youth's Companion.

"TIME OUT."

Probably So.

"What is it that keeps the moon in place and prevents it from falling?" asked Jim. "I suppose it's the beams," replied his brother. Pays late.

Same Here.

"So you think you are becoming near-sighted, do you?" said the optician.

"Yes, I do," replied the tired business man.

"What makes you think so?"

"Because I can't see a dollar go near as far as I used to."—Yonkers Statesman.

So She Did.

The cheery caller tried to persuade old Aunt Martha not to dwell upon her troubles, telling her she would feel happier if she ignored them. "Well, honey," said the old lady, "I dunno 'bout dat. I allus 'lowed when de Lord send me tribulations, He done spec' me to tribulate."—Boston Transcript.

A Good Beginning.

Proud Mother—Oh, George, little Harry is just beginning to talk. He's learning to recite "Baa, baa, black sheep, have you any wool?"

Proud Father—Does he really say all that?

Proud Mother—He doesn't say it all yet, but he's got as far as "Baa, baa."—Exchange.

A Painful Process.

An especially enthusiastic lady tourist had kept up her galling fire of questions until she had thoroughly mastered the geography of the country. Then she ventured to ask the brakeman how he had lost his finger. "Cut off in making a coupling between cars, I suppose?"

"No, madam," he said; "I wore that finger off pointing out scenery to tourists."—Exchange.

Nothing Could Help.

The great ocean liner rolled and pitched.

"Henry," faltered the young bride; "do you still love me?"

"More than ever, darling," was Henry's fervent answer.

Then there was an eloquent silence.

"Henry," she gasped, turning her pale, ghastly face away, "I thought that would make me feel better, but it doesn't."—Australian Queensland.

A LITTLE VISIT HOME.

A visit home is always a delightful experience, but it brings unusual happiness when the occasion is such as took us to Ellisville, Miss., a few days last week. On Tuesday, August 9, Rev. and Mrs. Lyman Carley had been married fifty years—and all the children gathered on the Sunday preceding to pay affectionate tribute to the father and mother who have been a benediction to them all the days of their lives. There was no pomp or ceremony connected with the event—simply a joyous reunion of hearts held together by the bonds of love in this life, a bond which, please God, will hold them together—every one—in the life to come. Letters and telegrams from friends in other places and kindly remembrances from friends and neighbors in Ellisville added to the joy of the occasion.

We would not presume to recount the events and experiences that have been crowded into the fifty years during which these servants of God have traveled life's road together, but their history would furnish a thrilling record of hard work, faithful performance of duty, many blessings, keen suffering, bitter struggles, deep sorrow, great happiness, and now, toward the end of the journey, a calm joy that this world alone cannot give. We are not so sure but that the view from the downward slope of the delectable mountains is more enchanting than that from the ascent. Surely there is nothing in the serene eventide of life that should make it a period to be dreaded.

A happy home life is the nearest approach to heaven we know anything about on earth. It grows out of a marriage based upon love and continued in the sincere affection that becomes stronger with the passing years. While self-sacrifice and oftentimes suffering are met with, still the joy is greater than any pain can ever be. The need of this land, as it is of all lands, is a return of the simple home life where religion is practiced and taught, where the children are reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and where the elemental virtues of right character are inculcated by precept and example. It is a severe indictment of the modern home that so many of our young people are carried away by the swift current of unwholesome social diversions and that so many of them contract marriages that cannot stand the stress of unregulated affections and uncontrolled passions under the same roof. We thank God that we were born into a Christian home and that we were reared by parents who know and love the Lord. A happy home for fifty years—what a contribution our father and mother have made to the world!

THE CLOSING QUARTER.

The announcements of the fourth round of quarterly conferences which are now beginning to appear remind us that the year is drawing to a close. It has been a good year in many respects, in spite of the financial difficulties our people have had to face, and we can enter upon the closing quarter with gratitude to God for the countless blessings he has bestowed upon us.

But there is still plenty of time in which to make an improvement upon the record thus far. As the summer passes, there will be opportunity for reorganizing the working forces of the church and undertaking an intensive kind of work that will go far toward making this one of the best years in our history. There should be a great ingathering of souls between now and Conference, and a strengthening of all the organizations at work in the church.

There are two questions to be asked at the fourth quarterly conference that have an important bearing upon the welfare of the church for the next year. Those questions are the seventeenth and the twentieth—"Who are elected stewards for the ensuing year?" and "Who are elected Sunday school superintendents?" Since the duty of nominating these important officials rests upon the pastor, the pastor is called upon to exercise his very best judgment in choosing men and women who will really undertake to perform the duties that go with these offices. There may be a place sometimes for honorary stewards and superintendents, but our observation convinces us that there are not very many occasions for electing people to these offices who will not really do the work. The secret of a successful business year in the work of the church is in the personnel of the board of stewards, and the secret of a wide-awake Sunday school is in the kind of superintendent it has.

HELP FOR THE PRAYER MEETING.

A monthly publication of the Department of Spiritual Resources is "The Prayer Meeting." The first issue of this eight-page publication bears date of August, 1921. It magnifies the prayer meeting. The suggestions for prayer meeting programs and material and other information will be of real help to the pastor and to others who earnestly desire to make the prayer meeting a great training school for developing spiritual power and for increasing the efficiency of the church.

The Spiritual Resources Manual, issued August 1, is a booklet of more than fifty pages. It deals with the prayer meeting, and is a valuable handbook for pastors, lay leaders and other lay workers. It carries suggested prayer meeting topics for five months, and gives much other valuable material for the pastor and lay worker. The program it presents to the church will bring in a new day if only its suggestions are carried out in the activities of each congregation. Will the church use to the best possible advantage the opportunities offered?

THE FAMILY ALTAR LEAGUE.

In the activities of the Department of Spiritual Resources of the Christian Education Movement and the Missionary Centenary, one of the immediate goals is one family altar to every twenty members of our church. During the quadrennium, and especially during the present year, substantial progress has been made in securing family altar pledges, and yet the church as a whole is far short of this goal. In number of family altar pledges reported, the Central Texas Conference holds first place with a total of 964; North Alabama second 894. Western North Carolina 790, South Carolina 760, Virginia 755, Alabama 754, North Texas 738, Upper South Carolina 737, Florida 734, South Georgia 709. In percentage of new family altars on a basis of total membership, the first seven Conferences, in the order named are: Illinois, Florida, South Carolina, Kentucky, Western Virginia, New Mexico, North Arkansas.

The total number of family altar pledges received to date is 19,748. In this showing is reason for encouragement, but much yet remains to be done in the development of the spiritual resources of our church. Dr. P. L. Cobb, Secretary of the Spiritual Resources Department, is anxious to get in touch with every pastor and lay worker interested in these vital matters. Write to him at the Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn., and secure literature and other valuable information.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor of our church at Alexandria, La., has gone to Santa Rosa, Calif., where he and his wife will enjoy a vacation until September 1.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, our pastor at Shaw, Miss., recently held a revival meeting at Litton, near Shaw, in which there were thirteen accessions to the church.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Pontotoc, Miss., recently assisted Rev. J. F. Owen in a good meeting on the Smithville charge, in which there were seven additions to the church.

Miss Inez Rodwell, the organist of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., has just completed ten years of service in that important and responsible position.

Rev. A. W. Plyler has been elected editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate, to succeed Dr. G. T. Rowe, recently elected Book Editor and editor of the Methodist Quarterly Review.

Substantial progress has been made this year in the work of the church at Magnolia, Miss. There has been a net gain of ten per cent in the membership thus far. Rev. J. Early Gray is the pastor.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, Mississippi Conference evangelist, has recently been with Rev. W. B. Alsworth in a series of good meetings on the Utica charge. From there Brother Bennett will go to the Shiloh camp meeting.

Dr. G. H. Lambeth, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, has been compelled to give up his work until Conference on account of impaired health. Rev. J. R. Loughton will serve as editor until that time.

As a result of a meeting at Sunny Hill, La., in which he was assisted by Rev. L. W. Cain, of Franklinton, La., Rev. F. N. Sweeney has recently organized a church with 26 members. It is planned to build a church there in the near future.

Rev. G. S. Harmon, superintendent of the Methodist Hospital at Hattiesburg, Miss., has recently been a great sufferer from sciatic rheumatism, having had to undergo an operation. The latest report we have seen indicates an improvement in his condition.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis and family, of Laurel, Miss., are spending a two-weeks' vacation at Lake Junaluska, N. C., where they are enjoying the various meetings at that delightful spot. The vacation was officially voted Brother Lewis by his board of stewards.

Rev. J. E. Selfe, pastor of Epworth Church, this city, is attending the Bluff Creek camp meeting this week, where he is leading the singing. Brother Selfe recently returned from a visit to his old home in Michigan, where he was with his mother and other relatives and friends.

We are in receipt of a post card from Rev. J. H. Brooks, chaplain on the U. S. S. North Dakota, written from the Southern Drill Grounds where battle drill and target practice are being held. After August 27 the vessel will return to New York. Chaplain Brooks states that he has a fine field of service.

Brother E. E. Williamson, of Crew Lake, La., has been a reader of the Advocate for about thirty-five years—and his father took it before him. In renewing his subscription he says: "No Methodist family can afford not to read this paper if they want to keep up with the most wholesome news of the times."

Rev. W. R. Harvell is doing the preaching at the morning and evening hours at the Bluff Creek camp meeting now in progress, and Rev. J. W. Lee, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is preaching in the afternoon. A Bible study is being conducted by Rev. Alonzo Early at nine o'clock each morning.

Miss Lucy Chase, daughter of Bishop and Mrs. Collins Denny, was married to Mr. T. E. Wright, on August 10, at Richmond, Va.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer reports a large summer congregation at the Felicity Church last Sunday at 11 a.m., when he filled the pulpit, the pastor being away.

Mrs. E. L. Alford, of Montrose, Miss., in ordering the Advocate sent to her recently married son, at Charlotte, N. C., says: "Their home is not complete without their church paper." We agree with her heartily.

Rev. T. W. Adams, a distinguished and beloved superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, has been in good health during the summer, but we rejoice to hear that his condition is somewhat improved.

Mr. W. D. Davis, of Brookhaven, Miss., president of the Mississippi State Bankers' Association, has been largely in demand this summer for addresses on various occasions. Mr. Davis is a prominent Methodist layman, being Conference treasurer.

"I am herewith shoving some mountain breezes toward your editorial sanctum—hope they will reach you ozone-laden and refreshing," writes Mrs. J. M. Wyatt on a beautiful post card from Lake Juhaluska, N. C. The breezes did not quite reach here, but the view of the mountain scenery was "delicious and refreshing."

Sister T. S. Randle writes from Yoakum, Texas, that there were many responses to her letter in the Advocate concerning her wedding anniversary and her desire to erect a monument to the memory of her lately deceased husband, an honored member of the Louisiana Conference. Her heart is full of gratitude to the friends who so kindly remembered her.

Miss Laura E. Browne, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Mr. Alton B. Alford, of Charlotte, N. C., were recently married. Mr. Alford is a son of Rev. E. L. Alford, of the Mississippi Conference, and is a travelling man out of Charlotte, where he and his bride will make their home. We extend congratulations and pray the richest blessings of heaven upon them.

The Protestant churches of Canton, Miss., are making full preparations for the Gypsy Smith meeting to be held there September 4-25. Twelve-a-week prayer meetings are being held in homes, the force of ushers is being organized, and the choir is being trained under the direction of Mr. E. A. Roper. A tabernacle with a seating capacity of 2000 is being erected on the old fair grounds.

We greatly regret missing any of the brethren who favor the Advocate office with a call, but that is sometimes our misfortune. While we were at Ellisville, Miss., last week, attending our first "golden wedding," Rev. C. F. Emery, of Tylertown, Miss., Rev. A. J. Martin, of St. Martinsville, La., and Rev. C. E. McLean, of Baton Rouge, La., called. We hope they will have occasion to come again.

According to press reports, Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., preached a sermon on Sunday evening, August 7, that "has brought about more discussion and more favorable comment than any pulpit utterance there for many years." According to the report we saw, Dr. Countiss did some plain talking in discussing the social and home life and conditions of to-day. Some such message is needed all over the land.

Mrs. Emma B. Baynard, of Alexandria, La., passed away in this city recently, having come here for medical treatment. She was a devout member of the Methodist Church and was active in all its work until failing health made it impossible for her to continue her labors. She is survived by her husband and four children, one of whom is Mrs. H. T. Liverman, of Mansfield, La. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow because of the passing of this saintly woman.

The Southern Baptist Convention for 1922 will be held in Jacksonville, Fla.

Rev. J. T. McCafferty, of Minter City, Miss., recently assisted in a fine meeting at North Carrollton.

Dr. B. F. Jones, our pastor at Newton, Miss., is enjoying, with his family, a vacation, part of which was spent at Biloxi, Miss.

We learn from an exchange that of the 308 graduates of Princeton University this year, only eight will enter the ministry.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, our pastor at Grenada, Miss., is enjoying a vacation with his family at the Seashore Camp Grounds.

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, is spending his vacation in visiting the Universities of Illinois, Iowa, and Minnesota to study the Wesley Foundations, and Winona Lake to get ideas about organizing a summer assembly.

Here is a thought-provoking item that we take from an exchange: "South Carolina Baptists put their State paper into every Baptist home during the Seventy-five Million Campaign, and 98.38 per cent of the churches in the State contributed to the campaign. No other State equalled that percentage."

A very profitable revival meeting was closed at the Eminence church, on the Seminary charge, Mississippi Conference, on August 11. The preaching, which was done by Rev. A. S. Byrd, of Williamsburg, Miss., was of such kind as greatly to strengthen the church. There were ten additions to the membership. A meeting began at the Pleasant Ridge church, on the same charge, last Sunday, in which the preaching is being done by Rev. W. W. Murray, of Auburn, Miss. Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook is pastor of the Seminary charge.

Dr. Alfred F. Smith has resigned the editorship of the St. Louis Christian Advocate to become chaplain of Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. Dr. G. B. Winton has been elected editor to succeed him, and Rev. Chas. O. Ransford has been elected associate editor, both of whom are well known to the church, Dr. Winton having been editor of the Nashville Advocate for eight years. They may make a better paper than Dr. Smith did—but it will be because they have larger resources to draw upon in the way of financial support. Dr. Smith's work as editor has not been surpassed by any of his brethren of the tripod.

Rev. J. L. Neill, Mrs. Neill, their little daughter Nellie, and Miss Ruth Reed, of Nashville, Tenn., honored the Advocate office on Friday of last week with a pleasant visit. They were on their way to Cuba, where Brother Neill will spend several weeks in the interest of the Sunday school work, and where Miss Reed will remain as a missionary. Their previous plan to make the trip overland to Tampa and sail from there was changed because of convenient boat connections at New Orleans. They did come from Nashville to Gulfport by automobile, however, making several stops along the way, one of these being at Montrose, Miss., Brother Neill's old home.

A correspondent who, unfortunately, forgot to sign his name, writes us a brief but interesting account of the opening of the beautiful new church at Crystal Springs, Miss. The old building was erected in 1858 and dedicated in 1859, Dr. C. K. Marshall officiating. One of the largest benefactors of the church in its early days was Mrs. Emily R. Coker, who passed away in 1914. The new building is nearing completion, the basement being in use now. The old building has been sold to the Negroes and removed several miles in the country, where it will continue to serve as a house of worship. Rev. J. S. Pureell, now of Philadelphia, Miss., was active in promoting the new building while pastor at Crystal Springs. Rev. W. B. Jones is the present pastor.

THE TRUE CHURCH.

The Commercial Appeal of August 8 contained a resolution from the Sardis (Miss.) Baptist Church concerning "The Roger Williams Monument" that is being erected in Washington, D. C. It denies that Roger Williams was the founder of the Baptist Church. No one knows who founded the Baptist Church, but Williams was one of the earliest preachers of that faith in America. If Williams was represented as being the founder of the Baptist Church in the world, then the Sardis Baptists were right in their denial.

The third part of this resolution reads as follows: "We claim the church to be ours as the Baptist Church that Christ was talking of to Peter when he said, 'Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.'" Concerning this passage of Scripture the late Bishop Ryle, of England, says in his commentary on St. Matthew: "The church which Jesus promises to build upon a rock is the blessed company of all faithful people. It is not the visible church of any one nation, or country, or place. It is the whole body of believers of every age, and tongue, and people. It is a church composed of all who are washed in Christ's blood, clothed in Christ's righteousness, renewed by Christ's Spirit, joined to Christ by faith, and epistles of Spirit in life. It is a church of which every member is baptized with the Holy Ghost, and is really and truly holy. It is a church which is one body. All who belong to it are of one heart and one mind, hold the same truths, and believe the same doctrines as necessary to salvation. It is a church which has only one Head. That head is Jesus Christ Himself. 'He is the head of the body.'"

"Let us beware of mistakes on this subject. Few words are so much misunderstood as the word 'church.' Few mistakes have so much injured the cause of pure religion. Ignorance on this point has been a fertile source of bigotry, sectarianism, and persecution. Men have wrangled and contended about Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Independent churches, as if it were needful to salvation to belong to some particular party, and as if, belonging to that party, we must of course belong to Christ. And all this time they have lost sight of the one true church, outside of which there is no salvation at all. It will matter nothing at the last day where we have worshiped, if we are not found members of the true church of God's elect."

Without further comment I ask that the readers of the Advocate compare the claims of the Sardis Baptist Church with Bishop Ryle's exposition of this passage of Scripture.

PREACHERS NEED TO HEAR PREACHING.

Ever so often the preacher ought to get away from his church and sit in a pew. He should not content himself with a visit to some church of the same capacity as his own, where he will inevitably take notes and make comparisons. Neither should he go to hear a preacher of the same caliber as himself, in which case he is sure to get little out of the service or the sermon beyond the mechanics of both. He must go, as a worshiper, into a church equipped and manned so excellently that he will forget everything but his own soul under the inspiration of the hour. His congregation at home should open the way for him to do this not less than twice a year. They should not expect him to come back and report, either, on what he heard. He should do this for the sake of his own spiritual culture. Incidentally, the restoration of the joy of his own salvation will inevitably affect his preaching.—Christian Century.

Rev. A. J. Cook, of Cape Town, Africa, while touring the United States recently gathering the facts regarding the results of prohibition in this country, said that in South Africa prohibition had become an issue already. The drys there hope for a new law allowing some form of local option, in another five years. Five years later, or in 1930, they hope to have prohibition measures enacted into law.—Exchange.

The great blessings of mankind are within us, and within our reach, but we shut our eyes, and, like people in the dark, we fall foul upon the very thing we search for, without finding it.—Seneca.

REVIVALS ON THE OAK RIDGE CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Four of our six meetings have been held. The meeting at Bovina in April has been reported already. I feel indebted to Brother Wells for his good work there in that it abides and the whole life of the church has shown the effects of the meeting. Bovina made a splendid record in the Educational Campaign and this I attribute to the spiritual interest awakened in the meeting.

Brother Cottrell, of Gibson Memorial, preached the first two sermons at Culkin Academy and then Rev. N. B. Bond, pastor of the Baptist church at Edwards, preached the remaining time. The sermons of each were thoughtful and helpful and added much to the spiritual life of this community. South Mississippi has produced no finer young man than N. B. Bond and will some day be proud of him.

Brother George H. Thompson held our meeting at Oak Ridge and won the people by his clear, strong preaching. The testimony of every one was that no better preaching had ever been done in the community and the effect of his messages remains with the people, who would welcome him gladly for another meeting.

We have just closed our meeting at Flower Hill, where Brother Saunders helped. I have never seen a finer spirit in a meeting than here and the few days were enjoyable and helpful. Brother Saunders was at his best. Seven members were received on profession of faith.

Our next meeting is at Porter's Chapel next Sunday with J. O. Ware to preach for us, and our last meeting is at Bradley Chapel the first Sunday in September. We will have the former pastor, Rev. J. M. Lewis, to preach and the members who were his friends in former years will welcome him gladly. A splendid prayer meeting is being held in this community.

Pray for us. J. B. CAIN.

REVIVAL AT DE RIDDER, LA.

We have just closed a good revival at DeRidder, La. The first few days of the meeting the preaching was done by P. M. Brown, C. C. Jones, local Baptist pastor, and the writer.

Brother Dan Kelly did the rest of the preaching. He did it well. He is the best of help. In fact, I have never seen his superior in revival work, taking him as a whole. He got hold of the situation and the power of God was felt. He is "a workman that needs not be ashamed."

Brother John Kelly "blew his own horn" and he did it well. He did splendid work with the choir. Our people all love Brother John.

Other denominations co-operated with us in the meeting, which was an unusual thing for De Ridder. All the leading business houses closed for the 10 o'clock services. The crowds were large at all services. Often at night our large church was crowded to its utmost capacity. We did not have larger crowds at the Annual Conference, which convened with us last year.

We had something over eighty to apply for church membership. About six or seven of this number went to the Baptist Church. One feature of the revival was personal work done by our young people. Frank McMahon, president of our Epworth League, did a splendid work with the boys. I think he got a good deal of inspiration from the Epworth League assembly at Mansfield.

As a result of the meeting every department of the church work was strengthened. At the last service sixty men and one hundred women pledged themselves to lead prayer meeting if called upon.

As the pastor of the church I give my unqualified endorsement to the work of the Kelly brothers. I am thankful to God that they came our way. Brother Dan Kelly just preaches the old-time gospel, denouncing sin from every standpoint, and the Lord blesses his labors.

C. E. FIKE, P. C.

THE OLD PROPHET AGAIN.

Some stories are never through. The world tires of them, and even crucifies some of the story-tellers, but still the tale runs on. One generation of Jews would slay certain seers, and the next repairs or garnishes their sepulchers. Elijah was none too popular in his day, but when Jesus came from Nazareth with a new-old message from on high, and fascinated the crowds who yet feared Him, some said that Elijah had come back, while others, not so definite in their historical criticism, declared that "one of the old prophets was risen again." So the ancient testimony becomes ever and anon the news of this morning, the daily papers which you read over the breakfast table speaking the language of Moses, moralizing after the manner of Solomon, or illustrating, by some local happening, just the kind of thing which Paul described or Jude predicted.

Of course we all believe in progress, but any real advance carries along with it the great principles of morality which were old when Abraham was young, and are yet fresh, though Moses, the great lawgiver, lies many centuries back of to-day. The "ancient mariner," to speak in a metaphor, is always with us. This does not mean that we must go on repeating the shibboleths of previous generations, but rather that there are "things that abide," of which every generation must take account, and which it must translate into its own codes and customs of daily social and commercial action.

There are age-long testimonies to truth and righteousness which are just as much in order in America to-day as they were in Ur of the Chaldees, or in Goshen, or in Canaan. Stealing is just as much stealing to-day as it was in the time of Abraham, although we admit it may be more difficult now to define precisely, in various social contacts, just how and in what references various commandments apply. It is also a fact that the phraseology, localisms, and metaphorical utterances of the minor prophets seem hardly germane to the morning news, and bulls of Bashan do not quite suggest "bulls" of Wall Street. Yet essentially the same moral issues are being raised to-day that were uppermost in the time of Micah, Hosea, or Malachi: it is still the widow's cry versus the oppressor's heel; it is yet right against might, love against hate, and divine grace the only possible solvent of the troubles of modern Israel.

The prophetic function can never be slighted in any age. The prophet is God's spokesman, an interpreter to make His word plain, an ambassador to reconcile men one to another by uniting them all to God, a moral leader in the vanguard of all possible progress. If we do not hear and heed him, we shall miss our way; we must get back to the old path, or we shall lose ourselves in a moral cul-de-sac, a bog of doubt, or a labyrinth of eternal despair.—Zion's Herald.

INFLUENCE.

Here is a little story which it would be well for you to pigeonhole in your mind and place in your scrapbook: "A little more than two hundred years ago an old Puritan doctor wrote a book and died without knowing whether his book had done any good. The name of the book was 'The Bruised Reed.' Richard Baxter was converted through reading 'The Bruised Reed,' and he wrote 'A Call to the Unconverted.' Philip Doddridge was converted through reading Baxter's book and wrote 'The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul.' William Wilberforce was converted through reading this book and wrote 'A Practical View of Christianity.' Thomas Chalmers read Wilberforce's book and was converted. A young minister by name of Leigh Richmond read Chalmers' book, and he was inspired to write 'The Dalrymple's Daughter,' which has been the means for the conversion of tens of thousands." This true story shows how a book, sermon, poem, or article may form a link in the golden chain of influence which in God's providence grows longer and longer. But be it remembered that links in the golden chain are formed by kind words and good deeds. A smile to-day may be a sunburst of glory to men and women a century hence.—Christian Advocate.

The winner of the prize at the whist party may pride herself on her gains, but she need not be surprised if her son beats her record that night at the gambling table.—Exchange.

THE NEWS AT ST. MARK'S HALL, NEW ORLEANS.

On account of our board's policy of suspended meetings during July and August, we take this means of informing members and friends of news and late developments. The most disturbing fact at present is that the house occupied by our work for several years has been sold, and we are placed under the necessity of finding a temporary home for the coming year. We are confidently expecting by the end of that time to be domiciled in our very own new home.

Miss Breedon leaves this week for her home in Roanoke, Va. Misses Ellison and Rieke are still on vacation. Miss Abbie Bishop, of Texas, is a very acceptable summer worker, having charge of the clinic and doing "whatsoever her hand finds to do" with a will.

Dr. Graves has found it necessary to relinquish his work at St. Mark's, and we wish here to extend our appreciation of his faithful service, and to welcome Dr. Crielow, who is building up a general clinic.

The Junior Missionary Club held its usual quarterly public meeting, at which time the mite boxes were opened. In spite of a pouring rain, fourteen were present at the home of little Miss Neff, where we were informed and entertained.

St. Mark's Athletic Association completed its part in the indoor League of the A. A. U., and though

YOUNG GIRL FINDS RELIEF

Wants to Tell Other Girls All About It

Evansville, Ind.—"I am eighteen years old and have been bothered for several months with irregular periods. Every month my back would ache and I always had a cold and felt drowsy and sleepy. I work in a millinery shop and I went to work every day, but felt stupid and would have such cramps. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and had heard several women talk of it, so mother got me some. This Vegetable Compound is wonderful and it helped me very much, so that during my periods I am not now sick or drowsy. I have told many girls about your medicine and would be glad to help anyone who is troubled with similar ailments. You may use my testimonial as you like."—STELLA LINXWILER, 6 Second St., Evansville, Indiana.

Some girls lead lives of luxury, while others toil for their livelihood, but all are subject to the same physical laws and suffer in proportion to their violation. When such symptoms develop as irregularities, headaches, backaches, bearing-down sensations and "the blues," girls should profit by Miss Linxwiler's experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

only twice in the series was the score in their favor, it is to their credit that they played to a finish in this their first series of indoor baseball.

Summer time is always the most profitable and happy period for Boy Scout and Camp Fire work, and our groups are proving no exception. The Boy Scouts have had hikes, craft work and a watermelon party as special features. Keewaydin Camp Fire presented a play very cleverly to a well-filled house, bringing their camping fund to almost $60. The total expense of camping for one week was $115.07, including transportation. Tents were pitched back of the Y. W. C. A. vacation home at Waveland, Miss., with fourteen in the party. The verdict of all concerned is that this is the best of four annual camps. The true Camp Fire spirit was everywhere evident, and we venture indelible impressions for good have been left in every case.

Our thanks are hereby tendered to all who so generously gave of time, strength and patience in the vacation school work, and to those who donated cars for the final treat, a lovely drive through City Park and to West End. We are particularly indebted to Miss Frankie Wood, one of our former Camp Fire girls and a St. Mark's Sunday School teacher; and to Miss Florence Leitz, of Rayne Memorial church, who gave continual service throughout the month. The love of their pupils and the gratitude of the resident workers are their reward. Mrs. Rumph had the work of securing volunteers, and she carried it through in a masterful manner. Mrs. Kern and Mrs. Hill, of First Church, were present about half of the sessions. Mrs. Parker and Mr. Prescott planned the ride.

Sixteen boxes of clothing, fruit, etc., have been received during the month. Space forbids our publishing here the donors.

HOW TO BE A MARTYR, HERE AND NOW.

What is a martyr?

Why, a Christian of centuries ago, who was put to death because he would not deny his faith.

Right, but is that the only definition?

No; there have been martyrs in our own time, such as the missionaries and native Christians who were killed by the Boxers in 1900, choosing rather to die than turn away from Jesus Christ.

Right again. Then a martyr is one who, in far-away times or far-away places, has gone to death as a testimony of his loyalty to his Lord?

Of course; but it seems as though I remember that "testimony" and "martyr" are somehow related. Is not our word "martyr" the exact Greek word word that means "witness"?

So our pastor once said in prayer meeting.

Then one does not need to stand in the arena of the Coliseum at Rome, or on the steps of a Chinese temple, in order to be a "martyr"?

No; all he needs to do is to be a witness; to give in his testimony.

Testimony to what?

To the facts of the Christian message, as one has proved them in his own life.

Are there many of these great facts?

Not many, but they have far-reaching meanings. Facts like these:

God loves all men.

He wants to make them free from the power of sinful living, and from the guilt that belongs to the sinful living.

He has proved this by the gift of Himself in Jesus Christ, who is God with us, and who is the Savior of sinners.

I have given my life into Jesus Christ's keeping. I mean to obey Him. I do love Him, and I try to follow His example.

He has delivered me from the fear of death, and also from the fear of a life lived without His help.

He has given me a new interest in all men, a new power to see the right and to do it, and a confident faith in life that shall be lived with Him forever.

I am not a perfect disciple, but I know I am a Christian, and that what Jesus has done for me He can do for every one.

Certainly, one who has such a testimony as this is a true martyr, a witness to the truth of his religion.

Yes; and by such testimony as this, more than by all argument, is he likely to win his chum.—Selected.

JESUS KNOWS.

Jesus knows how weak and sinful

And how poor I am to-day;

By the grace he gives me only

Have I strength of heart to pray;

Blessed Jesus, loving Savior,

Keep me pure from day to day.

Jesus knows the heavy burdens

I must bear, with sin around,

And he knows my feet will falter

Till his grace my heart has found;

Blessed Jesus, precious Savior,

In his strength my all is found.

Jesus knows the doubts and dangers

That surround my heavenward way,

And he sends his love to cheer me

When with burdened heart I pray;

Precious Jesus, Friend and Savior,

Keep me in the narrow way.

Sunday School

LESSON FOR AUGUST 21.

Topic: Paul Champions Christian Liberty.

Scripture Lesson: Acts 15:1-14, 19-21.

Golden Text: "We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved." Acts 15:11.

Home Readings: Monday, The Council at Jerusalem, Acts 15:1-6; Tuesday, Peter's Statement, Acts 15:7-11; Wednesday, The Counsel of James, Acts 15:13-21; Thursday, The Council's Decision, Acts 16:22-29; Friday, Paul and Timothy, Acts 15:36-16:5; Saturday, A Light to the Nations, Isaiah 49:6b-13; Sunday, Joy to the World, Isaiah 35:1-10.

Teaching Points.

1. Questions of doctrine and conduct will inevitably develop as the gospel becomes operative in the lives of the people. In the settlement of these questions, it is always well to submit them to those who are in position to advise wisely and discreetly.
2. The strongest proof of the truth of any doctrine is to be found in the results it produces. The Gentiles were actually converted—the gospel must have been intended for them also.
3. The great element in Christianity is saving faith—not the observance of minute rules and regulations, no matter by whom established.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES:

The past week was spent with Rev. G. L. McNeese at the Polkville Church on the Trenton charge. We were there from Sunday through Thursday. We had two lectures on Sunday school work each day, and also preaching twice a day. We received two into the church on profession of faith.

No one took the examination, but all seemed to appreciate the work done, and look forward to a meeting of the same character at a future date. While this method of getting work done does not get you very far as to the number of schools that you visit, it certainly does give you an opportunity of doing more definite work than any other method that I know.

We are preparing the percentage of the districts on Sunday School Day. When you get yours, will you not join us in making it 100 per cent?

We feel that the Sunday School Board has been of more value to the Mississippi Conference this year than ever before, and we are hoping, praying and trusting that we will get a hearty and sympathetic co-operative support throughout the Conference. Don't fail to help us in our hour of need.

Smith & Lamar has gotten out a very beautiful program for Rally Day, "The Whiteness Harvest." We believe that this program will be very profitable and helpful to all who use it.

We would like to have the names of several hustlers who would be willing to take charge of a club for the Church School Magazine. Besides premiums, a very good commission is given. Let us hear from you in regard to this.

Don't forget to pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

When this is in print the Corinth District S. T. S. will be a matter of history.

Already twenty-five have enrolled for the Sardis District S. T. S. from the town of Sardis, and there will be others. Every one of the towns nearby has promised to send one or two cars full each day. Senatobia, Como, Batesville, and Shuford have made some good promises. We shall see which is to be the banner school for attendance.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, who has been taking special work in religious education in Northwestern University, expects to spend one day with us at Corinth. We shall be glad to see the new head of the Department of Religious Education of Grenada College back on his native soil.

After these schools are finished we have promised to teach classes at Vardaman, Marks, and Durant. If you want a class taught in your circuit or are generous enough to have two or three charges combine for six days in the study of one of the books of the course, write me and arrange for a date.

The Publishing House has gotten out a very attractive Rally Day program. Send for a sample copy. The price is 50 cents a dozen. It is time to plan to bring in all the summer visitors who have been running around the past two months. If you did not observe Sunday School Day, it may be you can have a great Rally Day and take the offering for our Sunday school work. The Sunday school contributes more often to other enterprises and gives more liberally to them than it does to its own improvement. The Sunday School Board asks for only one offering during the year and this offering is used for the Sunday school. Here is the way the church uses the money: Out of every one hundred dollars the pastor is paid $71; to benevolences, $17; for music, $5; the janitor, $4; the Sunday school, $3. The Sunday school gives back one dollar of the three it receives.

Frequently we hear the complaint that the modern Sunday school is not teaching enough of the Bible. The charge may be true, but the school of to-day that uses the graded lessons as they are meant to be used is teaching a great deal more of the Word of God than the schools of a few years ago. I had the pleasure of examining the lessons of the last quarter of three juniors in the school at Webb, Mr. Marvin Gieger, superintendent. These lessons were written by Virginia Townsend, Bertram and Mather Shine. These children not only wrote the passages of Scripture, but they were required to commit them to memory. All the Scripture they studied was related to their lives. We are doing more to teach the children how to become God's children and to live together as his children than we did, even five years ago.

Japan, the Key to the East, is a three months' course of study for young people and adults. Heroes of Faith in Japan is a study for intermediates and seniors. The daily papers are full of rumors of war with Japan. We ought to know something about these remarkable people that we are rubbing against. Ought we not teach that it is anti-Christian to go to war? Is it not high time we should war against war? Politicians do not fight in the wars they start; the people fight them and pay the bills.

There are two other studies, The Church and its Sacraments, and Studies in Methodist History, that many of our adult classes need and would enjoy.

THE TEXTILE INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE.

The Textile Industrial Institute of Spartanburg, S. C., is probably the only school of its kind in the world. It has for its purpose the training and education of cotton mill operatives, who otherwise would remain illiterate. The school is owned and controlled by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is their only mission school for some three-quarters of a million Anglo-Saxon cotton mill operatives. There are no stockholders, and no person or persons share in any of the profits (should there be any).

Cotton mill boys and girls are allowed to attend the Textile Industrial Institute and continue to perform the work with which they are familiar. They work a week in the Model Mill, a part of the school plant, and go to school a week. They receive the regular wages for their labors, which is more than sufficient to pay for their schooling and living expenses. The school offers a regular high school course, and its graduates may enter any of the colleges unconditionally. Many of the graduates go on through college.

It is not the purpose of the school to educate boys and girls away from the cotton mill, but the aim is to send them back to the mill villages better equipped and trained to become leaders, and to-day many mill villages are blessed with godly men and women who have been educated at the Textile Industrial Institute.

The product of the Model Mill is known as "Character Cloth." It is made by the students from the choicest Pima cotton of Arizona and California. Experts who have examined and tested "Character Cloth" pronounce it "incomparable." The writer could quote from hundreds of testimonials from customers who have used it. Never has a customer been disappointed.

At present, Dr. D. E. Camak, the founder and president of the institution, is striving to put the school on a self-supporting basis. To this end he is putting on a large mail order campaign to sell "Character Cloth" to as many people as possible. He realizes that a person once a customer will always be a customer.

Aside from the bargain of purchasing "Character Cloth," it is the duty of every good Methodist to aid in this splendid work. The school is the property of the Methodist Church, and every Methodist should be vitally concerned as to its progress. Let every one co-operate by ordering a few yards of "Character Cloth." You will not only get your money's worth, but you will help pave the way for some boy or girl to obtain an education.

You may address the Textile Industrial Institute, Spartanburg, S. C., for samples in shirting and gingham.

ARE WE OVERLOADED?

The total amount pledged to the Missionary Centenary, not including pledges by Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, was $17 per member, or slightly less than $2.50 per member a year for five years. To date there has been paid on individual pledges $4.80 per member. When we take into account that three payments are now due, it does not appear that the church has been greatly burdened by Centenary giving.

Confidence

"The American people must realize that confidence in public utility securities cannot be had by constant, unjust criticism. No public utility corporation subject to regulation can finance its requirements out of earnings."—Edward N. Hurley, former head of U. S. Shipping Board.

FROM BETHEL AND CROWDER, MISS.

Dear Editor and Brethren: I am writing not to advertise but that the brother-pastors may rejoice with me over the revivals which we've just had at Bethel and Crowder.

At Bethel there hadn't been an addition to the church in five years, and Dr. Meek, my P. E., told me that the church was almost dead, which I found to be true.

Brother B. F. Bullard, of Houka, assisted me in both meetings, and we had more than sixty conversions at Bethel. While we had only forty-three additions to our church, the others will join the Baptist and Christian churches.

Brother Bullard is a man of power, and considering his opportunity I consider him the most wonderful preacher that I ever knew, Billy Sunday not excepted. We had at Crowder twenty-four additions to the Christian church, making forty-four altogether. I never witnessed such a revival in only five days, and I don't know any preacher that could have gotten the results that Brother Bullard did in such a short time.

This is my first year in the work, and I am happy to announce that I have received into the church eighty-six members from the two churches, and I feel that before the Conference I will have passed the century mark.

To God I give all the honor, glory and praise.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

News comes to us from the West where Mrs. Holt is seeking health that there is improvement in her condition. A later diagnosis of her case concludes that the trouble is not quite so serious as was first thought. While still confined to her bed Mrs. Holt writes that she is comfortable and enjoying the enforced rest. A visit from the Methodist pastor in Colorado Springs has brightened an hour for her. The friends of Jesus are her friends, there are many interested in her welfare. The women of the Louisiana Missionary Society wish her the best wish of all—God bless her.

Attention Monroe-Ruston District!

Your district secretary, Mrs. J. W. Mrs. Darby calls my attention to the fact that 22 auxiliaries did report, but that they were too late to get in the report which she sent me. I take pleasure in giving all credit due, as your interests are mine. May this not be a gentle (?) hint to get your reports in by the first of September so that you may get all the credit due for the third quarter?

CHINA.

Towards the close of the year the Council's doctors and nurses—Dr. Hattie F. Love, Dr. Louise M. Ingersoll, Miss Mary A. Hood, R. N., and Miss Alma Pitts, R. N.—began work in the new center at Margaret Williamson Hospital, Shanghai. A Union Nurse-Training School and Hospital is being conducted, and the plans for the Medical School are being held in abeyance for the present. The co-operating boards are the Woman's Union Missionary Society, American Baptist Board and the Woman's Missionary Council. Miss Hood was elected by the Joint Board of Control as Superintendent of the Nurse-Training School and Dr. Love as Superintendent of the Hospital.

Concerning Policy of the Council as to Medical Education for Women in China.

The Committee recommends:

1. That the Council restate its conviction that the women's boards should unite in supporting one union medical school for women in China.
2. That the Council express again its judgment that the logical place for such a school is in Shanghai, China, using the foundation already laid at Margaret Williamson Hospital.
3. That the Council pledge to the other boards that in the event these boards will unite in one union medical school for women in Shanghai, China, the Council will contribute as its share in the capital stock $250,000, and its entire medical and nursing staff, including two doctors and two nurses already on the field, and two doctors in training in medical schools in America.—Council Bulletin.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Definite Planning.

As we stand in full view of the third quarter it is well for us to take note of its possibilities and plan definitely for the accomplishment of those ends to which we are eagerly looking forward at the beginning.

At the Conference in Okolona, the third quarter was set as organization quarter. There are three phases of the missionary work that should receive special emphasis during this quarter—organization of new societies, conservation of weak societies, and improvement of good societies.

At the district meeting of the Grenada District, a plan was suggested by Mrs. Stokes that will work well in all districts. Mrs. Stokes appointed survey committees for the different parts of the district. These committees are to make a close survey of the territory adjacent to them to determine where missionary societies might be organized. Doubtless they will learn much more about the territory than simply that Grenada District has 98 separate congregations and 25 missionary societies. During July these committees will make a close survey; during August committees will go into unorganized territory and organize and instruct as to the successful carrying on of the new societies; during September the committees will do follow up work with the new organizations and stand at all times as "Big Sister" to them, that they may always feel they have some one they can call on for help.

Special attention will be given to weak societies that they may be nurtured. It is easy to organize anything anywhere; the great thing is to keep alive and at work the organizations that are formed. This phase of the work should claim our best effort.

The improvement of societies that are already good should also claim our best effort. Begin just now with the movement to bring up the societies in every part that is lacking. We have been prone to wait for the fourth quarter to take stock of our progress and then make one grand rush to be ready for the close of the fiscal year. Attention just now during the summer months will result in success and ward off the anxiety that makes the final months of the year so very hard.

Mrs. T. M. CLARK.

"PREPARE ME A LODGING."

The housing problem has always been a pressing interest in cold climates, and is not negligible even in warm countries. It is possible and poetic at times to sleep out under the stars, but not when unprotected from a cloudburst, or amid chill miasmatic vapors. Our Lord once spent the night in prayer upon a mountain, and of Him it is recorded that He "had not where to lay his head;" yet even He accepted human hospitality, and took advantage of shelter, so far as that was practicable and proper. The apostles and evangelists availed themselves when they could of the hospitality of domestic circles in Asia Minor. It was not just shelter that they needed, but also a kindly reception—a certain social fellowship in return for which, when the next day they sauntered forth upon their circuits, as itinerants of the blessed evangel, they could heartily invoke the benediction, "Peace be to this house!"

We are all human enough to crave the cheer of companionship, counsel, and comfort. So Paul of Tarsus wrote to his well-to-do friend Philemon: "But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you." Then, like the Christian gentleman that he was, Paul subjoined the salutations of five of his fellow laborers, one of whom, Epaphras, was also his fellow prisoner. In all this Paul showed his heart. He never forgot his friends, and as for his enemies, he delivered them to the Lord.

Half the time the cry for a lodging is going up from human beings. The mind craves a lodging, and finds it in the body, this "tenement of flesh;" the child seeks shelter and finds it in its father's or its mother's arms; the strong man would have a fireside retreat from business cares, and buys him a bungalow; others with no particular home ties try to make the church, the club, the college, or the hotel piazza do for a quasi home.

There is much that may be done by the well-placed Philemons in the way of casual entertainment of the itinerant Pauls and the saintly Johns and the ardent Peters. In every land there are those who exercise with gracious tact and marked generosity the gifts of a Christian hospitality, preparing lodgings for chance guests, who frequently do not turn out to be "angels unawares." Caution must, of course, be exercised in dealing with comparatively unknown characters, and doubtless there are "tramps"—some of them quite well off—who would, or do, abuse the hospitalities shown to them. But after all precautions have been taken, and all allowances are made, it is a noble thing to do, and it may prove also to be a sweet experience, to lodge every now and then some wayfarer, in the name of Christ, even as the great Father above, who has plenty of housespace in the skies, gathers all the faithful into the homing heart of an infinite, and endless, love.—Zion's Herald.

SPRING SONG OF THE CAR.

This is the song the flivver sings
At the first faint whirr of a robin's wings:

"I know of a highway winding down
By woods and waters away from town
To a lake reflecting the changeful skies.

A farmhouse topping a distant rise,
Adventure awaiting around the bend,
And a wayside inn at the journey's end.

"Ah, don't you long for the wind's caress,

A broad, brown road for my tires to press,

A squirrel chipping a greeting gay,
The glint of a tiny brook at play,
Sleepy valley and misty hill,
Azure vistas receding still,
Miles that under us smoothly flow?
Start my motor and let us go."

KEEP AMERICA AMERICAN.

Americans have become so accustomed to the orderly working of their political institutions that they take everything as a matter of course. Indeed, to judge, from the behavior of many citizens, it might be said with fairness that "familiarity breeds contempt." We talk glibly about our blessings, but we do not seem to appreciate them over-much.

Take, for example, the recent change in administration of our national government. After eight years of power one group moved out and another group moved in. There was no display of force, no fear of violence, no uncovering of plots. Officers of the retiring government met their successors with every possible courtesy and help in getting a fair start. Cheers and good wishes from people of all parties followed the outgoing leaders and greeted the newcomers. It was a good deal like changing the watch on a ship at sea.

And all this was simply a symbol of something greater in the nation itself. The reason for the change in personnel of government was not personal ambition, or political scheming, or armed force. The people of the country, by their votes on election day registered a decision. That decision was final. It was made after full and free discussion without any element of coercion. Alternative policies and leadership were presented to the electors and they made their choice. Under fixed constitutional forms this choice automatically establishes itself on March 4. The old government went on with no interruption to the business of the country.

Compare this with Russia or Germany. Russia got rid of its ruler by murdering him and his family and by usurpation of a proletarian dictator who achieved and retained his power by bloodshed, terrorism, confiscation. Germany exiled her ruler and scrapped his constitution. And both countries sit upon a smouldering volcano which at any moment may blow them to pieces.—Leslie's.

PERSONAL LIBERTY.

"Never in the eleven years that I have been a member of the Police Department have I seen the rank and file of the police so determined to enforce a particular law." So said Commissioner Enright of the New York police the other day. Henry Irving Dodge tells this story of a raw-boned Irish "cop" who was directing traffic at a certain crossing on the upper East Side. Opposite him was a saloon with a sign in the window, "On May 1 this place will open as a restaurant." Mr. Dodge wanted to find out at first hand how such a man would feel about prohibition, so he crossed over to him and said, pointing to the saloon:

"It's a pity to drive these fellows out of business, isn't it?"

"He towered above me and I felt the withering scorn and contempt in his glance as he looked down at me.

"Sir," said he, "I've been on duty in this neighborhood for many years and if you only knew the number of times I've been called into these houses to prevent murder by drink-crazed men who were beating their wives, smashing the furniture and throwing it out of the windows, and driving half-naked children into the snow because of the liquor they got in these saloons, you'd thank God they are putting them out of business. I say, 'Thank God for prohibition.'"

"After giving the signal for the resumption of traffic he turned to me again and said fiercely:

"The government's been pretty free giving personal liberty to the 'old man,' but why * * * doesn't it protect the personal liberty of the children—that's what I want to know."

"I never thought of it just that way before," said Mr. Dodge. "But now that I do think of it I realize there's a reason why the police of New York City are glad to enforce this law."—The Christian Work.

Many a complacent believer takes for granted that goodness and mercy is following him all the days of his life, when, if he would carefully inspect the way over which he has gone, he would discover that the devil has been tracking him every step of the way.—Exchange.

MR. DODSON WARNS
USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tonic, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tonic instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tonic acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

A REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

Oak Grove, La., Aug. 6, 1921.

C. W. Smith, physician, age 42, who has been practicing medicine here 13 years, was operated on November 29, 1920, for chronic ulcer in the bend of the leg due to a burn received in childhood. He had great pain, discomfort and worry over this operation that resulted in a nervous breakdown. After being in bed nearly four months he was able to be up again, but his leg was not satisfactory. After getting up from the operation he noticed that his heart was not functioning right, but he thought it was due to nervousness, tobacco or an irritated stomach, and he ignored the condition. The latter part of June he went to the Mayo Clinic, at Rochester, Minn., to see if any improvement could be made on his leg. After an examination, the physicians found that he had a very serious organic heart disease and immediately put him to bed in the hospital. He was put to bed on June 30, very much alarmed over his condition. He began to pray to God that he might not be worried over his condition and that he might be saved. On July 4 he was born of the Holy Spirit and made to rejoice. He was told by the physicians that he could not be cured. They put him on treatment and told him to stay in bed sixty days, and told him to do more good than treatment. He returned home and has been following instructions and sending up prayers. A few days after his return home, two ministers visited him, but neither one of them said anything about his soul. A few days after these visits he decided that when either one of these ministers returned he would be baptized. Neither one returned and about August 1 his pulse indicated to him that the worst might be coming and on August 3 he sent for a Methodist minister. About the time of the arrival of the minister, one of the doctor's long-time friends, a Baptist deacon, and an old lady, also a Baptist, who prayed for him since his first illness, and another friend arrived. The Methodist minister prayed and then baptized him, and then the Baptist deacon prayed with all his power, and the doctor prayed, and a great blessing came and he feels that every drop of that water was worth millions of gold. The people of the community have been so nice to administer comforts to the doctor during his afflictions and he was very much grieved and wept time after time during his first afflictions because he was fearful that he could never be able to serve his dear friends any more. God knows that the people of this community have been unusually interested in this man. Although his heart seems to be about like it was when he went to bed five weeks ago, he feels that God will raise him from his bed and that he can be able to bring souls to God. He wants the Christians to pray with faith and ask the Lord to continue filling him with his blessings and restore his health so he can take a brave stand for the Lord. He is getting great consolation out of Hebrews, chapter xi. His request is that all religious papers of all denominations please copy this letter.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

GROWING IN GRACE.

If the world continues to grow better, the people in it must grow better; and the people must become better individually that they may become better collectively. The possibility of growing in grace makes the Christian life a center from which constantly enlarging influences may flow for the betterment of mankind. A static religious experience has little power to mould a man's life into the right pattern with the passing of the years, and still less to impress the community with the value of the Christian life. All men begin life as babes physically—but it would be a strange world if there were no grown-up people in it. A church composed only of "babes in Christ" is a pretty weak organization. All natural laws may not operate in the spiritual life, but the law of growth does. We are either better than we were this time last year—or not as good. Exercise in the Christian life necessarily adds to strength of Christian character.

RELIGION IN OUR SCHOOLS.

As one result of the Christian Education Movement, there should be in all our schools henceforth a positive emphasis upon the urgent importance of the forming of Christian character. If our church schools stop at teaching the arts and sciences as other schools teach them, they have failed to justify their establishment and maintenance. It is exactly for the doing of what other schools are not able to do that our church schools have come into existence. We want our sons and daughters instructed in the things that make for eternal life, as well as in the things that make for success in this life, and it is for this that we send them to schools that are under the control of religious denominations. This position needs no defense, and it should call forth no apology. It should be distinctly understood that the young men and young women who attend the institutions of the church will have thrown around them all the influences that can possibly be brought to bear to cause them to accept Christ as their Saviour, and to make them active in the performance of the duties that go with the Christian profession. The establishment of chairs of Bible and religious education in our schools ought to mean that not a single student who attends them will be able to go through one year without being brought face to face with the momentous issue of his own personal relationship to God. We want our schools to turn out educated CHRISTIAN men and women.

A POOR KIND OF FAITH.

We read recently that a preacher of the "Holy Roller" sect, in order to prove the efficacy of faith in preventing injury to the "faithful," allowed a moccasin to bite him on the hand, maintaining that his life would not be endangered. This was not faith, but fanaticism. Even if no serious results followed the foolish experiment, it would not prove the deluded man's contention, for many a person has recovered from a snake bite when the element of faith was not involved at all. Religion without faith is a mighty poor kind of religion, but faith without sense is beyond the requirements of real religion. We hope the snake-bitten man did not die—but if he did, he was wholly responsible for his own death. Some fools may be good men—but they are hard on Providence.

CONSTRUCTIVE PREACHING.

It is much harder to build up than it is to tear down, but the building up is the much more important process. Sometimes the tearing down has to take place in order that the building may be done, but it is only to clear the site to make way for a better structure. If preaching does sometimes have to be destructive, it should always have in view the larger and better work. It is easy to pick out the flaws of humanity and deliver tirades against the weaknesses flesh is heir to; but it is more largely productive of good to encourage the deep-seated longing in every human heart for that which is good, and strengthen the lofty aspirations for the things that are high and holy, and re-enforce the good resolutions that all men make at some time or other in their lives. One of the most striking passages in the New Testament is the one containing the injunction to "add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity"—a process of building up which ultimately results in the erection of that spiritual house, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. This implies the positive note in preaching, which too often is lacking. If we do have to tear down once in awhile, that should not be the main business of our lives.

WHAT AN OLD MAN CAN DO.

That men pass the "dead-line" at sixty years of age is a fallacy that still persists in some quarters. To those who may be inclined to believe there is "something in it," we commend the following, from the Christian Guardian: "For a man well past his eightieth year, in the midst of a life of unusual activities and services in many fields, to publish a work of two large volumes running to over one thousand pages, a work that demanded the most painstaking and exacting study, and that is sure to prove for many years to come an authority on the subject with which it deals, is certainly a great and unusual achievement. That Viscount Bryce has done this very thing, every one, we think, will admit who has read his book, 'Modern Democracies,' just published by the Macmillan Company. And every one who has read it will gratefully acknowledge, too, that they have never read more limpid English than it reveals, or found a book, no matter what its theme, more readable or more interesting. This great Englishman, notwithstanding the calendar, seems in the very heyday of his strength and virility. The thought of what he has done should stir and stimulate us all."

NOT ALL BAD.

If one should form an opinion of the moral character of people generally by the daily record of crime in the newspapers, one might reach the conclusion that the whole world is headed toward destruction. The situation is bad enough, we confess, but it is not altogether bad. Where there is one criminal, there are scores of men and women who respect the law; where there is one tragedy of a wrecked home, there are thousands of homes that are the very gateways to heaven; where there is one professing Christian who has fallen back into the ways of the world, there are multitudes of godly men and women who, quietly, humbly, faithfully, are pressing forward in the path of duty. While many dangers menace the world, the mercies of God are manifold, and his arm is still stretched out, mighty to save. We are glad to believe that the world is better to-day than it has ever been before—and we believe it is getting better all the time.

A LITTLE HIGH.

A woman put $50 in a shoe for safe-keeping, and hid the shoe, but a trash collector found both and appropriated the money to his own uses. It is not unusual hereabouts for people to invest $15 or $20 in a pair of shoes—judging by the price tags in the store windows—but $50 for one is pretty high. We do not think much of shoes as savings banks.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHURCH IN INDUSTRY—LABOR SUNDAY MESSAGE, SEPTEMBER 4, 1921—COMMISSION ON THE CHURCH AND SOCIAL SERVICE, FEDERAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN AMERICA.

The message for this Labor Sunday is set against a background of suffering and confusion. The land is filled with unemployment. Possibly one-fourth of the population are straitened and anxious. Thousands of employers are holding their industries together merely from day to day. Labor is fighting for the fundamental right of collective action, and fighting at a serious disadvantage. The freedom of the ministry to proclaim a social gospel and to apply it according to their own honest convictions is sharply challenged. Even the common right of citizens to freedom of speech and assembly in many communities is at stake.

In such a troubled time as this it would be easy for the church to hold aloof from industrial questions. To confine itself to simpler tasks would seem the path of prudence. The summons, however, is not to the easy way but to the way of duty. Concerning the relations of men to each other in the economic and industrial realm, as well as in the other areas of life, the church must seek to discover and to proclaim the mind of Christ. To do so calls us, indeed, to humility and to prayer, but also to courage and to faith.

When the pulpit speaks on human relations in industry it is not undertaking to advise the engineer or manager about the technique of management or machine processes. It is simply trying to apply its Gospel to the relationships between men in the working world. It cannot be too strongly asserted that the preacher has a specialty as well as the engineer. Machinery, buying, selling, finance—these are matters of which he has only incidental knowledge. But the relation of persons to one another is always a moral and religious question and so is inevitably in the preacher's field.

The immediate and compelling consideration for the church is always its divine commission to win men and women to personal discipleship to Christ. But a redeemed life is one redeemed in all its aspects and relationships. The economic and industrial factors that condition the lives of men and women and help to make them what they become are, therefore, as much a concern of the church as any other phase of their moral environment. An industrial practice that cramps and devitalizes human beings in body or in spirit is as much a foe of religion as is the liquor traffic. The church cannot ignore the one any more than it can ignore the other.

Not only so, but the charter of the church, received directly from its Leader, requires that it proclaim the Gospel of the Kingdom. Jesus said of this Kingdom that it is like leaven hidden in meal—it works until "the whole lump" is leavened. There are no areas of life which Jesus excluded from the ultimate operation of the law of the Kingdom. A Gospel that is susceptible of only partial application is not a Gospel which can save the world. A church which is content to recognize limits to the proclamation of its message is a defeated church.

Christian Principles to be Applied to Industry.

There are at least three fundamental principles in the teachings of Jesus that the church must apply to industry. Unless we can learn to conduct industry according to these basic principles, the Kingdom of God cannot prevail in the modern industrial world.

1. Men are to Live as Brothers.

That God is our common Father and that men are therefore to live together as brothers is the very foundation of Jesus' message. To the more simple social and business relationships the application of this teaching is at once apparent. The storekeeper and his clerk, the farmer and his hired man, the mistress and her maid, find no obstacle outside their own wills to the maintenance of Christian relationships. But between several hundred absentee stockholders on the one hand and several thousand wage earners on the other, relations are so impersonal and distant that the responsibilities which brotherhood implies are more difficult to grasp and are too seldom regarded with seriousness. In the administration of a large industry policies are frequently inaugurated which would not have been determined upon if their full human consequences could have been instantly visualized. The investors in an industry expect profits. The directors scrutinize the records but rarely visit the workshops. In consequence men and material are lumped together as commodities, labor is bought in the market like goods, and the personal equation is lost in a mechanical system.

Democratic relationships in large scale industry do not necessarily presuppose a restoration of the early intimacy between employer and employee. Such intimacy is impossible in large plants, and where it actually obtains it is by no means a guarantee of a square deal. Democracy requires rather that every individual shall have his point of view represented and shall have opportunity effectively to register his will. What really matters is that the life interests of the workers should be the first consideration; not that they should be called by their first names. But where there can be added relationships of personal friendship between employer and employee, the human possibilities of the situation are greatly increased. Significant in this connection is the fact, not widely realized, that according to the most recent available figures more than one-third of the factory workers in America are still employed in plants having fewer than one hundred employees. The employers of these small groups of workers have superior advantages, too little utilized, for the promotion of fellowship.

In an industrial age there can be no real brotherhood of man unless there is a brotherhood in industry. Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has put the matter well: "Surely it is not consistent for us as Americans to demand democracy in government and practice autocracy in industry." Of similar import is the recent statement of one of our foremost labor leaders that to political citizenship must now be added industrial citizenship. Political democracy leads to industrial democracy because a nation trained in school and church and State to democratic relationships, will inevitably carry these same principles into industry. The growing sense of manhood and responsibility in the workers tends in the same direction. There can no longer be satisfactory relationships under an autocratic shop rule, any more than in an autocratic State. Arbitrary control leads to class war, which is as contrary to Christian principles as any other war.

Democracy in industry must be realized progressively and is being steadily approached to-day in an increasing number of industrial establishments. Recognition of the ideal commits no one to any particular social theory or program. Collective bargaining with labor unions is an expression of the democratic ideal; so also are some of the various forms of labor representation in shop councils. There are also democratic forms of cooperation by which labor relations within a plant are handled as in a town meeting, or a family circle. It is quite possible to develop such forms of association, without prejudice to those vital interests of labor which are conserved by its own regular forms of organization, and to secure a real partnership between employer and employee. Such a partnership may go to any length in democratic procedure that those concerned may desire it to go.

2. A Human Life is of Immeasurable Value.

Jesus taught the immeasurable value of a human life. Once born into the world all society is obligated to see that it has a chance. Modern high-speed machinery is dangerous even with the best of safety devices. Although we have deeply mourned the loss of the 48,000 American men who were killed in the great war, we have given little thought to the fact that during the same period of nineteen months, American industries claimed 35,000 victims. This fearful rate of destruction still continues. With all the impetus to protection of life given by the workmen's compensation and industrial safety movements, the dangers of modern machine processes still show that too low a value is placed upon the life and health of human beings.

But the crippling of the body is not the only price paid by human lives. Crowded living quarters reduce physique, and low wages increase infant mortality. The wage earner is subject to hazards from which the salaried and professional classes are secure. Children born in industrial districts are deprived of opportunities that should be inalienable in a Christian society; a predestination as real as any theology ever taught governs their future. Low wage scales and unemployment have the effect upon the lower paid workers of thrusting millions down to the poverty line and an accident precipitates them into destitution. Unless the man is lifted above the machine, the life that Jesus considered of more value than the whole material world is sacrificed. In order that the family of the laboring man may have fair opportunity, not only must life be safeguarded, but wages must be sufficient to guarantee a higher standard of living for the workers and to justify their aspiration to a larger life. There can be no doubt that our working people should receive a relatively larger share of the product of industry.

Since prices began to recede we have heard much concerning excessive wage demands. Without doubt wages in certain occupations have been out of proportion to those paid in the less skilled and less well organized trades. But throughout the entire period of war prices large groups of wage earners have been compelled by inadequate wages to live at a low standard. Not only so, but even the wartime wages of highly skilled labor, whether of hand or brain, can be considered disproportionately high only when it is forgotten that in the production of all our wealth labor bears the most irksome burden, takes the heaviest risks and suffers the gravest insecurity.

3. Service is the Christian Motive.

Of course business cannot be run without an adequate financial return. The services of physicians, teachers and even of ministers, require compensation. But the primary motive in these professions is assumed to be service. A Christian society will try to put business under the same motive; it will purge itself of all ruinous competition and substitute for it a co-operation that preserves initiative and all the stimulus of competitive enterprise without its warlike methods. The Kingdom of God is built through service, and sacrifice; it cannot be built out of selfishness and with the motive of profit dominating, nor can it ever be built apart from the daily activities of men.

And the motive of service is not only entirely practicable but it is the only salvation of business itself. The service motive will bring a spirit into industry that will minimize strife and selfishness and magnify fraternity and goodwill. It will inspire production and tend to eliminate waste. With the profit motive controlling both employer and employee, each seeks to exploit the other, each looks upon the other with suspicion, friction grows between them instead of confidence, and industry assumes the aspect of war broken only by periods of truce. The operation of the profit motive defeats the practical purpose of industry—continuous, efficient production. If the service motive can be made mutual, employer and employee will learn to work together in mutual goodwill and the wastage of strife will be turned into mutual advantage.

The Golden Rule is the classic expression of all these ideas and of the spirit in which alone they can ever be made real. Without that spirit the most carefully devised system of organized relationships will be ineffective. The Golden Rule means the comprehension of another's point of view, and the doing as one would be done by. It is a rule to be observed day by day, especially as new situations arise, and to be used equally by manager and men. These Christian principles are as binding upon one group in industry as upon the other; and only in so far as they are recognized can industry achieve permanence and security. They will be found at last to underlie the social structure as the laws of chemistry and physics underlie the phenomena of the material world.

The Church as a Teacher of Right Industrial Relations.

The right of the church to speak on human relationships in industry has been challenged by some representatives of employers, although upheld by many others. It is objected that ministers know nothing about industrial processes, and, therefore, are not competent to speak upon the relations of employer and employee. This is a challenge which the church must meet by a full understanding and a clear statement of its relation to industry.

Even in the absence of demonstrations in familiar fact, the church and its ministry would not lack a sufficient warrant for the proclamation of the Gospel with respect to industry. The church is commissioned to bear testimony to the truth as it is in Christ. The responsibility for making the world of business and industry conform to Christian requirements rests upon those leaders of business and industry who profess to be Christian men.

But the church is not advocating an untried experiment. Abundant demonstrations are at hand that every sincere approach to the applications of the Golden Rule in the world of work has made not only for stability by putting co-operation in place of competitive strife, but for lower costs and a better product. Illustrations of this principle in many types of industry are now at hand. The ideal has nowhere been attained, but the soundness of the principle is no longer open to question.

Clearly the function of the church is not to manage industry, or to teach either employers or workers how to manage it, but to interpret these Christian principles and to mediate the Christian spirit. To do this effectively, its teachers, and especially its ministers, need to have direct knowledge of industrial conditions. They need to be sufficiently familiar with industrial processes and procedure so that they can illustrate and make clear what these principles mean in industrial relations and in the conduct of business. The pastor must understand the point of view of both the employer and the worker, so as to know the difficulties and responsibilities of each. This requires frequent visits to factories and to the homes of the workers and intensive study of specific problems. Else he may know the Gospel, and still be like a physician who is well trained in materia medica and yet who, because not trained in diagnosis, fails to heal. The need of the church to-day is for men skilled in the diagnosis of moral ills that the Gospel may be more adequately applied to human needs.

But the church has also the possibility of teaching through its laymen, including employers and leaders of labor who have the Christian spirit and who are working conscientiously at the problem of Christian relationships. These men know the problems of management as the ministers do not and are competent to speak upon them in their technical aspects. The church can use them appropriately and with great effect. In explaining what Christian principles mean and how they actually operate in industry. The application of these Christian principles rests finally with the laity—with employers, managers and leaders of labor—and upon their spirit and faithfulness depend the future of our industrial life.

The church must therefore assert and maintain the authority of Christian teaching with reference to the industrial order, and its own right and duty as interpreter of Christian motives and ideals. Let the church gird itself with humility for this great new task. Let it work by faith, for the difficulties are insurmountable unless one believes in the presence and power of God.

Let the church keep also the comprehensive social point of view. It is not and cannot be partisan. It is, or should be, the shepherd of all; rich and poor, radical and conservative, employer and employee. Class distinction or conflicting selfish interests have no permanent place in the Kingdom of God. The church may find itself, in the defense of right relations, temporarily supporting the claims of a particular individual or group, but it is not, and cannot be partisan. Its platform is the Sermon on the Mount. Its function is to promote goodwill and to secure that social justice without which goodwill is impossible. Others will propagate self-interest, hatred and class struggle; it is for the church to work in the Master's spirit and to give itself to the coming of His Kingdom of brotherhood upon the earth.

A VISION AND A PROBLEM.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

I.

One morning at a six o'clock service in Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, I saw one hundred and fifty fine young men and women from the Epworth Leagues of the Mississippi Conference come forward and enlist for life service. They came under no undue pressure, assured by the leader of the meeting that such enlistment might mean lifelong service as a missionary in Africa, or China, or Mexico, or the mountains, or some severe home field. They came deliberately, quietly, with strong purpose and undaunted faith. I was thrilled beyond expression. It was a vision I had dreamed of, but hardly hoped to see. We had at this Conference League gathering three accepted missionary candidates soon to sail for Africa, our Epworth League's mission field, for which we had pledged from the Leagues of our Conference $3,600, nearly or quite twice the amount we had been asked to raise. All of this made for me a vision splendid.

Upon inquiry I learned from the very accurate President of the Conference, who had held that position for nearly twenty years, that these one hundred and fifty enrolled at Hattiesburg must be added to at least three hundred who had been enrolled at Vicksburg and Laurel in 1920 and 1919, making four hundred and fifty, to which must be added sundry groups enrolled at District League conferences and other meetings, making a total enrollment of about six hundred. That out of a Conference League membership of three thousand there should be six hundred enrolled for life service makes the vision still more splendid. Surely the Epworth League is great.

A problem looms large: how are these six hundred splendid young volunteers for life service to be trained for this life service? They must be trained! It would be worse than disloyalty to deny or doubt this. They must be trained. How? Three months after our Methodist schools had begun their work last fall, the following statement was sent out from our educational headquarters:

"Hundreds, even thousands, of Methodist boys and girls knocked at the doors of the schools and colleges of the church this year and found those doors closed against them—no room. They were turned away by their own church, to go back to their homes and he denied the benefits of college training, or else to seek the schools of other denominations or purely secular institutions. Reports have been received from fifty-five institutions, and only twenty-four of the number have been able to receive all applicants."

Other denominations, if it were wise to have them try to do this work, are crowded quite to the task as are our own. Secular institutions are utterly incapable to fit men for the ministry and men and women for our mission work. The statement needs no proving. What are we to do?

The conditions revealed by this message from our educational headquarters are entirely new to us. What would happen if half a thousand boys and girls additional to last year's numbers should apply next month for admission to our schools and colleges of the Mississippi Conference? Would they be received? Could they? Is there room?

We will resume this inquiry soon.

IF UNEMPLOYED

Keep up your courage. Clouds will pass away. Business depression cannot last forever. Take your troubles to the Lord in prayer.

Hunt for work. A job may not "turn up" without your turning something over. Seek for a different sort of employment, if your regular kind is not to be secured. Do work you never dreamed of doing. A little income is better than being reduced to beggary or idleness.

Keep busy at something. There is work to be done around the home premises: repairing, painting, cleaning, gardening. Make the place shine. When other work is found, then you will have a nice home to live in.

Study and read along your chosen line. Books can be borrowed from public libraries or from friends. Be determined that when you go back to your old job you will be better equipped for service. A raise in salary may be the result, and your past unemployment period will thus show a financial return.

Leave off all luxuries. Many things may be all right as long as the money keeps coming in, but when the pay envelop ceases to make the rounds, these items must be clipped off from the budget. Articles purchased on the installment plan had better be surrendered and settlement made before more money is lost on them. Luxuries which become "white elephants" in upkeep should be sold. Put off all hired help and do the work yourself; walk instead of hiring a street car; wash, instead of sending things to laundry or washerwoman; bake instead of buying high priced goods; sew instead of passing out money for ready-made garments.

Borrow, if you must, from one source. Pay cash to all others. Maintain your general credit by meeting bills promptly. Groceries and other articles purchased on time are generally higher than if bought at cash stores. Do not become a slave to every tradesman, but limit your borrowing to a Morris Plan bank or some private individual.

Maintain your religious life. Keep going to church, even if your old clothes have to be cleaned, patched, pressed over and over again. "Man shall not live by bread alone," and the soul can get its spiritual food anyway. Hunt up somebody else who is in worse condition than yourself, and lend a helping hand. Tithers will continue to give a tenth of their scanty income, because they believe in the primal importance of keeping up religious devotion, and the tenth is the Lord's. God's promises will not be long in fulfillment, the windows of heaven soon being opened.—Exchange.

It is written, "To serve God and live to Him is easy to him who doeth it." Truly it is so to him who doeth it for love, but it is hard and wearisome to him who doeth it for hire. But God rejoiceth more over one man who truly loveth, than over a thousand hirelings.—Theologia Germanica.

Happiness is a roadside flower growing on the highways of usefulness; plucked, it shall wither in thy hand; passed by, it is fragrance to thy spirit. Trample the thyme beneath thy feet: be useful, be happy.—Tupper.

THE NEW COUNTRY MINISTRY.

By Charles M. McConnell.

One Sunday afternoon in Texas, we went out in a rich cotton-raising community. The services were to be held in a schoolhouse because the church was abandoned. The floor was full of holes, the plaster was off, and the leaves of the Book were scattered over the floor. The minister, who was coming thirty-five miles once a month, said: "When I came here a month ago, I found an owl sitting wide-eyed on the pulpit. I wrung his neck and took him to town and had him stuffed, and put in a museum and marked him thus: 'The last occupant of the ——— pulpit.'"

A dozen years ago the country ministry was regarded merely as a stepping-stone to a city pulpit or an apprenticeship. When I graduated from the theological school, a district superintendent offered me a small city church or a village church, with the advice that I take the village church and come into the city on better terms later if I could make a record in the country. In all my years of preparation I did not hear a single address, or one presentation of the opportunity of the country. There was not at that time—only twelve years ago—a single course on rural problems offered in the school of theology.

The change is apparent. The country ministry now affords a great opportunity as a life work. It is indeed a new profession and a special preparation is required. In every theological school worthy of the name there are courses for rural preachers. In twenty-five schools and colleges there are rural life leaders, teaching and supervising rural preachers in the schools and in the colleges. In addition to this, the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church is training preachers in short courses in three weeks of summer school. A new type of leadership is gradually being developed and a new profession has arisen. In some instances the story reads like a romance and the results are in many cases unbelievable. We are in the midst of a great movement which will mean a new rural civilization in America and in the world.

While much might be said about the rise of this new rural church, and an ever-increasing number of successful rural churches could be catalogued, the summit of the hill has not yet been reached. The majority of rural preachers are yet untrained for the task of the new day and only a few rural churches have earned the right to lead. The rank and file of the rural preachers of the United States are underpaid and discouraged. The average country church is purely individualistic, isolated, poorly equipped and backward looking. The surface has scarcely been scratched.

The country ministry is to-day more promising than ever before. It is a ministry of which none need ever be ashamed and one that offers an opportunity to reach the limit of service.

Suppose we consider the most traditional form of service—preaching, pastoral work, and church administration. We can, for the moment, make it as traditional as we please and satisfy the most conservative and make the evangelistic aim of soul saving our goal. We call attention to the task here involved.

The Country Pulpit Is No Place to Rest.

Are you called to preach? If you are, you will not scorn to preach to a handful of farmers on a rainy Sunday, who have driven five miles over muddy roads to hear you. There will not be an eager, expectant throng hanging upon your every word, as you are thrilled by the crowd to do your best. On the other hand, do not seek the country pulpit for a rest, or let down in your efforts to preach. If so, a rude awakening will be yours, and well deserved.

Who preached the Sermon on the Mount? Where was it delivered? Once a Man spoke so convincingly in a garden that His treacherous assailants who tried to take Him with stones and sticks, fell back and reported later that "never man so spake." Jesus Christ preached to men on the mountain side, by the quiet seaside, to groups sitting on the shore, or off-shore in little fishing boats. He preached about and to sowers, who went forth to sow and men who planted vineyards; to the woman at the well—not on the public square, but in a quiet country nook. He spoke the age-long words of comfort and advice to go and sin no more. It was Jesus who said, "I am the true vine. My Father is the husbandman." It might be well for all who aspire to be great preachers to consider the simple, rustic language of our Lord. His theme, well fitted to His hearers, and the congregation whom He taught in synagogues and on the mountain sides and shores of the Galilean lakes. Yes, there is an opportunity to preach to farmer folk, which only Jesus has fully equaled by His preaching.

Where Pastoral Calling is Real Business.

Pastoral calling is a nightmare to some preachers. In fact, the distressing thing about any nightmare is its unreality. It is unreality and mechanical service which distresses the pastor in his calling. Just to make a professional call to satisfy the vanity of some neglected saint whose calling and election is not sure until her beloved pastor has paid her an expected visit, for which she has already paid, seems a waste of time and energy. No doubt it is. In the country this may be made a means of grace. Isolation has not been overcome and human contacts are rare and infrequent. To give your personality to the lonely housewife, the aspiring youth, the shy and retiring children, the sick and afflicted, the shut-in, the bereft, the healthy saints and the robust sinners—all in the spirit of Him who came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister—is a privilege that angels envy the real pastor. Of course, we need not run around over the community aimlessly keeping busy making calls. We are, however, not expected to wait until we are called in the way that doctors are summoned in times of sickness. Every home in the community is open to us, and we have a standing opportunity to serve.

In a country community there are abundant resources for the organization of a church, but it must be discovered and trained for leadership. It was an evidence of genius in our Lord when He chose a dozen humble fishermen, farmers and artisans, and trained them for Kingdom building. In a small country parish the pastor has need of rare tact and diplomacy. Life is transparent, and the contacts are close and intimate. The neighbors are conscious of the faults of human nature, and it is not always that the best leaders can be selected. In the face of all the hindrances that may be mentioned, it is possible to organize a rural church into a closely knit, loyal, forward-looking institution, which is truly the "Bride of Christ."

Personality Looms Large.

We pass to a consideration of some of the less traditional opportunities of the rural ministry. In the country, personality looms large and has a penetrating power. Life is lived in open and easy access to all. He who runs may read the way of life of all. In all of this we should not forget that the influence of a life of outstanding goodness and worth is of priceless value in any community. This is the personal opportunity of the country minister. Can we afford the luxury of ten per cent ministers where influence reaches so far and deep? To enrich the life of a country community with a vigorous, cultural and unselfish personality is an opportunity and a challenge. For this great service, men must come prepared by the discipline and experiences of life. It is no place for selfish souls steeped in ignorance, who wait for an opportunity to escape.

There is an opportunity for religious education open to the country preacher which is unparalleled. The State and home have committed this task to the church. A careful study of the facts will show that the church has not yet taken this task seriously, and it remains for the preacher to lead in its accomplishment. Too many times the large circuits have made it impossible for the preacher even to attend the Sunday school, much less direct its activities in an intelligent way. But there is no field in which the preacher can invest his energy that will yield greater returns. In all the varied interests of human life the spiritual life ranks first. We would not level this interest to the plane of the average or common place. It is with the care of the spiritual interests of the individual and community that the preacher is most concerned. To no other person in the community in like degree has this task been committed. The soul of the individual is eternal and likewise the preacher deals with eternal influences. Those who are tempted to treat lightly the opportunity of the ministry might do well to consider this fact. There are many worthy professions in which the motive of service may operate.

It may even be granted that the ministry may be so much set apart that it loses contact with life. All of this may be conceded and yet the opportunity of the ministry remains unquestioned. The life of the farmer is more than meat and drink and raiment—it is spiritual. The deepest and most precious interests of life are entrusted to the minister. If these interests are overlooked, the minister has failed in his essential mission and ministry.

The Farmer in the Industrial Conflict.

Theology was the storm center in the country a generation ago. Country churches were built to defend and spread certain doctrines. Preachers were carefully examined as to their doctrine and orthodoxy was essential. This is still the main issue in the back alleys, isolated neighborhoods and belated sections of the country. One might still get himself stoned as a theological prophet, but it would have to be a studied effort. The new storm center is sociology and the prophets are assembling from the vineyards of Naboth while the stone-throwers are blasting rock in preparation for the onslaught. The fight is on, O Christian soldier. It all comes about by taking Christ seriously when he prayed, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven." As long as heaven is confined to the back side of the clouds and is a place of eternal rest to reach when the sun goeth down after a long day in the harvest field, the average farmer is willing to go. This thing of bringing the Kingdom to earth is something different. The old disputes over Calvinism and baptism and the second blessing will look like a peace conference in comparison with the new wars over property, the rights of the individual, and the Christianization of the present social order. Open shop, collective bargaining, the eight-hour day, the right to strike, mean no more to the farmer than theater-going, card-playing and dancing. These new industrial phrases are new words, but so far they are mostly words to the farmers. The mistake now being made is that of counting the farmer out of this great industrial struggle. He is involved in the present social order. The fact that the words now used in the industrial conflict are meaningless to the average farmer does not mean that this great social movement does not concern him. Every farmer in the world is involved in it.

Social Preaching.

We do not here wish to discuss the meaning of the Kingdom of God in the country, but we do insist that the country preacher faces the opportunity of the ages in defining this Kingdom and leading the farmers into it. When the Farm Bureau, through its amazing and powerful organization, lines up against the organized industries which have hitherto handled the produce of the farm and supplied the farmer with the necessities of life which he does not raise, we shall need some clear-thinking, courageous preachers in the country. A sermon on theater-going will be easier to preach to farmers than one on the kind of worldliness that buries the soul in the soil of the farm. The gold-paved streets which do not increase taxes will be more easily discussed than brick pavements across the farm, which cost money. "Thou shalt not steal" can with safety be applied to mail robbers who steal the milk checks of the farmers, but it will smack of socialism to preach about stealing the fertility of the soil from the unborn generations, or stealing the chance to learn from children, by voting against better schools. All this is involved in the Kingdom of God.

The chance to enter the fight for the great social and human principles of Jesus Christ in the country is one that awaits the twice-born, trained theological sociologists who dare pray rather than recite the Lord's Prayer on Sunday and labor to help answer it every day of the week in the towns, villages, hamlets and quiet country sides of the world. This is the opportunity of the new country minister.—The Christian Advocate (New York).

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I have just returned home, a few days since, from the Missionary Conference held at Lake Junaluska. It was all very interesting, this bringing together workers and leaders. Some fine addresses were made, others prosaic, encyclopedic, containing more information than inspiration. The people I met were cordial, genial, the highest type of good, plain, cultured Southern folks—the best in the world. The scenery is all there—cloud-capped mountains, sun-kissed palaces of misty draperies, emerald-clad valleys through which turbulent, hurrying streams sing and shone. In fact all the rivers and creeks are in a dreadful hurry in that country. The French Broad River and valley between Knoxville and Ashville is the fairest thing I saw on my journey. Sloping meadow lands, green with lush grasses whereon browsed cattle whose appearance delights the herdsman's vision; acres of tasselled corn on hill and dale; orchards, and homes, vine-wreathed. Let him who will, sing the glory of the mountains; I simply love the long, wide stretches of valley lands.

Lake Junaluska itself is a rather small, tame affair as lakes go. It might be dropped in the middle of a Louisiana lake, and forgotten overnight. The dam over which its imprisoned waters rush in their descent forms a spraying fall of some eighteen or twenty feet. A small gas launch crosses the lake at intervals and also circles about its expanse as occasion requires.

It rained by day and poured at night while I remained—none of your little dinky showers, but those cloud-capped mountains doffed their headgear and they were water-filled. About half the time they were refilling their reservoirs, then deluging the slopes and valleys thereafter. There is much to be seen and heard; altogether, a visit to these heights will repay one.

I am thinking and still thinking. It has almost become an obsession with me. A great line of interrogation points is lining up in my mind. Why will men whom God has called to preach the everlasting gospel spend their time and waste opportune privileges in talking about things that are not lasting? Now I like to think concerning the great questions of the day, social, economic, civic, but when I attend church I want to hear, I expect to hear, by all the arguments I should hear a gospel sermon. Newspapers, magazines, in fact all the vast horde of constantly accumulating publications, are all filled with current topics. On Sunday give me the theme of all themes, and for a while let banks, governments, Irishmen, Turks, Japs, etc., etc., have a rest. They surely need it. Now I am not quite as errant as a certain one-time friend of mine who, when urged to consider the great question of saving his soul and to read his Bible, cried out in defense, "What do I care what the Philistines said to St. Paul?" But I do want to hear our preachers preach, preach, deliver their messages as ambassadors of the Kingly Christ and quit talking about anything else. It is big enough, broad enough, deep enough for any man's thought and attention.

MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have made the round of third quarterly conferences and I want to say a word about the pastors and people. There are good things that I could say about each pastor and each charge, but I shall not take your space for details just now, but say in a general way, the pastors are doing heroic work and the people are co-operating with them on their way to victory. They report fine revivals. One church in a circuit of four churches reported more than one hundred additions. They report their Sunday schools doing fine work, Epworth Leagues in fine condition, and congregations increasing. While finances are somewhat behind, they have kept up better than any one could have hoped at the first of the year. I have in two or three quarterly conferences read a little clipping I cut out of the Literary Digest, which reads as follows: "It seems strange that a nation capable of licking Germany should lie on its back and howl in the face of a little business depression." It was a unanimous decision that they would not lie on their backs and howl, but instead adopt as their slogan, "We can and we will."

While it's less than three months to the Annual Conference, I confidently believe that these noble men will do their part. I believe that they feel the responsibility as men selected to look after the financial part of the church and they are not going to let the church suffer nor the preacher and his family need when their efforts can prevent it. They love the church and will do their part well.

We also discussed the tenth question in our quarterly conferences. We all agree that you are giving us a good paper and they are going to do more for the Advocate than they have ever done.

Fraternally,

K. W. DODSON.

BONHOMMIE CIRCUIT, REV. ANDREW J. BOYLES, PASTOR.

You will look in vain through the Conference Journal to find this pastoral charge and its very efficient pastor; but they are very real nevertheless. Bonhommie is a new pastoral charge in the Hattiesburg District that has come into being since the last Annual Conference.

It came about in this way: Mr. W. S. F. Tatum, a consecrated Christian layman who operates a large saw mill near Hattiesburg, conceived the idea that a great revival meeting for his mill hands and their families would be a very splendid investment, for time and for eternity, especially the latter.

In order to carry out his new idea he engaged one of our General Evangelists, Rev. J. O. Haines, of Birmingham, Ala., and his singer, Mr. Waltermyer, for a series of meetings. He bought a large new tent and erected it near the mill grounds, and lighted it up with a separate and complete lighting system, which he purchased specially for this meeting, and no city church was ever more perfectly lighted than was this tent.

The meeting was conducted, from the very start, in the old-fashioned Methodist way. Penitents were called to the altar or the "mourners' bench" and scores of them came and got down in the sawdust and prayed through to God.

It was an inspiring scene at the closing of a service, when an altar call was being made, to see Brother Tatum, that consecrated mill man, moving quietly around in the congregation talking to his unsaved mill men, some of them with their overalls on. He would put his arm around them and lead them down to the altar and get down in the sawdust by their side and pray with them till they were saved. This scene did not occur once or twice, but at almost every service.

At the close of this ten days' meeting for the white people of the mill community, he then, with the same preacher and singer and general equipment, held a few days' meeting especially for the colored people who worked at the mill, with splendid results.

At the close of the meetings at the mill, the tent lighting plant and all the general equipment were transferred to the logging camp about thirty miles away, and a ten days' meeting held there for the men in the camp, with practically the same results as at the mill.

The visible results of this great series of meetings are scores of people gloriously saved, and 125 people added to the various churches.

In order to conserve the good work that had been done and that it might continue to grow, Brother Tatum asked me to appoint a good man, for full time, half time at the mill and part time at the camp, to look after the spiritual interest of his mill men and their families.

I at once appointed Rev. Andrew Jackson Boyles, a consecrated young preacher who graduated at Millsaps College last session. I understand that Brother Tatum has placed this young preacher on his regular pay roll, assuring a competency commensurate to all needs.

This is the same Brother Tatum who gave $100,000 to endow a Chair of Christian Education in Millsaps College. May he live long to bless the world, and may his tribute increase.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

August 11, 1921.

Dr. I. W. Cooper,

Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.

"Dear Brother: I am writing you in behalf of a poor girl, a member of your church, who is anxious to go to college next year, but has no means. She is a graduate of a High School which has twelve grades. Her father is dead, and her mother has little more than a house full of small children. This young lady is willing to do almost anything to go to college next year. She has a good voice and an extra good talent in expression, having won two or three medals along that line. I realize that you have many calls for help, but hope that you can find some way to help this young lady, for she needs help, and is willing to do almost anything to go to school. Is there any possible way you can help her? Her name is Miss _____."

The copy above is of the type of many letters received at Whitworth during the summer. Our scholarships are exhausted. If there are any Christian friends willing to make a lasting investment, let them write to Whitworth College.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUE INSTITUTES.

At the meeting of a sub-committee, appointed by the executive committee of the Epworth League Conference of North Mississippi, a programme was outlined for a chain of seven district institutes, under the leadership of the District Secretaries, assisted by representatives of the Conference organization and workers from the Central Office, at Nashville. These institutes will be conducted some time the last of September, or first days of October. The District Secretaries will announce the place and date as soon as the Central Office notifies them when their man can come.

All Epworth League officers, and every pastor, whether he has a League or not, should arrange to attend the institute nearest them. They will be for one day only, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

S. H. CAFFEY, President.

Wabbe, Miss., Aug. 15, 1921.

FROM THE PULPIT.

The member who measures a sermon by the watch or the thermometer is apt to fail in its true value. A fair weather Christian may make it through if he does not starve between meals.

If the preacher observed and magnified the frailties and mistakes of the members, as they do his, he would need, and soon get a change of congregation.

The good housewife who rises early, prepares and places breakfast on the table, and the family lingers in bed till the food gets cold, feels about like the preacher who prayerfully prepares a sermon for people who will not come to hear it.

The preacher who can preach a good sermon to empty pews on a hot day may not wear a high hat here, but he will wear a crown up yonder.

The results of a great sermon are not measured by its true merits as much as it is by what the members practice the week following.

THE JUNALUSKA TRAINING SCHOOL.

We, the Junaluska Ministers' Association, composed of members of many Annual Conferences, consider it our duty and privilege to call the attention of our church to the educational program which is being furnished from summer to summer on the Southern Assembly grounds. We are deeply interested in the Epworth League, Missionary, Evangelistic and other conferences, but think at this time we should lay especial emphasis on the Junaluska Training School. It is, of course, The School of the General Sunday School Board for the Training of Conference and District Leaders, Pastors and Superintendents, Teachers of Training Classes and Leaders in All Departments of Sunday School Work. We have individually and collectively attended classes, talked with members of the Board and of the faculty, examined the library, observed the large body of students, and some of us have already witnessed the worthy results in our pastoral charges. We believe therefore we speak in truth and soberness.

It is evident to all that our country proposes to have an educated citizenry. It is not, however, so evident just what kind of education our people will have and whether it will lead them. That the educated class will furnish the leadership and determine the destiny of America is without a doubt. Thousands of our schools, colleges and universities are without definite religious teaching and character. It is not enough for us to depend on our limited number of denominational schools to supply this lack. Nor can we leave it to the Sunday school taught in the desultory fashion of recent years. It behooves us, with the utmost consecration and enthusiasm, to do more and better Sunday school work than ever before. The efficiency of the church school must not compare unfavorably with that of the day school. The temple of Jehovah must be built by the most skillful workmen. Southern Methodism must reach in an effective manner the millions that providentially fall to her lot.

What We Have At Junaluska.

It is heartening to be able to speak in terms of unreserved praise of what we have at the Southern Assembly. A faculty of a dozen experts with a score of courses for the two weeks' school bespeaks the wisdom of our General Board and challenges our enthusiastic commendation. Some of the instructors are not only Sunday school workers, but are professors in our leading colleges or universities who have won a name among the Christian educators of America. Last year the school enrolled 300 students; this year it has grown to 450. They are from the Chesapeake to the Rio Grande and from West Virginia to Cuba. They are presiding elders, pastors, laymen of both sexes, from the teen age to merry beards crowned with the silver hairs and with the honors of two-score years of noble service—youthful all in dream of and passion for a richer, fuller, more useful life. For a fortnight they study, recite, hear lectures, sing; play golf, tennis, base-ball; go swimming, boating, fishing, hiking, amidst the beauties and glories of the mountains and valleys round about Lake Junaluska. Here indeed is a vacation that re-creates rather than depletes and sends its devotees home from the cool, invigorating atmosphere of this "land of the sky" to be happier and more helpful Christians.

Our Appeal.

We therefore feel justified in making a most earnest appeal to our pastors and presiding elders regarding a work which has been pronounced by an eminent professor and minister of Yale University as "the greatest and best that is being done by any church in the land." We must speedily justify our Board in making this a six-weeks' as well as a two-weeks' school. Let us encourage to come here the key men of our Conferences, at least five or ten young ministers from each, who will carry on this advanced work in their own charges and districts. Let us see that our most promising Sunday school workers, both men and women, avail themselves of these courses. Here will choice spirits catch the vision and inspiration that will lead them to become directors of religious education. Conference and district secretaries, or skilled laborers for the Master in less conspicuous places in the home church.

Brethren of the ministry, you and we need this special training, else thousands of our youth will outgrow us. Are we going to be leaders, trusted and honored, or tolerated for a time and removed for inefficiency? This course will not only make better Sunday school workers, but more successful servants in all lines of Christian endeavor. Our Methodist ministry has ever been able to rise to a great occasion. Do we realize that a revival of religious education is well on in our church? We belong to Christ and our people. Shall we not seize the opportunity and carry the spirit and power and scholarly attainments of the Junaluska School into every part of our beloved Southern Methodism?

Signed by: C. F. Blackburn, Florida Conference; G. W. Davis, South Carolina Conference; W. W. Adams, Memphis Conference; Hugh E. Kelso, Holston Conference; John S. Jenkins, Western Virginia Conference.

EFFICIENCY SOUGHT IN ALL BUT ONE.

Efficiency and perfection are sought in all pursuits of life and honorable when nearest reached, save one, religion. When the young lawyer is admitted to the bar, he is watched by the general public, and the skill with which he handles all cases intrusted to him, places him readily among the successful and he is honored by all for his genius. This seems just and fair to us. If a young physician enters practice after proper training, and handles his practice with marked skill and success, he at once gains the admiration of the laity. This is nothing more than what he should have. The young farmer who begins his life-career with a one-horse farm and is soon kept busy from early morning until dark going from farm to farm, certainly proves his efficiency in his particular line of work, and such a young man is held in high esteem by all. This we think fair and just. So it is with the young minister who enters his profession or calling, first seen on the poor piney woods circuit with just salary enough to keep soul and body together, but after a few years of hard study and toil he is seen to fill the highest salaried station in the Conference to which he belongs. This is commendable and holds the admiration of all who know him. The same thing obtains in every other profession and trade of life when efficiency is reached except the man who is fully regenerated and lives the perfect Christian life as detailed in the Word of God. That man wins for himself the name of being a fanatic, a simple-minded fellow, a man who is mentally unbalanced. He would be a valuable man in the church and community if he were not such a fanatic.

The one thing to which all human energies should be directed is eternal life. To reach that life we must live righteously. But in living the righteous life we must mix enough of unrighteousness in with the righteous to steer clear of fanaticism. So foolish! Christ said, "Be perfect even as I am perfect." Man says, "It can not be done." What do we say to Christ when we say it can not be done? I leave the answer with you. Christ came to save the world from sin. His blood cleanses us from sin. The plan of redemption is a finished plan. His last utterance was, "It is finished." Then what we must do is to accept it as he gave it to us. "If we say that we have fellowship with Him and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth." "As a tree falls, so shall it lie." This we know to be true. If you fall a sinner, thus shall you ever be. Some folks seem to think the final polish will be put on in death. This thought is so foolish and unscriptural. Death is an enemy and the very last enemy. Certainly you would not expect your enemy to cleanse you in the last hour of your existence, when it had been his pleasure all your life to blacken and stain your life so that you would be unfit for heaven. "He that saith I know Him and keepeth not His commandments, is a liar and the truth is not in Him. But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in Him. He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."

What sort of life did Christ live? If a man is born again, fully regenerated, he is a changed man, rebuilt in Christ Jesus. If he once stole, he will steal no more; if he once lied, he will lie no more; if he once swore, he will swear no more, and so on. Every divine law will be kept literally. When a man becomes a Christian he becomes a Christ man. It was to this class of individuals that Christ spoke when He said "Be perfect even as I am perfect." For without holiness no man can see God.

Is it not a shame to hold up these pure ideals that Christ tells us about, and then try to live them and be classed idolatrical?

"OLD DOC."

A WOMAN, A GARDEN, AND A LITTLE BOY.

A woman planted a garden—but she worried about it.

She watched it and watered it, and the seeds grew—but she worried about it.

From early till late she worked, uprooting the weeds—but she worried about it.

And when the harvest came, although the seeds of her garden yielded fruit in abundance—still she worried about it.

You see, she planted her garden to win premiums at the Grange Fair—and that is why she worried about it.

This woman had one little boy—but she didn't worry about him.

She clothed him and fed him, and he grew—but she didn't worry about him.

From early till late he played in the streets—but she didn't worry about him.

And when harvest time came, although the seeds of lying, smoking, and swearing, planted in her boy's heart, yielded fruit in abundance—still she didn't worry about it.

You see, there were no premiums at the Grange Fair offered for little boys—and that is why she didn't worry about him.

While there are mothers legion, and little boys legion, there is only one harvest time—the end of the world—coming.

There gardens—heart gardens—will be judged and rewards—eternal life, eternal death—given.

Then, oh, the joy of the mother who has faithfully cultivated the soul garden of her boy's heart and receives from the hand of the Judge, the righteous Judge, life, eternal life!

And, oh, the heart anguish of the mother who has been so busy with the cares of this life that she has neglected the cultivation of the soul garden of her boy's heart and receives from the hand of the Judge, the righteous Judge, death, eternal death!

Oh, mothers—mothers of little boys and mothers of little girls—to you who at times get so discouraged as you work in your heart gardens uprooting the seeds of evil, the Judge, the righteous Judge, has sent a wonderful message. It reads: "I will contend with him that contendeth with thee, and I will save thy children."

So as you cultivate, pray. And as you pray, have faith; and God "will save thy children."—The Watchman.

A book reviewer says of a recent book that "the volume may be described as more informative than instructive." There is a distinction here that is not always observed. Information is not necessarily instruction. The handing out of any number of facts is not always an educative process. We have heard sermons that might be described in the same manner that this book is. Masses of information more or less important and more or less interestingly presented, but in such a way as to teach no lesson, make no appeal, and give no inspiration. After listening to such a sermon, one is tempted to ask, "Cui bono?"—Watchman-Examiner.

The Home Circle

WAITING.

By Willie C. Page.

We may bear the heat of battle
Through a downright crushing blow,
Driving back our scattered forces,
Through the din and cannon's roar;
We may come through each skirmish,
Not much injured by its glare,
But to stay in camp, quietly waiting,
Is the hardest part to bear.

Waiting wears the eager spirit,
As the water wears the stone;
Hope folds her golden pinions,
Then this beautiful spirit's gone;
Yet at last we learn this lesson:
God's ways are best; whatever our fate,
In our hearts we humbly thank Him
We were taught to trust and wait.

THE STORY OF THE LEAD PENCIL.

By Everett Spring.

One of the first things a child wants to do is to get its hands on a lead pencil and make some zig-zag marks on a sheet of paper, which it lispily tells its happy mother is a letter to daddy. About the last thing an old man thinks of doing is to get an old stump of a lead pencil and tremblingly make notes for his lawyer, indicating to whom he wants to will his property. Every one of our soldiers in France kept a pencil about his person so that he could keep in touch with his loved ones back home at every opportunity.

The lead in the pencil is composed of graphite mixed with clay. Graphite is a form of carbon that belongs in the same family as charcoal and diamonds, and is somewhat allied to coal. Graphite is sometimes known as plumbago and black lead. Thus it will be seen that lead pencils are really not lead pencils at all. They really ought to be called graphite pencils. The misnomer is probably due to the fact that, previous to the employment of graphite for making pencils, common lead was used, a material which continued to be employed until well into the nineteenth century. Consequently, since graphite with its black streak offered a contrast to the pale mark of lead, it was called in contradistinction black lead.

Clay is mixed with the graphite for the purpose of binding the materials together and to assist in determining the degree of hardness. The clay used for this purpose comes from Austria and Bohemia. It is of an unusually smooth quality and is practically free from all gritty substances. The impossibility of importing this clay during and since the war is largely responsible for the poor quality of some pencils.

The mining and purification of graphite are not unlike the process of silver ore. It is generally found mixed with quartz, silica, and mica. It is necessary to pulverize the rock with crushing machinery, which is followed by the extraction of the graphite. Before the graphite is mixed with the clay it is strained through very fine silk sieves, so that all particles the least bit coarse may be removed.

After the clay and graphite are measured in proper proportions to assure the right grade, they are ground together in water between millstones for several weeks, when the mixture is passed between rollers and through dies, so that it will be thoroughly mixed. This "dough" is then squeezed through a die the exact diameter of a pencil lead. These leads are placed on boards to dry, and upon completion of the drying process they are cut into lengths of seven inches. This is followed by packing them into crucibles and placing them in ovens for several hours, where they are subjected to a temperature of 2000 degrees Fahrenheit. This is done to extract all moisture and to make them strong and durable.

The purest graphite found in the United States is at Ticonderoga, N. Y. It yields 99.9 per cent pure carbon. During the war a rich graphite mine was discovered in Texas. Years before a ranchman had bought the land for $12 an acre, using it as a cattle pasture, and constantly regretting that he had bought such a rocky place, never dreaming that those rocks contained a fortune until a New York man offered him $75,000 for seventy-five acres of it. He closed the deal quicker than the New Yorker could wink. He still has 1125 acres of the same kind of rock—plus his cattle, and the same old hole in the Colorado River from which he extracts catfish.

Graphite is also mined in Bavaria, Bohemia, Norway, New Zealand, and Mexico.

The only kind of wood found suitable for making pencils is cedar, most of which comes from Florida. After being cut in the forests the logs are rafted down the rivers to the mills, where they are cut into pieces called "bolts," and then into smaller strips half the thickness of a pencil. These strips are packed in boxes and shipped to the pencil factories, where they are carefully inspected and all imperfect pieces discarded. After the removal of the pitch and oil, the slats are put through a process of seasoning. Then they are put through a machine that cuts the groove in which the lead is placed. The lead is put in the grooves by hand and the slats are glued together. Another machine cuts the slats into many pieces, each piece being a pencil. They are then sandpapered, varnished, and stamped.

If no one made mistakes, it would not be necessary for pencil manufacturers to do anything further in the making of a pencil. But in order to make it possible to rectify human errors they have to place a rubber tip on the end of a large part of their pencils.

The first lead pencil manufacturer in the United States was William Monroe of Concord, Mass., who, in 1812, invented a process by which he pulverized and mixed the material and incased it in cedar holders. He was very successful in selling his product and continued the business for a year and a half, when he was obliged to give it up on account of the difficulty in obtaining raw materials. Another pioneer in the industry was Joseph Dixon, who commenced business in 1827.

Cedar and graphite, the two essential raw materials necessary for pencil manufacture, are found in such an abundance in this country as to favor exceptionally the growth of the industry in the years to come.

According to the latest available figures, there are fourteen pencil factories in this country, having a total capital of $10,000,000 and producing an annual output valued at $12,000,000. The number of factories has increased only six since 1860, but the capital invested then was only $6500 and the value of the production about $1,000,000. In 1914 the value of pencils and pencil leads imported into the United States was $612,998.

Some idea of the tremendous magnitude of the pencil industry of America can be obtained when it is realized that the largest factory alone turns out more than 50,000,000 pencils every year. They are of more than 700 different kinds, grades, shapes, sizes, and colors. If the pencils from this factory were placed in a row end to end, they would reach from Washington to San Francisco and back to New York.—Zion's Herald.

A TEST.

A professor in the University of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider them educated, in the best sense of the word, when they would say yes to every one of fourteen questions he should put to them. It may be of interest to you to read the questions. Here they are:

Has your education given sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend yourself?

Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life?

Do you think washing dishes and hoeing corn just as compatible with high thinking as piano-playing or golf?

Are you good for anything to yourself?

Can you be happy, alone?

Can you look out on the world and see anything except dollars and cents?

Can you look into a mud puddle by the wayside and see anything in the puddle but mud?

Can you look into the sky at night and see beyond the stars? Can your soul claim relationship with the Creator?—Selected.

Editorial

DENOMINATIONAL LOYALTY.

We can see very little virtue in a bigoted sectarianism that puts "me and my wife, my son John and his wife—us four and no more" in a highly favored class that looks with pity, contempt, scorn, or some other feeling that expresses superiority, upon all other classes of any kind whatsoever. For any denomination to assume that it has a monopoly of the means of grace, or that it is the sole custodian of the oracles of God, or that it alone is the receptacle of all truth, is so utterly arrogant as to inspire a kind of pitying amusement if it does not arouse righteous indignation. The assumption that "we are the people, and there are no others," smacks of such ecclesiastical complacency as to suggest at least both extreme narrowness of intellectual outlook and shallowness of conception as to the real meaning of the Kingdom of God. For such assumption we have no sympathy at all—and mighty little patience with it.

But we believe in denominational loyalty. As opposed to narrow sectarianism, there may be a kind of indifferent adherence to the fundamental principles and doctrines of an ecclesiastical organization that is positively a hindrance to the success of that organization. Latitudinarianism is as weak as sectarianism is wicked. So far as we are able to interpret the history of the modern church, at least, the progress of the Kingdom of God has hinged upon the activities inspired by intelligent devotion to the principles of denominational organizations. There may come a time—though it will be in the distant future—when all Christians will agree upon all points of doctrine and all forms of worship, but until that time comes the work of God must be carried on by those who band themselves together with like-minded people with whom they can labor in hearty co-operation.

The above is merely by way of saying that loyalty is a virtue that should be practiced by members of all denominations—Methodists included. If there is a church in Christendom that can afford to stand upon its history, it is the Methodist Church. Without claiming continuity of organization from the time of the apostles—a claim that cannot be substantiated by any church—it dates its origin from a movement that was as plainly providential as any event in history can be. That the blessings of God have rested upon it from its very beginning to the present moment is evident to the most superficial observer. With a membership of millions of people scattered throughout the world, with operations extending to all quarters of the globe, with millions upon millions of dollars invested in institutions dedicated to the welfare of humanity, with a polity that is almost a miracle of efficiency, with a system of doctrine that appeals to the intelligence of the most learned and that satisfies the heart-hunger of the most humble, and with a fruitfulness attending its ministry that can be explained only upon the ground that it preaches the essentials of salvation, every Methodist can say that he belongs to a church that is divinely recognized as one of the agencies for the establishment of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

As the blessings of God have rested upon its labors in the past, so will they continue to rest upon its labors in the future in proportion as its members are loyal to its precepts and faithful in propagating its teachings. This does not mean, of course, a blind adherence to mere methods of work, which must be adapted to the age in which they operate, but a loyal devotion to the doctrines that have meant so much to the world in its darkest periods. Methodism is a church with a mission, and Methodist people are joined together in a movement that ought to inspire them to passionate and ceaseless activity. We rejoice with all other churches in the success that attends their labors, and we bid them Godspeed as they continue their work of helping to evangelize the world; all the more do we thank God that we belong to a church that from the very beginning has been in the forefront of the battle for righteousness, and that is still leading a mighty host onward to victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil.

THE ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The Ecumenical Conference, soon to convene in London, is one of the great gatherings of Methodism. Leading representatives of all branches of Methodism are in attendance, and the work of the church throughout the world is brought under review. Addresses upon important topics are delivered by those especially fitted to deal with them, and the progress of the church to date is clearly shown by facts and figures. It furnishes an authoritative record of the larger accomplishments of the church, as well as a discussion of the program it may be expected to follow in the future.

Among the delegates from the United States are those from our own patronizing Conferences, some of whom, we understand, have already made the trip across or are on their way. We are sure our people will pray that they may have journeying mercies, a pleasant and profitable stay, and a safe return.

A MEANS TO AN END.

We sometimes hear the statement that the church is developing so many organizations, holding so many conferences, institutes, assemblies, etc., and appointing so many men to detached service that it is in danger of consuming its power in running machinery. It is possible, of course, for organization to be carried to an extreme, and it may become wise to undertake to develop a system of co-ordination that will do away with unnecessary and overlapping agencies.

But in connection with this situation, one thing ought always to be kept in mind—that all these things are merely a means to an end. There can be no thought that an organization would be set up for the sake of the organization itself, or that an appointment would be made simply for the sake of finding a place for a man. A church with a mission to the whole world will sometimes find its task so great that it will of necessity have to elaborate an organization that will be greater than might seem wise to those who are not fully informed as to the work to be done. And it is possible that some part of the organization is confessedly experimental, simply an honest effort to find the best way to do what needs to be done.

In the face of urgent need, one of the hardest things in the world to do is to stand still. And it is not wise to stand still. Upon somebody rests the responsibility of doing something, and that something must be done in the way that gives surest promise of meeting with success. As time passes, affording opportunity for the problems to be more carefully worked out, a better way may be discovered, but for the time being the most available means must be used. With the right end in view, methods will ultimately take care of themselves.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is now engaged in what is reported to be a great revival meeting at Crosbyton, Texas.

Bishop W. F. McMurry will meet the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference at Alexandria, La., on September 7.

Rev. and Mrs. R. T. Pickett, of Oloh, Miss., announce the birth of a son on August 17. Blessings upon the little one!

"If the price of the Advocate should go to $10 a year, I would take it, if I had to do without enough meal to pay for it," says Brother L. E. Havens, of Pascagoula, Miss.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, La., occupied the pulpit at Rayne Memorial, this city, last Sunday morning, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. L. Duren.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, of Homer, La., assisted the pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts, in a meeting at Columbia, Miss., last week. A friend who attended the services told us that Brother Tucker did some very fine preaching—which is his custom.

The August meeting of the New Orleans Epworth League Union was attended by Rev. C. E. McLean, pastor of Istrouma Church, Baton Rouge, and Rev. Jas. B. Granbling, the League State field worker, both of whom took part in the program.

Rev. W. A. Bowlin, of the Kosciusko circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "I am now in the midst of my revival work. The Lord is blessing my efforts—have added eighteen to the membership and baptized a number of infants. My charge is in good shape."

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., sailed for Europe on August 13, where he goes as a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference, and in connection with his work as a member of various committees and boards having to do with religious and reform activities in Europe. He expects to return to America by October 1.

We greatly regret being out of the office on Saturday of last week when Rev. R. A. Tucker, wife, and daughter, of Grenada, Miss., and Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Flynt, of Aberdeen, Miss., called. As a note on our desk informed us, they were "just in and out, having a little vacation down this way." We wish we could have seen them.

The President of the United States has designated Sunday, November 13, as Red Cross Sunday. On that day it is hoped that ministers throughout the land will call attention to the work of the Red Cross and give their congregations an opportunity to enroll as members. The period embracing November 11-24 has been set apart as the time for the fifth annual roll call.

Rev. C. E. Downer, pastor of the Kossuth circuit, North Mississippi Conference, recently closed a fine meeting at Pleasant Hill Church, near Corinth. Except two sermons by Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, and one by Rev. B. P. Jacob, Conference Missionary Secretary, the preaching was done by the pastor. There were twenty additions to the membership of the church on profession of faith.

Among the Mississippians attending the Conference of General Evangelists and Pastors at Lake Junaluska, N. C., last week, were Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Rev. L. P. Wasson, of First Church, Water Valley, Rev. O. S. Lewis and family, of Laurel, and Rev. Thos. H. Lipscomb, of First Church, Columbus. One of the features of the gathering was a sermon by Dr. Clovis Chappell, of our Washington City Church.

A movement is under way to erect a memorial church to the late Miss Frances E. Willard, at her birthplace, Churchville, N. Y.

Over ten thousand young men and young women attended the summer conferences and assemblies held under the auspices of the Epworth League during the summer.

We hereby express our thanks to Rev. C. E. Fike, of DeRidder, La., for seven subscriptions sent us recently, and to Rev. L. M. Sharp, of Jackson, Miss., for two.

The father of President Harding, Dr. George T. Harding, was married to Miss Alice Severns on August 11. Dr. Harding is seventy-six years of age and his bride is fifty-two.

As an indication that there is an unusual turning to the religious life, the following figures are significant: in 1919 the net gain of all the churches in America was 41,000; in 1920 the net gain was 712,000.

A report from the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder, indicates that the fourth will be a good "rounding-up" quarter, since preachers and people seem to be actively at work.

Mrs. Eugene B. Troy, now of North Carolina but formerly of this city, underwent a serious operation last week at the New Orleans Hospital for Women. Her friends will be glad to know that she is recuperating rapidly.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Gerdline, missionaries to Korea, after spending two months at Clarksdale, Miss., as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. T. M. Dye, left on August 16 for San Francisco, whence they will sail for Seoul to resume their missionary work.

Rev. H. E. Carter, our pastor at Iuka, Miss., has been active in assisting in revival meetings this summer. He was recently with Rev. T. G. Adair, of the Marietta circuit in a good meeting. He also assisted the pastor at Margerum, Ala., in a good meeting.

A note from the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., informs us that the work is moving along well on the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference. Some good revivals have been held over the district, and all the pastors are faithfully at work.

The midsummer number of the Millsaps College Bulletin is devoted largely to the athletic interests of the school. Mr. E. Y. Freeland, the new coach and athletic director, is very highly commended, not only as a coach, but also as a fine Christian gentleman.

The meeting at Marks, Miss., Rev. A. L. Davenport, pastor, closed on the evening of August 19. Rev. W. N. Duncan having done the preaching. Three young men and one young lady joined the church on profession of faith, and there was one accession by certificate. Several children were baptized.

Mr. W. W. Williams, formerly of Alexandria, La., but now of Tela, Honduras, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He was active in religious work while in the States, and is greatly concerned for the religious welfare of the Latin-American countries. He is spending his vacation in the States.

We learn from a personal letter from Dr. I. W. Cooper that he and Mrs. Cooper expect to sail from Europe for home about September 15, arriving about September 25. They are greatly enjoying their travels—and our readers are enjoying their journey with them through the letters they are so kindly furnishing the Advocate.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster, our pastor at Franklin, La., was in New Orleans this week, having come to the city to officiate at the marriage of Mr. Milton Vaught and Miss Florence Bateman. Mr. Vaught is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Vaught, of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, and Miss Bateman is a member of the Presbyterian Church. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this fine young couple.

A "Godspeed" service was held at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, on Wednesday evening of this week, in honor of Miss Clara Chalmers, who will sail on Saturday for Cuba, where she goes under appointment of the Woman's Council to enter upon missionary work. Miss Chalmers is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, and she is splendidly equipped by training and experience for the noble calling to which she has devoted her life.

The following, from the latest issue of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, will be of interest to the Bishop's many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi: "Bishop John C. Kilgo spent a few days at Dr. Howard A. Kelly's Hospital last week where he has been receiving treatment for some months. His specialists permit him to spend the larger part of his time at his home at Charlotte, N. C., with the understanding that he visit the hospital as often as necessary. He seems to be much improved. His voice has regained its wonted strength, and his general condition is most gratifying."

The newspapers of the country gave considerable prominence two weeks ago to the deplorable tragedy in Birmingham, Ala., in which Rev. E. R. Stephenson shot and killed Father Jas. E. Coyle of the Roman Catholic Church. The facts were not mentioned in the dispatches, however, that Mr. Stephenson was a local preacher, that he has never held a pastorate in his life, and that for a year or two he had not been identified with the Southern Methodist Church. According to the Alabama Christian Advocate, which is conversant with all the facts in the case, it was a "crazy and criminal deed," without the political or religious significance that some sensation mongers tried to read into it.

On Sunday, August 7, at 6:45 p.m., ground was broken for the new church building in Algiers, just across the river from the larger division of New Orleans. The event was a religious ceremony, participated in by representatives of all the organizations of the church. After the ceremony, the congregation assembled in the old church, where an inspiring sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. C. C. Wier. The erection of this building will mark an epoch in the history of New Orleans Methodism, giving it a prominent place in one of the important sections of the city. The building contract was awarded to Mr. J. A. Petty, one of the leading contractors of the city, who is an official member of our Louisiana Avenue Church.

A GREAT MEETING AT LAKE.

Last night we closed a very successful revival meeting. We began on the 10th and closed on the 19th. As an expression of their faith in God, many testified and prayed before the congregation. Many were blessed. Four young men, one young woman, a boy, and a girl united with the church. Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, evangelist, of Meridian, Miss., did the preaching. Brother Norsworthy is a good preacher and a fine fellow. He gave us some great sermons.

These good people sent many nice things to the parsonage. We praise God. R. E. RUTLEDGE, Lake, Miss.

A GREAT REVIVAL.

On Thursday, August 4, a most satisfactory revival was closed at Hickory Ridge, Rocky Springs circuit, with eight additions on profession of faith. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Sharp, was assisted by his brother, Rev. L. M. Sharp, of Jackson. Brother Sharp is a man of deep piety and strong faith in God. He preached such splendid sermons. His preaching is so plain, forceful and convincing. The people were so enthused over the great work he did they requested that he come back and help with the revival next summer.

After service the last night the people surprised the pastor with a small pounding which amounted to about $39. The committee collected and presented a purse of $28.25 to Brother Sharp; $3.71 was collected for other purposes. As of these brothers go on in their work they will have the good wishes and prayers of all the people of Hickory Ridge, who were greatly blessed by their ministry among them. A MEMBER.

"WITHOUT MURMURINGS AND DISPUTINGS."

Long ago Paul writing to the friends at Philippi, thought it wise to give a gentle rebuke with his exhortation and he urged them in their Christian work to see that all things were done "without murmurings and disputings." We can almost fancy that we knew some of these Philippians to whom this exhortation was addressed. We can almost imagine that we had been in the room when Paul proposed that the church at Philippi should assume a larger share of the church's financial burden, or that it should launch out in some new direction in an endeavor to advance the kingdom of God. And we can almost see the looks and hear the voices of some of the brethren as they promptly proceeded to shoot Paul's proposals full of holes. The "murmurer" and the "disputer" have always been in evidence, and we presume they always will be; and yet Paul advises strongly against the practice.

But what objection can there be to "murmurings and disputings?" Surely a man has the right to discuss a project before committing himself to it. Surely he has a right to correct another brother's errors, or to challenge his decisions. Of course he has, but Paul doubtless referred to the chronic murmuring and disputing, to the spirit that was always in opposition and which never helped to accomplish anything, but always hindered. Paul does not say that the murmurers did not work, he does not say that the disputers did not do a share of the work of the church, but he does admit that their work was marred by their murmuring and discounted not a little by their disputing. The grumbler is not really an idler but he is a very uncomfortable fellow-worker.

"Quit your kicking" might be a good motto for many of us whose pulling is sadly interfered with by our kicking. It requires quite a little energy to murmur and dispute, and our strength would accomplish more if applied in other directions. And then a good deal of our disputing is utterly foolish. Some tremendous disputes have arisen over the pettiest things, and men often waste one hundred dollars worth of time in a dispute over ten cents. And sometimes when a grave issue is being discussed it is entirely side-tracked by some frivolous dispute or silly personal bickering.

Paul's contention is that all things should be done without murmurings and disputings. He wished his readers to learn the happy art of co-operation so that in big things and in little things alike there would be no waste of effort through unfortunate divisions. Yet some men love to dispute, and they do it in season and out of season, on the ball-field, in the shop, in the house, in church, in conference, in fact everywhere, and unless they change, the very first thing they will do when they get to heaven will be to start a dispute. And some men love to hear their own groans, and they murmur against the government, against the "boss," against the workmen, against women, against children, against business, the church, the weather and Providence. They murmur until their friends grow desperately weary of it, and yet, while it worries and discourages others, it grows to be one of the chief consolations of the murmurer, and if he ever reaches a place where he can find nothing to murmur about he will surely feel very uncomfortable.

But murmuring and disputing add nothing save discomfort and discouragement to life. They really spring from an unhappy frame of mind and they mar very often work that would otherwise be highly esteemed. We can't get rid of all the murmuring and disputing, but we can certainly get rid of that part for which we are personally responsible. We can't prevent others doing these things, but by the grace of God we can prevent ourselves, and in preventing ourselves we will probably find that we help to prevent a goodly number of other people as well.—Christian Guardian.

The death angel silently entered the village of Sharon, July 21, and claimed MRS. MARGARET PRITCHARD MUSE. A consecrated Christian, she did all in her power to advance the cause of Christ. She lived to be seventy-eight years of age and she has left her impress for good upon this section. Affliction stopped her active labors in the church five years ago, when she faithfully served as organist, Sunday school teacher, superintendent if necessary, a visitor of the sick. Even while forced to stay at home she has steadily supported the church, has always remembered God's people, prayed without ceasing, rendered favors to her neighbors, and expressed an interest constantly in every one of them. Her influence for good will long be felt by all who were fortunate enough to know her. After a beautiful service in the Sharon Methodist Church, in which many friends were present to pay tribute to her memory, her present pastor and Brother Gatlin, her pastor twenty years ago, testified of her fidelity to the cause of Christ. Her pastor fifty years and more ago could have done the same, for she has long and faithfully served her Savior. Her remains were laid to rest in the old family graveyard four miles from Sharon. May the all-wise God comfort her loved ones and keep them determined to meet her in that brighter and better land beyond. Her pastor, B. M. HUNT.

J. N. LEBOUX, Jr., son of J. N. Lebourg, Sr., was born July 22, 1914, and departed this life Wednesday, August 3, 1921, aged 7 years and 11 days. Little J. N. Lebourg, Jr., has gone to heaven to be with the angels. He will be in that great reunion when Jesus comes to be king, and to live with Jesus and mother on that bright and blessed shore. Though he suffered much in the last hour, he sang, "Love lifted me." He will ever be sweet to our memory. His Aunt, Mrs. J. L. CADY.

On the morning of June 29, 1921, the spirit of Mrs. MARY EDMONDSON went back to him who gave it. She was born in Lynchburg, Va., seventy-five years ago. Most of her life was spent in and near Memphis, Tenn. She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, a faithful Christian, a devoted mother, and a loyal friend. She had enshrined herself in the hearts of all who knew her. With a bright, cheerful disposition she cheered all who were associated with her. The last weeks of her life were weeks of pain and sickness, but she carried the same sweet smile and gentle words to the end. Mrs. Edmondson leaves many besides her immediate family to mourn her death: one brother, T. D. Thurman, Neshoba, Tenn.; two sons and four daughters—Mrs. J. E. Maddux, Como, Miss., Mrs. W. D. Galloway, Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. H. E. Douglas, Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. W. L. Rhodes, Lula, Miss., E. W. Edmondson, Chicago, Ill., and H. C. Edmondson, Lakeland, Fla. May he who said "My grace is sufficient for thee" comfort the bereaved ones, and some sweet day gather them all home in a glad reunion with mother where partings come no more.

A loving friend,

Mrs. T. H. BROWN.

Lula, Miss., Aug. 5, 1921.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our beloved teacher, Mrs. J. H. FRAISER, has gone from our midst and entered into her eternal rest, thereby causing a vacancy that will be hard to fill.

And whereas in her death our church has lost a most loyal member, our class a most wise, faithful, conscientious, painstaking teacher and each of us a personal friend.

And whereas by her unselfish devotion she undertook and successfully carried out a work too great for her frail body to support.

And whereas she was not only devoted to church work, but was always ready, willing, and able to help in any work for the betterment of conditions or the happiness of the people.

And whereas in all and through all she was upheld by the Divine Spirit.

And whereas her unselfish devotion has been an inspiration to us all.

Therefore realizing our loss and feeling our bereavement, be it resolved:

First—That we bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father who "doeth all things well."

Second—That we, the Daughters of the King class, express our great love for Mrs. Fraiser and our appreciation of her devotion to the work.

Third—That we assure the family of our sympathy and prayers for them in their great sorrow.

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one spread on the pages of our record book and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. R. B. Whitehurst, chairman; Mrs. Joel Johnson, Mrs. H. M. Ivy, Mrs. J. M. Sullivan, Committee.

FROM MILLSAPS MEMORIAL, JACKSON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: This is my first time to let the readers of the Advocate hear from Millsaps Memorial since I came on the work last December. I have been so busy with my church and college work that I haven't had time to write.

The good people of Millsaps Memorial have shown us many favors this year. Every church on the charge has showered us with good things to eat, inasmuch that we have had but very few groceries to buy. Our Sunday schools have been doing fairly good work, and we have one church with only seven members on roll which has an average attendance of above thirty at Sunday school.

Since the pastor has been attending college from the 14th of last September till the 22nd of July and has been off the work for one protracted meeting, we are just getting ready for our revivals on the work. Pray for us that we may have the Spirit of God with us and that many souls may be born into God's Kingdom!

Yours in Christ,

W. N. WARE, P. C.

A WORLD PROGRAM.

The Centenary Bulletin for July says: "First Church, Birmingham, is carrying a Centenary Special of $100,000, the largest single assignment of the Bureau of Specials during the first quarter of 1921 and the largest church assignment to date. It includes work in every mission field of our Methodism, thus giving First Church a world program.

"As is generally known, this is one of the big churches of Southern Methodism. It has in its membership some men and women of wealth, but by far the larger number are people of moderate means. It carries a regular financial budget that is in keeping with its numerical and financial strength, total contributions last year being $152,500. With a big program of world service, and in the face of 'hard times,' this church pledged its quota of more than $200,000 to the Christian Education Movement. First Church, Birmingham, has its face to the front."

GETTING READY FOR LIFE.

In many ways the great Apostle to the Gentiles was one of the most interesting men that ever lived, and the story of his life and work is wonderfully stimulating. Few men have lived a more strenuous life. Full of energy and unbounded enthusiasm, he occupied a large place in the life and history of his time, and exerted an influence almost unique in its outreach and significance. A man of education and culture, he saw life in its broad aspects and planned for great and enduring things. In a most emphatic sense he was one of the great shapers of history, and his influence abides and is still a very vital force even after twenty centuries have passed.

In our lesson for to-day we look chiefly at the early life of this great man and try to estimate the factors and forces that entered into his life and character as these began to take shape. This is always an interesting as well as a profitable exercise. Great men, such as Paul was, do not just happen, any more than lesser men do. We do not say that they are altogether the product of the circumstances entering into their lives and of conditions surrounding them, but that they are very largely influenced by these is undoubtedly true. And it is possible, if we can become familiar enough with them, to do much at estimating how the people and the conditions that have surrounded their lives have helped to make them what they are.

One of the first things the biographer does is to tell us something about the parentage of his subject. Unfortunately in the case of Paul the records do not give us much in a direct way touching this item. And yet we can learn considerable by inference. Paul had parents who brought him up with a reverence for holy things. The instruction that he had had in religious matters had been so reasonable and so earnest that it had won his allegiance and secured his assent and whole-souled devotion. His home must have been a strictly disciplined one, with its rules and regulations that had to be closely adhered to. Brought up a strict Pharisee, he would as a boy know what law and strict discipline meant, and yet he was not alienated from the things that were thus forced upon him, for they won his allegiance in the end. His parents evidently had learned the very difficult art of disciplining without alienating and antagonizing.

And what a difficult art it is many of us know full well. The strictness and discipline that will win and hold must be intelligent and reasonable and tempered. And if it isn't these things, it is very doubtful if it is any better in the final analysis than a measure of easy-going laxness and indifference would be. A too-strict parental rule that hardens and embitters is about one of the greatest mistakes that can be committed.

Paul's parents knew the value of education and gave to their boy the very best that their time and circumstances would permit. And we may as well face this fact, without that education Paul could never have done the work that he did. This does not say that without such superior education as he had he might not have become a great man and rendered the church and the cause of Christ signal service. But without the trained mind and the broadened outlook, the work of his life would not have been of the fine and enduring quality that it was.

One could imagine John Wesley, without Oxford and the training and culture which it gave, becoming a great man and a flaming evangelist, but without Oxford he could not have done the fasting work that he did, or founded the Methodist Church. The men who have left a lasting imprint upon the world and have shaped history and the destinies of their fellows have been for the most part men of education and cultured intelligence, though they may not have always been men of the schools. It is impossible to make too much of education or to set too great a store by it if it be done with anything like intelligence. And the church of God and the causes of the Kingdom never needed trained and experienced and cultured men more than they do to-day.

Paul enjoyed the cultural and inspiring influences that come through residence in a great and progressive city, situated on the great high-roads of travel and movement and life. This is often spoken of as a drawback and hindrance and the quieter walks and ways of life are eulogized, but such eulogy does not cover the whole situation. The great city may have its drawbacks and its distractions, but it has as well its tremendous advantages and we ought not to fail to appreciate these. Paul's references to his native city lead us to believe that he did not fail to appreciate the privileges that came to him as a dweller in a great cosmopolitan center with an opportunity of mingling in its life and feeling the thrill and throb of its progress.

It is evident that Paul was trained to appreciate the value of citizenship and that he was led to set a high price upon such political rights and duties as came to him. Even though a Roman citizen, such rights and duties as he possessed were small indeed, compared with those that fall to our lot in this favored day, but it is to be feared that our appreciation does not always measure up to his.—From "Mr. Black's Bible Class," in The Christian Guardian.

CAN WE REACH JAPAN'S STANDARD.

In the homeland the average Centenary pledge per member is approximately $16. The average per member in the Japan Methodist Church is $16.50. And as one of our missionaries in Japan says: "Southern Methodism subscribed her fund while the greatest prosperity of history added the liberality of our people. Japanese Methodism made her pledge after the economic crash had brought financial ability to its lowest ebb. She subscribed every dollar of her objective; with a ten per cent surplus, at a time when thousands of people were out of work, many of whom were her own members." And Japan Methodists, according to the latest report from that field, have paid up to date their pledges. Methodists in the home land—well, it is not in good taste to continue to comment on this.

WOMAN AVOIDS AN OPERATION

Hope Nearly Gone, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her

Star, N. C.—"My monthly spells gave me so much trouble, sometimes they would last two weeks. I was treated by two doctors without relief and they both said I would have to have an operation. I had my trouble four years and was unfit to do anything, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. I read about your medicine in the 'Primitive Baptist' paper and decided to try it. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for about seven months and now I am able to do my work. I shall never forget your medicine and you may publish this if you want to as it is true."—Mrs. J. F. HURSEY, Star, N. C.

Here is another woman who adds her testimony to the many whose letters we have already published, proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound often restores health to suffering women even after they have gone so far that an operation is deemed advisable. Therefore it will surely pay any woman who suffers from ailments peculiar to her sex to give this good old fashioned remedy a fair trial.

Teaching Points.

1. The heart of the true pastor always longs for the welfare of those to whom he has ministered at any time.
2. It is in the performance of the duty that lies close at hand that the call to a larger sphere of service comes.
3. The introduction of the gospel into Europe was definitely the result of a divine call to the servants of God. Missions is a part of God's plan.
4. Paul's obedience to this second "heavenly vision"—his immediate obedience—marked the beginning of the most remarkable period in the history of the Christian church.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Corinth District Standard Training School had an enrollment of 82. Rev. Melville Johnson, of New Albany, had in his class on Organization and Administration three superintendents and two preachers. Dr. A. W. Milden, of the University of Mississippi, taught a class of 19, using as a text, the Teacher's Study of the Life of Christ. Mrs. J. B. Randolph taught a class of 26, using as text, The Pupil. Miss Lynda Rainey, Conference Elementary Superintendent, had in her class 9, and taught Primary Organization, Administration and Worship. Mrs. W. W. Adams, Conference Elementary Superintendent of the Memphis Conference, taught Beginner Organization, Administration and Worship. There were 14 in her class.

Corinth gave the school whole-hearted support in every respect. A few

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is so! It is so! That more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Headaches Vanish

Sick or nervous headaches, backaches, women's aches almost instantly respond to the liquid remedy Capudine. It stops the pain by removing the cause. Every home should keep a bottle handy. Sold by druggists, 10c, 30c, 60c. Insist upon getting CAPUDINE.

Presbyterians and Baptists took the work. They, as well as our own people, were enthusiastic in their commendations of the class of work the church is doing for our leaders.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, P. E., of the Corinth District, was Educational Director of the school. He has thrown his whole soul into the school over his district. Something has got to happen whenever he leads. The church gave a delightful trip to Shiloh Park. My own father fought all over these hills. The strains of "Dixie" called up a slumbering but undying spirit that others can understand—but not describe.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, recently appointed head of the Department of Religious Education of Grenada College, and incidentally Treasurer of our Sunday School Board, spent a few hours with us at the Training School. Brother Stephens has been studying at Northwestern University this summer. He expects to move his family to Grenada within a few days.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

For the past week we have had the delightful privilege of conducting a class in Organization and Administration at the Forest Grove Church, on the Camden charge. Mr. O. C. Hull, of Lawrence, taught the book and I looked after the inspirational work. There were six who took the examination. Sixteen enrolled in the class and ten are to turn their papers in in two weeks. The attendance in the actual classwork never dropped below eight, and ran very high. The class did mighty good work, and we feel that Forest Grove Sunday school and community will do much better work from now on.

Brother Hull proved himself to be a wise instructor and endeared himself to his pupils and the community in general. Rev. C. H. Ellis, the pastor, was kind and thoughtful in his attentions to us, and the community in general received us most graciously.

I would be exceedingly glad to put this same type of work on in any community or school that will allow it to be done. A fine way to do the work would be for the whole circuit to meet at some central point and stay there for three days, having the classwork morning, afternoon and night. This would take less time and reach the whole circuit, rather than one school. Let us hear from you.

Don't forget to observe Sunday School Day.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

GREAT TRAINING SCHOOL FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADERS AT LAKE JUNALUSKA THIS YEAR.

The General Sunday School Board's training school for Sunday school leaders held at Lake Junaluska, July 13-27 this year, surpassed any previously held during the past five years.

Four hundred and sixty-four persons were enrolled for work and more than five hundred credits of the Teacher Training Department were issued for work done by students. This school and the Western Training School at Southern Methodist University in June are central in a system of more than eighty Standard Training Schools for Sunday school workers that will be held throughout the church this year from Washington, D. C., to Berkeley, California, and from Arcadia, Missouri, to Havana, Cuba.

The General Sunday School Board has a program of religious education that is attracting very favorable comment from the leaders in this field in other churches. Dr. Henry F. Cope, Secretary of the Religious Education Association, Chicago, and Dr. Wade Crawford Barclay, Associate Editor of Sunday School Publications for the Methodist Episcopal Church, both said this summer that no denomination in America had a more efficient program of religious education than the Southern Methodist Church. A Southern Methodist woman teaching in the Training School at Northfield, Mass., this summer heard one of the leading Congregationalists in that school say the same thing.—Bulletin.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PAYMENTS TO AUGUST 1.

To August 1 the Sunday schools of the church had paid on Centenary pledges $711,437.52. While this does not represent the full share of the Sunday school as set forth in the program of the Centenary—five cents per month per member—it is showing far better than that made in any previous period of our history. In amount paid the Virginia Conference leads, with a total of $80,088.40; South Georgia is second, with a total of $41,276.39. The next eight in order named are: North Alabama, $38,557.14; North Georgia, $38,198.87; Western North Carolina, $34,561.76; Florida, $28,910.77; Holston, $27,138.89; Central Texas, $26,225; Alabama, $25,584.62; North Texas, $24,887.43. In amount paid per member the first ten Conferences are, in order named: Florida; West Texas; Virginia; (New Mexico; Illinois; Little Rock; Alabama; Kentucky; South Georgia); Denver; Los Angeles. While the showing is a good one, when compared with previous records, it is not so good when we take into account the fact that in no Conference have the contributions of the Sunday schools come to the average of one dollar per member.

As will be noted, the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences are not in either of the lists given above. Perhaps it would not be expected that these Conferences appear in the list of the first ten in total amount paid, but we believe that they ought to be among the first ten in amount per member. Of the three, the Louisiana Conference leads with a Sunday school payment of $12,827.36, or 39 cents per member. The Mississippi Conference schools have paid $11,749.42, or 34 cents per member, and the North Mississippi schools, $9,998.87, or 28 cents per member. This takes into account the total Sunday school membership and hence does not rightly represent the Sunday schools that are making regular Centenary payments. But since the plan of the church was that every Sunday school have some share of the Centenary obligation, it is the only fair basis on which to make an estimate. We believe that our Sunday school people of the three Conferences will agree that a far better record can be made. Let's make a special effort to that end from this date to October 1.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

MRS. BERTHA MCGEE SCALES.

While the shadows of night still lingered on the morning of July 15, the strong, beautiful life of Mrs. Bertha McGee Scales slipped away, back to the God who gave it. When the sad message was flashed over the wires a great wave of sorrow filled the hearts of the women of the Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference; for each realized the great loss our work had sustained. Reared in a cultured Christian home, beautiful, bright of intellect she might have been a social leader; but in that Methodist parsonage, Christ came to her and she chose to walk with the people of God and follow the leading of her Savior, the lowly Nazarene. Her charming personality drew to her the love and admiration of those who knew her. The weak gained strength from her strong character, and her kindly ministrations to those in need proved the love and broad sympathy of her heart. Space is lacking to enumerate her many virtues, or to mention her worthy deeds, but we desire to pay tribute to her memory and express our appreciation of all she has meant to the great work in which we are engaged.

Permit a personal reminiscence. I knew her first in the work, a member of the Missionary Society, active, zealous, strong, radiating enthusiasm. Until those less interested became active workers. When she was made district secretary of the Home Mission Society, she carried into that office the same zeal and faithfulness, and the work prospered. As conference treasurer, she was efficient and faithful. As recording secretary, her work was well done. When elected Conference President, she found opportunity for her wonderful executive ability. She it was who led the Society through that trying period when the Home and Foreign Societies were united, and how truly she united the two, many of us well know. She became the first president of the Missionary Society as we now know it. When the Society was given a representative on the Orphans' Home Board of Directors, no one could be found more suited to fill the place than she, and how well she discharged the duties of that office may be judged by the fact that she was made a member of the Executive Committee, an honor that has not yet been bestowed on any other woman.

As a worker in the rank and file, I knew her to be loyal and faithful to her God. When official honors came to her, she humbly assumed the responsibilities ever anxious to measure up to them. Her openness to suggestion, her readiness with advice, her willingness to spend and be spent in the Master's service, prove how peculiarly suited she was for a leader.

When at her own request she gave up leadership, her interest in the Missionary Society never waned. Just a few short weeks before her home going she was asked for a message to be taken to the District Conference, then about to convene. She said, "Tell them I have followed their work with interest and am proud of what they have accomplished," but I hope that it is only a promise of greater things to follow." Then very earnestly she added, "And tell them I know that work for the Master is the only work worth while in this life." This message rings true and is a message from her to us all.

I knew her when other laurels graced her brow, all so worthily worn. The monumental work of her life was with her Sunday school class, "The Character Builders," a class of college boys. She loved them, worked for them, prayed for them, and only the God above can know the extent of her influence for good in the lives of these boys. I knew her then the same consecrated woman whose interest in the Master's Kingdom was measured by the need for service.

I knew her, too, when the hand of affliction was laid so heavily upon her, and work had to be given up. I saw the sweet resignation to the divine will. I knew that even from her couch of pain many expressions of sympathy and interest in her fellows went out. As the end drew near loved ones told her all that medical skill could do had been done for her. In this testing time there was never a murmur or a fear, but strong in faith she answered, "God's will be done." We thank God for her life of consecrated service which shall ever be a beacon light beckoning us along the path of safety that leads to God.

In the death of Mrs. Scales, the Mission work has lost a wise leader and an earnest worker; our country, a true, loyal citizen. Her influence died not with her, but still lives on to bless humanity; and on the glorious resurrection morn, when the dead in Christ shall rise, many will clasp her hand on that golden shore and with songs of praises on their lips, tell her that her influence was the human factor in their salvation.

To her husband and son, whose love and tender ministrations were of so much comfort to her during days of suffering and nights of pain; and to the devoted mother, whose love has followed her through all her life, we desire to express our sympathy, and the assurance of our prayers. She whom you love is not dead, but sleepeth. The Master said, "It is enough, come up higher," and in the glory land he welcomed her with "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

News From The French Mission Field.

The Girls' Institute at the MacDonell Wesley Community House, held August 1 to 6, was a period of inspiration, of recreation, and of training in leadership for the fourteen young people who attended. Each morning session was opened with a devotional service followed by a one-hour Bible period and an hour of Mission Study. The Bible study was led by Miss Moselle Eubanks, the new worker appointed by the Council to the French Field, and who comes to us from Rome, Georgia. She is splendidly educated and especially trained for work with young people, and we are indeed fortunate in having secured her. The Mission Study class, on "Serving the Neighborhood," was led by Mrs. J. W. Warren, one of Houma's gifted women, whose winning personality meant much in contact with the girls. Refreshments and a brief recreation period followed and then the young people gathered in the sitting room for practice in presenting programs arranged and directed by leaders from among themselves.

After dinner there was a period for poster work and a number of artistic missionary posters were made by the girls. Then came the "quiet hour," the singing hour, and a period for outdoor games. The work in music was directed by Mrs. George Elms, of Houma, a consecrated Christian neighbor to the Wesley House, who threw herself wholeheartedly into aiding every activity of the Institutes.

The evenings were filled with delightful features for recreation and training. On Tuesday evening was the Community Sing, led by Dr. Gardiner L. Tucker, Rector of St. Matthews Episcopal Church, and Mrs. J. H. Thatcher, one of Houma's gifted musicians. This was held at St. Matthews Parish House, and proved such a time of pleasure to both young and old who attended, that it was voted to try it again in September and to make it a permanent affair for the community.

Wednesday was picnic day, and after a joyous truck ride to the village of Bourg, some twelve miles distant, which included the thrilling adventure of a punctured tire and having our picture made during the "re-tiring," the hungry crowd had an outdoor supper on the hospitable grounds of the Residence Dairy Farm. After supper, the girls played a most exciting game of Punch Ball, then hiked home to a well-earned rest for the night.

On Thursday and Friday we had with us Mr. J. B. Grambling, Epworth League Field Secretary, who gave the girls three splendid intensive addresses on young people's work in organizations, showing them stereopticon pictures of our work in Africa. At the close of his Friday night address he gave opportunity for volunteers to offer themselves, when several of the girls evidenced their desire to give themselves to the Master for His use. We want prayers for these girls especially that their desire to serve Christ may be strengthened and directed as they grow older.

Saturday morning the party broke up and the girls returned to their several homes, happier, wiser, and better as a result of the five days of work and study and play together. We hope that all the women of Louisiana who have helped us to make this week's work possible will pray earnestly that God will bless the seed then sown, that they may bring forth abundant fruit for His Kingdom.

On the week of July 18 we had held the Institute for Little Girls with twenty-one girls in the Wesley House and some twelve or more town girls coming in each day. Similar work to the above was given, adapted to the ages of the children, and during this week we had our dear Miss Bertha Griffin, from Crowley, to help us. Such happy girls one could rarely find.

As a special provision for these activities, God had led the women from various auxiliaries to send us help, and the last week of June brought us a larger number of boxes than had ever come to us before during such a period of time.

The next great event at the MacDonell Wesley Community House will be the week of institute work with the Renwar vs. Rheumatism.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." ILLNESS OF REV. R. P. GOAR.

Rev. R. P. Goar, an honored member of the North Mississippi Conference for forty years, is now a patient sufferer, having been confined to his bed for more than five months. Those who are given to complaining of the trials that come in this life would profit by spending a while by the bedside of Brother Goar, whose heart, soul, mind, strength, and all that he is are stayed on God. This being true, he is ready to live or die.

Having been a superannuate for three or four years, he was given charge of one church four miles away from his home, Pleasant Hill, the care of which he began with the same zeal and faith that have characterized him for forty years. Brother Goar fully realizes the meaning of affliction, that it works for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. Let us pray that he may be spared many years to the church.

SOME BEATITUDES.

By C. C. Featherstone.

Blessed is the man who can see straight, even though his own dollars may be involved, for by so doing he will avoid many pitfalls.

Blessed is the man who can judge others fairly, even though they may be outstripping him in life's race, for by so doing he will avoid the awful pang of jealousy.

Blessed is the man who can put himself in the other fellow's place, when he is tempted to judge harshly, for by so doing he will earn great reward.

Blessed is the man who is able to give his brother the benefit of the reasonable doubt, when he is accused, for surely brotherhood should not be less charitable than the law.

Blessed is the man who is just enough to demand proof when his brother is accused, for by so doing many false charges will be made to appear.

Blessed is the man who does not repeat charges against his neighbors, for generally charges increase greatly in magnitude, as they pass from mouth to mouth.

Blessed is the man who is not a slanderer by reason of repeating false charges, for by repeating he is just as guilty as the originator.

Blessed is the man who repeats good things that he hears about his neighbor, for both he and his neighbor will be wonderfully strengthened thereby.

Blessed is the man who has faith in his neighbor, for verily, the man who has lost faith in humanity has little faith in himself or in God.

Blessed is the man who does not think that the world has gone to the bad because cotton has gone down in price, for he remembers that God is still on His throne and all is well with the world.

Blessed is the man whose spiritual barometer is not affected by the money market, for he, doubtless, remembers that the blessed Master said that "a man's life does not consist in the abundance of things which he possesses." Southern Christian Advocate.

The parables of our Lord teach us the value of meditation. Too much of our knowledge of Christ comes through the medium of others instead of through the Spirit of God himself. "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee." The hiding of truth in the heart means meditation.—Selected.

The man who winks at sin develops a blind spot that will destroy his eyesight.—Exchange.

Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tonic you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.

Not Equipment But the Man Makes the Difference

Every great school, college or university has been built around the personality of some one man. The educated men of America who have accomplished great things and who stand well in professions look back on their college training and attribute much of their accomplishments to the dominating personality of the school in which they were educated. The dominating personality of Morgan School is that of Professor R. K. Morgan. His influence for good and better things does much toward the moulding of morals and stimulating of broader ideals in the students who are so fortunate as to attend Morgan School. Mr. Morgan has devoted his life to the training of boys.

The thoughtful, considerate parent feels that the school to which he sends his son must be equipped and its faculty chosen with the primary end of training the boy to become a man—to teach true Christian faith, to develop manly independence and self-confidence, to inspire high ideals of life and service, to strengthen and develop mind and body alike.

Such an institution is the Morgan School, which has been built up around the Christian character and wholesome, inspiring personality of Robert K. Morgan, who has been principal for 26 years.

A postal card to Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., will bring you a catalogue and full information about this school.

FROM THE MT. VERNON CHARGE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: Our third quarterly conference was well represented at Mt. Olive, with a very fine, touching, and effective sermon by our efficient and brotherly presiding elder, Rev. J. R. Jones, which was an inspiration to all present, the subject being "Faith's Triumph." After dinner the Conference met promptly at 1:30 o'clock. Brother Jones rapidly, yet consistently, dispatched the business of the church. Officers made reports, aglow with optimism, which was very encouraging to the conference. The writer also showed an increase along all lines in the report he made, together with the many additions by baptism especially.

The outlook, despite circumstances generally, is encouraging for yet greater results in the Master's Kingdom. Rev. P. H. Grice, pastor of the Meadville and Bude charge, drove Brother Jones out in his car from their town to the conference at Mt. Olive, and the folks spoke most favorably of him, since they appreciated his presence so much, including the pastor of the charge.

Well, Brother Carley, pray for me and the work. I'll boost the Advocate all I know how, and we will give all the glory to our God and him only.

Your Brother in Christ,

N. S. LOFTUS,
Pastor Mt. Vernon Charge.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

In the meeting at Hot Springs, Ark., that I have already mentioned in these columns, one mother prayed almost all one afternoon for the night service, and asked God to save twenty-five people that specific service. Twenty joined the church that service, and as they began to come forward for prayer, this woman shouted in the old-fashioned way, and strong men wept just like children. God only knows what this service meant to my poor hungry heart.

At Duck Hill, Miss., while assisting our pastor, Rev. W. J. Wood, another good sister "prayed through," and let the welkin ring, in the old-fashioned way, while some of her immediate family wept and cried for joy. She prayed through for her husband and I believe he will be saved yet. Brother Wood had a testimony service during the meeting, and a man who had never testified in public, not a member of the Methodist Church, arose before Brother Wood finished, and set the thing afire, and for a few moments there were currents from heaven, that brought gladness and joy to hearts that is a sweet memory until this day! I guess I am somewhat emotional, and need some things that others of my brethren don't need, but it is beyond my power of speech to undertake to tell what these three incidents mean to us. I was SO HUNGRY, in these peculiarly trying times, when our meetings are so cold and indifferent, to hear one more heaven-born shout—the kind I have heard from my mother so many times—and to feel an electrical current from heaven again, as I felt when I was converted, later sanctified, and a few times since I have been preaching. Well, the Lord knew what I needed, and gave it to us. I thank Him, take fresh courage, and press right on!

I haven't the time nor space for a detailed report—sufficeth to say, I have been in seven meetings off my charge this year, and three on my charge, and can report victory all along down the line. I'll expect you to pray just a little more for me, reader, than ever, for I feel the need of help more sensibly than ever, so pray HARD for me!

Joyfully plodding on,
J. A. WELLS.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SCATTER THEM ALONG.

There are very few people who are not in the enjoyment of some kind of blessing; and most of us have so many that we cannot count them. We ought to be happy in the possession of so many marks of Divine favor—but too often our murmurings and complainings indicate that we are altogether miserable. If we are unhappy, it may be because we are trying to keep all our blessings to ourselves. Some of them we may not be able to share, but some of them can be passed on to others around us. Suppose we try it—be a blessing to as many people as possible—and the chances are that our own happiness will increase many-fold.

IS THIS WHAT THE PEOPLE WANT?

Last week a widely-advertised prize fight took place in this city. From the nearly two-column account of the fight in a daily newspaper, we take the following: "The bout seemed to please the second-largest crowd that ever attended the auditorium. Nearly 8000 persons, of which 7500 were paid admissions, were in the immense throng. Numbered among some of the ringsiders were some of the most prominent men in the city and State, including * * * (a public official), who was seeing his first boxing match and who declared it was great. * * * The financial gate receipts last night ran close to $17,000 without the boxing commission's share being deducted. An ideal fight, splendid preliminaries, and a smooth-working program from start to finish altogether made the show one of the most successful ever held here. The crowd seemed to reach a higher standard than ever, many women being among those in the reserved seat section. Though bloody, the scrap at no time was very uneven, neither fighter seeming in danger at any time. * * * Both suffered facial damage, Littleton's right eye being badly battered after six rounds, and Wiggins sustaining a badly bruised nose and a split eye. They both bled profusely from these cuts, Littleton also bleeding from his nose considerably." If this is the kind of entertainment the people nowadays want, including prominent men in city and State, and even women, something must be radically wrong with our boasted civilization. We shudder with horror at the brutal exhibitions in the ancient arenas; are we grown so callous that such things to-day move us not? It is certainly not always true that people ought to have what they think they want.

NOT SO BAD AS IT SEEMS.

If one may judge by the amount of space in the daily newspapers devoted to the problems that arise in connection with the enforcement of the prohibition law, one might be misled into believing that never before in the history of the world was there so much trouble in carrying out the provisions of a legislative enactment. We are convinced, however, that a great deal of this commotion is nothing more than a tempest in a teapot. Of course the prohibition law is not being perfectly enforced; neither is any other law. The list of crimes given in the papers day by day runs all the way from petty pilfering to cold-blooded murder—yet there is no agitation in favor of repealing the laws against these things, and no contention that good men are being turned into criminals by reason of the existence of penal statutes. When we take everything into consideration, we must be convinced that pretty good progress is being made in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, and, if we do not become lax in our determination to have the law observed, we may rest assured that there will be improvement in conditions. If liquor were being as freely distributed as formerly, those who profit by the traffic would not be carrying on such an active propaganda against the present law.

DO YOUR BEST.

The thought in the following editorial comment from the Alabama Christian Advocate is so suggestive that we pass it along for the benefit of our readers: "It is said of Caruso, the world's most famous tenor, that he always sang as though he still had his success to attain, and as though he were in danger every minute of being supplanted by another. This is paramount to saying that every time he sang he did his best. This he did to win a corruptible crown. Cannot we Christians, as we go about our Lord's work, do it in the same spirit? Should not every sermon be preached as though the loss or the saving of some soul depended upon its success or failure? When we teach a Sunday school lesson or sing a gospel hymn, it should be done with an eye single to His glory, and anything short of our best will not be for His glory. We have an incorruptible crown to gain, a crown that fadeth not away. The utmost of effort should be put forth in trying for this crown. If we put that same amount of hard work and earnestness into our Lord's work that we put into our own, there would certainly be a different tale to tell as regards the results."

IT NEVER PAYS.

"All I got out of it was a good time, plenty to eat, automobile rides, and a long railroad trip." This was the statement a sixteen-year-old boy made to the police authorities after he had been arrested for complicity in forging a check on a local bank. The things he got with the fraudulently obtained money may have seemed good to him at the time—but behind prison bars he will come to realize that he threw away infinitely more than his "good times" can compensate him for. He has lost his good name, and, though he may succeed in establishing a reputation for truth and honesty, there will always rest upon him the disgrace of a criminal act and the shame of a betrayed trust. We know not who his parents are—but the burden upon their hearts will weigh heavily for years to come. Dishonesty never pays, even according to the standards of the morally callous; and sin, which lies back of it, inevitably drags down to perdition. What a simple lesson to learn—and yet how many lamentably fail to master it!

TOO HOT!

We have just passed through a very hot spell of weather (a perfectly useless remark!) and people have been bemoaning the fate that makes them sweat and swelter through such torrid days and nights. And some of them (so it has come to our ears) have said that it is entirely too hot to get up early enough on Sunday to go to Sunday school and church. Well, maybe it has been; but we have failed to notice any special diminution in their activities on the other days of the week. The street cars every morning are crowded with people going to their employment; the stores downtown seem to have about as many customers as in cooler seasons; the places of entertainment are catering to great crowds, on Sundays as well as other days; picnics and pleasure jaunts seem to be especially popular at this season of the year. We are beginning to wonder if it ever gets too hot for anything but to go to church. In about four-thirds of the cases we know of, it is rather an excuse than a reason. In fact, the churches we are most familiar with are cooler, with electric fans and abundant ventilation, than the homes in which most of our people live, and an hour or two spent in them would minister to physical comfort if not to spiritual profit. Too hot!

LIBERALISM, UNIONISM AND HUMANITARIANISM.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

There is an unreasonable, not to say an absurd, decrying of creeds to which the apostles of liberalism give themselves in season and out of season. They object to definite beliefs concerning matters of religion.

But why should definite beliefs be excluded from the sphere of religion, when they are not only allowed, but required, in the realm of secular things? In the political and commercial worlds men hold clean-cut opinions and seek to propagate their convictions. They proceed upon the perfectly correct theory that what a man believes will determine what he does. All programmes of publicity and propaganda are based on this self-evident truth.

During the war Germany employed most skillfully the art of propaganda, and thereby secured marked results for a while. The Allies did likewise, resisting German propaganda as vigorously as they resisted German armies.

Every great corporation has its department of publicity for the purpose of moulding public opinion favorably towards its interests. The packers and operators of coal mines have kept up most effective propaganda with a view to promoting their business and protecting their interests.

Political parties adopt the same methods. Campaign literature is printed and circulated in amazing quantities and at enormous expense. Questions of the tariff, the currency, "the League of Nations," and other public issues, are presented in all their phases and in every possible light.

But these elaborate and costly systems of propaganda in the political, industrial, and commercial worlds would be the veriest folly if it were not true that the beliefs of men control the conduct of men.

Why should it be otherwise in the religious world? Is it not true that a religious creed more than any other sort of belief colors and controls conduct?

Take for example the doctrine of the divinity of Christ. Does belief, or doubt, of that doctrine have no influence on character and conduct? Christ's law of discipleship reads thus: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." (Matthew xvi:24.) If Jesus is nothing more than a mere man, His terms of discipleship are such as no man ought to require of another and no man ought to accept at the demand of another. But if He is very God as well as very man, if He is a divine Savior as well as a Heavenly Teacher, he can not require less; and no faithful soul will hesitate to submit to His high, hard requirement.

Again, His consoling words as well as His controlling commandments possess, or lack, force according as one believes, or denies, His divinity. He says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." (Matthew xi:28.) What a mockery to grief-laden souls are these words, if Jesus is nothing more than a mere man!

Again, if He is a mere man, He is a blasphemer when He says, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me." (John xiv:1.)

There is no escaping the fact that the acceptance, or rejection, of the doctrine of Christ's divinity must have a most decided influence on the lives of men.

In like manner, belief in the doctrines of justification by faith, the new birth, and the authority of the Holy Scriptures, must inevitably affect human character and conduct.

Why, then, should creeds be decried and discarded? A creed is nothing more nor less than what a man believes, and, as long as men think, they will reach conclusions, and their conclusions will be their creeds. A creedless race of men would be a headless generation of unthinking idiots. The liberalists themselves do not desire to come to that goal of intellectual impotence.

When the liberalists denounce creeds they mean that they have doubts of the supernatural in the Christian religion and wish to bring all churches down to the common level of a naturalistic system of ethics. They really wish to minimize belief and embody their nerveless convictions in a credal pellet guaranteed, when swallowed, to put no strain on the mind nor require faith in the soul.

But while they clamor for as little belief as possible, they yearn for big organizations. They are promoters of ecclesiastical syndicates, and missionary mergers. They demand that all denominations shall be swallowed up in a huge, creedless, and characterless body, in which its bulk shall offset its lack of belief.

The liberalists demand that this beliefless body shall devote itself to all sorts of humanitarian schemes for the relief of the physical wants of mankind and shall have little, or no, concern for the spiritual needs of human souls. In such a demand they are perfectly logical.

When one has thrown away, or reduced to a minimum, his belief in God and spiritual things, he must perforce restrict his efforts to the physical wants of men, if he continues to have any interest in mankind at all. He inevitably becomes geocentric, rather than theocentric, in all his thinking and doing. Hence the liberalists make little of God and much of man.

They never tire of talking of "the Kingdom of God;" but when their use of the phrase is closely analyzed, it is plain that they are seeking to substitute the Kingdom of Man for the Kingdom of God. They wish to dethrone humanity and dethrone deity, to make God the servant of men instead of requiring men to be subjects of the heavenly King. They minify worship and magnify work. With them God is to be used rather than adored. As Carlyle once said of such men, "They dare consider the utility of God."

Hence we hear them speak of "the religious values" of this or that truth, or system of doctrine. They thus assume to evaluate truth as a chemist might attempt to determine how many calories, or heat units, are contained in a certain sample of coal.

All this pretentious unionism and humanitarianism of the liberalists is "of the earth earthy." It is the very climax of worldliness; and worldliness manifests itself in its most dangerous and degrading form when it appears as "worldly religion."

What the churches need most urgently is not unionism of organization but vital union with God.

Fundamental truth must be proclaimed under the power of the Holy Spirit sent down from heaven. The Kingdom of God must be preached and set up, and the Kingdom of Man must be pulled down. Comte proclaimed the deification of humanity, but Jesus preached the Kingdom of God.

The world does not need Comte's positivism, but Christ's gospel of salvation.

More than twenty years ago Bishop Elliott, the learned and devout Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, predicted the course which liberalism would run. He foretold that from analyzing and discrediting the Holy Scriptures with a corrosive criticism, it would eventually vivisection and deny the Christ. His language was as follows:

"The same spirit that has found irreconcilable difficulties in the supernatural element of the Old Testament will ultimately challenge the evidence on which the Incarnation rests. And the more so as all the age-long testimonies of the Old Testament, all the foreshadowings of all the promises that were greeted from afar, all the sure words of prophecy, will have been explained away; and there will remain nothing save two narratives, which, it will be said, bear so patently the traces of illusion, or, at least, of an idealism expressing itself under the guise of alleged facts, that the doctrine of the Word became flesh, the doctrine which is the hope, light and life of the universe, will be surrendered to the last demands of what will have now become not a distressed, but a ruined faith. When that blessed doctrine is surrendered, the total eclipse of faith will have commenced and the shadows of the great darkness will be fast sweeping over the forlorn and desolate soul."

A stand must be made against liberalism if a shred of Christianity is to be left among men for transmission to the generations to come, or even if the faith of the present generation is to be maintained. A policy of concessions to it and compromises with it can be followed with safety no longer. It has gone far enough.

TRAVEL LETTERS FROM DR. AND MRS.

I. W. COOPER.

II.

Naples, Italy, Aug. 2, 1921.

Dear Dr. Carley: Our last letter told of our trip up to the time that we left Paris, so I shall take up the story there, for those friends who care to follow us on our journey.

The ride from Paris to the Swiss borderland was enjoyable, but not half as beautiful or so interesting as that from Havre to Paris. The reason for this is, perhaps, the fact that the country is not so populous and hence not so highly cultivated.

Early in the afternoon, we entered Switzerland. Earlier in the day, we had travelled in the same compartment with an English lady, who had smiled over our enthusiasm about the natural beauties of France and had said, "Wait till you get to Switzerland, you'll find the most beautiful country in the world," and this proved true. Words are entirely inadequate to picture the glorious, impressive beauty of the Swiss mountains. Perhaps Lord Byron has come nearer than any other English writer to giving us a word-picture of this section of the country. And, as we passed through Clarens and along the shores of Lake Lemane, and by the Castle of Chillon, many of his lines of Childe Harold recurred to us—especially his description of the morn and the storm in the mountain. It was our good fortune to pass along the shores of Lake Geneva just at sunset, on a perfect day, and the beauty of the sky, earth and water was as thrilling as anything could possibly be, in this world. They almost tempted one to believe that this is a perfect world—"In spots." A little further on, the scenery became wilder and more awe-inspiring in its grandeur, for the mountains were more lofty and more frequently snow-capped. One of the young ladies of our party complained that she was going to have curvature of the spine from rushing from one side of the train to another and "craning" her neck upwards, so as not to lose any of the glorious views. Indeed, it was the most thrilling afternoon of our lives!

Just on the borderland between Switzerland and Italy, we stopped for the night at a beautiful little town called Brigue. Here we were guarded in our slumbers by a "cordon" of eleven or twelve snow-capped mountains. Next morning, we were so charmed by the cleanliness of our little hotel and the beauty of its surroundings that we were loath to take up the journey. The hotel keeper had an interesting story to tell us of how Napoleon had passed down the street in front of his hostelry and through these mountains on his way to Russia. We could see, in our mind's eye, the then invincible forces of the world's conqueror—troops which were soon to meet their first serious reverses.

Soon we were "shooting through" the Simplon pass—the longest tunnel in the world—and coming out into sunny Italy. We kept the mountains in view for several hours and then found the country rather monotonous in its scenery. The vineyards, with their festoons of vines running from one fruit tree to another, rather than growing on conventional arbors, as they do in our country—and the low-trimmed mulberry trees, kept "stubby" for the use of the silk-worm industry—these, and the flowers along the way, were the most interesting features. We were, however, impressed with Italian industry and orderliness, on the farious through which the railroad passed. This impression was rather at variance with our ideas of Italian peasant life, as seen in our American towns. But not until we have seen more of Italy can we feel qualified to "pass" on Italian nature and customs.

Late in the afternoon, Saturday, we reached Venice and had our first ride on a gondola. We had not expected our ship to sail till next day, but soon after we were comfortably settled in our hotel room, overlooking the Grand Canal, we were informed that the ship would sail at ten o'clock that evening, so we had to postpone further impressions of Venice until our return, when we hope to stay several days.

Our ship, the Leopolis, proved to be one of the nicest of the Mediterranean cruisers, and the four days' voyage to Athens was a very pleasant, restful one, after the two days of railroad travel. Our first day's sail was on the Adriatic, most of the time out of sight of land. On Monday morning, at ten o'clock, our ship stopped for six hours at Bari, Italy, to take on freight. This gave our party time to go ashore, so we had a long carriage drive over this interesting and typical Italian town. The people were wonderfully interesting to us and we were evidently "a show" to the natives, for our fourteen carriages soon had quite a following of children and loliters. Here, for the first time, we had numerous requests for "back-slash," and we were surprised at the happy, smiling faces and laughing eyes of the children when we shook our heads. They seemed to be among those who are blessed because they expect nothing—yet they continue to ask. Some of these children were wonderfully attractive, in spite of their dirt and rags. Many of the streets are very dirty, very narrow and quite full of flies. Nothing is screened, and this, to our American way of thinking, seemed unsanitary, to say the least. The people, however, look strong and well, and very happy.

One of the stops we made during this drive was at the City Cathedral. It dates from the thirteenth century and looks even older. In the crypt, we saw the bones of St. Nicholas, which are kept underneath the altar. You have to perform quite an athletic "stunt" to obtain a view of these sacred "relics"—get down on your hands and knees and "poke" your head way under the shrine and peep down a little tunnel. About four feet beneath your eyes, you'll see, by the light of a hidden electric bulb, which is, of course, a miraculous light, a pile of little bones which appear to be chicken bones, but are the bones of Saint Nicholas—so we are told. We were sorry to know that he was dead, for we were hoping for a visit from him next Christmas.

After we returned to our ship, we found the crew still busy loading a great number of hides. It was quite an unusual and interesting sight to see how skilfully this big cargo of "crude leather" was handled. Surely shoes should be cheaper in America, after this!

At ten that night, we stopped for two hours at Brendisi. Since we expect to return to Italy by way of this port, we did not go ashore but found much interest in watching a crowd of about thirty Turks come aboard ship. Their strange costumes, excited manners, quarrelsome voices and peculiar "luggage" were all new to us. These Oriental people—many besides the Turks—make regular "beasts of burden" of themselves, and carry the heaviest kinds of trunks and other baggage on their heads and backs.

From Brendisi, we sailed into the Ionian Sea and skirted the western shore of Greece. On Tuesday morning, we stopped for two hours at the island of Corfu and had another interesting drive. In the portion of the town through which we passed, the living conditions were not so crowded and hence were much cleaner than in the Italian towns. The public buildings, also, had more dignity and more style. Our drive took us several miles into the country, and, as we went, we were impressed by the good roads, the wonderful flowers and herbage and the handsome villas, set back in park-like groves. And here, too, we saw for the first time, olive groves, extending over many acres and having trees of all ages—from young ones to those which were said to be fifteen hundred years of age. Many of these trees were full of tiny green berries and many were so old that their trunks were as full of perforations as if they had been under fire during the late war.

The "objective" of our drive was a place called "The One Gun Battery." Here is mounted an old-fashioned cannon and here one may obtain a wonderful view of the east coast of the island and of a beautiful little lake, in which lies a tiny island—"Mouse Island," or the "Cliff of Ulysses." This island, tradition tells us, was the ship of Ulysses which Poseidon turned to stone. It has, in truth, some semblance to a sailboat, with its tall cypress trees for masts. Beyond this Cliff of Ulysses, straight across the lake, one may see, on the other shore, the top of a palace which the German Kaiser built for a summer home. This was before the war. Needless to say, he does not use it now.

The whole island of Corfu is truly a land of flowers and fruits. We shall not soon forget its oleanders and its figs—figs which were even larger and sweeter than those which grow in Mississippi.

When we returned to our ship, the Leopolis, we found that word had been received that a landslide had temporarily closed the Strait of Corinth—or, as we got the news, a mountain had fallen into the strait and so we would have to be on shipboard nearly a day longer, as we must go around by a longer route. This was not good news as it meant the shortening of our stay in Athens; but we felt thankful that the mountain had not chosen to fall just as we were due to pass through the strait.

Next day, we made no landings but kept in sight of land—either the shores of Albania, or of Greece, most all day. Perhaps the most interesting spot that we passed was the rock from which the Greek tragic poetess, Sappho, is said to have jumped into the sea.

Early Thursday morning, we landed at Piraeus, the nearest port to Athens. That portion of the town through which we passed was more dirty and unattractive than anything we had previously seen. A ride of half hour, by electric car, put us in the historic city of Athens. The very thought of being in Athens was so marvellous that our feelings all day were a compound of awe and enthusiasm. It seemed too good to be true that we should be in the city of Socrates and Plato!

At the hotel, we took only time enough to brush up and to store our baggage, then we got into carriages and started out for our sight-seeing. Our first stop was at the Temple of Theseus, which, though in ruins, gives a very perfect idea of its former beauty and its pure type of Grecian architecture. From here, we went to the Prison of Socrates, which is some distance out of the city limits and is nothing more than three communicating cells, or small rooms, hewed out of stone in the side of a hill. These cells look toward the rising sun, and since their outside entrances are closed merely by iron grating, the prison evidently had sunshine and fresh air, and commanded a good view of the city.

From Socrates' Prison to Mars Hill is some distance, both in thought connection and in physical space, but we made the transition. We climbed to the top of the hill and there some members of the party repeated selections from Paul's great sermon.

Very near to Mars Hill is the world-famous Acropolis, the hill which has been the pride of the Greek heart for ages past, and the center around which Athens was formerly built. Modern Athens, however, extends to the north of the Acropolis, which is the highest eminence in all the surrounding country. It is reached by a long climb up hill and then up a flight of many marble steps.

One hardly knows whether to be most impressed with the dignity, the beauty, or the pathos of the ruins of the four ancient buildings which surmount the Acropolis. All are interesting for their history, their sculpture and their architecture—but the Parthenon is, of course, the most famous, as well as the most majestic in its beauty. The whole edifice is built of Pentelic marble. Although two other architects had a hand in its structure, the great Pericles himself had oversight of its structure and Pheidias presided over the work of external decoration or sculpture.

It is pleasing to know that stone-cutters are daily at work on the restoration of these four great buildings, which have not only suffered from the hand of Time, but from the ravages and decorations of war. At the rate of present reconstruction, it will be many a day ere the world will see the Acropolis crowned with buildings which have anything like their pristine glory; but it is good to know that some effort is being made in this direction.

The fifth building which one finds on the Acropolis is modern—the Acropolis Museum, built in 1878. It is doing everything possible to preserve the scattered sculptures found by excavations. With the help of this museum, one may go far toward reconstructing all these buildings with the mind's eye. And, as we view this mental picture and compare it with what we may see to-day, our hearts feel thankful for what was and is so great a monument to beauty and to wisdom.

A far less interesting though still majestic ruin is to be seen in the fourteen high columns which remain of the Temple of Olympian Zeus (more commonly called the Temple of Jupiter.) These stand in stately silence and desolation almost in the midst of the city. Not only is there no effort to restore this ruin, but the stones from columns which have fallen are being taken away and used on other public buildings.

Almost adjoining the Temple of Jupiter is Hadrian's Arch, which is merely an imposing gateway nearly fifty feet broad. It, too, is in ruins, its Corinthian columns having already been destroyed.

The Stadion is one of the most interesting sights in Athens. Here the Olympian games at first under a different name were conducted for a hundred and fifty years before Christ. This vast amphitheater was unused for many years. Then, between 1896 and 1906, its marble seats and decorations were renewed and from that time until 1910, the world's Olympian games were held here. It is wonderfully beautiful and complete in its dazzling white marble and is so large that it can seat 50,000 spectators.

Time forbids me to tell of other sights, such as the Tower of the Winds, the beautiful, modern buildings of the University of Athens, the lively scenes of the market place and the treasures of the National Museum, which building is given up largely to sculpture and pottery. By the way, one thing which impressed us was that this was strictly a Greek museum, for all works of art were by Greek artists.

We visited an old Greek cemetery, which was interesting because of its age and the unusual character of its tombstones. The name of the person for whom the stone is erected is never given, but some incident in the life of this person is carved on the stone. Usually, it is a parting scene of some description. These "reliefs" are—many of them—very valuable as works of art, so more of them are to be seen in the National Museum than in the cemeteries. Those still out of doors are enclosed in peculiar wire frames, to protect them from the hands of vandals.

We visited two churches of great interest—the Little Metropolis, of the ninth century, of Byzantine architecture—and the Metropolitan Church, a large and very handsome building. It is said to have been erected from the stones of seventy smaller churches and chapels. It is beautifully fitted up inside, especially as to its wonderful silver "icons."

Our last afternoon in Athens we had a great treat in an automobile drive of thirty-three miles, out to the battlefield of Marathon. The only monument on this historic ground is "an immense mound which has been thrown up on the edge of the plain and surrounded by a small "moat" which is now full of flowering plants. This mound is not unlike the mounds of the American Indians and is said to be the grave of all Greeks who fell on this field of honor. It overlooks the large and fertile plain of Marathon, which, in turn, overlooks the Sea of Marathon. It is a beautiful spot on which to die for one's country, or bravely to defend her and win world renown for having conquered against such odds.

The drive to Marathon took us through a farming section of the country and gave us an opportunity to observe the condition of the peasant class. The Greeks are now carrying on a guerilla warfare with their neighbors, the Albanians, who are likely to "swoop" down upon them from the mountains at any unexpected time. For this reason, many of the farmers and herdsmen just a few miles from Athens carried guns on their shoulders, as they worked.

One can not fail to be impressed by the fact that the Greek farmer is far from modern in his methods. He uses the same plows and other farming implements used by his ancestors three thousands years ago. He uses oxen to thresh his wheat, and cares for his herds just as Jacob did, of old. In his surroundings, there is every sign of great poverty. His house is usually a poor combination of clay, straw and limestone, with as few windows and other openings as it is possible for him to have. He, himself, looks far from alert and prosperous. He does not meet in any way our ideal of Greek intelligence, and the thought comes to us over and over again, "How are the mighty fallen!"

The Greek himself is not our only disappointment, for we are astonished to find the country a very dry, barren-looking land. It is poorly wooded and poorly watered, so we feel that the material outlook for Greece is astonishingly dark. "The glory that was Greece's" is, perhaps, lost forever.

The following day, we embarked on the steamship Bulgaria, bound for Alexandria, Egypt. Our next letter will be about the Orient.

Sincerely your friends,

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. COOPER.

BUT WHAT MUST WE DO FOR THEM?

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

In my last the question was raised: Could our church schools in the Mississippi Conference add five hundred out of the six hundred enrolled volunteers for life service to the numbers already carried by them? They all look to the early enlarging of their facilities. This is a matter of rejoicing with all of us, and we fondly hope that by the opening time in September, 1922, or 1923 at the farthest, these enlarged facilities shall be realized. but with these enlargements can they care for these others, who will probably be then six or eight hundred instead of five hundred? What must we do for them?

Another question arises: Can these schools, Millsaps, Whitworth, Port Gibson, and Seashore, take these boys and girls, mostly from the homes of the poor, at rates that they can pay? I asked a father, who is a steward in one of our largest and best churches, why he sent his daughter to Columbus rather than to Brookhaven, and he made me see that it was not a question of rather—that he greatly preferred Whitworth; but that he could not raise the money required at the Brookhaven college, but could raise the amount required at Columbus. At Columbus, Starkville, and Oxford no tuition is paid, and, at least at Columbus, the board is so arranged by a "messing system" that the cost is half and often less, than half charged at our Methodist schools. We pastors and presiding elders are meeting these difficulties wherever we plead for patronage of our church schools. But the problem must be met.

If the A-grade college with its costlier faculty and equipment cannot afford to meet in some way the State colleges in their lower rates, may it not be that some smaller and unclassified schools may do it? I grant that the A-grade college can do greatly better work because of better equipment; but it is a thousand-fold better to get the education at a small unclassified school than not to get it at all. It is a fact that must not be lost sight of that there is one advantage to the small college. I taught for ten years, and some more, in colleges; and I verily know that I can do better work with six in the class than with twelve, and better with ten than with fifty. The wonderful power of the much-praised "personal touch" of teacher with pupil is not a myth, but a splendid reality. The larger the number of pupils, the more reduced is this power-for-good of the personal touch. So in our appreciation, all well-deserved for Randolph-Macon, Whitworth, Millsaps, and others of like glory, let us not forget the small college.

But specifically, what is it that these volunteers for life service out of the Epworth Leagues need? Mathematics and English and Sciences? O yes; but vastly and mainly more. They want training for their work as preachers, missionaries, deaconesses and leaders in League and Sunday school work. A training school is needed. The one we had, which was never really that, is now in extremis, because of its location, etc.

We are all rejoiced that our Brother W. F. S. Tatum is endowing two chairs of religious teaching in Millsaps; and great good will come of it; but the two professors at Millsaps cannot meet all the demands for this great work thrust by the Spirit of God upon the Mississippi Conference. Hundreds of these fine boys and girls cannot get to Millsaps at all. What must we do for them?

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

In his recent endorsement and defense of Dr. John A. Rice, and his book, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day," Bishop Mouzon said that the views of Dr. Rice are held by all Biblical scholars of this time. In his zeal to uphold Dr. Rice, the Bishop was betrayed at this point into making a statement entirely too sweeping. It is characteristic of the Higher Critics that they assume that all learning is on their side. This makes them supercilious, and inclined to treat those who differ with them with a haughty and careless contempt. This temper is manifest in Bishop Mouzon's article; but the facts do not justify it, and well-informed people can smile at the conceit. Dr. Rice's views having been given to the public, it is perfectly legitimate to discuss them; but no discussion is worth anything that is not honest and fearless enough to speak frankly. Literary toadyism is contemptible.

It is undoubtedly true that Dr. Rice's views are the views of all scholars to-day who belong to the rationalistic school of Biblical Higher Criticism; but it is just as true that there is a large class of scholars who belong to the school of conservative Biblical Higher Criticism who do not hold the views of Dr. Rice. Such a scholar is Bishop Ellicott, the author of one of the finest commentaries we have on the Bible. Such scholars are the Rt. Rev. Samuel Fallows, D.D., LL.D., and the more than a hundred able men who were associated with him in producing "The Popular and Critical Biblical Encyclopedia." Bishop Mouzon would hardly have the face to tell such men that they are not scholars; yet one of them says on page 470 of the Encyclopedia of Dr. Rice's "documentary theory" of the Old Testament: "It has gained notoriety chiefly from the startling and extravagant nature of its results, and the confidence with which it has been put forward; the confidence being in inverse proportion to the solidity of the foundations upon which these statements rest. . . . When we ask for the evidence upon which the unanimous belief of centuries is reversed, and the authenticity and trustworthiness of the Old Testament Scriptures are alike denied, we find that it consists almost entirely of a philological analysis made by European and American scholars. Passages are torn from their context and assigned to authors who are supposed to have lived centuries after the events which they describe took place, if indeed they ever took place at all. And all of this is done on the strength of a few words or idioms, which the philologist assumes to indicate a particular authority or a particular date. The conclusions which are thus obtained are often supported only by microscopic contradictions detected in the text, many of which are due to the arbitrary interpretation of the critic, or by his dogmatic assertion that the statements contained in it are incredible."

I respectfully commend these words to the attention of Bishop Mouzon. They may moderate his opinion of our ignorance who do not agree with Dr. Rice. And several others, like Dr. Gibson, Dr. Whitehurst, and Dr. Horace Bishop, who seem to think we are fools because "our good Bishop" says so, may profit by similar reflection. But let us go on a little further in our examination of Bishop Mouzon's statement that all the scholars are on Dr. Rice's side. Tell Dr. Bishop to come out of the wilderness and incline his ear now, and nudge Gibson so that he will pay attention. I particularly want Dr. Gibson's ear because he thinks my disagreement with Dr. Rice is due to the senility of old age! that I am an old religious Rip Van Winkle, toting an old, rusty flint-lock shooting iron long, long out of date.

On page 136 of his book, Dr. Rice says that the answers given in the first chapters of Genesis as to the origin of things "conflict directly with our modern scientific conceptions. We have now abandoned the effort to harmonize the two, for to do so is to juggle with plain facts." Bishop Mouzon says all Biblical scholars hold Dr. Rice's views. He himself endorses them. Webster says that to "juggle" means to "play tricks, to cheat." Now I am going to show you that even "our good Bishop" can err like the rest of us poor mortals.

I suppose that all persons will admit that the late G. Frederick Wright, D.D., LL.D., F. G. S. A., was a scholar. His books, "The Origin and Antiquity of Man" and "The Scientific Confirmations of Old Testament History," are regarded as authorities in all scholarly circles. Here is what Dr. Wright says about the agreement of Genesis and modern science: "But upon inspection, there appears in this account (Gen. I) a systematic arrangement of creative facts which correspond so closely with the order of creation as revealed by modern science that we cannot well regard it as accidental." There is one eminent scholar who does not hold Dr. Rice's views. Dr. Rice says that when we attempt to harmonize Genesis with modern science we "juggle with plain facts"; Dr. Wright says that the facts in Genesis and modern science "correspond."

Everybody will admit that J. A. Dana, the author of the standard work, "The Manual of Geology," was a scholar. A man had to be a scholar of no ordinary ability to hold a commanding place in the scientific world for a lifetime, and produce such a work; and his scholarship specially fitted him to speak on this point. Here is what Dana said: "So remarkable is this co-ordination between the inferences of science and the statements of Genesis that they led such a competent and cautious geologist as Professor J. A. Dana," says Dr. Wright, "to pronounce it utterly unexplainable except on the theory of the divine inspiration of the author of Genesis. The following is his emphatic language written shortly before his death: 'Geologists vary much as to their views on this chapter (Gen. I); and some will take it literally, affirming that it is a mere fable, no better than other fables in ancient history. We would ask of all such (as well as of the nature-doubting exegete) a reconsideration of the question; and if they have doubts with regard to the authenticity of the Bible itself, they may perhaps be able, after fair examination of the narrative, and a consideration of the coincidences between its history and the history of the earth derived from nature, to acknowledge a divine origin for both; and to recognize the fact that in this introductory chapter its divine author gives the fullest endorsement to the book which is so prefaced. It is his own inscription on the title page."

There is another eminent scholar who did not agree with Dr. Rice's views. Dr. Rice says that the attempt to harmonize Genesis and modern science is to juggle with plain facts; Dr. Dana said that the harmony is so manifest it ought to convince even sceptics of the divine inspiration of the record.

Let me give you another "scholar" who is not on Dr. Rice's side of this question. We all honor, and those who know him love him. One of the most conscientious of teachers, nothing could be further from him than to "juggle"—play tricks—"with plain facts." Dr. Francis H. Smith, nomen clarum et venerabile, for fifty years Professor of Natural Science in the University of Virginia. In his book, Christ and Science, page 128, Dr. Smith says: "The writer of the first chapter of Genesis shows a correspondence not with the science of his time, but with that of three thousand years later, which the accepted doctrine of probabilities makes it impossible to attribute to a fortunate guess."

This list of scholars who do not agree with Dr. Rice's view might be indefinitely extended; but I must not trespass on the editor's kindness. I am not discussing the merits or demerits of Dr. Rice's views; I do that in my forthcoming book on The Modern Theory of the Bible. I am simply rebutting Bishop Mouzon's dogmatic consignment of all who differ with Dr. Rice to the limbo of illiterate ignoramuses and giving Horace Bishop and the frisky little parsons who have no more gray matter in their heads than to think a thing is so because Bishop Mouzon says it is, something to think about. Let us all keep in a good humor. I can spank Gib, and pat him on the head when I am through. I don't shoot dum-dum bullets and I stand in the open. If I am wrong, show me wherein I err; but don't expect me to retire because Dr. Whitehurst says "the well is deep and I have nothing to draw with." I don't think it is a well; it is more like a mud puddle, and not very deep at that. I'm not out of ammunition, and if anybody wants any more, tell Gibson my old Rip Van Winkle flint-lock can shoot straight yet. Give Dr. Rice my love. I had rice in my gumbo yesterday and it was fine!

Mansfield, La.

EVILS IN GAMBLING.

Even professing Christian people are often at a loss to tell why gambling is wrong. They have been taught that it was bad, but they are unable to give any concrete discussion of the ethics of the matter. A Sunday school girl said: "I don't see any wrong in this handbook business. Why do the papers make so much over betting on races?"

Gambling is an attempt to get something for nothing. This is social robbery. Nothing of value was ever produced by gambling—not even wholesome amusement and recreation. No wheat is grown by gambling on it. No horses are fed by gambling on races. No cooking is done by gambling for chafing dishes. It is true that gambling has the appearance of production, but that appearance is a deception of the devil. A man said, "I am betting on the races to secure a little money to buy Christmas presents for my children." But he was robbing some other little children from having a happy Christmas, if he won; and if he lost, he would have less for his own. Gamblers are social parasites.

Gambling renders men less fit for work. It makes the gains of honest labor appear too small and too slow. All productive effort is shunned as being distasteful. It excites the mind and distracts the thinking of ways and means to advance genuine work for good. Gamblers never become great inventors, nor great captains of industry, nor great leaders in new movements of any kind. Gambling is a whirlpool which draws men and women farther and farther away from the safety of constructive living.

Gambling is in direct violation of one of the Ten Commandments: "Thou shalt not covet."

Unfortunately, this tenth commandment is not taken seriously by the American people. But there it stands. "Thou shalt not covet" is just as binding as "Thou shalt not steal," and the two are very close together in life. The covetous spirit in gambling is the mother of dishonesty. It is notorious how much cheating goes on in the whole procedure. The baseball scandal in connection with the "throwing" of the World Series was a big swindle just now being exposed in the courts. So-called "tips" are only deceptive wiles to catch the credulous and unsophisticated novices at the game. The whole gambling gang is shot through and through with dishonesty. This covetousness of gambling will also lead on to crime. Many of the hold-ups are caused by frantic efforts of losing gamblers to recoup their fortunes. They have lost all desire for honest work and so they slug a man, seize his money, and escape down a dark alley. Gamblers have often killed their comrades in crime because of disputes over cheating. This same covetous spirit has a third manifestation in extravagance and luxury on the part of professionals. They get their money easy and they spend it lavishly upon clothes, apartments, drink, and immorality.

Beware of the turning-off path from the straight road of honest labor and social ministry. Time wasted in gambling can never be retrieved. Cards are the premier method of getting a start down towards this hell. Men play them who ought to be at their business or who ought to be developing their minds by study. Women neglect their children, their husbands, and their duties to the church for the sake of a social afternoon at euchre. Students begin oftentimes by betting small sums on college athletic games, or betting anything else like parts of their meals at fraternity or boarding houses. Such practices are playing with fire! And fire has a way of spreading until at last the flames of a gambler's hell envelop the soul.—Western Christian Advocate.

MESSAGE TO ADULT SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I have had the office of Superintendent of Life Work in the Epworth League for a year or more and have been brought face to face with the problem of finding the means to finance young people who volunteer for life service but who cannot meet the expenses of preparation for Scarritt or other Training Schools. Up to this time, I have been able to meet all demands, but as the work grows, it seems necessary to plan more largely. The portion of the million dollars included for this purpose in the askings of the Educational Campaign, will not bear interest for some time and is therefore not available at present. It has occurred to me that many Adult Bible Classes are seeking some avenue of endeavor of this sort and, with the permission of our Chairman of Conference Sunday School Board, I have addressed letters to this effect to a number of our Sunday school superintendents. With characteristic zeal, the Queensborough Sunday school, Brother H. E. Reardon, superintendent, is the first to make reply, saying that they will give $25, payable in monthly amounts; he states further that he thinks this is a very small amount for so worthy a cause, but that it is the best they can do this year as their new church debt is not yet liquidated.

MRS. R. H. WYNN,

Superintendent Life Work, Louisiana Conference Epworth League, Shreveport, La.

FROM THE PEW.

To bore a religious congregation with a long, dry sermon on a hot summer's day and then make undue pressure for a large collection is a social crime not easy to forgive, or soon to be forgotten. Briefly and clearly narrate the facts (three are enough), illustrate for inspiration, pass the hat for a free-will offering, and pronounce the benediction. If you have failed, it is your fault, not the merit of your cause nor the want of liberality of your audience.

The doctors recommend light and predigested foods for the heated term. And the pew suggests a little boiling down of sermons at home would help in the time of their serving at the church. No one likes to be served with cold hash, yet it tries the patience of a saint to sit at the table and wait for the meat to be boiled.

There is no meat in a bouquet, but a little green garnishing in the serving helps the appetite. Even truth looks better in its Sunday clothes. Earnestness and zeal need not be coarse or rude. Sincerity is always eloquent. The biggest noise is not always the best music. E. N. EVANS.

A PLEA FOR BETTER PREACHING.

Speaking as one who hears himself preach nearly every Sunday in the year, the writer would plead that the preachers make this our slogan: "A Revival of Better Preaching." Brethren, with all our hearts we believe that one of the greatest needs of the world to-day is more real preaching, better preaching; the kind that brings the very word of God to bear on the hearts and minds and consciences of the people. We are a poor lot! The Lord have mercy on us! We ought to do better. We can do better. The man in the pew ought to feel every time he goes to church that he has heard God speaking to his soul. And he will, if you and I will really study God's Word and strive by God's help to apply it to our people's need. Now I think I hear a chorus of "amens" from the pews.—Baptist Record.

OUR GREATEST NEED.

What is the greatest need of the church to-day? The answer is preachers. We do not mean to say that our preachers are inferior to those of the good old days. We are not making comparisons. We merely say that to-day's greatest need is preaching. The preacher should preach. Nothing will take the place of preaching. Education will not, neither will organization or social service. Preaching is the one essential to church success. The man who is called to preach should learn to preach. He should pray for God's guidance; he should study; he should live in a godly atmosphere. Preaching is the dynamo of the church. Without it, finance, social service, organization—all become numb and motionless. Let us have preachers who can instruct the people, who can inspire the people, who can warm their hearts—preachers who strike terror to the transgressor and who lead the sinner to repentance.—Christian Recorder.

"MINISTERS' LIVINGS."

Referring to the compensation of ministers, we like the word "living" better than salary, pay, or any other of the more commercial terms. As to the ways and means of securing the livings, we are convinced that we must return to the Savior's plan. According to this plan, the minister of the Word is to be relieved from his worldly care. This is not in order to make life more easy for him, but in order to maintain spirituality. Such are the limits and weaknesses of our human nature that the record shows that where the church or her ministry becomes involved in big financial schemes, secularism, spiritual dry rot, is likely to follow. Our Savior lived a life free from this worldly tendency. He had no earthly possessions, not even "where to lay his head." When he sent out his disciples, he forbade all commercial incumbrances and bade them depend upon the church, and he announced the principle that the laborer was worthy of his meat and his hire. The method of raising this support, as set forth in the Scriptures, is systematic and constant. In the Old Testament the tithe was specified: In the New Testament the measure is: "As the Lord has prospered."—The Presbyterian.

Look to your health; and if you have it, praise God, and value it next to a good conscience. —Izaak Walton.

ONE DAY IN A TENT IN PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

This is no effort to write of our European work in general. Many interesting things might be written of our work in Brussels—school, hospital, orphanage, etc. Many more interesting things might be written of our work in general in Prague, Czechoslovakia. But I shall say nothing of the relief work, of the camp for tubercular children, of the more than twenty colporteurs literally sowing down the republic with the Word of God and other good literature—of none of these things shall I write. I simply confine myself to one kind of work and for one day only. Rev. Joseph Dobes, once of Texas, now a missionary here in his native land, is conducting evangelistic services in a tent in one part of this large and historic city. Great multitudes are attending the meetings. It was my privilege to meet this audience Sunday morning, July 24, at ten o'clock. I preached a simple sermon on the Prayer Life, Brother Dobes interpreting. At the close of the service, knowing that so many people were professing Christ in these services, I called for those who were not saved to come forward and there and then surrender to Jesus Christ and accept Him as their personal Savior. Only one came and she an aged woman, a grandmother. As I went down the aisle to open the service, I was greatly touched to be met by a sweet little girl with a gorgeous bouquet in her hand. She presented me this bouquet and in her language expressed her appreciation of my being in Czechoslovakia. It was an immense bouquet of fragrant flowers of the richest hues. She spoke of their joy that in a sermon I had preached in that tent on Friday night thirty-six people accepted Christ as their personal Savior. At the close of the service a young father and mother presented their newborn babe for holy baptism. With the help of Brother Dobes I read the vows and administered the rite of baptism. The tiny infant was wrapped something like a papoose.

At three o'clock in the afternoon an immense audience assembled to hear Bishop Darlington. I was at the same time preaching in a church, as were several of our party. Hundreds of people, I was told, could not get under the tent. They stood in the hot sun (and it was an unusually hot day for this country) and listened to the word of life as preached by Bishop Darlington through the interpreter. More than twenty came. Before the Bishop reached the pulpit they had presented him four great bouquets. At the close there was such a handshaking as Americans never saw. Americans shake hands indifferently and apathetically as compared to these Czechs. My first experience under the tent was overwhelming. These grateful people literally climbed over each other to get to the speaker. I am sure I shook hands with every one there, and there was a vast audience (at least three hundred who could not get under the tent) and I have a suspicion that some of them must have come around three or four times for a shake. Often these ardent people seize the preacher's hand and not only grasp it with almost superhuman strength, but they deferentially bow and imprint a kiss on the back of his hand. That has already happened to me so often that I do not blush now as I did at first.

At 7:30 o'clock Bishop Ainsworth was the speaker. Long before the Bishop arrived the tent was full and all the standing-room near, filled with soul-thirsty humanity. (I did not witness this service either, as I was preaching at the same hour in another part of the city.) Before he reached the pulpit he was the recipient of two immense bouquets. At the close of his sermon a call was made for those who would accept Christ as their Savior, and more than thirty came forward. The Bishop avoided the handshaking after the benediction by announcing that he had not had his supper and he was in great haste to get back to his hotel. The grateful congregation followed him to the car and gave him a great ovation. Never did he see such appreciation from any other audience on earth as he saw there that night. I hardly know what we preachers will do when we get back to America, where we get no bouquets, no handshaking, no ovations. Drs. Beauchamp and Sledd were busy dispensing the Word of Life in other places. But I simply desired to give the readers a brief pen picture of what happened in one day under one tent in this wonderfully interesting part of the world.

Several thousand people have made profession of faith under the preaching of Brother Dobes in his tent meetings. Hundreds of thousands are breaking with Rome and they are soul-hungry. Never was Protestantism faced with such an opportunity and such a responsibility. All of these converts were once members of the Roman Catholic church. Some of them come direct from a Romish to a Protestant church. Many of them first become free thinkers, infidels, atheists, and not finding what their souls call for and what their children need, they come to Protestantism to see what we can do for them. There is a national Protestant church and the law makes membership in that body easy. Hence the danger of filling the Protestant church with unconverted people. An unconverted Protestant church member may not be any better, yet may not be as good, as a Roman Catholic member. The Roman Catholic does have reverence for his church, does expect salvation in a sacramentarian way, but an unregenerate Protestant may not have that many virtues. The mission of Methodists is to present the fact of conversion, of the witness of the Spirit, of conscious salvation. This we are doing with all the power God will give us. Although I preached my first sermon last Friday night and this is the Tuesday following, I have taken by the hand one hundred and sixteen souls professing faith in Christ. I hope to reach at least one thousand during my stay here. If our church at home could see what is going on in any one day in this one department of our work here, they would not begrudge any money spent in European work.

Bishops Darlington and Ainsworth and Dr. Beauchamp are giving the whole European situation most careful study. The problems are perplexing. Perhaps more so than in any other field which we have entered. These men of God will wisely and faithfully perform the task assigned them by the church. Europe, all Europe, so far as I have seen it, needs above everything else an evangelical gospel preached by men of evangelistic power. This wins anywhere on earth.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

I.

The Koreans as a nation have a religious foundation in their training which provides an exceptional ground in which to sow the word of the Kingdom. There is much of error in their theory and much of darkness in their superstitions. But it is a remarkable thing that for centuries these people have held to the notion of one God when nations all around them have been lost in the labyrinths of polytheism. In Japan one of the problems of missions has been to build the idea of Jehovah God for the people. The native word for God has for generations been ascribed to a multitude of objects, so that it has been no easy task to make this word carry the idea of the eternal, omnipotent Father. But the Korean missionaries have had no such problem to solve. The Koreans have a monotheistic ideal as clear-cut and universal as was the conception which belonged to the Jews. Their word for God is never applied to anything other than "The Great One." Their imaginations have created a multitude of evil spirits which they must continually propitiate, but they never apply the name of Deity to any of these. But, like a star shining in the night, the thought of the Great One relieves the darkness of a nation's superstition.

This theological condition in Korea is one explanation for the revival there. The missionary has ready built for his message a theology that is friendly to Christianity. Recently for some days I traveled with a Korean evangelist who is being used in an extraordinary way to win souls.

I heard him preach in villages where no Christian message had ever been heard before. But nowhere was there any polytheistic difficulty to combat. "All men believe in the One God," was his confident assertion before these villagers. And from this theological rock he fired the heavy artillery of the gospel.

The teachings of Confucius have written themselves deeply into the ideals of Korea. The moral teachings of the Chinese philosophers have given them standards, which, like schoolmasters, are helping to lead them to Christ. They have, in common with all the Oriental people, an ethical ideal. For generations they have been defeated by sin and have no power to attain the standards of philosophy. But despite centuries of defeat these ideals stand out clearly to-day. They know far beyond their power to do. The gospel message therefore reaches a people in Korea who are not morally ignorant. It is a message of victory to a people who have been crushed by an unbroken succession of moral defeats. It is Christ passing the door of a diseased woman, who has spent all her living upon physicians, and is nothing bettered but has rather grown worse. Korea has paid over her wealth to Confucianism and to-day is helpless before impurity, drunkenness and fear. But though Confucianism has been powerless to save, it has created a conscience. They have an ear which can hear the message of Christian righteousness when it is uttered in their presence. John the Baptist can cry out against sin in Korea and the people will know what he is talking about. The people at least have an intellectual sense of sin. This gives the evangelist a platform from which to urge the message of "righteousness toward God and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ."

There is a deep sense of the immortality of the soul among these people. The truth has grown in the soil of Ancestor Worship because it is such a fundamental thing that it must burst the ground of human belief somewhere. Buddhism has taught them that there is a heaven and a hell. Their conceptions are not complete or correct, but at least the general idea of immortality with reward and penalty is already implanted. Every major premise of true religion except Divine love is readily established. The evangelist may preach upon God, righteousness, immortality, heaven and hell, and his message will be received by an intelligent people. There is no controversy upon these major facts. Theology, Ethics, and Eschatology have done the best they could without the aid of revelation to prepare for the coming of Christ. And now the underbrush has been cleared for a great preaching of the gospel. The scaffolding is already built for the erection of a mighty tower in this land. Preachers are proclaiming the gospel to villages which never heard it before, and it is being received by thousands in a way that surprises faith and rejoices hearts. Truly, "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." We do not have to wait for slow-moving educational processes to establish the fundamental things of religion. These things are already established. It is now harvest time and the preacher may expect genuine conversions to Christ at every service. It is a situation which thrills the soul of an evangelist.

When Elisha was dying, the king of Israel came into his presence. The dying prophet told the king to smite upon the ground with his arrows. The king smote only three times, and the prophet was angry. "Thou shouldst have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou consumed Syria." Israel paid dear because at the time of opportunity the king did not smite hard enough. This is a time of victory in Korea, but this victory can be largely lost if the church fails to strike hard now. Korea needs money and new missionaries to pursue and develop this spiritual gold mine which has suddenly opened its treasures at our feet. "If we tarry, some mischief will come upon us."

Have a clear conscience, void of offense toward God and man. Walk with God in the spirit, commit your way unto him; you can't go wrong.—H. R. Haweis.

The Home Circle

THE SURE CURE.

Sometimes I fall an' hurt myself most turribly an' I Can't help myself at all, it seems I've simply getta cry;
An' when I feel an awful lump a-puffin' on my head,
I think it is the end of me, an' maybe I'll be dead,
But always when I'm feeling bad, it's awful good,
I find,
When mother takes me in her arms an' says to never mind.

I felled off a table that I'd climbed on yesterday,
When mother wasn't lookin' and the servant was away;
Right on my head I landed on the hard old kitchen floor,
An' I guess that I cried harder than I ever cried before.
But the pain went off a-flyin', though it left a lump behind,
When mother took me in her arms an' said to never mind.

Sometimes the blood comes spurting' from my nose, an' sometimes, too,
I scrape the skin right off my shins, an' oh, how I boo-hoo!
An' the fellows can't do nothin' an' the neighbors make it worse,
An' the servant doesn't help it, not with pennies from her purse,
But I always feel lots better, though the tears
most make me blind,
When mother takes me in her arms an' says to never mind. —Canadian Churchman.

DON'S COURAGE.

By Minnie L. Upton.

Once there was a little boy named Don, who lived in a big, comfortable, old-fashioned farmhouse. Around the house, on every side as far as one could see, lay a big, comfortable, old-fashioned farm. There were fields of corn, and fields of wheat, and pastures, and woodland, and maple groves, and orchards, and a wide, long yard for the chickens and ducks and turkeys, and a garden filled from side to side, and from end to end, with vegetables, and flowers, and sweet, fragrant herbs.

In the orchards grew apples, and pears, and plums, and peaches. In the garden were plenty of carrots, and parsnips, and turnips, and beets, and cabbages, and onions, and lettuce, and string beans, and shell beans, and green peas, and pumpkins, and squashes, and melons, and sweet corn, and pop-corn, and many other delicious things.
Along one side were raspberries, and blackberries, and strawberries, and gooseberries, and currants;
and at one end was a long grape arbor. And here, there, and everywhere in that garden, wherever there was a good place, were pansies, and petunias, and plinks, and poppies, and peonies, and I cannot tell how many other beautiful flowers besides.

All over the old farmhouse climbed woodbine, and wisteria, and trumpet vine; and under the windows were hollyhocks, tall and stately, and roses, red, and yellow, and pink, and white. All summer long there were roses—and oh, the air was sweet!

In one of the pastures were many cows, happy cows, with great, gentle eyes and smooth, glossy sides, and breath that smelled like new-mown hay and clover. In another pasture were colts, with their mothers—merry colts, who ran, and frisked, and kicked up their heels, and had the best of times just living and growing. Another pasture belonged to the great, sweet-tempered work-horses, though they did not have much time to stay there, except Sundays and holidays, and nights when it was pleasant and warm. Sometimes Dick, the carriage-horse, came out and visited them; but most of the time, when he was not working, he stayed in a roomy box stall, with a large, square window, and plenty of air and sun. A lot of frisky little calves had another pasture; and in their own steep, rocky pasture were dozens of woolly white sheep, who were very contented, and got very fat nibbling the short, sweet grass among the rocks.

In their own yard were the hens and chickens and ducks. One end of it had part of a little brook, all its own, and the ducks had such a good time there! There was a long, low, white house in the yard, and there were found baskets and baskets of warm, fresh eggs.

Then there was a sunny stable for the horses, and a big red barn, with a sunny yard, to which the cows all came at twilight, mooing in the lane to be let in for milking time and a special treat of sweet corn fodder or vegetables. Jim and Joe, the farm men, would open the great doors, and in the cows would hurry, each one going straight to her own place. Then Jim and Joe would milk them. How sweet the new milk smelled—and how good it tasted! Don, and Rover, and old Felix, the barn cat, were always there to get a drink, all fresh and sweet and warm.

Don liked the hens and the chickens and the ducks, the cows and the calves, the pretty, sociable colts and their kind-eyed mothers, the big, honest work-horse and gentle Dick, the woolly white sheep, and Rover, and dear old Felix. Yes, he liked the hen turkeys, too. There was just one creatura on the place that he did not like. This was old Gobbo, the turkey gobbler.

Gobbo had a wife and seven children, and they all went wherever they liked, without ever waiting to be invited! They did just as they pleased in the calf pasture, and the colt pasture, and the horse pasture, and the cow pasture, and the sheep pasture, and the hen yard, and even the orchard and garden. Nobody minded that, however, because they caught so many grasshoppers and other things which would have eaten the green, growing things. The trouble was that old Gobbo was so mean and selfish. Though he could do just exactly as he pleased himself, he did not wish any one else to have the same liberty! If a cow, or a calf, or a horse, or a colt, or a sheep, or a hen, or a duck, or a man, or a woman, or a boy, or a girl, or Rover, or Felix came in his way—or anywhere near him, in fact—he would ruffle his fine feathers, of which he was ridiculously proud, and become very red in the face, and run straight at the innocent object of his silly, bad temper. He could jump up quite high, and hurt very badly with his strong wings and hard feet. So every one tried hard to keep out of his way. And then he would strut—the conceited old tyrant! Don had two red scars on one cheek where Gobbo had once struck him, so he always ran hard as ever he could when he saw that vain old gobbler coming toward him, or looking at him even.

But one day the tables were turned on the old scamp! Guests had come to Don's home—his Aunt Margaret and his little cousin, Amy, whom he had never before seen. Amy was only four, while Don was eight. Of course he made up his mind at once to take the best of care of her, and see that she had a good time. He showed her all the pastures and fields, the garden and orchard, the cows, and calves, and horses, and sheep, and colts, and hens, and chickens, and ducks, and Felix, and Rover. Very soon Amy decided that she wanted to come and live in the country always, because it was the nicest place in the world!

But just as they were having this delightful time, around the corner of the barn came old Gobbo.

"Gobble-obble-obble-obble-obble!" sputtered he angrily, and ran straight at Amy, for she had on a white dress, and white always made him especially cross.

Do you think that Don ran this time? Of course you know he did not! With his brown fists doubled, he rushed at old Gobbo. And that vain old bully—who really was a coward at heart, like all bullies—turned and ran as fast as his disagreeable old legs would carry him!

Don never was afraid of him again.

Editorial

DR. RICE'S BOOK.

Anent the discussion now going on concerning Dr. John A. Rice's recent book, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day," it may not be amiss to call attention to a few things which deserve at least as much consideration as the points that have been raised by those who have taken exception to some of the positions of the author. Right conclusions concerning any matter can be reached only when all the facts in the case are given due weight.

It may not be necessary to suggest, in the beginning, that only those who have read the book in question with the utmost care are in position to hold definite convictions concerning it; yet it is such a common thing for people to form their opinions second-hand that a word of caution at this point may not be out of place. After giving full credit to the sincerity and conscientiousness of those who do not accept the views of Dr. Rice, it is still possible that those who are inclined to agree with them would feel differently if they would read the book for themselves.

It is an axiom of literary criticism that no literary production can be properly evaluated apart from the life of the man who wrote it, and it is manifestly an unjudicial procedure to attribute to a volume teachings that are out of harmony with a life-time of work that lies as an open book before the world. For many years Dr. John A. Rice has been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, filling some of its leading pulpits and serving it in other important and responsible official positions. With boundless energy and passionate earnestness he has preached the gospel of Jesus Christ as the way of salvation to a sinful world, and in his personal ministry he has been a blessing to many men and women.

A man's professions, too, should be taken at their face value when made under circumstances that admit no doubt as to their sincerity. If a man does not know what is in his own heart, who will dare read his heart for him? Over his own signature Dr. Rice had the following statement in a recent number of the Texas Christian Advocate: "Numbers of my students have, during the year, said in substance, 'Courses in the Old Testament have this year made the Bible a new book and given us a sense of certainty of Christian fundamentals we never had before.' This, of course, is to me peculiarly gratifying, for I believe with all my heart that the deepest religious need of this hour is just this certainty in our fundamentals—the sense of certainty as to the inspiration of the Bible, the Old Testament and the New, the divinity of our Lord, atonement through Him alone, regeneration, justification by faith, the witness of the Spirit, sanctification, the resurrection of the dead, and immortal life. These great doctrines have made Methodism what it is. We who believe without equivocation or mental reservation absolutely and entirely in every one of them and are devoting our lives to making them real to increasing numbers throughout the world, cannot but be heartened to know that they are being realized in the experience of young men preparing for our ministry. We are at all times tempted to be discouraged by the slow progress of the church. Let none of us ever yield to this temptation for a moment. Speaking personally, all my Bible studies and all my work for almost thirty-five years have intensified my conviction of the reality of these things and have led me to the view of the Word of God in the closing paragraph of my book: "This marvelous collection of booklets, more than half poetry, mostly anonymous, seeks no defense, shuns no attacks, asks only that we test the pledge it brings of God's saving and satisfying touch upon the human spirit and venture upon its promise of a world redeemed through Jesus Christ our Lord in whom dwelt all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." The presumption at least is that all positions in the book in question would be in substantial agreement with this formal expression of faith.

Then, too, the opinion of those who have been intimately associated with a man whose teachings have been called in question must, in all fairness, be taken into consideration. After an attack by a Baptist minister had been widely circulated in Texas, all the students who had been in his classes during the year, entirely upon their own initiative, drew up and signed, without a dissenting voice, a statement in which the following words occur: "We have been in his classes through the past year and, after this intimate contact, we can say unreservedly that Dr. Rice has made the Bible a living book to us and that our ideas of its divine inspiration and value have been greatly strengthened. We believe the Bible is the revelation of God and His Son Jesus Christ, and that it is sufficient to meet all the needs of individuals and of society to-day." Testimony of this kind ought not to be overlooked in forming an opinion of the book in question.

It should not be forgotten, either, that some of the foremost men of the religious world, including distinguished ministers of our own church, have heartily commended the book that has been so strongly condemned by a comparatively few who do not agree with its positions. It is not likely that those who have thus commended it did so without having read it carefully.

In our own reading of the book we have been profoundly stirred by the vigorous and timely application of the messages of the prophets to the needs of our own times. We do not recall any discussion of these vital topics that is more stimulating in a day when it is all too easy to forget God and to fail to see his hand in the making of history. With regard to certain technical parts of the book, we are utterly unable to express an opinion. We believe that only those who have devoted much time and thought to questions of date, authorship, etc., are qualified to speak with any degree of authority concerning them, and where there is room for differences of opinion, we are willing to leave such questions to those who are prepared to deal exhaustively with them, believing, as we do, that they are not among the essentials of salvation. A more or less careful study, however, has never enabled us to believe that a minute dissection of a book of the Old Testament, chapter by chapter, verse by verse, and clause by clause, according to the method followed by Driver for example, could accomplish very much; though if it interests the scholars we are perfectly willing for them to engage in it. The Bible has withstood the attacks of its enemies too many centuries for us to fear that it is going to suffer greatly at the hands of its friends.

It is just possible that some of the criticism directed against the book in question is based upon the ungrounded fear that it will unsettle the faith of some who read it. A fair question to ask is, "Has it actually robbed any reader of his faith?" Many earnest Christians have borne testimony to the blessing it has been to them—has it swept the foundations from under the feet of any? It is the pragmatic test, after all, that must settle an issue like this.

It may be that we have given too much space already to this matter, but we felt that it would not be out of place to call attention to a few considerations that those who have not had an opportunity of reading the book might overlook. Dr. Rice is a distinguished minister of our church, a member in good standing of the Louisiana Conference, and a professor in Southern Methodist University. That everybody should agree with all his views is entirely too much to expect—we certainly do not agree with all of them—and it is proper that his published utterances should be brought under review; but the serious charge of heresy or unorthodox teaching should not be considered established without the verdict of a duly constituted court after formal charge and trial. If devout modern scholarship must be brought into court, let those who are ready to prosecute it prepare the specifications.

A HAPPY EVENT.

On last Saturday, Miss Clara Chalmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, sailed on the Southern Pacific steamer Chalmette for Cuba, to enter missionary work under appointment of the Woman's Council of the Board of Missions. Brother Chalmers for many years has been the publisher of the Advocate, and is known to practically all the preachers, and many of the laymen, of our patronizing Conferences, and Miss Clara herself, through her work in the office for a number of years, was brought into close touch with many of them.

We speak of her going to the mission field as a happy event because we know of no other way to characterize the consecration of a life to the service of God in a needy field. After all has been said that can be said in favor of those vocations that keep one in the conventional activities of life, it seems to us that the call to a life-work of unselfish service in the Kingdom of God far transcends in significance all ordinary occupations. The field where the service is rendered is geographically unimportant, though it happens in this case that it is only about a forty-eight-hours' journey from New Orleans. It might as well have been in China, or Africa; there was utter willingness on the part of Miss Chalmers to go to any field to which she might be assigned, and for a time the probability was that she would be sent to China.

We cannot always trace the influences that result in the dedication of a life to the definite service of God, but some of them are so often evident and so unmistakably powerful that we ought always to try to bring them to bear upon the children with whom God has blessed us. Foremost among these influences is the home. The fact that Miss Chalmers was born into a Christian home, with the example of godly parents before her from infancy, without doubt had much to do with shaping her own life into the beautiful pattern it exhibits to-day. The home is, after all, the source from which flow the most compelling formative influences in this life. A Christian home is the most beautiful institution under heaven.

The church also plays a large part in the normal development of Christian character. Miss Clara grew up in the Sunday school and the Epworth League, uniting with the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church while still a child. It is a significant fact that a very large percentage of the membership of the church comes through the Sunday school, and that most of our missionary workers first became active in Christian work in the Sunday school and the League. The importance of these two departments of the church's work cannot be overestimated in extending the Kingdom both at home and abroad.

Recognizing the fact that a call to service always means a call to prepare for service, Miss Chalmers faithfully and patiently followed the course that would best equip her for the work to which she had consecrated her life. After completing the high school course in the New Orleans schools, she attended the Bible Training School in Nashville, the Scarritt Bible and Training School in Kansas City, and the Athens Female College, Athens, Ala., where she received the baccalaureate degree. In further preparation for her work, and in keeping with the requirements of the Council, she then spent two years in teaching, thus coming into contact with a splendid type of vigorous young life at Whitworth College. Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the value of this thorough preparation for service, whatever that service may be. Many of our young people are all too prone to enter at once upon their life-work, not realizing that time spent in school is actually time saved in the accomplishment of results they so earnestly hope to attain.

On Wednesday evening of last week, at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, a "God-speed" meeting was held, attended by Methodists throughout the city, to assure Miss Chalmers of the interest and prayers of her friends and fellow-Christians as she goes to her field of labor. The meeting was presided over by the pastor of the church, Rev. Ellis Smith, and short talks were made by representatives of all the departments of the church, as well as by representatives of the district and Conference missionary organizations, and others who were present. The Sunday school presented her with a Bible in Spanish, and the Epworth League gave her a "shower" of beautiful and useful presents. In addition to which the Woman's Missionary Society presented her with a complete outfit for furnishing her living room at the Irene Toland School, Matanzas, where she will engage in teaching. By request of the church, she will be the "Special" of the Carrollton Avenue Church, the Centenary funds making possible this expression of affectionate esteem. We are sure the readers of the Advocate, most of whom will feel that they know her personally, will remember her in their prayers as she enters upon her work in Cuba.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The editor acknowledges with appreciation a post card greeting from Dr. Chas. D. Bulla, written from Berlin, Germany.

A great loss to the church at Greenville, Miss., was sustained in the death of Mrs. J. E. Thomas, who passed away at Monteagle, Tenn., on August 18.

Rev. John W. Chisholm, of Forest, Miss., is assisting the pastor, Rev. B. W. Lewis, in a meeting at Eden, Miss., this week. Indications point to a fine meeting.

A note from Rev. Lestle N. Hoffpaul, our pastor at Amite, La., reports that the work is prosperous and indications point to a fine record for the year.

Rev. Judson Swift, D.D., General Secretary Emeritus of the American Tract Society, died at his home in New York City on August 19, after an illness of several months.

Miss Cora Godat, a most efficient deaconess engaged in the work of the church at Louisville, Ky., is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Godat, of this city.

Rev. Alonzo Early, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, filled the pulpit at Lake Charles, La., last Sunday, in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes.

Dr. H. F. Tolle, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., has recently returned from a pleasant vacation spent at his old home, Glasgow, Ky., and in visiting several other points.

Mr. H. Wynn Rickey, son of Rev. H. W. Rickey, of Lafayette, La., had the honor of making the highest grade in Tulane University last session. He will be a member of the senior class this year.

Jackson, Miss., Methodism suffered a great loss recently in the death of Mrs. T. J. Thompson, resulting from injuries received in falling from the porch of her home. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Morse.

An unusually successful revival meeting was brought to a close at Eupora, Miss., on the evening of August 22. The preaching was done by Rev. E. R. Smoot, and the whole town was greatly benefited by the services.

A news item in the Memphis Commercial Appeal from Sardis, Miss., makes special mention of the address delivered at the Training School at that place by Rev. N. G. Augustus, of Hernando, Miss., on "The Bible, the Book of Books."

The stewards of the Methodist church at Crowley, La., have dedicated a window in their beautiful church to the memory of the late Rev. John F. Wynn and Mrs. Pauline Gorton Wynn—a beautiful expression of appreciation of two saintly lives.

Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, conducted a successful revival meeting at Evergreen, La., on the Marksville charge, last week. There were seven additions to the membership and the church was generally revived.

Rev. George Fox, our pastor at Bunkie, La., had the misfortune to break his right wrist several weeks ago while cranking a Ford car. The injury was exceedingly painful, and recovery has been slow. Brother Fox fears that he will not regain full use of the hand.

The Methodist and the Presbyterian churches of Philadelphia, Miss., Rev. J. S. Purcell and Rev. J. C. Arnett, pastors respectively, united in a revival meeting conducted by Rev. Dan Kelly. According to press reports, the meeting was well attended and resulted in much good.

A friend of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., has recently offered to leave by will to the college a collection of musical compositions and two orchestral instruments, being prompted to do so by the admirable work the college has done in bringing famous musical artists to Brookhaven.

The many friends in New Orleans of Misses Sallie and Nell Reeder sympathize deeply with them in the sorrow occasioned by the death of their niece, Miss Margaret McCormick, on Friday of last week. She was a talented girl, just budding into womanhood, and had lived with her aunts from infancy.

Professor C. C. Norton, son of Rev. H. L. Norton, honored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday of this week. Professor Norton is a graduate of Millsaps College and of Emory University, and is dean of Alexander College, Jacksonville, Texas, an institution owned by the Texas Conference.

Rev. Henry T. Young, our pastor at Natchitoches, La., left on August 22 for Trinidad, Colo., where he goes to hold a revival meeting, his board of stewards voting him a vacation in order that he might accept the call. At the service on the preceding day four members were received into the church.

According to a telegram received by Mr. A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, La., on August 26, his son, Mr. S. A. Mayo, and the latter's little daughter, and Rev. W. W. Holmes and family, who were en route to Denver, Colo., in their automobiles, had arrived safely at Colorado Springs. They left Lake Charles at 6:30 a.m., August 15, and expect to return about September 8.

Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss., will open its fall term on Sept. 7. The opening exercises will be held at 10:30 o'clock that morning. The opening sermon will be preached on Sunday morning, Sept. 11, by Rev. T. B. Cottrell, of Vicksburg. A special sermon to the students will be preached that evening by Rev. N. B. Harmon, our pastor at Port Gibson.

A note from Rev. H. A. Gatlin, our pastor at Canton, Miss., requests us to call attention to the fact that the meeting to begin at that place on September 4 will be conducted by Gypsy Smith, Jr., and not Gypsy Smith, Sr., as some have thought. Thorough preparation has been made for the meeting, and a great religious revival is expected. All the Protestant churches of the city are joining in the meeting.

A cable from Bishop W. R. Lambuth to Dr. W. W. Pinson, received on August 23, stated that the annual meeting of the Siberia-Manchuria Mission showed three licensed preachers and twelve hundred members. This Mission was opened by Bishop Lambuth in October, 1920, with five hundred members, the gain in nine months being seven hundred. A great opportunity presents itself to the church in this field.

A news item from Meridian, Miss., states that Billy Sunday, the famous evangelist, has accepted an invitation extended by the Meridian Ministers' Association to hold a meeting in that city. As soon as he can fix the date of his coming, preparations will be begun for the great religious campaign that will be undertaken. It is expected that a tabernacle with a seating capacity of not fewer than twelve thousand will be erected.

In the recent revival meeting in Ripley, Miss., Rev. P. F. Luter, pastor, the preaching was done by Rev. I. D. Borders, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference but now of Kansas City, Mo. Brother Borders and Brother Luter are life-long friends, both of them having begun the practice of law and both of them later answering the call to the ministry. Press dispatches speak very highly of the sermons delivered by Brother Borders at Ripley.

Miss Ione Clay, of Dublin, Tex., under appointment as a missionary to Cuba, where she will teach in the Eliza Bowman School, at Cienfuegos, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Friday of last week. She was a guest of Miss Clara Chalmers, with whom she sailed on Saturday. On the same day Mrs. L. H. Robinson and two children, Misses Sallie and Mary Churchill, Miss Vic Swank, and Miss Leona Nichols sailed for Cuba to take up missionary work.

Rev. Dan Kelly recently assisted Rev. A. B. Barry in a meeting at Carlisle, Ark., in which more than sixty members were added to the churches of the community. According to the Arkansas Methodist, the meeting made a profound impression upon the town. Brother Barry is well known in Mississippi, having formerly been a member of the Mississippi Conference. Brother Kelly, of course, is known throughout the church as an evangelist of the Mississippi Conference.

The Advocate learns with sorrow of the death of Mrs. M. E. Bogan, at Baton Rouge, La., on August 24. Mrs. Bogan was the mother of Rev. S. S. Bogan, of the Louisiana Conference, and Mrs. H. L. Norton, wife of Rev. H. L. Norton, of the Mississippi Conference, and of Mrs. J. D. Setzler, well known, with her husband, to many of the preachers of the Mississippi Conference. There are several other children, also, left to mourn the passing of their devoted mother. We extend sincere sympathy to the family and friends of the deceased.

A few days ago we received the following note: "Shreveport, La., August 25, 1921. Dear Editor: Please discontinue the Christian Advocate after Sept. 1 until a later notice. Very truly, ———." The note itself is perfectly plain, but the writer failed to sign his name—hence we are unable to comply with his request. While we greatly regret the necessity of removing a name from our subscription lists, we will do as requested if the writer of the above will supply us with the necessary information.

A number of books have recently been donated to Port Gibson Female College by Rev. C. P. Jones, of Fayette, Miss., and Rev. W. B. Alsworth, of Utica, Miss. The prospects for the new session are encouraging. It is thought that accommodations can be made ample for twice as many students by another year. Among the new members of the faculty are Miss Reynolds, daughter of Dr. J. H. Reynolds, president of Hendrix College; Mrs. Johnnie Barber; Miss Fannie C. Moore; Miss Altie Holmes. Mrs. Eugenia Todd Leverett will serve as matron, and Mrs. Mamie Abney, of Pioneer, La., will have charge of the primaries.

On the afternoon of Wednesday, August 24, between four and five o'clock, Rev. William Darden Barrett, pastor of the Pleasant Grove charge, and Miss Florence Ada Westbrook, of Auburn, Miss., were united in wedlock by Rev. H. M. Ellis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, at the district parsonage in Brookhaven, Miss. The bride is a sister of Rev. H. S. Westbrook, pastor of the Seminary charge, in the Mississippi Conference. The couple are spending a week of their honeymoon with the sisters of the groom near Forest, Miss., and will be occupying the parsonage at Pleasant Grove about Sept. 1. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to the happy couple.

We clip the following from the Gaffney Ledger, of Gaffney, S. C.: "As a result of a series of revival meetings held at Corinth Baptist church last week, in which the preaching was done by the Rev. W. R. Goudelock, of Benoit, Miss., and the Rev. Amos Clary, of Marshall, N. C., and which came to a close Thursday night, there were eleven additions to the church membership by experience and baptism and one by restoration. The members of the church feel that the organization has been greatly revived. The ability of Mr. Clary as a preacher was already known to the people of Corinth community, as this is his old home church. Mr. Goudelock, who did most of the preaching, proved his ability by delivering strong sermons on the Gospel with simple ease and power. Mr. Goudelock endeared himself to the members of the church and to the people of the community as a whole, and it is declared they will look forward to the time when he will come to preach to them again." Brother Goudelock is pastor of the Benoit and Beulah charge, North Mississippi Conference.

About me round I saw
Hill, dale, and shady woods, and sunny plains,
And liquid lapse of murmuring streams, by these,
Creatures that lived, and moved, and walked, or flew,
Birds on the branches warbling; all things smiled;
With fragrance and with joy my heart o'erflowed.
—John Milton.

A TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. WALTER SCALES, Jr., FROM THE METHODIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY, STARKVILLE, MISS.

"She loved her Savior, and to him
Her costliest presents brought;
To crown his head, or grade his name,
No gift too rare, she thought."

As we read these words, a picture—true to life—of "Miss Bertha" comes into our minds.

A woman, splendid of physique, lovely of face, charming of manner—she "loved her Savior," and her life was given to his service. First of all, she gave Love—love to men and women; and because they were God's creatures her big heart reached out and grasped theirs and made of them her friends.

No home was too lowly, and no soul was too steeped in sin—but "Miss Bertha" was there to help. How many homes and hearts have been glad-dened and helped by her will never be known.

Again, she gave to her Master, Service. I think that we can truly say she gave her life in service. No task ever seemed too great, no burden ever seemed too heavy for her to undertake. There is a passage of Scripture which says, "Without a vision, the people perish." She had this wonderful God-given vision and in her work she looked beyond, into the future, and saw "fields white unto the harvest," into which she entered, and with a faith that never wavered, she labored with untiring zeal.

As her reward, she lived to see men and women brought into the kingdom through her influence, she lived to see young men turn from the paths of sin and lead Christian lives, she lived to see a wonderful number of young men go out from her own "Character Builders' Class" all over the world to enter into Christian work.

As President of our Conference Missionary Society, she saw our work expand and develop under her wise guidance.

In our own Missionary Society at home her efforts were untiring. No plans were ever presented for the enlargement of the work that she did not willingly respond, and no duty was ever hers which she did not readily assume.

Who can measure a life like hers?
Who can dare to say where its wonderful influence will end? We only know that it will live forever in our own hearts and lives!

"Is not e'en death a gain to those—Whose life to God is given?
Gladly to earth their eyes they close,
To open them in heaven.
Their toils are past, their work is done
And they are fully blest;
They fought the fight, the victory won
And entered into rest."

Susie Thomas, Mrs. W. W. Magruder,

Starkville, Miss., July 26, 1921.

To the Memory of Bertha M. Scales,
July 15, 1921.

A lily grew in a garden fair,
Filling with perfume all the air;
A joy and a gladness to passers-by,
Wafting its sweetness unto the sky.

So day by day the lily grew,
Helping those whom it never knew,
Doing its bit in a weary land,
Holding to all a helping hand.

The gardener walked through the garden one day
To tend the flowers so bright and gay.
To the lily he came, and with tender care
He plucked from its stem the blossom rare.

"I cut from its stem this lily so fair—
Its petals are shattered, its leaves are all bare,
Its mission is ended, its beauty has fled
But its fragrance and sweetness around us are shed."

So the dear life just ended,
Like the lily so pure,
Made each life in its purpose
More strong to endure.

In God's garden she dwells
With the glorified throngs,
And our spirits shall greet hers
With crowns and with songs.

ALICE T. WIER.

After five years of patient suffering, the spirit of our sister, Mrs. BETTIE
LEWIS GRIFFIN, went home to God on the night of the 26th of June, 1921.
She had been as well as usual that day, and seemed so happy and submissive to God's will. Death came suddenly while she was conversing with her husband, who had given up his work to be with her and wait on her. We brothers and sisters had been planning a reunion, but were not expecting to get together in this way.

All of us except H. P. Lewis, Jr., were together when we laid her body to rest in the McComb City Cemetery,
June 28, 1921.

Oh, how we miss our sister! She loved her family devotedly, but she has gone to join our precious father and mother and her little Wayne, who preceded her to the better world.
May the Lord comfort the devoted husband and children and cause them to live close to Him; and may each of us live so that we may be an unbroken family in heaven, is our prayer.

Her two sisters,

(Miss) PATTIE LEWIS.

(Mrs.) LELA LEWIS TERRY.

MRS. MOLLIE J. MARSHALL was born Dec. 7, 1838, in Carroll County, Miss., of which county she was a resident throughout life. She, like all other thinking people, saw the great need of a Savior, and in youth surrendered her life to God. She joined the Methodist church and was ever true to all of its institutions. In her home she always thought first of the stranger that was within her gate, and it was good to be in her home.
Her life was not lived in vain, for she was busy making others enjoy life.
Of course, we miss her, but we would not have her stay longer; we want her to beckon us on to that bright world above. On July 20, 1921, at 2:30 o'clock, her spirit was waited back to God to live in eternal joy and happiness, where we all want to join her some bright morning.

Her Pastor,

W. M. HESTER.

On Wednesday evening, Aug. 11, 1921, we left in the pretty country cemetery at Sartintville, beneath a new-made mound covered with beautiful flowers, the body of one we loved.
God saw fit to call from the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Willoughby their daughter, LELA. The home seems so empty since she has gone. We will never see her sweet face any more. A place is vacant that will never be filled, and the hearts of all who knew her are sad. We know that she is at rest. Just awhile before she died she told her sister that she was ready to go and see her dear Savior; that everything was all right with her, and she wanted to go. She has only crossed over the river, and we know that ere long we will meet her again never to say good-by. May God bless the bereaved ones. CLARA.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God has seen fit for the death angel to visit our community and remove from our midst little WAUREE BULLOCK, who was a member of our Sunday school, and take her into his own presence that she may be taught more perfectly;
Therefore, be it resolved, That the Sarah Sunday School extend to her parents and grandparents, also to all the connection, our heartfelt love and sympathy in this the saddest hour of their lives.

Resolved, That while it is with sad hearts that we give her up, yet we bow our heads in submission to the will of Him who does all things best.

Resolved, That we have a copy of these resolutions printed in the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy of same mailed to her parents.

day School.

A FINE MEETING AT BUNKIE, LA.

One of the best revival meetings ever held in the Methodist Church at Bunkie has just been closed. Dr. W. W. Drake, of Shreveport, did the preaching. The congregations taxed the capacity of the church buildings at all the evening services. There were 18 accessions to the church (17 on profession of faith), and the church has been strengthened to a degree which cannot be measured.

The efforts of the Bunkie church to reach out into the adjacent territory and minister to the membership of several abandoned churches are working out beautifully. A large per cent of our regular congregations is made up of these out-of-town folks, and fully fifty per cent of our Sunday school attendance is from the country. Our records show that on the third Sunday in August, 1920, there were fifty people attended the Sunday school, while the third Sunday in August, 1921, there were one hundred and fifty in attendance. THE CRACK O' DOOM FOR NASTY CALOMEL Folks Abandoning Old Drug for "Dodson's Liver Tonic," Here in South.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you lose a day.

Calomel is mercury! When it comes into contact with your bile, it crashes into it, breaking it up. Then is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish, if liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tonic tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous, go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tonic is destroying the sale of calomel because it can not sallowate or make you sick.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

There were 26 volunteers in the Corinth District Training School for definite work; two were for life-time service. From this you may know we had a deep work of grace in this school.

Miss Lynda Ramey, our Conference Elementary Superintendent, will teach a class at Toccoola, beginning August 28. Write Miss Ramey at Oxford when you desire her services in your school.

The Sardis District Standard Training School enrolled 62 in the five classes. Rev. J. Q. Schisler, of Nashville, taught a class in Sunday School Organization and Administration; Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, the class in Bible and Missions; Mrs. H. L. Talbert, of Clarksdale, a class in Junior Organization, Administration, and Worship; Miss Lynda Ramey, of Oxford, a class in Primary Organization, Administration, and Worship; Mrs. W. W. Adams, Conference Elementary Superintendent of the Memphis Conference, a class in Beginner Organization, Administration and Worship. Rev. J. Q. Schisler made three public addresses, Rev. N. G. Augustus preached a masterly sermon on the Bible, Mrs. Adams gave a splendid address on the Child and Religious Education, Rev. J. H. Holder preached a great sermon on Service, Rev. E. S. Lewis a stirring address on our Conference work, Rev. R. P. Neblett led in the song service and added in many ways to the success of our school. Like the other schools held during the year, this school leaves a blessing with all who attended its sessions.

The Conference Board and the workers connected with the Board are ready to establish such schools in every district in the Conference. Pastors interested in giving their teachers and other leaders instruction in religious education had better begin planning now for one of these schools. If you want a class taught, we are ready to give you the best service we know how to give.

Rev. N. G. Guerry sent five teachers from his circuit to the school at Sardis while a revival meeting was being held in one of his churches. Guerry knows that he must have trained workers to help him in every department of church work and he likewise knows where to send them to get this training.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, August 21, Rev. B. F. Lewis and I were in Fannin. Three Sunday schools of the charge were represented. Brother Lewis preached morning and evening and we held an institute in the afternoon.

Y. J. Harvell, Fannin, Miss., was elected president and Mrs. W. T. Watts, Pelahatchie, Rt. 1, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Four-Times-A-Year Circuit Institute.

The Fannin Sunday school is one of the best organized country Sunday schools we have in the Conference. They are doing a mighty fine piece of work and I trust that the circuit organization will prove exceedingly beneficial and helpful to them.

From Monday through Thursday I taught a class in Organization and Administration at the Shiloh Camp Ground Meeting. We had about twenty-five in class. Some five took the examination. I feel that much good was accomplished through the class work.

Rev. J. V. Bennett did the preaching for the Camp Meeting. They had a very fine camp meeting. On the last night Brother Bennett made a proposition asking all who would keep the rules of the church, have family prayer and tithe, to come forward and give him their hand. Seventeen men, heads of families, eighteen young men and five boys, twenty-four women, sixteen young women and twelve girls answered the proposition. I made this tabulation myself, wanting to see just how such a proposition would be answered. Many of the men coming forward said that they had had the battle of their lives that night but had surrendered. I believe that this proposition will mean much for the future of the work.

If you have held Sunday School Day, please send us the money. If you have not observed the Day, won't you please at least take an offering for us?

The Meridian District Institute meets at Herbert Watkins Memorial, Meridian, Miss., September 27, at 2:30 p.m., and closes the afternoon of September 28. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney will assist in the Institute.

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless you. Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Sunday schools will soon be closing another year's work. It has been a good year for most schools and the remaining days will make it possible for us to shape up our reports.

The last Sunday in July was the second meeting of the Bernice-Duhach charges in their double circuit Sunday School Institute. A. P. Raley, of Duhach, is the efficient president, and W. D. Caldwell, of Bernice, is secretary. I am sure there were 300 people in attendance. It was a good meeting and it will be held every quarter. It is to be hoped other pastors will follow the example of Rev. J. C. Price and Rev. A. J. McCormack. Write me about it.

We are very proud of the good work done in our Standard Training School at Mansfield College last June. It will be a period of time ever to be remembered in Louisiana because it was our first school. We are planning for three schools in our Conference this coming year. Watch our notes. Mansfield College, with President Bobbitt always on the job to help, makes it an ideal location. It would be very ungrateful if I failed to mention Mrs. Sharpe, who had charge of the dining room. She served us well. I think we have issued about 30 one-unit credits from the work of the school.

Practically all of my time will be used in administration work from now till Conference. Miss Hess will spend the month of September in the Shreveport District.

ALONZO EARLY,
Field Secretary.

FROM THE HARRISVILLE CHARGE.

The reporter of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, seems to have forgotten that there is a Harrisville charge. Be that as it may, I would like to tell of some of the work on the charge, especially of our revival meetings, for they were real revivals.

Rev. J. C. Chambers was with us in two meetings. In addition to preaching, he conducted a training class which has proved very beneficial in our Sunday schools. At Poplar Springs we had a general awakening of church members and three accessions to the church. A Sunday school was organized there, also, and is doing good work. At Mt. Pisgah we had two accessions, a number of old-time conversions, and one volunteer for life service.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot helped us at Rexford. We conducted a training class there, also, followed by the preaching service. We had no accessions to the church, but there was a much needed revival in the hearts of a number of church members. Brother Broadfoot brought us a series of strong sermons, revealing to the people the love of God and the beauty of the Christian life.

From Rexford we went to Harrisville, where the "Gatlin gun" of the Mississippi Conference, Rev. H. A. Gatlin, helped us. We had a fine meeting. There were five accessions to the church, a number of conversions, and ten young people who offered themselves for life service.

Our meeting at Wesleyanna is being postponed until the church is completed. They are moving the church to Star, where we hope to have a beautiful little building.

I. H. SELLS, P. C.

PROHIBITION AND CHILDHOOD.

Mr. Caleb W. Saleeby of London is one of the leading scientists of England. He was chairman of the British Birth Rate Commission during the war, and he has been making the special study of race culture. He came to the United States and Canada to study the effect of prohibition on childhood. He has studied the question from a purely scientific standpoint. After full investigation, he says: "Dry America is the greatest country in the world in which to produce and rear children. Prohibition is making America safe for motherhood and childhood. The Anglo-Saxon race on this side of the Atlantic and including dry Canada, bids fair to leave the race on the other side far behind as regards sound, healthy, well-developed childhood. The economic effects of this inheritance of sound health will be seen in the near future and if Great Britain does not follow the lead of the United States and Canada in banishing the racial poison, alcohol, it will face inevitable decadence. A drugged Llon cannot compete with a sober Eagle." Most people in this country realize in one way or another the value of prohibition. This ought to convince any doubters that may be left, and it should be an inspiration to all to see that prohibition is complete. —Presbyterian of the South.

VACATION IS OVER.

Again the school bell rings at morning and at noon; again with tens of thousands the hardest kind of work has begun, the renewal of which is a mental and physical strain to all except the most rugged.

The little girl that a short time ago had roses in her cheeks, and the little boy whose lips were then so red you would have insisted that they had been "kissed by strawberries," have already lost something of the appearance of health.

Now is a time when many children should be given a tonic, which may prevent much serious trouble. No other is so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strengthens the nerves, perfects digestion and assimilation. It aids mental development by building up the whole system.

Equally good as a medicinal preparation are Hood's Pills, which are so well adapted for both children and adults. In small doses they are a gentle laxative, in larger doses an active cathartic.—Adv.

NOTES FROM THE HOME FIELD.

An expert trainer of leaders for boys has tendered his services to train ten of our Mexican boys at Homer Torman Mission for service among their own people. The new Conference Committee of Los Angeles Conference that has oversight of the mission was elected at the recent annual session of the Conference and have splendid plans for the enlargement of their part of the work. Mrs. Peter was made president and the sub-committees were all organized and have begun their activities. The mission will be the center of Mexican activities, and the religious education classes of the University of Southern California will get their training in practical work here.

Seven Japanese were converted and joined the church in our Oriental Mission this quarter.

The McAlester coal fields are calling for new missions at several points. Amarillo, Tex., is to begin in a rented building soon the operation of a co-operative home for business women.

the careful management of President Skinner quite a large amount was saved on the contract price of the buildings.

Sue Bennett Summer Normal was highly commended by the State examiner. He lists it at the top for the training of teachers.

The Daily Vacation Bible Schools at Wesley House, Nashville, Tenn., and also at the Bethlehem House have run to the limit of their capacity. Misses Allen and Breeden have been successful in this department of settlement work and are to be congratulated.

The new Methodist dormitory at Norman, Okla., was opened for the summer quarter under the management of Mrs. C. S. Bobo. She reports many rooms already engaged for the fall term.

The efficient manager of Denton dormitory, Denton, Tex., has secured a beautiful lot adjacent to the property already owned, and the North Texas Conference is erecting on the lot a cottage for the employed helper, who does the chores about the dormitory.

Miss Mary De Bardeleben, who has been assistant in the department of literature and education, is to go to the new dormitory at Norman, Okla., as the Council's Bible teacher in connection with Oklahoma State University. Miss Ellasue Wagner, former missionary to Korea, detained at home for family considerations, is to take the place made vacant in the department of literature. Miss Wagner will be remembered not only for her very efficient work as principal of Holston Institute in Songdo, Korea, but also as the writer of charming stories of Korean life. Her appointment to this new work, therefore, will be a most happy arrangement for the department.

The City Mission Board of Chattanooga, Tenn., one of the newest boards in the work, is extending its operation in an effort to meet Methodism's responsibilities for the Negroes in Chattanooga. They are opening up a Negro Welfare Work in the basement of one of the C. M. E. churches. The colored congregation is co-operating with the Board.

The beloved mother of Deaconess Dora Hoover passed to her reward, after a long illness, on July 3. Friends of Deaconess Hoover can reach her by addressing her at Hickory, N. C.

Deaconess Berta Thomas has been granted a three months' period of rest on account of her health. Miss Thomas is not seriously sick, but worn by a year of very heavy work under very trying conditions. She is spending the time at Weaverville, N. C. She plans to be back at her work early in the fall. Miss Serena Parkinson, an employed worker, with high recommendations from the congregation and pastor at Culpepper, Va., is supplying Miss Thomas's place during her absence.

Deaconesses Berta Ellison and Nellie Wynn attended the Rural and City Pastors' School of Missions at Conway, Ark., June 7-17. Nearly three hundred Methodist pastors were in attendance, and splendid opportunity for promoting the Woman's Work was given. Regular classes in the work of the women of Southern Methodism were taught each day by Mrs. J. H. McCoy.

The Co-operative Home for Girls, at Corinth, Miss., will be closed temporarily, if not permanently, this summer. The reduction in the number of women employees in the local telephone exchange and other industrial changes in Corinth have caused the demands for the institution to be greatly reduced.—Council Bulletin.

THE NEW CENTENARY CHURCH AT SAUNGLING, CHINA.

By W. A. Estes.

The new church just completed at Saungling was erected by a Saungling contractor at a cost of Mexican $4,500. It will comfortably seat 500 people. The land was purchased by the local church. The pastor, Hau Dz-Tseng, is a comparatively young man, a graduate of our Sungkiang Bible School. He is a good preacher, a faithful worker, and is making a success of his calling.

The church has a membership of 342, of whom 258 are male, and 84 female, comprising 121 families.

The church edifice faces the canal, the chief thoroughfare of the town, along which pass the launches for Kashing and Shanghai. The site is one of the best, being central, easy of access, and makes the church one of the most conspicuous landmarks of the place.

Saungling is a town of much importance with a population of from 40,000 to 50,000, and is a thriving business center. The surrounding country is rich and thickly peopled.

There are great opportunities and prospects for the gospel in this Saungling region, in which ours is the only church.

Huchow, China.

This splendid new enterprise was made possible by Centenary Church, Winston-Salem, N. C.

THE CLEVELAND CAMP MEETING.

The Cleveland (Miss.) Camp Meeting closed Sunday night, after one of the best meetings in its history. Brothers McKeithen and Tate did not fail to declare the whole counsel of God. Miss Lucille Beeven, Charley Beeven and Robbie Howell had charge of the music. They were ably assisted by a large choir, and their soul-stirring songs touched many hearts.

More than two hundred people came to the altar and wept their way to God in the old-time way. God wonderfully manifested himself in this meeting, and will still hear and answer the prayers of his children when they meet the conditions. In one night service sixty penitents were at the altar, most of them holding on until the blessing came. It was not an unusual thing for people to stay at the altar seeking God until 12 o'clock at night. One night, after the crowd had dispersed, nine souls were swept into the kingdom. Many shouts of rejoicing rang out on the midnight air, and our hearts were indeed lifted heavenward.

The finances were easily met, and we believe this revival will never cease until it reaches the shores of Eternity. Our faith has been enlarged and we know our God is just waiting for a chance to pour out his Spirit upon his people. Has he not said in his word that he is more willing to give us the Holy Spirit than we are to give good gifts to our children? MRS. S. C. TAYLOR, Sec.

MISSIONS AND SELF-SUPPORT.

Rev. S. A. Neblett, of our Cuba Mission says, in their Cuba Bulletin: "Camaguey and Matanzas congregations have taken their stand along with Havana and are now self-supporting. We congratulate a church on the enthusiasm over self-support in other congregations and hope that they may continue towards the goal until they reach it. We exhort the Sunday schools to continue to cultivate the missionary spirit and that the pastors announce here the missionary pledge of their Sunday schools for the year, making monthly remittances to the treasurer. The following assessments are proposed for the year: Foreign missions, our European Special, $1,200; Conference Missions, $1,044; Self-support, $7,800; Benevolences, $1,698; total, $11,742.

CRIME WAVE.

By W. H. Patton.

I was a telegraph operator and was stationed at Shubuta, Miss., the last year of the Civil War and for six months after the close of the war. An operator knows many things that an outsider never dreams existed. Crime follows all wars, and the licensing for revenue of the making and sale of liquor and beer was the father of the crime wave that passed over our country at that time.

The State, county and municipal governments licensed the saloons, the proprietors of same furnished free lunches, decorated the walls with semi-nude pictures, had rooms for gambling and the lustful of the sexes to meet in. They manufactured drunkards and criminals, bribed the officers, subsidized the press, and controlled the politics of the nation. When New York was the pivotal State with her electoral votes, the ten thousand saloons with the 100,000 bums and wet votes that they could control, elected whomsoever they wanted for President of the United States. A liquor man was for the party or candidate that was the friendliest to his traffic and had the least regard for the oath of office under which he was to serve. They kept taxes at the minimum, and if there were not saloon men and gamblers in State, county and municipal governments, those composing same were under the control of the liquor interest or they would not have been elected. They boycotted any business man or politician that was against the traffic, and if necessary would do him personal and bodily harm and even murder those that actively opposed them. They used bribery in every way; if a preacher would accept a trip, they would foot the expenses of same; if the negroes were building a church, they would furnish them windows to put in the church; they paid fancy prices for advertisements in the newspapers so that space to the prohibitionist was prohibited, and the papers would run editorials furnished by the liquor bureau, championing the liquor interests. It was the biggest trust ever formed. They supplied high priced attorneys and lobbyists to look after their interests in every capitol and if a legislator or congressman was elected and had a mortgage on his property, it was paid and the canceled paper laid on his desk, he being acquainted with the fact that "his friends the liquor men looked after his needs."

The metropolitan press ridiculed prohibition, encouraged juries to acquit violators and in every way protected liquor. There were 2000 United States privilege licenses held by liquor men in Memphis, with no State, county or municipal license. The officers seemed blind to their operations and now there are more crimes committed in Memphis than in Paris and New York combined. Last year there were 65,000 girls lost to the world, and fashions of the under-world are being imitated by present day society; the modern dances, and the automobiles are responsible largely for this.

The ex-liquor men and sympathizers are the anarchist violators of the liquor laws. When prohibition came the saloonkeepers remarked that running blind tigers had not gone anywhere. The liquor traffic is outlawed and placed under ban; made vicious, they could not sell it without a buyer, and the purchaser is entering into a conspiracy to violate the law when he consents to buy it illegally. These violators (sellers and buyers) do not constitute over fifteen per cent of our population and ninety per cent of them are foreigners; the other eighty-five per cent have the strong arms of the Federal and State governments, a majority of the law officers and the press on their side, and it is up to the law-abiding public to demonstrate which is the stronger—law and order or the law-breaker.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENZ, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives.

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 320 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

FROM AUBURN, MISS.

On Tuesday, August 2, we closed a ten days' revival in our church. With the exception of a few services, Brother Algie S. Oliver, of Summit, did the preaching, which was earnest, forceful and deeply spiritual. His strong faith in God, his uncompromising attitude towards sin, and his consecrated life make him one of our strongest preachers. He brought a great blessing to our own lives and to the church. Time can only tell the good accomplished in this meeting. I firmly believe the spiritual condition of the church was quickened deeply. The visible results are one addition by profession of faith. Almost everybody is already a member of some church.

A company of young people gave their hearts to God—many members pledged themselves to live a more consecrated and active life, and not a few came for prayers.

We can not fail to mention a scene which took place on the last evening of the meeting—one that made our hearts glad. Two boys volunteered for the ministry. We are praying that God might increase the number of those who believe in scriptural holiness and live it.

Pray for us that the good seed that was sown might bring forth an abundant harvest unto our blessed Lord.

A MEMBER.

A NOTE FROM REV. A. D. MARTIN.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you please give me a little space in the Advocate to say a few words about my work? Last week I held a meeting at Weeks Island. We had a good meeting. Rev. A. J. Martin did the preaching. He is a good revivalist, who preaches with the power of the Holy Spirit. The night we closed we received four into the church.

Last week I held a meeting at Lydia, and my presiding elder, Rev. Martin Hebert, did the preaching. I don't have to say that he is a strong preacher, for everybody knows that he is. We had a good meeting, and received four into the church from the Roman Catholic Church. May God bless our work. Fraternally,

A. D. MARTIN, P. C.

Lydia, La. (French Mission work).

FROM THE SEMINARY CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very profitable meeting at the Pleasant Ridge church, on the Seminary charge, Mississippi Conference. The preaching, which was done by Rev. W. W. Murray, of Auburn, Miss., was of a high spiritual order, and helpful to all those who heard him. There were five additions to the church. The Rev. W. W. Graves, our efficient presiding elder, was with us at the beginning of this meeting and held our third quarterly conference and preached two able sermons for us.

We are in the midst of our revival meeting at the Seminary church. The preaching is being done by Rev. James T. Leggett, of Hattiesburg, Miss. His sermons are pleasing to the Christians and shocking to the sinners. We hope to have a great ingathering of precious souls during this meeting. Pray for us.

With very best wishes for you in the work, I am, Faithfully yours, HILARY S. WESTBROOK.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE CONSOLATIONS OF THE GOSPEL.

This would be a weary world indeed without the consolations of the gospel and the appealing promises contained in the Word of God. There are times, it may be, when we feel strong, in our own strength—but those other times! When death has taken away a loved one and the heart is crushed by an almost unbearable sorrow, how could we maintain our faith and smile even through our tears if it were not for the hope we have of an immortality beyond the grave? When the disappointments of life, with all the tragedy of their torture of mind and spirit, come upon us, how could we survive if it were not for our faith in the compassionate goodness of God? When the lashings of an aroused conscience smite us to the earth because of our sins, how could we ever hope for peace if it were not for the merit of the Savior? In all the troubles that assail us there is a sure refuge and comfort, available for us all, no matter how miserable our estate may be. But only the soul that trusts in God can rest upon the promises of his Word.

LABOR DAY.

Last Monday was observed throughout the country as Labor Day. Never before, perhaps, has the celebration of this event come at a time when the industrial condition of the world was so unsettled. There seems to have been some improvement over the situation as it existed a year ago, but the process of readjustment following the war has not yet been completed, and there is a feeling of unrest that makes it impossible to predict what will take place in the near future. Of one thing we may be sure—the problems of capital and labor will never be settled permanently until they are settled upon the basis of the principles of righteousness as taught by Jesus Christ. All our problems are fundamentally moral ones, and it is only upon the basis of moral principles that they can be solved. Signs are not lacking that there are some leaders of labor who think that these questions are to be settled by force; and there are apparently some of the leaders of capital who would welcome an appeal to force as furnishing the surest way of gaining their ends. But the solution is not to come that way—it cannot come that way. Men must be brought to think and act in terms of Christian brotherhood before conflicting interests can be reconciled and before the dangerous class spirit can be replaced by a fraternal co-operation that will advance the best interests of all people everywhere. The hope of the world is in the passionate—and patient—preaching of the gospel.

WHAT THE BOY NEEDS.

In a discussion of "The American Boy," a recent editorial in the Texas Christian Advocate presents a good many facts that are worthy of consideration. Among other things, it has this to say about his needs: "He needs direction, sympathy, companionship, safeguarding. He needs opportunity for full development of body, mind, and spirit. The State owes him educational advantages, opportunity for play, and full protection from all that defiles. The home owes him more than food and clothing; it owes him patience, sympathy, and comradeship. The church owes him equipment and leadership. The world, the flesh, and the devil are bidding for this American boy. He feels the tug of the world, the tug of the street, the tug of a thousand temptations. The church must give a mightier tug, in order that both his life and his soul may be saved. We hear much about the 'boy problem.' He is not a problem, but an opportunity. It is up to the church to recognize this, and to provide the adequate equipment and competent leadership necessary for caring for the needs of his three-fold nature. * * * The twentieth century American boy! As he goes, so goes the church, so goes America, so goes the world!"

VACATION ENDED.

There are periods when normal activities cease for a season and we devote what time we may to a process of recuperation that will prepare us for a more vigorous performance of the duties that fall to our lot. A vacation is a desirable and highly valuable means of renewing our strength for the tasks we see ahead of us in the regular course of our work—but when a vacation comes to an end, it should come to an end. Now is the time to get busy! No one man can do all the work that needs to be done in the world, but he can do all that ought to be done by him—if he gives himself wholeheartedly and unreservedly to its accomplishment. Some men may die of overwork—but such cases are not numerous enough to constitute a menace to the welfare of the race. Anyway, as some one has very keenly observed, "It is better to wear out than to rust out." Now that most of those who were able to take a vacation have returned from their journeyings, let them work as hard as they have been playing—and things will begin to happen.

A GREAT CHURCH.

Lest there be some who imagine that the Methodist Church does not amount to much in the ecclesiastical world, we call attention to some statistics that have been prepared in connection with the meeting of the Ecumenical Conference. The total number of Methodists throughout the world in 1920 was 8,661,827. The largest divisions of Methodism are the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 1,393,988 members, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with 2,251,752 members. The next largest division is the African Methodist Episcopal Church, with 551,776 members, followed closely by the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, with 458,731 members. The total number of itinerant ministers of all the churches is 48,105, and the total number of Sunday school scholars is 7,351,171. Figures do not tell everything, but these are enough to show that Methodism lacks a great deal of being a spent force in the world. This is especially evident when we learn that the net increase in membership during the past ten years is 1,255,091.

THE JOY OF SERVICE.

That is a true saying, that "It is more blessed to give than to receive." And the truth of his statement applies to other things, as well as to material possessions. The happiest people in the world are those who are helping others along the difficult way of life. The day may have been hard, and the burdens unusually heavy, but the man who lies down at night with the consciousness that he has made somebody just a little bit happier by some service he has rendered, has a feeling of joy that he would not exchange for any amount of money. Those who complain most are usually those who do least for the welfare of their fellow-men.

UNUSED POWER.

One great trouble with many people is not that they have no power, but that they fail to use the power they possess. Measureless potentialities are wrapped up in some lives that are almost stationary on the dead level of mediocrity when they might be dynamos from which flow resistless currents of power. A mighty waterfall may be capable of developing energy enough to turn the wheels in a thousand factories, but until its power is harnessed, it is nothing more than a beautiful thing to look at. Most of us have power enough to do a good deal more than we are doing.

WITH HIM.

I started to walk with Jesus;

Very soon I lost the road;

I found it was not an easy task

To follow the Son of God.

I found I must walk where he walks,

If I would walk with him.

I started to talk for Jesus,

But I found my lips were dumb;

Fine words I wanted to speak for him

To my lips refused to come.

I found I must talk as he talks,

If I would talk with him.

I started to work for Jesus,

Great deeds to do in his name;

All my effort was a failure,

Conditions remained the same.

I found I must work as he works,

If I would work for him.

I started to live for Jesus,

Everlasting life to win;

My selfish struggle was in vain,

Self-interest was my sin.

I found I must live as he lives,

If I would live with him.

"METHODISM VS. TRUTH."

By Rev. T. J. O'Neil.

Through the kindness of some one—whom I do not know—I have received a copy of a pamphlet of fifty-three pages written by Rev. J. R. G. Gregory, Dorsey, Mississippi, and published by the Baptist Flag Publishing Company, Fulton, Kentucky, bearing the title "Methodism vs. Truth."

In this booklet the author charges Methodist preachers with perjury and bribery, and the Methodist Church with teaching that neither infants nor adults can get to heaven if they die unbaptized, and that most of the members of the Methodist Church are strangers to evangelical repentance, but have been induced by bribery to join the church, and are in it for the "suffrage, patronage and money which it offers."

Our author has formulated his bill of charges, and I suppose he has satisfied himself that the specifications attached establish the charges, for, in the preface, he says the tract is offered to the public for the truth it contains, and that it is sent on its mission with a fervent prayer that it may be instrumental in the accomplishment of much good.

I have been a member of the Methodist Church for thirty years, and a Methodist preacher for twenty-eight years, and have served my church in the capacities of local preacher, pastor, presiding elder, and college president, and for seventeen years have served on the various boards of my Conference. Hence, I believe I am in position to have at least a fair knowledge of her doctrines, and I say this booklet is a museum of misrepresentations. I have never drawn my ecclesiastical sword in offensive warfare against any sister church, or the ministry of any evangelical denomination, but "Methodism vs. Truth" puts me on the defensive, for it challenges the integrity of my church, which is as dear to me as the apple of my eye, and charges the entire Methodist ministry, which, of course, includes me, not only with violating the laws of God, but of violating the laws of our State and Nation—those laws that prohibit perjury and bribery; hence this paper.

The avenues through which our author makes his attack on the Methodist Church are the two sacraments, Baptism, and the Lord's Supper; and with far-fetched definitions, restricted interpretations, and strange argumentation he undertakes to establish his charge that Methodism is opposed to truth.

He begins his dissertation with: "Baptists have always been regarded as close communionists, and as a Baptist we plead guilty to the charge. There is no people in the world to-day who are so clamorous upon the subject of communion as the Methodists. Their most effective argument to sour the minds of Christians and to stir up feelings of hatred towards the Baptists is Baptist illiberality and bigotry." From the opening sentence of this quotation, we learn that the author is a Baptist, and from a sentence in the second paragraph of the preface of the book, we learn that he is a Baptist preacher, for he says, "Our motives have been impugned by Pedobaptists and by some of our own brethren in the ministry who seem to want to compromise truth in order to be popular with the enemies of the cross of Christ." In this sentence, the author confesses that some of his brother preachers are not as narrow and bigoted as he, but I am persuaded that he is mistaken as to the motive that actuates their liberality. I have heard one Baptist preacher say, unequivocally, the Baptist Church is the only church, and that all other so-called churches are but man-made societies. I heard another Baptist preacher say, Methodists will be saved through ignorance, as by fire, but will suffer loss in this life, and in Heaven because they do not belong to the true church; but I am persuaded such men do not represent the rank and file of the Baptist Church, for I have labored side by side with Baptist laymen and preachers in revival campaigns. The Baptists and Methodists here work together in harmony, attending each others' services, and singing in each others' choirs, and helping each other in various church enterprises. In a city near me, all the Protestant denominations, including the Baptist, come together in a common service Sunday evenings, the pastors of the several churches alternating in conducting the services. A short while ago, I passed through a city, of no mean size, or history, on Sunday. Reaching the city at 10:45 a.m., and having two hours to spend in the city, as my custom is, I sought a church in which to worship. The first church to which I came was the First Baptist Church of the city. I went in and enjoyed a very excellent sermon preached by the pastor. At the conclusion of the sermon, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered in a beautiful, unostentatious manner, the deacons passing the bread and wine to each person in the church, regardless of creed or condition. Of course, I partook of the bread and wine, and enjoyed the Holy Communion. In all this, and in other instances I could mention, I have seen no evidence on the part of the Baptists of a desire to compromise the truth, or on the part of the Methodists to "sour" the minds of Christians against the Baptists; but an exemplification of real catholicity and true brotherly love.

In defense of close communion, our author contends that the Lord has placed certain restrictions around his table, naming those restrictions, "Teaching, repentance, faith, baptism, church membership, and fellowship in doctrine," all of which he finds in the second chapter of The Acts of the Apostles stipulated as pre-requisites "to the breaking of bread."

As our author says, "The restrictions which the Lord has placed around his table, and which are prerequisite to the breaking of bread as is given in Acts the second chapter," the most casual reader would conclude that he interprets "breaking of bread" in Acts 2:42 as meaning the Eucharist. I do not claim to be an infallible interpreter of tongues, nor the exponent of superwisdom, but I think it requires a long stretch of imagination to find the Eucharist in that phrase "breaking of bread," for two reasons: First, "klasel tou artou" (breaking of bread) refers to the act performed by the master of a house as he pronounced the blessing at meals, or as we of the present time express it, the offering of thanks. Second, the 46th verse of this same chapter specifically states that the believers continued with one accord, that is in oneness of spirit, "breaking bread from house to house," or, as the original has it, "breaking bread in their houses, they partook of their food with gladness and simplicity of heart."

But suppose Luke did, in the phrase, "breaking of bread," refer to the Eucharist, I fail to see how the most critical reader could find in this chapter that the Lord has hedged his table about with the restrictions of teaching, repentance, faith, baptism, church membership, and fellowship in doctrine, as prerequisites to the breaking of bread, unless by the same process he can find that teaching, repentance, faith, baptism, church membership, fellowship in doctrine, and breaking of bread are pre-requisites to prayer, for Luke makes this plain declaration. "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." This is a simple statement of historic facts, as the entire chapter is a statement of historic facts, with no announcement of any restrictions requisite to anything, except in the thirty-eighth verse, where Peter is quoted as saying repentance and baptism are prerequisite to the receiving of the gift of the Holy Ghost; and he must have restricted these prerequisites to his immediate auditors or else he was not fully conversant with God's dealings with men, for a short time after this he saw many persons in the home of Cornelius in Cesarea, who had not been baptized, receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. (Cf. Acts 10:44, 45.)

Then again; if Brother Gregory with his superior insight is able to find in the second chapter of Acts six restrictions which the Lord has thrown around his table, what has he gained for his church? This chapter is an account of a great revival on the day of Pentecost—a day celebrated in commemoration of God's giving the law to Moses on Mount Sinai—in the church that Christ had founded, and which consisted at this time of one hundred and twenty members, all of whom were on this day baptized with the Holy Ghost, and endued with such power that they went into the streets of Jerusalem and gathered together a great congregation, and under the influence of the sermon that Peter preached three thousand were added to this church; and yet Brother Gregory says, "It is evident that none now are baptized with the Holy Ghost." The "none," I suppose refers to the membership of his church. That being true, it is precluded from the line of succession to this Holy Ghost baptized church. Then, too, we remember, his church was founded by John the Baptist (?)

The truth is, the only restrictions thrown around the Lord's table which are specified in the Scriptures are: self-examination, reverence, courtesy toward other communicants, and commemoration of the Lord's death (cf. Luke 22:19, and First Corinthians 11:23-34).

After cataloguing the six restrictions with which the Lord has fenced his table, as he has found them recorded in the second chapter of Acts, our author proceeds to prove that the Methodists are closer communionists than the Baptists by exposing thirty-six restrictions which we throw around our communicants, and which we have studiously concealed from the public.

In order to inform some of the hoodwinked, ignorant Methodists and the reading public generally of the deceit that has been perpetrated on them by the leaders in the Methodist Church, I here name some of these restriction, numbering them in the order our author has numbered them:

1. Reading one or more sentences from the Bible.
2. Taking up the collection for the poor.
3. Truly and earnestly repenting of sins.
4. Love and charity with your neighbor.
5. Intention to lead a new life.
6. Following the commandments of God.
7. Walking in His holy ways.
8. Drawing near with faith.

There is no need to consume time and occupy space in the naming of the entire 36 restrictions found by our author, for they are all equally as vile as these first eight named. What a severe indictment they constitute! Should not a blush of shame mantle the cheek of every Methodist who is guilty of hedging the Lord's table about with such restrictions?

In his allegation that Methodists hedge the Lord's table about with 36 restrictions, our author has either ignorantly or intentionally confounded stipulation of the qualifications required of communicants, with the order of administering the sacrament to the communicants. If the first is true, he deserves sympathy; if the second is true, he deserves censure.

Methodists never restrict their invitation to "those of our faith and order," but in recognition that as the various organs of the body are parts of, and are requisite to the completed whole, so all Christians, regardless of denominational preference, constitute the body of Christ. We invite all Christians alike to the Lord's table, deferring to them the full power and prerogative of sitting in judgment on their qualifications.

Nearly two thousand years ago, Jesus rebuked His disciples because they forbade one "because he followeth not with us," and I believe the autocratic spirit is still repulsive to him, yet our author insists on assuming the role of judge as to who are, and who are not qualified to commune at the Lord's table, and to forbid all who follow not with him, and in an effort to acquit himself of violating scriptural injunction, he applies the open communion spirit of Paul, manifest in First Corinthians 10:16, 17 to the church at Corinth only, and not to the whole church.

He bases his restricted application of this Scripture on First Cor. 1: 2, which reads: "Unto the church of God which is at Corinth." If this address limits 10:16, 17 to the local assembly at Corinth, it limits the entire epistle to the local church, and for more than eighteen centuries Christians could make no just claims to the comforts of the thirteenth chapter, and when the last of that local church died, the last star that glints in the fifteenth chapter was pulled down from the horizon of the church, and the entire epistle was laid up in the archives of this church, as a sacred relic of no value to the future church.

The same argument that limits the first epistle to the local church, limits the second epistle to the local church, for the address in the second is identical with that in the first. The same argument limits the epistle to the Romans, and, indeed, all Paul's epistles, the epistle of James, First Peter, Second and Third John, Jude, and the Gospel by Luke, for all these are addressed to some particular person or persons. This deprives Brother Gregory's church of the benefits of the mysteries and profound doctrines contained in the sixth chapter of Romans, and shatters the foundation laid in the seventh chapter of Romans, upon which the sinning Christian has firmly planted his feet, and so perforates our Bible that we have but a ragged fragment left.

I think, if our author will apply even tolerably good logic to his contention, he will see that he has proved more than he intended, and has placed himself under the ban of Revelations 22:19.

"HERE AM I; SEND ME."

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

God has called and we have prayed for "more laborers;" and they have answered six hundred strong in the Mississippi Conference. When Christ had called the twelve into the world-field, he gave them about three years of intense training to fit them for their work; and when the Holy Spirit called the much prepared Paul and Barnabas to a foreign mission, He said to the church, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." There was something yet for the church to do. These six hundred with buoyant hearts have been called by the Holy Spirit and have answered, and are waiting for the church. What must we do?

Good as our public schools in Mississippi are, they cannot prepare these for the work whereunto the Holy Spirit has called them; for these schools are not commissioned to teach the things the six hundred chiefly need. Neither can the State colleges at Oxford, Starkville, Columbus, and Hattiesburg, and for the same reason. The spiritual tone of two male colleges named above is not the tone that religious workers are to catch—witness the shameful course of a large number of the students of the University—young men tutored at the expense of the State—in open revolt because the administration deemed it wise to curtail the number of their dances—and these boys were Mississippians! Theirs is not the atmosphere for our splendid six hundred. Reports from the other school are not savory—I trust that much so reported is not true—I fear that some of it is.

Another fact must not be lost sight of. A very large per cent of the preachers we have are the products not of our large city churches, but of the small village and rural churches. For fifty years I have been taking note of this matter; and, if my memory is not at fault, Vicksburg Methodist has not produced any; Natchez, but two; Jackson not more than four, if so many; Meridian, two; Hattiesburg none. During a period of three or four years North Warren Circuit sent into our Conference five, three of whom became presiding elders in due time, two dying while yet young. Other circuits have doubtless done as well. No larger station has approximated this record. Our preachers, our missionaries of both sexes, our deaconesses and leading laymen have been largely, almost entirely, from the circuits. But the Epworth League, the present productive force in our church, has been largely neglected in the country. When this condition changes—when we can send a field League secretary to travel through the Conference and teach our rural Methodists how to run Epworth Leagues, the prayer for more laborers will be tremendously answered. And this thing will be; and we must be ready to meet it. I am not a dreamer of wild things—I have seen far greater things than I had ever dreamed were possible. Christ is leading, and our church "is marching on."

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE ADAPTED TO THE METHODIST CONCEPTION OF THE SPIRITUAL LIFE.

By James T. Bagby.

(This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Bagby.)

It gives me genuine pleasure to give to the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate some proof of the worth of the Epworth League, with its deliberate ways, its regulated plans, and its splendid courses, as an agency in healing the evils that are so bountiful in our social life today. I want to show that the Epworth League works like a clock in training the young life of our church in the essentials of morality, religion, and service for God.

The Epworth League is perfectly adapted to preserving in permanent and beautiful form all those emotions and qualities which cheer life and make it kindlier, more heroic, and useful. It is the crown and culmination of all the intricate activities of the Methodist Church to impart to the young people of her folds a tide of new life before which the evils of society will be swept into irreparable ruin. So at last we have it, the Epworth League. The rays of its purifying and helpful influence have beamed upon many distant countries, where it is to-day laboring for the glory of God and the good of the children of men. There is no place so desert, no town so small nor village so miserable as to preclude the successful working power of the Epworth League in making life larger, sweeter, and stronger, and in sending us forth to labor in the vineyard of our Heavenly Father with the sure promise of a rich reward.

Thus we find the Epworth League entering into a place of service in the church already waiting for it. It is a natural element within the intricate activities of the Methodist Church. It has been wisely planned for and expected. It is in the machinery of the Methodist Church by the same law as are the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society. At the right moment, in the right place, playing its own proper part, conforming with the temper of the Methodist Church, and swayed by the noble desire to serve, the Epworth League goes forth to win the world for Christ and get all men everywhere to realize that they may be redeemed by the blood of God's well-beloved Son and to teach "all the nations of the earth" that they may gain new favor in the sight of God by becoming the disciples of the blessed Jesus.

What is the Epworth League, then? What is it intended for? What is the necessity of its existence? The answer to these questions is simply this: "The Epworth League, like its great sister, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, exists for this—that it may show every youth in the church community the Father through faith in Jesus the Son." This is its characteristic mission—to show the boys and girls of the community their right relationship to their fellows and to God and to teach them that life is at its best when an individual endeavors to live this relationship. This is the work which justifies the existence of the Epworth League. This is its special contribution to the world—to show the youth of our land that no life is at its best until it has discovered the meaning of duty to God through the atonement of Jesus Christ. So, like the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the Epworth League is ever at work trying to get the young men and young women of the church to climb into a higher atmosphere and catch the incentive of a great ideal. It is ever bettering, correcting, and enlarging the young people of the community and helping them to know that the Christian has an infinite advantage over other men, even in this uncertain age of turmoil, when it seems that "wealth accumulates and men decay."

The Epworth League contains a number of features that are decidedly beneficial in their effects upon the future life of the church. In the first place, it gives satisfactory knowledge relative to the great principles of religion, such as the existence of God, the immortality of the human soul, the accountability of man, the fall of man, redemption, and the benefits derived by man from the atonement. In the second place, it is inspirational. The young person who wishes to improve himself and be a real power for good in the world should attend the devotional meetings of the Epworth League regularly, listen to the testimony of those having a part on the program, and witness that which will tend to intensify those desires and qualities in his own soul which he wishes to develop to the highest possible degree.

According to the Methodist conception of the spiritual life, we attain mastery over the senses through the miracle of a changed life. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things have passed away, behold all things have been made new." This being true, we can readily see that there are two lives before us, either one of which we may live. We may live the natural life, where our hearts will be seduced by the pride of life and our minds will be dazzled by the deceitful luster of worldly objects; or we may live the life that is "in Christ." If we are in Christ, we have a clear consciousness of fellowship with him. "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." The opportunity for testimony and the exchange of experiences in the new life that the Epworth League affords is essential to its vigor, sometimes to its very existence.

Judged by its ideals and its influence over the moral and intellectual life of the church, there is no doubt about the superiority of the Epworth League as a working force. Every church that has made a fair trial of the Epworth League is convinced of its efficiency. It provides for the young life of the church a program of spiritual, recreational, cultural, social, and missionary activities that awakens energies of their minds and gives them activity and expression and that renders their lives more pleasant and happy than they could be if deprived of its refining and purifying influence.

In the Epworth League we find sympathy in all of its helpful forms. When the youth first sets out in life, unacquainted with the world and its snares, when every pleasure enchants with its smile and every object shines with the gloss of novelty, he stands more in need of pity and sympathy than anything else in the world. In the devotional meetings of the Epworth League he finds young people facing the same struggles he does, and when he learns that they are willing to assist him and help him in every way possible to live the Christian life and bring forth the fruits of righteousness, the desire to excel in every good word and work comes like a gentle inspiration to his soul, and he goes forth to devote his life to the spiritual awakening of men and bear testimony to the fact that God for Christ's sake has pardoned his sins and has sent him forth to witness to the truth of redemption.

Such a person is conscious of his relationship to God, "the Spirit himself bearing witness with his spirit" that his sins are forgiven and that through the blood of Jesus he has a new life given that goes on brightening and enlarging throughout time into eternity. Nothing can be plainer than the fundamental fact that Christ is the rightful owner of our lives. "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price." Now, if Christ is the rightful owner of our lives, then it stands to reason that no life can be what it ought to be until that person, like Martin Luther, can, in response to the question, "Who lives in your heart?" say, "the Lord Jesus Christ lives in my heart as the rightful owner." The Epworth League teaches by precept and noble example that the great need of the world to-day is a church membership that can bear witness to the truth that the Lord Jesus Christ rules and reigns in the life of each member.

When John Wesley began his reformation in England, he found very few "ministers," to make no mention at all of laymen, who could say that they were saved from sin. In fact, the "ministers" opposed Mr. Wesley and denied that any one could know that his sins were forgiven. But Mr. Wesley and his co-laborers kept on preaching and testifying that the Christian can know that he is pardoned and cleansed from sin, until in our time this wonderful thing has happened: Protestants have recognized this note of testimony as the central thought in the scheme of redemption. Methodism has, therefore, made it the dominant and bedrock foundation of the superstructure which she is building throughout the world.

This is what made Wesley and his followers powerful in the beginning of our glorious history and is what is needed to-day to enable our church to measure up to the spirit and needs of this broader time and win at last its part of the heathen world for Christ. If we are not to fail in the supreme crisis of an hour in which it appears that we are

"Wandering between two worlds—one dead,
The other powerless to be born"— we must all rescue this central truth of Methodist doctrine from its forgotten abode, weave it into our sermons, and preach it until it burns its way into all our churches, and thousands will come to testify to a clean heart and a full and perfect salvation.

The Epworth League is perfectly adapted to this work. It takes first place as giving expression to the spiritual life of the young. All the active members are determined that its labors shall be done in the light, and under helpful conditions and in fair, just, and comely ways. Each member is desirous of getting a personal experience worth telling and then going forth to tell that blessed story of how he was converted. We are determined that there shall be no slur on the fair name of our church; and that this determination may be carried to its full fruition we must give free space and room for our young people to express their religious ideals and bring into glorious perfection the demand for a nobler and purer religion. This is the church's highest duty. That is what the Epworth League's trumpets are sounding, and I appeal to the whole church to spread this gospel of getting a religious experience worth having and bear testimony to that fact abroad over all this "sin-cursed world," which needs it so badly.

SOME SPLENDID WORK.

Two very successful District Training Schools for our Sunday school workers have just been held, the first at Corinth and the other at Sardis. Both these schools, together with the one at Grenada College in June, were held under the auspices of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference. At Corinth there was an attendance of something over eighty, and at Sardis the enrollment reached sixty-two. Several pastors were in attendance, but not as many as we had expected. If we could get more of our pastors to attend these schools and take the course in Organization and Administration, it would be most valuable to our work.

The student body was of a high order. High school teachers, leaders in the missionary societies, superintendents and teachers in well graded Sunday schools and many of our brightest young people attended the twelve recitations with increasing interest. At one of the schools a Rhodes scholar, one of the brightest young lawyers in North Mississippi, for a time the Circuit Judge of his district, attended the class day by day, handling in his papers and doing the work just like the rest of them. Four Baptists and five Presbyterians registered with us at Sardis and did high-class work. One young lady, Presbyterian, took her first unit at Belhaven College and the second in our school. We are working on a plan whereby these units may be transferred and made to count on the complete diploma.

Forty-eight units were granted at Corinth, and nineteen at Sardis. One of our largest and best classes at Sardis was a non-unit course. This explains why the number of units was so small.

Our teachers from outside the Conference were Mrs. W. W. Adams, Elementary Superintendent of the Memphis Conference, and Rev. John Quincy Schisler, of Nashville. Miss Linda Rainey, our own Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, Rev. Melville Johnson, Dr. A. W. Mildren, of the University, and the writer were the other instructors.

Rev. J. B. Randolph was the director of the school at Corinth and Judge John W. Kyle served in a similar capacity at Sardis. Behind both schools stood Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our energetic field secretary. The people at Corinth and Sardis showed us every kindness and we feel that the Sunday school work in those communities has been set forward.

While these schools are designed to bring to our people the latest and best methods for the promotion of our Sunday school work, we are following with open minds and reverent hearts the old paths. II Timothy 2:15 is our motto.

Work of this kind cannot be done without funds. If every one of our 475 schools in the North Mississippi Conference would see to it that a good offering is made on Sunday School Day, our burdens would be made very much lighter. We rejoice and thank God for what has already been accomplished and are planning for yet larger things.

E. S. LEWIS.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION ON WESTERN ASSEMBLY TO THE ANNUAL CONFERENCES IN MISSOURI, OKLAHOMA, TEXAS, LOUISIANA, AND ARKANSAS.

We, the Commissioners appointed to represent the Methodists of Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas, in their purpose to establish an Assembly west of the Mississippi River, met at Fort Smith, Ark., March 17, organized and adopted a paper setting forth our plans and purposes, and appointed an Executive Committee to study the situation, receive propositions, and submit them to the whole Commission at an early date.

After the nature and magnitude of the enterprise became known, it created much interest. Some twenty places negotiated with the Executive Committee. Of these, fifteen were considered June 21. The committee visited these and eliminated six largely on account of their distance from the center of our territory. Other commissioners visited the nine selected for further examination, and the Commission met at Fayetteville, Ark., August 25, and, having heard representatives of the several communities, decided that, in view of the different types of location and propositions, five, namely, Neosho, Mo., and Fayetteville, Mt. Magazine, Rogers, and Siloam Springs, Ark., were worthy of fuller consideration, with a view to discovering, before final action, all the details of water supply, health, climate, value of property, and other environmental particulars so that mistakes might be avoided.

The propositions range from 200 to 2000 acres, some with cash bonus of $10,000 to $25,000, and each worth from $50,000 to $100,000. We confidently believe that out of these choice locations (and others that may be investigated) a highly desirable site may be secured with a total initial value of $100,000 to $200,000. In addition to what the selected community may pay, we have reason to believe that, as soon as the location is definitely settled, we have large-visioned men who will contribute liberally, and when choice lots are offered, from $200,000 to $400,000 may be realized from their sale.

As the question is studied the conviction deepens that there is a positive and growing need for this enterprise and that it can be developed to proportions hitherto unsuspected. We feel that this is our day of opportunity and that the interest and enthusiasm awakened should not be lost, but that we should take the steps necessary to launch the movement and carry it to complete success.

In order that there may be perfect harmony of plans, we recommend that each Conference adopt the following resolutions, which are intended to safeguard every interest:

The Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, resolves: (1) That an Assembly west of the Mississippi River is needed by our people and should be established as speedily as practicable. (2) That it should be so organized and developed as to care for the summer, or vacation, activities of our Sunday School, Missionary, Epworth League, Educational, and other social and recreational interests. (3) That we appoint (two names) as commissioners, who, together with two others from each of the patronizing Conferences, shall be empowered to organize and to select a suitable site, making necessary contracts with communities and parties affected, but to create no financial obligation until further authorized by these Conferences. (4) That deeds to property should secure it to our church, but assurance is hereby given to the people whose offer may be accepted that their rights and interests shall be protected as far as is proper under the law of the church, and that this Conference will support and encourage this Assembly so far as is consistent with other obligations. (5) That the Commissioners are authorized to procure such charter as may be legal under the laws of the State and the rules of the church, and to appoint such trustees as may be by law required, provided that the Conferences shall have the right to approve and remove and appoint trustees so that the Assembly shall always be under the control of our church. (6) That while it is desirable that the proposed Assembly should open within two years, nevertheless its magnitude and importance require that every step be taken with due deliberation.

The following Commissioners were present and were unanimous in agreeing to this report. Rev. A. B. Culbertson, Macon, Mo.; Rev. J. B. Swinney, Windsor, Mo.; L. D. Murrell, Marshall, Mo.; Rev. R. L. Russell, Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. J. H. Ball, Shawnee, Okla.; Rev. J. R. Abernathy, Okmulgee, Okla.; Rev. Forney Hutchinson, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Rev. A. L. Moore, Memphis, Tex.; Rev. W. H. GREAT OPPORTUNITIES.

By Rev. A. M. Shaw.

For two years my field has been such as I never had or saw before. Stationed in a Louisiana lumber town, in the midst of a vast undeveloped rural section, my charge is Trout, Good Pine, and all I can find. I have many calls to help in revival meetings, mostly in similar communities, and it is my rule to accept as many of these as possible. Sometimes I feel oppressed by the hardness of the task, and again I am thrilled by the urgency of the need and the vastness of the possibilities. The amount of moral degeneracy, illiteracy and indifference, in places, is truly appalling and discouraging; but when one sees how easily certain fanatical sects worm their way into the confidence of the people, and how loyally they rally to those who impress them as having a genuine, unselfish interest in their welfare, the impression that they would respond to intelligent, persistent, evangelical effort on the part of more constructive agencies, is irresistible. The question of ways and means is arresting and vital. I have tried many experiments, with greater or less success. I find that many who have practically no culture, can read; and many of them like to read. Brief and inexpensive or free pamphlets, tracts and papers, are popular. Those which possess some local interest are most popular. For instance, last year we published a little paper, a mere bulletin, called "The Witness," and for twenty weeks distributed it gratis to every door in our three mill towns. It was very popular. I often went in person to carry the copies around, and was greeted by many with words of praise and gratitude for the little weekly messenger. If a house was missed, frequently an inquiry would come as to what was the matter with this week's "Witness?"

I trust I may not be considered immodest if I state one other observation. It is, that whatever I wrote myself, whether appearing in the bulletin, one of the Advocates, or in tract or pamphlet, was welcomed with especial heartiness: not because it was superior, but because the writer was known to the people. I believe there could be no more effective work done in this territory than the distribution of a considerable amount of literature, specially prepared for, or adapted to, the needs of just such readers. In a small way, I have done some of this—as far as my resources would reach. I am now at work on a plan to select carefully such existing literature as will seem to fit the purpose indicated, and to prepare and publish, in one form and another, such other matter as I think will help to evangelize, instruct and indoctrinate the people. But funds are lacking, and our publishing agents have not found the general demand for tracts, etc., sufficient to justify any large operations in that line by the Publishing House. This I consider a misfortune and a fault. If Mormons and Christian Scientists can propagate their work by tracts and pamphlets, why cannot we? Who ever did more of it than John Wesley?

But I mean to do something in that line, anyhow! And I shall attempt only what I can personally carry out, so far as superintending the distribution is concerned.

Just to start this work: I have several hundred copies of a little pamphlet which I published as a world-war souvenir, entitled "Woodrow Wilson and Other Poems," and containing five little poems which I wrote during the war. I will send it prepaid to any address for 25 cents, or five copies for $1, and will put the entire proceeds into the "Christian Industrial Publishing Fund" and use it as indicated above; trying to sell sufficient products to keep the concern going. If you help me in this way, you will get your money's worth—in two ways.

I shall hope that, later, the movement may grow into something like the "Louisiana Publication Society," and occupy a larger field. But, if this may not be, help me start this fund by buying these little books—and the good to be accomplished within the range of my personal labors will amply justify the small outlay.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

II.

The older missionaries tell us of a crisis which appeared thirty years ago in Japan. It represented a national open-mindedness toward Christianity that gave promise of a great evangelistic movement. The history of modern missions echoes with the regret that the church failed to seize that opportunity. A proper contribution of men and money at that time could reasonably have been expected to make Christianity the dominant influence in the Japanese Empire. The seed could have been sowed plentifully which to-day would have produced a great harvest of righteousness. It is conceivable that the recent history of Japanese aggression in China and Korea would never have been written if the church had seized the opportunity a generation ago for evangelizing Japan. It is certainly a fact that the work could have been wrought then far more easily than now, and that multitudes are forever lost who could have been saved.

To-day a similar crisis confronts the church in Korea. The number of converts possible is limited only by the sufficiency of missionary evangelism. The church can win Korea for Christ if it wills to do so. There is a readiness to believe that can only be explained as a special work of the Holy Ghost. The attitude of packed congregations both in large cities and in distant mountain villages is that of the man whose eyes had been opened when he said to Jesus, "Who is the Lord, that I may believe?"

The conditions back of the revival in some ways run parallel with the revival in Judea under John the Baptist. The Jews were galled by the Roman yoke. Their emotions were aroused from former lethargy by a burning desire for political liberty. John came at this time. He made religious capital out of the quakened emotions of the people. But he was not a revolutionary. His theme was not the Kingdom of Israel. He sublimated their patriotism and proclaimed the Kingdom of Heaven. He told them of a Kingdom to be won not with swords but with righteousness.

The desire for national independence is an emotion that burns like fire throughout Korea. The missionaries have not created this condition. It has come as an inevitable reaction against the policy of the Japanese. The missionaries are preaching the Gospel to these people. They have not espoused the cause of the Kingdom of Korea, but are faithfully proclaiming the Kingdom of God. And this message of the Divine Kingdom has given back to these crushed and broken people their own patriotism and ideals exalted and glorified. The ground is plowed for Gospel preaching. Never were hearts more in need, or more ready for the message, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." Providential agencies have pulverized the soil throughout Korea. Is the church going to provide the seed of truth to plant throughout the land? If good seed is not planted in this plowed ground, then we may expect one of the greatest crops of weeds that the church has ever harvested; and there will be famine instead of plenty in the Kingdom of God.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PASTORS AND PARENTS.

Please send me all the information you can relative to those who attend the Normal School here this fall, in order that we may get into touch with them immediately on their arrival here. This amounts to so much for the protection of those young people.

Here are some facts about our school here: The students are encouraged to attend their respective churches on the Sabbath, but not compelled to, and; as a matter of fact, some young people come here to school who are accustomed to attend church at home, but fall in with, and make friends of those who do not attend church, and thus drift away from the church completely.

There are many temptations here for the young Christian, as there are in all schools where higher education is sought.

We are doing our best for the young people who attend school here. We have a splendid, consecrated woman who gives much of her time, gratis, to the task of looking after the spiritual interest of our Methodist girls, or any others that she may be able to help.

You will keep in mind that this being a State school we are at a disadvantage, and have not the access to the student body we would have were the school ours.

So, send us the names of those you are interested in and we promise you that every effort will be made to help them and to protect them while they are here.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: I am calling your attention to the pledges made by the several charges of the district at the session of our District Conference at Utica to the Representative Church in Washington City. The amount pledged for this year was $200. It was suggested that this amount be paid by the 1st of July. I came home and raised my pledge the following Sunday. These pledges were to be paid to me, which I hope you will do.

I wanted to get the whole of it together and send it in one sum to the Conference Treasurer, giving each charge credit for the amount paid by it. I am acting under the authority of the Board of Church Extension, as you may see from Report No. 1 of the Board, Conference Journal, page 35. Let us get these pledges together as soon as we can.

Respectfully,

W. J. DAWSON.

Woodville, Miss.

What are we building? A nation? And what are the builders putting into it? Armaments and soldiers, ships and guns? Tariff defenses and walls of retaliation? Are we emphasizing more skill and push and cleverness? Is this all? Then we are rejecting the essential. If we mean the national structure to be sound and strong and permanent, we must build Christ into our national ideals and policies and ambitions—Selected.

"There cannot be an afterward of elation unless there is a now of obedience."

Will the Advance Continue?

Since May, 1919, one hundred and thirty missionaries have been sent to our foreign fields. In number of new congregations, Church buildings erected, and members received no two years of our history have shown such gains. Contributions by the Church overseas have increased 150 per cent. Annual appropriation for Foreign Work increased from $909,000 to $3,670,000.

In the Homeland

More than $900,000 of Centenary money used to supplement salaries of pastors in the home Conferences, and, in addition, more than $2,500,000 appropriated to the home field the past two years. We have a real program of service to needy fields and neglected peoples in America.

Bigger Things Might Have Been Done

AMOUNT DUE ON CENTENARY PLEDGES.....	$22,150,000
AMOUNT PAID ON CENTENARY PLEDGES.....	11,500,000

The difference of nearly $11,000,000 represents the advance that we might have made until now---more than $1,000,000 additional to underpaid pastors in the home Conferences (10 per cent of total collections); every department of the work at home strengthened; more than one hundred new missionaries sent to foreign fields.

Who Are Responsible?

The Churches, Sunday Schools, Epworth Leagues, individuals who have unpaid Centenary pledges. Will you let that record stand? Will you halt the advancing lines when our Leader calls to greater conquests in His name? ¶ Let's pay our pledges now. September can be made the best month until now if only we will make a supreme effort. Will you have part in the record to be made this month by Southern Methodism?

THINGS BEAUTIFUL.

By Willie C. Page.

Beautiful to the eye is the soft gray stretch of the sea;
The purple-tinted mountain peaks, all veiled in mystery;
Cloud-ships with flaming flags, their masts and pennons high,
Sailing their colored splendor across the sunset sky;
Little children's faces—soft mists after an April shower—
Moonlight on the snow covered woods—a dog-wood tree in flower,
A leafy green tree—an ivied wall—the meadow bathed in dew—
A vesper star—an arch in the sky showing each rainbow hue.

Beautiful to the ear is the soft, crooning evening breeze,
As it makes low sweet music on the harp-strings of the trees;
The birds' chorus—happy laughter—song of the brook, hushed, low,
As it ripples o'er rocky chasms, falls into foamy pools below.
Beautiful are the dreams and visions that come to the soul,
Of that City whose walls are jasper, whose streets are paved with gold;
Of the Elysian fields—God's garden, where the flowers bloom always,
And the river of life flows softly, and angels sing His praise.

A SMALL ANIMAL THAT HAS NO LEGS.

Most of us think of an animal as something that has four legs and can walk, run and skip about, and by a "small animal" we mean a rabbit, or squirrel, or mouse. But I am going to tell you about one smaller than any of these, which hasn't any legs that we can see, and so stays in one place; in fact he really cannot move about, for very early in his life he is fastened to a rock or to something firm in the ocean, writes Carolyn C. Bigelow in the Kindergarten Primary Magazine. He does not live all by himself, either, but a number of his family or "colony" live together, yet each one has his own "room" to himself. He is called a sponge.

You know the small, soft sponge that you sometimes use in your bath, and the larger, soft sponge that is used in washing carriages and automobiles? Those are really the houses in which a group or "colony" of these little animals once lived. The little animal is very soft and pulpy, like a bit of jelly. His food and nourishment are brought right to him by the water which flows over him. Men in rubber and canvass suits—called divers—go down and gather the sponges, take them up into boats where the animal part is cleaned out, and just the fibrous framework is left, and that is the part which we know and buy for a sponge.

Sometimes the divers find that a crab has chosen to make his home in a sponge. Mr. Crab will squeeze himself right down into a sponge, which makes a very cozy nest for him, and there he is safe from the big fish who would like him for their dinner. But in this way he makes quite a large hole in the sponge, so the sponge is not as good and firm for our use. Once in a while a sponge gets torn off the foundation on which he grew, then the water rolls him around and around. Sometimes such a sponge will get covered up in the sand, for he does not attach himself to anything else when once he is torn free.

After a diver has brought a sponge out of the salt water into a boat, if rain or fresh water falls on it the sponge—the animal part of the sponge—will die. But if no fresh water does hit it, a man can divide the sponge in several pieces, so long as he leaves at least one little animal unhurt in each part, then he can fasten each piece to a cement disc with lead wire, plant it down on the bottom where he found it, and it will grow and increase just as if it had not been disturbed.

There are many kinds of sponges, but these that I have been telling you about are called sheep-wool and are the best ones to be found in this country. They grow and make their home off the west coast of Florida, in the Gulf of Mexico.—Selected.

INDIAN BASEBALL PLAYERS.

By Elmer E. Higley.

What, Indian lads playing baseball! Surely, and why not, for probably baseball, like lacrosse, came to the white man from his red brother. Certain it is that not a few of the Indian lads have become experts on the baseball diamond. Let me introduce one of them to you.

Louis is his name. But that was a name too conventional for the lips of his unconventional "fan" admirers, of whom there were many, and so, very soon, Louis yielded to the warm-hearted appellation, "Louie." Baseball has a language of affection for objects of its admiration.

Louie learned to play baseball where most of the Wagners and Mathewsons and Cobbs first became familiar with the game, namely, the open town lot. It was not long, however, before Louie graduated from the town-lot class and became a full-fledged "bush leaguer." Nor was his stay here long, for, when quite young, he became a member of the Toronto team of the Eastern League, where he remained for a term of years and won for two successive years a prize as the most popular man on the team. Thus Toronto approved him as a "good Indian"—nor was he a dead one either. Some of his admirers insist that Louie "pitched" and "hit" the team into pennant-winning honors.

Big league managers began to cast their eyes in his direction. From Toronto he went to the American Association, to remain only a short time before becoming one of the pennant-winning Athletics of Philadelphia. That was when Bruce and Bender were the two popular Indian members of the team which for two successive seasons were world-beaters. Louis Bruce, a Mohawk—that is the name of the Indian lad whom I would introduce to you.

During his baseball days there was a tugging at Louie's heart toward the pulpit. It became irresistible, and so, after a course in the University of Pennsylvania, he became a missionary to his own people, and is to-day pastor of the Mohawk Methodist Mission on the St. Regis reservation in Northern New York.

Let us look in upon him. We shall find him "playing the game" for the kingdom with all the earnest enthusiasm and loyal devotion with which he fought for victory on the baseball diamond. Study his work and you find him still hitting above the "300" average.

Popular? As much so as when, on the diamond, he won prizes marking him a favorite. His people love him and rally splendidly to his support. His church has outgrown the once ample quarters, and plans are now under way whereby a growing field shall have more deserving accommodations.

Of course, the Centenary is helping. In this connection let it be recalled that Louis Bruce's Mohawk Indian church was the first in the Northern New York Conference to go "over the top" in raising its quota for the Centenary. Moreover, when its quota had been raised, he and his Mohawk Male Quartet rendered valuable service in going out over the Conference, singing and helping other churches to meet their quotas.

Yes, Indian lads can play baseball, and, furthermore, Indian lads, when trained for leadership, can become important factors in evangelizing the red man of the country.

Here, too, the Centenary is aiding, training Indian lads by special preparation to become missionary leaders among their own people.

Shall not we who sit on the grandstand and watch the play give them the encouragement of our appreciation? We might do more. We might help Louie build his church. Or we might take one of these Indian lads and put him through his course of preparation.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

"TIME OUT."

A Quick Retort.

William George Jordan, the educator and writer, uses a crutch. The other day, after he had negotiated several blocks, he paused to mop his brow. While mopping with one hand he held his hat in the other, and a kind-hearted but near-sighted passerby dropped a coin in the hat. "Hey!" said Jordan, "It's legs I want—not alms."—Boston Globe.

COMMUNION DAY.

As a means of grace the sacrament of the Lord's Supper has always been a blessing to those who have partaken of it in the spirit enjoined upon the disciples at the time of its institution. Yet there are some members of the church who refrain from this service because of a mistaken feeling concerning their worthiness to engage in so sacred a communion. If it were a question of worthiness, who would presume to go to the table? It is a question of the attitude of mind and heart, and of the purpose of the life; and every professing Christian ought to be able to partake of this sacrament while making his confessions to Almighty God. In this connection we quote the words of a recent editorial in the North Carolina Christian Advocate:

"We have often wondered why it is that on communion day we have our smallest congregations at church, but as a general rule we do. People seem to stay away from church on that day, but why we are unable to say, and we have thought of it many times. It seems to us that on communion day should be the day of all days when every member of the church should make a special effort to be in his place. Our Lord desired to be remembered by His followers, and commanded that 'ye do this in remembrance of Me,' and 'as oft as you do this you do show forth His death till He come again.' We are impressed with the fact that most of us do not think just what a gracious privilege we are neglecting when we refuse to go to church and participate in this divinely instituted sacrament.

"Why do we fail in this important matter? Is it because we feel ourselves unworthy? Then we are unworthy to enter heaven's gate. Are we ashamed to thus confess Christ before men? Then He will be ashamed to confess us before His Father in heaven.

"This means of grace should be so highly esteemed by all God's people that on the day when the table of our Lord is spread it should be a day of joy and gladness, when all who profess to be His children should make more than an ordinary effort to be present and partake of the elements representing the broken body and shed blood of Him who offered Himself a sacrifice for the sin of the world.

"Our pastors should call the attention of the people to this all important matter from time to time."

RESULTS WORTH WHILE.

We have been greatly interested in observing the results that have followed the holding of the many institutes, conferences, training schools, etc., this summer throughout the church, but especially within the territory of our patronizing Conferences. All the reports that have come to us indicate that much good has resulted from these gatherings, and that the cause of the church has been greatly forwarded by them. The attendance has been unusually good in most cases, the programs have been well worked out, and the work accomplished has been gratifying.

As we see it, instead of interfering with the normal work of the church, these gatherings go a long way toward making that work more effective. We have come upon a time when proper training is absolutely essential for the highest efficiency, and it is the purpose of these gatherings to furnish that training under circumstances that are inspiring. Even in the most highly developed business organizations meetings are held periodically to make available the latest developments and improvements in the various lines represented; if they are worth while in the business world, certainly they are not without value to the church.

We are especially pleased with the results that have followed the assemblies in the interest of our young people as represented in the Epworth League and the Sunday school. The Conference-wide and district standard training schools for Sunday school workers, and the Epworth League gatherings have meant the coming together of hundreds of the choicest spirits among the workers in these important organizations; and the influence of these gatherings will inevitably be felt in every department of the church's work. It is impossible to have too much training of the right kind.

A PRACTICAL INJUNCTION.

One application of the General Rules reads as follows: "By doing good, especially to them that are of the household of faith, or groaning so to be; employing them preferably to others, buying one of another, helping each other in business; and so much the more because the world will love its own, and them only."

It may be that we are prone to forget that the principles of Christian brotherhood extend to all the relationships of life, and that the management of our business affairs should be of such kind as to help all those who belong to the household of faith; yet, as Methodists, we are under a peculiar obligation to do what we can to assist those of our own church in the work of making a livelihood. There is certainly no obligation imposed by the principles of brotherhood to employ incompetent or inefficient workmen simply because they make a profession of the Christian faith; and no obligation is imposed by this rule of the Methodist Church to give the preference in business to a Methodist simply because he is a Methodist. Other things being equal, however, it would seem to be but a fair proposition that we should recognize at least the propriety of assisting those who are bound to us by the ties of a common faith.

Observance of this Rule in business affairs will afford an opportunity, in many instances, for us really to help those who need our help, without, in any sense, doing an injustice to anybody else. It is simply a practical injunction that many of us might follow with benefit to all concerned.

A NOTABLE VOLUME FREE ON REQUEST.

The 1921 Annual Report of the General Board of Missions is ready for distribution and we are requested to say that a copy will be sent without charge to any one interested on request. The report comprises 221 pages and covers the whole range of the Board's operations, at home and abroad. It embodies the reports of all the secretaries for the year 1920; the Board's receipts by Conferences—regular and Centenary—and the disbursements by fields; condensed reports from all the foreign mission fields, hospitals, schools and other institutions; minutes of the Annual Board Meeting held in Nashville last May; the constitution and by-laws of the Board, directories of foreign and home missionaries, Conference lay leaders, Conference minute-men and general evangelists and a statistical summary.

It is a volume that should be in the hands of every missionary leader and particularly every pastor. If you want a copy, write Board of Missions, Box 510, Nashville, Tennessee.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The next session of Grenada College will open on September 14, at which time Rev. T. M. Brownlee will deliver an address.

Dr. John T. Sawyer preached at the Presbyterian Hospital, this city, last Sunday afternoon. He reports a very helpful service.

A meeting was recently held at Biloxi, Miss., to formulate plans for holding the Tri-State Epworth League Assembly at the Seashore Camp Grounds next year.

Rev. R. E. Simpson, pastor of our church at Leachville, Ark., issues a weekly bulletin, which gives an interesting account of church happenings. We thank him for a copy.

Extensive improvements have recently been completed on our church at Ellisville, Miss., where Rev. H. J. Moore is pastor. Among other things, the entire building has been repainted.

Rev. Henry T. Young, of Natchitoches, La., who is engaged in a revival meeting at Trinidad, Colo., writes, "I wish I could share this cool, crisp air with you and the other brethren." We wish so, too.

Owing to the fact that last Monday was a legal holiday and there were no mail deliveries in the city, it is probable that some items are left out of this issue of the Advocate that otherwise would have appeared.

The basement of the West End Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., has been completed. Its opening was celebrated by a social gathering on Wednesday evening, August 31. Rev. A. J. Beasley is the pastor.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, who has been touring Europe with his wife, preached in the Methodist church at Venice on Sunday, August 14. A recent post card from him stated that he expected to arrive at London on August 27.

Rev. W. H. Huntley has just returned from Rochester, Minn., where he had a slight operation on his throat, which has troubled him for some time. Mrs. Huntley joined him on his return home at La Grange, Ga.

Rev. S. L. Pope, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to state that he has removed from Winona to Greenwood, his address now being 409 Waterhall Street, Greenwood.

Rev. Robert Selby, pastor of Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., honored the Advocate office with a call on Tuesday morning of this week. He was on a little vacation, generously voted him by his official board.

Rev. J. E. Stephens has recently moved to Grenada, Miss., to take up his work in the chair of Religious Education in Grenada College. Brother Stephens recently spent ten weeks in Northwestern University in preparation for his duties.

Mr. D. S. Harmon, of Meridian, Miss., has issued a pamphlet in which he brings together many of the passages of Scripture relating to Sabbath observance. Its circulation ought to help stop the desecration of the day of rest and worship.

Rev. M. L. McCormick has just finished his meetings at Hamburg and McNair, Miss. He did his own preaching, and his brother conducted the singing. Much good was accomplished. The pastor and Rev. Ira B. Robertson are very happy over the results.

Professor Alfred P. Hamilton has been granted leave of absence by the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College for the ensuing session in order to enable him to prosecute his studies in the University of Pennsylvania, looking to the receiving of his Doctorate in Philosophy.

We greatly regret not being in the office on last Friday morning when Rev. C. A. Battle, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, called. He was in the city to meet Mrs. Battle and children, who were returning home from a visit to relatives in Alabama.

"The Bulletin," the official organ of our First Church Sunday school at Gulfport, Miss., after a "vacation" during the summer is again making its appearance. It is full of interesting news and notes. Col. J. C. Hardy is the wide-awake superintendent of this fine school.

According to a news item in the secular press, a meeting was begun in the new Methodist church at Crystal Springs, Miss., on last Sunday night. The preaching was to be done by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, and the singing was to be led by Robert Cooper. Rev. W. B. Jones is the pastor.

Rev. W. L. Duren and family, after a month spent on the Seashore Camp Grounds, have returned to the city. Brother Duren has planned a vigorous campaign for the fall work of Rayne Memorial Church, of which he is pastor. Sixty members have already been received into this church this year.

The work of preparation for the opening of the approaching session of Millsaps College is almost completed and the prospects for a large attendance have never been so bright in the history of the institution. Nearly every room in the dormitories has been reserved and an overflow attendance is expected.

Our church at Greenville, Miss., has recently suffered another great loss in the death of Mrs. West. She had been a sufferer for many years, but was patient in tribulation and strong in faith, and the summons found her prepared to go. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to her sorrowing relatives and friends.

We learn that plans for the new church at Bogalusa are now ready, and bids for the contract will be invited at once. It is expected that actual building operations will begin in the very near future. When completed, this will be one of the best-appointed churches in the Louisiana Conference. Rev. A. J. Gearheard is the pastor.

The new church building enterprise at West Point, Miss., goes forward. The roof will soon be completed on the new building, and the entire structure will be completed in due time. In spite of the difficult financial situation the loyal congregation has gone forward by faith, and the reward is in sight. Rev. Carroll Varner is the pastor of this church.

Our Conference Centenary secretaries—Rev. B. P. Jacob, of the North Mississippi Conference, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, of the Mississippi Conference, and Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, of the Louisiana Conference—have been diligently looking after the interests committed to them. Their work keeps them in the field almost constantly, but they are getting results that are worth while.

A note from Rev. F. N. Sweeney, of the Franklinton circuit, Louisiana Conference, says: "We have just closed a great meeting at Fisher Church. The church was greatly revived, there were seven accession on profession of faith, and a goodly number pledged to it. Rev. L. I. McCain, of Hammond, did the preaching. We have received this year twenty-five on profession of faith, and twenty-four by certificate."

Dr. A. C. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, chairman of the commission appointed by the Annual Conferences of Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, and Arkansas to consider the advisability of establishing an assembly west of the Mississippi River, has been requested by the commission to report the findings of the commission to the Conferences interested. In performing this duty, he will probably visit the Louisiana Conference, where he will receive a warm welcome.

Last Sunday was the "Fall Opening" for the work of First Church, Greenville, Miss. The Sunday school attendance was 367. The two classes of ladies met with the "Big Brothers"—there were 88 ladies and 88 "Big Brothers" present. More than 200 adults were present at Sunday school, and the 11 o'clock congregation was fine. There is every expectation that this Sunday school will pass the 400 mark in attendance soon. Rev. E. S. Lewis and his co-workers are doing great things in this fine Delta town.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, our pastor at Bogalusa, La., favored the Advocate office with a call one day last week. He was returning home from Glenmora, La., where he assisted the pastor, Rev. W. W. Perry, in a good meeting. There were thirty-three additions to the membership of the church, most of them by baptism. The singing was led by Rev. Clarence Ridge, a local preacher attending Southern Methodist University, who has been engaged in evangelistic work in the Alexandria District during the summer.

We have been requested to make the following corrections in quarterly conference appointments: In the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, the fourth quarterly conference for the Waynesboro circuit will be held at Hebron, Nov. 19, 20; and for Pachuta, at Adams Chapel, Nov. 26, 27. In the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, the Lafayette quarterly conference will be held on October 3, and the De Ridder quarterly conference will be held on Sept. 12. These changes will appear in the next publication of these rounds.

The resignation of Mrs. M. E. Joyce, for many years the popular and efficient matron of Millsaps College, caused a vacancy which has been filled by the Executive Committee by the election of Mrs. Mattie Cavett Thompson, a daughter of Mr. J. C. Cavett, of Jackson. Mrs. Thompson was graduated from the Industrial Institute and College, at Columbus, Miss., in 1918, with special training in Home Economics. During her senior year at the college she was in charge of the Practice Home which was run in co-operation with the Home Economics Department. For the past three years she has taught Domestic Science in Belhaven College. Ever since she was graduated she has spent from six to twelve weeks at the Teachers' College in New York, taking special training in Home Economics and Institutional Management. She is not only well equipped, but has unlimited energy and a spirit of willingness and co-operation. Those who know her count Millsaps College fortunate in being able to secure her services.

The friends of Millsaps College will be interested to learn that the Executive Committee has elected Professor Cawthon A. Bowen to the professorship of the Tatum School of Religious Education recently established in Millsaps College. Professor Bowen is the Vice-President of the Woman's College of Alabama, located in Montgomery, and for seven years has been the professor of Bible and Religious Education in that institution. He is an A. B. graduate of Emory College and has an M. A. degree from Vanderbilt University. He is a cultured Christian gentleman and an experienced teacher, and the Board counts itself fortunate in being able to secure the services of a man so eminently qualified for the department of Christian Education. Many Mississippians will remember him as a son of the late Rev. J. A. Bowen, widely and favorably known as a member of the North Mississippi Conference. Professor Bowen and his charming wife will reach Jackson in time for the opening of the session, September 14.

GOOD NEWS FROM MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: You and the brethren of the Mississippi Conference will be glad to know that Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, has had marked improvement in health. To-night he holds the Fifth Street Quarterly Conference, which concludes the third round. He has met every engagement over the district, preached thirty times, and is much stronger at the finish than he was at the beginning. Within the last few weeks his strength has been so evident that his physicians and friends expect him soon to be fully himself again.

Our lamented brother Herbert Watkins left the work here in such excellent shape, that every department is making definite and encouraging progress.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

Prospects are bright for a great opening Wednesday, September 14. We hope that many of our pastors will be able to be with us at that time.

Dr. Sexton has worked hard all summer building and repairing and getting things in readiness for this now session. He has met with the most hearty co-operation on the part of all concerned. Merchants and business men, parents and new students, old teachers and students, office help, et al., seem to partake of his optimism and enthusiasm. Centenary is entering upon a new era. Mr. Editor, come and see!

The new Dining Room and Business College is completed! The two new residences for teachers are ready for the last touches—and the carpenters are working strenuously to finish up the odd jobs still to be done. It sounds good to hear hammer and saw ringing early and late—especially late.

From every quarter of the State and from other States come cheering news to dear old Centenary. People who were indifferent toward religious education are warming up and writing to us about entering their sons at Centenary. Parents are telling small boys that they are to come to Centenary.

We have added some expert teachers to the faculty and are now ready to tell the world that Centenary can give as good instruction as can be given by any first-class college. But we are not depending altogether upon endowment, great professors, or any other good thing; we are trusting in God who delighteth in the culture of the young mind and spirit which are eternal.

R. E. SMITH, Dean.

STEREOPTICON SLIDES.

The Lantern and Slides Department of the Centenary Commission will lend to pastors and other church leaders the following sets of slides, on condition that those who borrow will pay postage to and from Nashville, prepare and deliver the lecture which accompanies the slides, and return the slides promptly after they have been shown: China-Japan (75 Slides); European Lecture (31); Our Fields (75); New Mountain Lecture (37); Stewardship (43); Congo Mission (69); Japan (78); Korea (83); Making Democracy Safe for the World (97); Centenary Celebration (75). Every application should state how many times slides are to be shown and the dates on which they are wanted. Address J. M. Way, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

A LAST APPEAL.

When you read this the Louisiana Legislature will be in session. If you favor a bill giving all our State courts the right to enforce the Prohibition law, write or wire your legislator immediately. Don't wait—do it now.

A. W. TURNER,
State Supt. La. Anti-Saloon League.

TO-MORROW.

To-morrow is a butterfly.

Pursue her down the way,

But when you catch her on the sly

You'll find she is To-day—

You'll find she is To-day.

—Mattie Lee Hausgen, in The Youth's Companion.

What is true of the individual is also true of the church. "Whenever the church is aroused and the world's wickedness arrested, somebody has been praying." Prayer brings us close to God and leads us to depend upon him for grace and strength for every service.—Selected.

On August 11, 1921, the spirit of our beloved grandmother, MRS. MARY POTTER, passed on to a spiritual realm, to the home our Savior has prepared for those who are faithful and sustained by an unfaltering trust. She was born January 1, 1841. Her husband preceded her to the great beyond some three years ago. She leaves two children, Mrs. Jos. Vetsch, and Mr. G. W. Potter, of Fort Necessity, La., besides nine grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren. We will miss her sweet face and happy smiles. She was always faithful and ready to serve.

There is no death! What seems so is transition,

This life of mortal breath, is but a suburb of the life Elysian,
Whose portal we call death.

Hence when our loved ones enter this portal and become more beautiful by the expansion of the soul, we are able to bear the grief of the short separation. The funeral services were conducted by her former pastor and friend, Brother Hatfield, in the presence of a number of sorrowing relatives and friends at the Methodist church, Fort Necessity, Louisiana. She was laid to rest by her husband, Friday, August 12, 1921.

Since the Allwise Father has taken away from our Society our oldest member, friend and fellow-helper, Mrs. J. B. CATCHING, therefore he it resolved,

That we, the members of the Georgetown Missionary Society, feel keenly our loss, for she was always willing and ready to help in any branch of the Society and church work with her prayers and donations. Her pure life and her devotion to the Christian cause were an inspiration to all of those with whom she was associated. May her "mantle" fall on some of those she left behind.

Resolved, second, That we express our deepest sympathy to her loved ones in their sorrow.

Resolved, third, That these resolutions be recorded on the minutes of the Society, and that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy be given to the family.

A TRIBUTE.

FRANCES ROGERS HAMILTON, daughter of John Jameson and Sara Allen Rogers, was born in Verona, Miss., where she spent her childhood. Just as she was blossoming into womanhood her parents moved to Tupelo. There she soon became a leader among the young people, and as she was a devout Christian, always putting religious duties before everything else and counting them her chief pleasure, she wielded an untold influence for good. In 1901 she was married to Dr. George Paul Hamilton, of Aberdeen, Miss. In 1910 she was left a widow, with two little children, George and Sara. From that day till the hour of her death her life was centered in these children. She was their sympathetic friend, their close companion, their tender mother and guide. At the last, when her broken-hearted sister asked if she wished to talk to the children, she replied, "There's nothing to say, they have my life, they know how I want them to live." She longed to live for their sakes, but she said, "Thy will be done."

It was early on the morning of May 30 that her sweet spirit passed from earth to heaven. Many were the hearts howled in sorrow as the sad news went forth, but only we who were nearest to her realize just what it means to struggle on through life without Frances to cheer and comfort and encourage us as we go. Her mother was waiting for her on the other side; but her tender devotion to her father and his to her was touching and beautiful. Her whole life reflected the culture, refinement and religious training of her father and mother.

After her husband's death she returned to Tupelo, where her influence was as a bright star, leading all who knew her onward and upward to a better, higher life. In the last years of her life one of her greatest joys was the weekly meeting of her neighborhood prayer circle. Although an intense sufferer, she was rarely absent from these meetings. In all things she was so loyal, so unselfish and true.

Our hearts ache because we miss her from among us; but our consolation is in knowing that she lives with God, where sorrow and suffering can come to her no more.

A FRIEND.

REPRESENTATIVES OF CONFERENCE MISSION BOARDS IN SESSION AT LAKE JUNALUSKA.

The meeting of the Representatives of Conference Mission Boards, held August 8, at Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, dealt with matters of vital interest as touching the missionary operations of our church. Some of the recommendations of this Conference are as follows:

"We congratulate the church upon the splendid results that have been achieved by our Centenary Movement, which has inaugurated a new era in missionary enterprise, and is enabling our General Board of Missions to enter many open doors and carry on mission work at home and abroad on a scale hitherto dreamed impossible. We rejoice in the great spiritual uplift that has come to Southern Methodism as one result of the Centenary, and we also note with deep gratification the substantial benefit that our Conference Boards of Missions are receiving in the way of Centenary funds for use in the home field. It is our sacred duty to use these funds wisely in order that the greatest good may come to the church and to the Master's cause.

"We recommend that the pastors continue to press the collection of the Centenary pledges. Otherwise the Centenary Movement may in the course of time prove to be a hindrance and an embarrassment to the church rather than a blessing. We believe the collection of the Centenary subscriptions depends largely upon the organization in the local church.

"We recommend that the money received from the Centenary fund by our Conference Boards be used first and foremost in increasing the salaries of our underpaid pastors; secondly, in extending mission work in needy places; and thirdly, in providing equipment for mission plants.

"In order to strengthen and vitalize the relation between the Conference Boards of Missions and the General Board of Missions, the Conference of Representatives of the Mission Boards adopted a resolution memorializing the General Conference to give the Conference Boards representation on the General Board of Missions. The Memorial as adopted by the Conference of Representatives of Mission Boards asked that the General Conference increase the membership of the General Board of Missions so that said Board shall be composed of one clerical and one lay member from each Annual Conference in the United States; that each Annual Conference Board of Missions shall nominate, subject to the confirmation of the General Conference, the clerical member from said Conference; that the General Conference shall elect the lay members, provided that one-half of the lay members on the Board shall be women."

WHAT TO TEACH A BOY.

John Smith—not anybody's John Smith—but the head master of Harrow School from 1854 to 1879 and a great Christian educator, used to say: "Teach a boy three things. Teach him to speak the truth; teach him to honor his mother, and teach him to believe in the future life." That is the rule of three for a boy's life according to a great teacher of boys. We often speak about the first two, the love of truth and the love of mother, but we seldom hear about the future life, when we hear men talk of boys. Yet there cannot be a firm faith without a firm future and a long reach through time. Teach your boy that his education is not for time, but for timeless eternity and that the future is in Jesus' hands.—The Family Altar.

THIS YOUNG MOTHER

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

Tired Mothers. It's hard work to take care of children and to cook, sweep, wash, sew, and mend besides. Tired mothers should take Hood's Sarsaparilla—it refreshes the blood, improves the appetite, assures restful sleep, and helps in many ways.—Adv.

Sunday School

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 11.

Topic: Paul In A Center of Learning.

Scripture Lesson: Acts 17:16-34.

Golden Text: "In him we live, and move, and have our being." Acts 17:28.

Home Readings: Monday, Paul in Athens, Acts 17:22-34; Tuesday, The Maker of Worlds, John 1:1-5; Wednesday, The Everlasting God, Isaiah 40:18-26; Thursday, The Folly of Idolatry, Isaiah 44:9-20; Friday, Prophecy Fulfilled, Luke 4:16-21; Saturday, Sowing the Seed, Matthew 13:1-9; Sunday, Sound Wisdom, Proverbs 3:13-23.

Teaching Points.

1. The man who is taught of Christ is able to stand in any company—Paul was at home in Athens.
2. It is but simple justice to recognize the good in men. Paul did not begin his speech to the Athenians by abusing them.
3. But Paul made no compromise with the errors of heathenism—he preached without equivocation the true God and His nature.
4. The burden of his message at Athens, as it was everywhere, was repentance, and faith in the risen Christ.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The people at Corinth and Sardis, where the two Standard Training Schools were recently held, expressed themselves as delighted with the results. Both places asked that we hold schools with them next year. Dr. A. W. Milden expressed himself thus: "The earnestness and marked enthusiasm of those who studied in this Training School have strongly impressed me. A new era in Sunday school development seems about to dawn. What this means for the future of the church, only a far-seeing prophet could discern. It is a great privilege to have a part, however humble, in an undertaking so noble." Miss Ruby Mitchell, one of the teachers in the Sardis High School, said she got more out of the one week in the S. T. S. than she ever got out of a State Normal. I have a number of like testimonials. Different friends have asked why we had not held these training schools before. The answer is short and simple, we could not get a place, we did not have the money, nor the teachers. We now have eight accredited teachers in the Conference and others are preparing themselves for the work; open your town and let us have a little money and we will put schools in every district in the Conference.

Mrs. J. B. Randolph is superintendent of teacher-training for the Corinth District. She has secured seven volunteers and they propose to teach a class in every charge in the Corinth District. It will be high noon in this section of the Conference when such a splendid piece of work is done. My prayer is that the Spirit may call more workers like this good woman and thrust them out into this field until it will be "day-break everywhere."

Rev. E. S. Lewis taught a larger class in the Bible and Missions at Sardis than he had at our Conference school. Melville Johnson had a class at Corinth in S. S. Org. and Adm., all of whom exhibited a spirit of heroism worthy of the apostles of old. Rev. J. E. Stephens taught a class at Grenada this year and one last year. Members of both these classes are a credit to the teaching of this young man. Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Superintendent Elementary Department of the Greenville District and leader in all good work in the Clarksdale church, taught a class of junior teachers in the Sardis District S. T. S. These workers gave their services to the church. Their help made the district schools possible.

What next? Get ready for Rally Day. Do something to attract all the summer stragglers. If you failed to observe Sunday School Day in the spring, use Rally Day for that purpose. Get ready for Promotion Day. Organize all your forces to bring every child, every boy and girl, every man and woman into the Sunday school by the first of October.

A school girl who has never taught, but has three units, took the course in Beginner Org. Adm. and Worship under Mrs. Adams at Sardis. One of the papers—"What I have gotten out of this course"—is as follows: "One thing that has impressed me especially in this course is the amount of work and skill it takes to run a Beginner's Department. Another thing is that the story time takes up just one-fourth of the hour in Sunday school. Before this I had a general idea of what a beginner was, but I did not know how different he was from the primary child. I did not realize pictures, music, and surroundings could make such an impression on him. I do not know what age children I would rather teach, but the study this week has made me want to take other courses and find out whether I'll teach any and what age they'll be if I am fitted to do it."

A NOTE FROM REV. S. W. MILLER.

Dear Brother Carley: I notice in this week's Advocate that Rev. R. P. Goar is in very poor health, so I am writing these lines to cheer him in his feeble condition. In 1877-8 I was associated with Brother Goar in revival work. He was then a local preacher.

I shall never forget the meeting we held where Rev. Thomas Lewis was raised. There were three meetings going on, on three sides of us, and our congregation was small with only two penitents at the altar. These were Tom and Nannie Lewis. Finally Tom rose shouting, and with this Grandma Foster, Sister Lewis, Brother Lewis, Jack, Tom, and Billy Foster, and others began rejoicing. Nannie wanted Tom to come and pray for her, when he said, "Let Nannie pray as I have and she will soon be all right." We had penitents all over the house. It was the first and only time in life that I saw every one in the house either penitents, or rejoicing.

Brother Goar, we may never meet here again, but in the sweet beyond there will be a meeting that will be unmarred by the ills common to human life. It was my privilege to have Brother Goar's brother as a local preacher in Cook County, Texas, in 1888-9. We had many pleasant times together. When I think of old friends, and the great number of them that have already passed over the river, beckoning hands to welcome me there. Brother Goar, a life spent as yours has been spent needs only to rest under the shadow of God's smiles and await God's call to eternal rest.

Yours in Christ,

S. W. MILLER.

NOTES FROM THE FOREIGN FIELD.

Africa.—Miss Willie G. Hall, who graduated from Scarritt last May and was consecrated at the Council meeting in Richmond, Va., sailed from New York on June 25, in company with Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Reeve and little son, who are returning to the Congo Belge after furlough in this country. The party will spend several months in Belgium, where they will study the French language and take courses in tropical medicine. Miss Marzie Hall, a sister of Miss Willie, is also a missionary in Africa, having gone to the field a year ago.—Council Bulletin.

NOTES FROM THE HOME FIELD.

Deaconess Falla Richardson, who is on leave of absence on account of family demands, has been appointed deaconess in her home church, at Corinth, Miss.

The Co-operative Home in Corinth, Miss., has been closed. This institution has been located in a rented house and the owners have sold the house. The Telephone Exchange in Corinth, which has furnished a large number of the occupants of the Home employment, has reduced its force and the committee deems it advisable to close the Home permanently. Deaconess Adeline Peeples, who has been in charge of the Co-operative Home, has been given a vacation of two months.

Deaconess Dora Hoover has been appointed to the Wesley Community House, Biloxi, Miss. Deaconess Hoover has been on leave of absence for health reasons for the last two years. Her friends will rejoice over her restoration to health and her ability to take work again.

Deaconess Bertie Breeden, who has been at St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, for the past two years, has been transferred to the Methodist Institute, Richmond, Va.

The little mill village in Meridian, Miss., in which our Wesley Community House is located, was recently visited by a serious fire. Many persons were rendered homeless. Home Missionary Agnes Stackhouse rendered efficient aid in securing homes for the homeless, in raising money to help replace their furniture, and in assisting in the distribution of the contributions of food and clothing made by the charitable people in Meridian.

Excitement in Wembo-Nyama, Congo Belge, Africa.

Miss Marzie Hall writes: "An old lion roars around almost every night. The leopards exact a tax on our goats. One of our milk goats was included in the four recently killed. It is quite a thrilling experience to live in such close proximity with such ferocious neighbors. Needless to say we are careful about walking outside after dark."—Council Bulletin.

"JUNALUSKA—EAST CHEROKEE CHIEF."

"Junaluska died about the year 1858, aged more than one hundred years. They laid him under the trees in the land of his birth, and 'over his bed the wild vines lovingly wove a coverlid of softest green. All his woodland friends gather about his couch. Forest and hill and flower and cloud sing the songs he loved. All day the sunlight lays its wealth in bars of gold at his feet, and at night the moonlight things and the shadow things come out to play. By his side they laid Nicie, his wife. A monument was erected to his memory in 1910, but the greatest and most enduring monuments of this far-famed East Cherokee Chief are Mount Junaluska, bathed in the everlasting sunshine of the land of the sky, or wrapped in mantles of untrodden snow, and Lake Junaluska, which nestles at its base and from its depths reflects as a vast mirror the incomparable splendors of the surrounding hills, lofty mountains and gorgeous sunsets."—Maude McCulloch in "Junaluska."

THE SCAR.

"Brother, what is that scar above your heart?"

"Brother, the mark of a sword."

"Of whose sword?"

"Brother, of yours."

"Nay!"

"Even so!"

"Brother of my heart, could I wound you thus, and still forget?"

"Yes, since you bear no scar."

"Brother of my soul, could I wound you thus, and go myself unscarred?"

"Verily, yes; since it is not the hit that wounds." L. E. RICHARDS.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

The Work Grows as Centenary Money Makes Possible Enlargement and Reinforcement.

The People's Central Institute, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, reports for the last quarter thirty-two probationers received. In the day schools and night classes 281 pupils were enrolled. The Sunday school enrollment is more than one hundred per cent in excess of church membership, thus building the greater church of the future.

Rev. Joseph Whitesides writes from Soochow University, Soochow, China: "The best piece of news of the past quarter was the decision of more than a hundred of our students to become Christians. There were 114 who made this decision, but as usual a large number of these have not been permitted by their families to join the church. During the quarter 67 students, six teachers and wives of teachers, and seven school servants joined our St. John's Church. This was the most remarkable turning to Christianity that I have ever seen among our students." Centenary giving has made possible a far larger program of service by Soochow University, and results already secured bear witness that the fields are white unto harvest.

During the quarter ending June 30, Soochow Hospital, Soochow, China, cared for 167 in-patients, and 2,134 out-patients, and, in addition, 414 out-calls were made by members of the hospital staff.

Rev. W. A. Estes writes that the new church building at Saungling, China, will comfortably seat 500 people. Saungling is a town of much importance, with a population of more than 40,000, and is a thriving business center. The site of the new building, paid for by the congregation, is one of the most valuable lots in the city, facing the main thoroughfare of Saungling. The church has now a membership of 342, of whom 258 are males. This splendid new enterprise was made possible by Centenary Church, Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Rev. C. N. Weems, presiding elder of Songdo (Korea) District, writes, under date of July 12: "It gives me great personal pleasure to hear that the Sunday schools of the North Arkansas Conference are planning to fit out the Anglo-Korean School. This is the leading school for boys of our church in Korea and the institution upon which we depend for our future leaders, both preachers and laymen. The attendance including two primary schools and the Industrial Department has almost reached 1,000. A Japanese inspector said recently that it has the best Korean faculty of any Christian school in Korea. Investments in the development of this school will yield large returns in the future church of Korea."

Practically every school of our church in mission fields is crowned to capacity and thousands of students are being turned away; and this after many of these schools have been given additional workers and new buildings through Centenary funds. Some enrollment figures are: Kwansel-Gakuin, Japan, 1,750; Higher Common School, Sondo, Korea, 952; Palmore Institute, Koke, Japan, 800; Hiroshima (Japan) Girls' School, 872; Holston Institute, Songdo, Korea, 700; Lydia

Patterson Institute, El Paso, Texas, 1,600. No better investments of Centenary money are being made than in schools in every mission field, and present plans for enlargement of many of these institutions wait on Centenary giving.

Some are asking "What of the giving of the church in foreign fields since we have been investing our Centenary money in these lands?" As a matter of fact, a large share of our Centenary money is being invested at home. The per cent of the total amount paid is returned to the home Conferences for the help of underpaid pastors. Nearly $1,000,000 has been thus appropriated and had we kept up to date the payment of our pledges the total would be $2,000,000. Then the Centenary is helping home mission enterprises of various kinds—schools, city missions, rural work, settlement houses, work among neglected peoples of our land, etc. But here are some statements concerning giving in foreign fields: $300,000 subscribed by Japanese Methodist Church—largest per capita Centenary pledges made, and largest per capita payments to date. One entire district in Korea self-supporting. Three Cuban churches self-supporting, others soon will be, and $1,200 paid by the Cubans for support of foreign missionary. Chihuahua, Mexico, church of 150 members, subscribed $17,348 (gold); Allende, Mexico, church raised in seven months, $7,500; year previous, $200 raised. Of $70,000 raised for Young J. Allen Church, Shanghai, China, $40,000 given by Chinese.

FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On August 21 we closed the last meeting for the season on the Gloster and Liberty charge. Rev. N. S. Loftus, pastor of Mt. Vernon charge, assisted me at the first meeting (Woodland). This is an afternoon appointment between Gloster and Liberty. Brother Loftus did some unusually good preaching, the singing was good, and we had five accessions by faith. Since this meeting a union Sunday school has been organized, and a weekly prayer meeting has been born. The Baptists of the community are just as loyal to both as the Methodists.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Natchez, assisted at Gloster. We had good crowds the two Sundays of the meeting (the Baptists giving way both Sundays), good preaching, and five accessions by faith. Brother Loftus "fired the woods" by a sermon during this meeting that bore definite fruit. It was not a revival, a thing which will not come to Gloster just yet. Brother Saunders was with old and admiring friends while in the meeting.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, formerly of Kentucky, but now of the Louisiana Conference, assisted at Liberty. We had good crowds there—the Baptists doing there as they did at Gloster. Thomas is clear-cut and wide-awake, and has the gifts of an evangelist, but we didn't have a revival—just an average "protracted meeting." Had one accession by faith, and one by certificate.

The best meeting of the four was last, held at Mt. Carmel, another afternoon appointment. Rev. W. J. Dawson, of Woodville, assisted. Brother Dawson "discovered America" (was born) about a mile from dear old Mt. Carmel. Some of the old mothers and fathers of the community remembered him as an infant, as his father and mother brought him to Mt. Carmel, the first church he ever attended. He left the immediate community at about three years of age, so he does not remember the faces of the people. Just as soon as he informed me, incidentally, that he was born near Mt. Carmel, I felt impressed to ask him to hold the meeting, and I believe the Lord was in it. He preaches the fundamentals of Methodisms, in earnest ness and sincerity, which is always effective. Several good, solid Christians from other churches and communities, added to those of Mt. Carmel, were in attendance, which generated an undercurrent of the old-time heavenly power, as they talked and prayed together; this, added to the good preaching and good old-time singing, caused the glory of heaven to crown the mercy seat! Ten were added to the church roll by profession of faith, making twenty-one during the revival season, added to the church.

Since April, off and on my charge, I have been in eleven meetings and worked with thirty preachers. It has been the greatest revival campaign of my life, in more ways than one.

Glad to say that Brother Sinimons has held up very well during the hot days of the summer. Mrs. Sinimons hasn't been quite so well, but is feeling better at this writing.

In love with everybody,

J. A. WELLS.

AN INTERESTING WORK ON THE CHATHAM CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: I have held my revival meetings at Brooklyn, Sardis, and Frantom. I am now engaged in my revival at Lapine. Our revival at Frantom closed Friday night, August 26. We had a splendid revival—received eleven into the church, ten on profession of faith and by baptism. We baptized five infants, also. The church was in general revived. The biggest thing, though, of the meeting was Wednesday, called "Stewards' Day." Brother K. W. Dodson, presiding elder, was with us. He brought a wonderful and powerful message from Heb. 12:1. Brother Dodson knew just how to handle the subject for the occasion. We had a good warm, feeling service. At 12 m. o'clock we had dinner. The good ladies around Frantom certainly do know how to prepare for such occasions.

After dinner the presiding elder called the congregation together and explained the objects to be discussed in the meeting. A number of the stewards made talks in regard to plans for raising pastor's salary for this year, the Conference claims, also, the plans for another year. Every talk was to the point and interesting. Everybody seemed to enjoy those talks very much. Then the presiding elder made a splendid talk on the improvement of the charge at large, and especially the improvement of the parsonage.

The Bible says something about the best wine last, so I have saved the best for the last, that is, the survey. We made a partial survey of my charge, and made report at this meeting. Enclosed you will find questionnaire used in survey. Also a map of my charge showing location of all churches of all denominations within boundaries of my charge, with unevangelized territory. The survey follows:

No. families surveyed, 168.

No. M. E., South, members found, 205.

No. families entire Methodist belief, 58.

No. Baptist families found, 29.

No. M. P. families found, 31.

No. Mormon families found, 5.

No. Congregationalist families found, 3.
No. Presbyterian families found, 2.
No. Apostolic families found, 1.
No. families mixed faith, 39.
No. individuals with no belief, 52.
No. children found, 441.
No. adults found, 243.
No. children belonging to some church, 136.

No. children in Sunday school, 186.

This survey was made only in Methodist communities.

L. W. SMART, P. C.

(An interesting map, showing the survey in detail, accompanies this article, and we regret that we have not the facilities for reproducing it. This survey shows clearly the opportunities before the church in many of our rural sections, and how utterly impossible it is for one man to occupy the field. A missionary appropriation and an assistant pastor would doubtless mean much for this charge.—Editor.)

He who faithfully prays at home does as much for foreign missions as the man on the field, for the nearest way to the heart of a Hindu or a Chinaman is by way of the throne of God.—Eugene Stock.

FROM COLUMBIA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please say in the Advocate that we have just closed a great meeting in the Methodist church in Columbia. We had with us Rev. R. W. Tucker, of the Louisiana Conference, who did the preaching; and it was great preaching that he did. I think it was the best meeting that I have ever had conducted in my church. The town was greatly blessed.

Our church work moves along nicely. God has called one of our members (a Syrian) to preach the gospel, for which we are glad. We have had 38 accessions on profession of faith this year, and 18 by certificate—56 in all. The good Lord is blessing our work.

We have a little girl that has been sick for more than three months with Bright's disease. We want the prayers of all who may chance to read this, that God may see fit to spare her life and restore her sight. She has been blind nearly three months. We want the will of God to be done, and we will glorify His Holy name.

With best wishes for the work and for you,
L. L. ROBERTS.

A SPLENDID REVIVAL AT WAXIA, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed our ten days' meeting at Waxia, August 31, and will say that we had a revival in every sense of the word. We had 39 accessions. We got several entire families. Brother Bryson and I visited and prayed in practically every home in the community. Both of us were looking forward to this meeting and prayed much for its success. God answered and we had a great awakening. Waxia is one of my six appointments, an abandoned church which I picked up this year, but it is now revived and on its feet with a membership of 63. I got the right kind of help in the person of Rev. T. L. Bryson, of Lockport, La., who is coming for readmission this fall after being out of the State in other fields of labor a little more than three years. He preaches with all earnestness, denouncing sin with no uncertain sound, a man of prayer who forgets self and lets God have His way in his heart and life. Both of us believe in making use of the altar, and make honest efforts under the guidance of the Holy Ghost to get penitents into a real experience, where they can say "Abba, Father." We are truly grateful and count ourselves fortunate to have witnessed the workings of the Holy Spirit in our midst. We began with this prayer: Lord send a revival and begin in us. We gave the Holy Ghost complete charge, went through and ended that way, and now we humbly bow in gratitude, giving all glory to the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Fraternally,
A. J. MARTIN.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

We saw this the other day: "A bright smile may turn aside a harsh comment—but why the comment?" That is a pertinent question. The burden of an embarrassing situation should never be placed upon the innocent sufferer. A smile will often disarm a pestilent meddler, but why should anybody want to go around armed with the weapons that will injure if not destroy? Even for offensive operations a smile is more effective than a frown or a sharp word.

GET RID OF GAMBLING.

In keeping with the declaration of the recently adopted Constitution of the State of Louisiana that gambling is a vice and that proper steps shall be taken to suppress it, several bills have been introduced into the Legislature now in session with that end in view. Without the technical knowledge of the law that would enable us to assert that it has all the necessary "teeth" in it, we are inclined to believe that the bill proposed by Hon. L. L. Upton, of East Feliciana Parish, would accomplish the desired result. The bill not only defines and prohibits gambling, but it also makes the officers of the law responsible for the enforcement of the statutes against the vice and specifically provides that they shall be guilty of nonfeasance or malfeasance if they fail to act upon their own knowledge or information filed with them that the law is being violated. That gambling is a vice is too well known to need further demonstration, and that the Legislature should adopt measures to suppress it is directed by the Constitution itself. What we need is an act that will be so simple in its verbiage, so unmistakable in its purpose, and so stringent in its provisions that its effect cannot be nullified by the discovery of convenient loopholes or by lax enforcement. The present session of the Legislature affords a fine opportunity for the moral citizenship of the State to demand the passage of a law that will stand the test of the courts. If the Upton bill does not meet all the requirements, surely it is possible for a measure to be devised that will accomplish what the Constitution directs shall be done. If the voters of the State, men and women, who favor a real law on this subject will make known their sentiments to their representatives in the Legislature, they may be sure their opinions will carry much weight. It is always true that the forces of lawlessness are active in fighting measures that will interfere with their operations; now is the time for those who favor law and order to make themselves felt.

THE SAFETY OF THE UNARMED MAN.

There was a time, perhaps, in the history of the race when every man carried a weapon for protection against those who might seek his life. Some of these men were violent, ready to pick a quarrel on any pretext; others were peaceable, but feared to go unarmed lest an enemy smite them unaware. But times have changed; and now the great majority of men in Christian lands know not what it is to carry even a concealed weapon. Yet we count our lives safe as we come and go along the streets and as we travel over the country. Indeed, it is the common belief that the armed man is more likely to meet with mishap than the unarmed man. Why might it not be so with nations? Has not civilization reached the stage where it is safe for the nations to discard their armaments and meet one another with the calm confidence that the one seeks not to harm the other, and that all are more concerned for the glories of peace than they are for the bitter triumphs of war? Armies and navies and all the paraphernalia of hideous combat lay heavy burdens upon the people in the enormous expense they entail, and the peaceful arts must languish while the engines of destruction are prepared and kept in readiness for their work of ruin. Well may we pray that the representatives of the nations, in council assembled, may discover some way by which peace may be maintained without the constant threat of war.

A GOOD SERMON BY A LAYMAN.

Hon. James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, delivered the opening address at the meeting of the American Bar Association held at Cincinnati, Ohio, beginning on August 31. He took as his theme, "The Spirit of Lawlessness," and, as any preacher might have done, he took a text—Proverbs 29:18, "Where there is no vision, the people perish; but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." As all good preachers do, he explained the text, and then preached his sermon—delivered his address. After stating it to be his purpose "to inquire into the causes of a revolt against authority, of which no careful observer of present tendencies can be ignorant," he proceeded to show, by a careful analysis of the situation throughout the world, that this challenge to constituted authority is a universal evil, and that it is not confined to the political state. In seeking an explanation of this widespread malady, he attributes it to the environment of man growing out of the industrial revolution beginning with the close of the eighteenth century, resulting in the destruction of the spirit of work, the submergence of the individual into the group or class, and the development of excessive organization. He does not, of course, inveigh against the blessings that have come with the mastery of the powers of nature; but he declares that there has come about a dissipation of moral responsibility which has not been beneficial to character. But he is not pessimistic as to the ultimate issue. He believes the soul will assert itself, and that altruism will become a greater force than selfishness. He says: "I have faith in the inextinguishable spark of the Divine which is in the human soul and which our complex mechanical civilization has not extinguished. Of this, the World War was in itself a proof. All the horrible resources of mechanics and chemistry were utilized to coerce the human soul, and all proved ineffectual. Never did men rise to greater heights of self-sacrifice or show a greater fidelity 'even unto death.' Millions went to their graves, as to their beds, for an ideal; and when that is possible, this Pandora's box of modern civilization, which contained all imaginable evils, as well as benefits, also leaves hope behind." It is a pleasure to note that the address is saturated with Biblical quotations and allusions, and that it shows familiarity with the best literature of both ancient and modern times. The address closes, as it began, with a statement of the text.

STRAIGHT IN THE EYE.

When we are talking to a man, we like to look him straight in the eye once in awhile—and we like for him to look at us the same way. And when we are listening to a public speaker, we like to have his words re-enforced by the light that shines from his eyes. But if the speaker looks at the floor, the ceiling, the remote corners of the building, or gazes apparently into limitless space, with never a look at the people before him, we are deprived of a large part of the inspiration his message ought to bring us. Maybe all other people do not feel about it as we do—but some of them do. All the manuals of public speaking that we know anything about either take it for granted that the orator will look at the people, or they give specific injunctions to that effect. The message of the preacher ought to come from above, but he ought not to have to gaze about for it after he goes into the pulpit.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

I.

In view of the organic agitation or perturbation of American Methodism during the last quarter of a century, the recent liberal contributions by Southern Methodists for educational purposes, the present broad and liberal constructive programme of Southern Methodism, and the approximation of the General Conference which will no doubt take action upon many vital interests of the church, the initiative of constitutional discussion by Rev. Mr. Swimme of Midland, Texas, is, to say the least, opportune. The principles and construction of ecclesiastical constitutions may and oftentimes do present difficult and intricate questions of law, gravely affecting the duties, rights and powers of both the membership and ministry of the church, and also its property rights as an organic body, as fully appears from the judicial records of this country.

A contented, loyal and ideal church membership, one that intelligently and promptly responds to all the financial demands made upon them, must rest upon a reasonably clear understanding of the constitution and laws which demand their allegiance and guaranty their protection.

II.

It is not the purpose of this writer to challenge anything that Mr. Swimme has said or may say, or to enter into a controversy with any one who may enter the field of discussion which Mr. Swimme has opened. Nor, indeed, does he feel equal to any such controversy or discussion. But he has in his heart some questions which he would be glad to have answered by the ecclesiastical statesmen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and he also entertains some opinions upon this great subject, formed as a result of a careful and patient study of the constitutional history of American Methodism, which he would be pleased to have confirmed if correct or dissipated if incorrect.

III.

(1) Has the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a written Constitution, defining, limiting, and distributing the powers of its government; or is the General Conference vested with supreme, uncontrolled and irresponsible power over the church, its "Traveling Preachers," membership, property and educational institutions? Is the General Conference, as is said of the British Parliament, "omnipotent?"

(2) Did the founders of the Southern church erect for it and over it a government of laws; or has it, during the 76 years of its separate, independent, organic existence, lived and carried on its operations under a personal government—a government of men and not a government of laws?

(3) Is the provision of the Discipline vesting the veto power in the bishops mandatory upon them; to be exercised beneficially for the church and its "Traveling Preachers" and membership, and for safeguarding the integrity of the fundamental law of the church in all cases of legislative infringement; or does the provision confer a mere personal privilege upon the bishops, to be exercised or not according to their personal views of expediency?

(4) In whom does the ecclesiastical sovereignty reside? In fundamental changes, who has "the power to command in the last resort?" Is this sovereign power vested in the General Conference, or in the "Traveling Preachers," or in all the people of the church? Has the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, an "Episcopal Constitution," in the ancient and technical sense of that phrase or expression, and if so when and how was it made and established, and by whom?

IV.

There are many humble, quiet, unobtrusive, but, nevertheless, loyal and devoted Southern Methodists who are waiting with anxious hearts to know the truth about the matters embraced in the above questions, and what view the General Conference will take of its own powers in respect to them, should a crisis ever at any time arise in the church.

During the last 25 years, there has been voluminous, earnest and able discussion of almost every interest of the church, except the constitutional questions above suggested, and in respect to them there seems to have been a "conspiracy of silence;" and, indeed, frequent admonition has been given to abstain from all discussion of the origin and constitutional history of the Southern church.

V.

It is a fundamental rule of constitutional construction, supported by the soundest reasoning and the universal experience of civilized mankind, that the provisions of the instrument under examination should be examined and applied by the aid and in the light of contemporaneous history; constitutions are a concrete application of the principles of government to the state of things as they are and in the light of contemporaneous history; and the governments provided for in them were erected; and all reasonable construction demands that, by recurring to the history of the times, an examination be made of the state of things existing at the time when the instrument was framed and adopted, in order to ascertain the old law and the then existing evils and mischief, and the remedy to be provided for them. Contemporaneous exposition, construction, discussion and documents are, likewise, resorted to as an aid to present discussion. (Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat, 416; Martin v. Hunter, 1 Wheat, 304; Cooley v. Philadelphia Port Wardens, 12 How, 299; Pollock v. Bridgeport Steamboat Co., 114 U. S., 411.)

Whilst it is probably true, as a general rule, that the analogies of civil law are not applied with strictness to the details of church government, yet the rule of construction just stated is so apposite to all classes of human transactions when it is designed to ascertain the intention of the parties to them and so reasonable in itself, it must be just as applicable to ecclesiastical as to political constitutions; and the rule has been so applied by the Supreme Court of the United States. (Smith v. Swormstedt, 16. Howard U. S. Dep. 298-313.)

VI.

The Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is, like Anglo-Saxon political institutions, a growth and a development; and a failure to recognize that fact will render futile any and all efforts to ascertain what that constitution is, and to give it proper construction and application in the administration of the affairs of the church; and any serious effort to contravene or reverse the current of development will result in disaster and ultimate disintegration. No constitution, civil or ecclesiastical, can long survive the abandonment of the principles upon which it was brought into existence and which have fertilized its growth to maturity and stimulated its progressive achievements.

In the course of its development from early beginnings, Southern Methodism traveled a long way as an integral part of original organic American Methodism; and upon the separation Southern Methodists carried as an inheritance all that was vital, and entered upon an independent and more liberal development, and a career in accord with the spirit and genius of the Southern people, unembarrassed by conflicting theories of government. But the continuity of its constitutional development from the "Christmas Conference" down to the present time has never been broken.

Whilst it is true that the "Christmas Conference" marks an epoch in the gradual transition of American Methodism from the personal government of Mr. Wesley, its founder, patriarch and apostle, to the government "of all the traveling preachers," it is likewise true that no definite polity was established by that conference, and the exact date cannot be fixed when the former became wholly extinct and the latter became complete. It was, upon great deliberation, judicially declared that:

"In 1784, when this church was first established, and down till 1808, the General Conference was composed of all the traveling preachers in that connection. This body of preachers founded it by organizing its government, ecclesiastical and temporal, establishing its doctrines and discipline, appointed its superintendents or bishops, its ministers and preachers, and other subordinate authorities, to administer its polity, and promulgate its doctrines, and teachings throughout the land."

The Court then held that sovereign power over the church was "inherent in the" old "General Conference;" and after reciting the change of that conference into a delegated body, and the adoption of the constitutional limitations contained in the six restrictive articles, adds:

"In all other respects, and in everything else that concerns the welfare of the church, the General Conference represents the sovereign power, the same as before. This is the view taken by the General Conference itself, as exemplified by the usage and practice of that body." (Smith v. Swormstedt, Supra.)

And thus it appears that, as early as A. D. 1853, it was judicially determined and settled by the Supreme Court of the Union that the following are principles of the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, namely:

1. "The sovereign power" was "inherent in the General Conference," when that body "was composed of all the traveling preachers in that connection;" and (2) that "sovereign power" was continued in the General Conference when it became a delegated body under the Constitution of 1808, subject only to the limitation imposed upon it by the six restrictive articles, and that status existed in 1844; and (3) the court based its decision upon the undisputed historical fact that the "traveling preachers" created the church—founded it by organizing its government, ecclesiastical and temporal, established its doctrines and discipline, and appointed its officers, ministers and subordinate officers, to administer its polity, and promulgate its teachings throughout the land.

In a word, the "sovereign power" of the preachers arose out of and was derived from the fact that they were creators of the church, and in the act of creation they represented no constituency—they acted in their own right and by virtue of their own power and authority alone. And the Court held that the fact that they founded the church carried with it the power to divide it.

VII.

There is no escape from the position that in 1844, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was a sovereign body, limited, however, in the exercise of its powers by the six restrictive articles, and that its great powers did not have their origin in any written constitution, but arose logically out of the historical facts of the creation and organization of the church, and were inherent in the original General Conference, and passed to its successor, the delegated General Conference, provided for in the Constitution of 1808. (Smith v. Swormstedt, Supra.)

The great decision just cited has forever settled the doctrine that ecclesiastical constitutions are not necessarily formal written instruments; that the depositary of the sovereign power of an ecclesiastical organization need not be so nominated in any formal written instrument, but that the power may be inherent in the body or constituency by whose ultimate authority the institution was brought into existence and organized. Or the power may be established as a constitutional principle and vested by historical recognition, usage, and practice.

The great principles of the British Constitution were evolved and established by an unremitting struggle of Englishmen, extending over a period of ten centuries. Hallam, the great constitutional historian, declared: "The whole fabric of English Liberty rose step by step, through much toil and many sacrifices, each generation adding some new security to the work, and trusting that posterity would perfect the labor as well as enjoy the reward."

A question that must deeply concern all intelligent, loyal Southern Methodists is:

Was the constitutional principle of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by which the General Conference was clothed with sovereign power, carried over and incorporated into the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?

This question can be correctly answered only by a careful examination of all the facts entering into the history of the origin, creation and organization of the Southern Church, and also the antecedent facts which led up to and precipitated the separation. This must be deferred and presented in another article.

Holly Springs, Miss.

"METHODISM VS. TRUTH."

By Rev. T. J. O'Neil.

(Concluded from Last Week)

Our author avers that the law requires true repentance as a prerequisite to "breaking of bread," which he interprets as the Holy Communion; hence we have, to our credit, included in our "36 restrictions" at least one Biblical restriction, for in the opening sentence of our invitation to the Lord's table, we say, "Ye that do truly and earnestly repent of your sins," etc. But our author charges that the majority of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, know nothing of repentance. This charge comes of unadulterated presumption, and not of personal knowledge. I am sure, he is acquainted with but few Southern Methodists, and his knowledge of these is not enough to enable him to pass judgment on their spiritual condition, much less a majority of the entire church. He has no way of sustaining the indictment, but makes the bald assertion of his individual judgment based on prejudice, and in so doing he violates Christ's injunction, "Judge not that ye be not judged." Matt. 7:1.

Next, our author charges that most Methodists have been bribed into the church. I am not cognizant of the customs in Itawamba County, but we have some concrete illustrations over here in the western part of Mississippi that bribes cannot be given and received with impunity, and I am persuaded there is not a county in our great State where those guilty of bribery would not be penalized. And I know that my great church enjoins obedience to the powers that be, and expels from her ministry and membership any who incriminate themselves by transgressing the law; hence this charge is a misrepresentation of the vilest type.

The next charge our author makes, in the order they appear in his book is: Methodists do not obey the commandments of God, but their doctrines are Arminian. We plead guilty to the charge, that our doctrines are Arminian, but plead not guilty to the charge that we do not obey God's commandments in believing in and teaching our doctrines, and we prove our innocence by comparing Arminianism with the Bible. We shall not tax the time and patience of the reader by discussing all our doctrines, but we name and give Bible proof of a few of them, and challenge Brother Gregory, or any one else, to point out any one of our doctrines that the Bible does not substantiate.

Here are a few of our doctrines as found in our Standards:

Monothelism, or one God. Scripture, 1 Cor. 8:6.

"To us there is but one God; the Father, of whom are all things."

The Divinity of Christ. Scripture, John 1:1. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God."

The Witness of the Holy Spirit. Scripture, Romans 8:16. "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God."

Justification by Faith. Scripture, Romans 5:1. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God."

Necessity of Regeneration. Scripture, John 3:7. "Ye must be born again."

The quotations given, and many others that might be given, are our scriptural warrant for teaching these doctrines named; and as with these, so with all our doctrines—they are warranted by Scripture, time-honored, and adapted to twentieth century needs as well as ancient requirements.

Our author boldly declares that as the collect is not taken from the Bible, nor authorized by the Bible, it must be admitted that the order in which we administer the Communion is unscriptural.

While we admit the Bible does not prescribe that the collect must be included in the order of administering the Communion, every petition it contains is scriptural, and every word of it is recorded in the Bible.

Now, consistency and fairness will compel Brother Gregory to permit me to show him the awkward position in which he has placed himself by his own argument. If it is unscriptural and wrong for any Christians to include in any of their ordinances or forms of worship anything not prescribed by the Bible, he and his church are unscriptural, for the Bible does not direct that people shall wear shoes into the church, nor that the morning services shall be held at eleven o'clock, nor that Sunday schools shall be organized and maintained.

Our author scorns the Methodist Church for prescribing the form of prayer of consecration at the Communion table. We are willing to bear this scorn and are glad to be accounted worthy of such scorn, for in so doing we are following noble example. Our Lord gave his disciples a form of prayer. Matt. 6:9-13.

He then pleads that we should rigidly follow the example of Christ. All right; physician, heal thyself. Christ administered the communion but once; He administered unleavened bread, not crackers; He administered it himself, not through deacons. Paul very pertinently asks, "Thou therefore which teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?" Rom. 2:21. Will our brother assume the role of Pharisee and bind heavy burdens, and lay them on other shoulders, and yet not touch them with one of his little fingers? (cf. Matt. 23:1, sq.)

In an outburst, expressive of his desire and ambition, our author says, "I only wish that I could write with such force as to cause every member of Southern Methodism to dissent from the doctrines of the Methodist Church." Well, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," so, with these words, our brother betrayeth himself, and advertises to the world to what class he belongs; yet he has not taken us altogether unawares, for nearly two thousand years ago the Master sounded the warning, for the protection of his people, that there were certain who would "compass sea and land to make one proselyte." Matt. 23:15. Don't become nervous or excited, brother, in your desires or expectations. Southern Methodism is a child of Providence, ranking among the most important phenomena of the last seventy-five years, and is not yet ready for dissolution, for she has almost trebled her membership each twenty-five years of her existence, and has not yet fulfilled the divine purpose of her creation, but is marching on to grander conquests, leaving behind all

Who'd rather on a gibbet dangle

Than miss his dear delight to wrangle.

Again, our author teaches that church membership is a scriptural requisite to qualification for the Communion, and that only those baptized into the Baptist Church are church members, and that immersion in water is the only scriptural mode of baptism. With this definition of the church I cannot agree, and I challenge any one to produce the Scripture that gives this definition of the church. Christ did not found his church on a rock, but on the great bed-rock (petra) of faith that confesses the Messiahship of Jesus. (cf. Matt. 16:16, 18.)

As to the contention that immersion is the only scriptural mode of baptism, I will say, the manner in which the element of water is applied in baptism is not the sacrament, but only a circumstance of the sacrament. Christ commanded his disciples to baptize all nations, but he did not any more presume to prescribe the mode than he presumed to designate the method of travel when he commanded to "Go preach the gospel to every creature." If our brother contends that, in the absence of a direct command, we must be governed by precedent, I contend that precedent should not obtain in the one instance if neglected in the other. Our Lord went on his missions only afoot, in a boat, or on a mule. His precedent prevents us traveling by other methods while on our mission of evangelizing the world. As to the mode of baptism, Christ gave us no precedent, for John tells us specifically that He did not administer the rite of baptism (Jno. 4:2). Being foiled at this point, our brother may make the contention that we are to be governed by Christ's example in receiving the rite of baptism. Very well, by what mode was he baptized? I suppose, in deciding an issue so vital as this, we should be guided by the testimony of the most competent witness, and I suppose we all agree that no testimony would be quite so weighty as the testimony of him who baptized Jesus. John the Baptist baptized Jesus, so we examine him. His testimony is recorded in Matt. 3:11, Mark 1:8, Luke 3:16, John 1:26. In each of these four instances, John is represented as saying, "I baptize with water." The original reads, "Ego baptizo en hudati," which is the instrumental dative form, showing that John applied the water to the candidates, instead of immersing the candidates in the water. If he had immersed the candidates, he would have said, "Ego baptizo eis to hudor." (cf. Matt. 17:15.)

It is significant that John associates Christ's baptizing with the Holy Ghost, with his baptizing with water. He says, "I indeed baptize you with water, * * * but he that cometh after me * * * shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." Matt. 3:11. By referring to Matt. 3:16, we learn that the Holy Ghost descended in the form of a dove, and lighted on Jesus. Peter, discussing the rites and privileges of the church and Christ's command to the church, said (Acts 1:5), "John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost," using the instrumental dative in each instance. Then, when the prophecy was fulfilled, and the Holy Ghost-baptized people were so overjoyed that they were more boisterous than a Methodist camp meeting, and bystanders accused them of being drunk, Peter came to their rescue and denied the charge of drunkenness, and said that the display was a fulfillment of the prophecy of Joel, who represented the Lord as saying, "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." Then Peter proceeded to preach to the crowd that assembled to see what those crazy enthusiasts were about such an effective sermon that many of them got under conviction and began to inquire what they should do. Peter admonished them to repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and in order to Holy Ghost baptism. Acts 2:38. Now, it seems to me that this is sufficient to convince any unbiased mind that Jesus was baptized by pouring, just as he baptizes others by pouring the Holy Ghost upon them.

If further testimony be sought by my readers, I will let Dr. William H. Whitsett, erstwhile President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky, testify. He says that in the year 1880, by making thorough investigation and a close study of Baptist history, he learned that immersion was introduced into England in 1641. He further states that he learned that Calvin at Geneva practiced pouring exclusively after 1536. He cites quite a number of instances as illustrations that the English Baptists baptized by sprinkling or pouring, and fails to find any instance of their baptizing by immersion. He also avers that he has found in some records convincing evidence that Roger Williams, the first American Baptist, was baptized by pouring. We submit this testimony to you, dear reader, and leave you to decide whether or not immersion is the only legitimate mode of baptism, and whether Methodists, in practicing other modes, are violating God's commandments.

That the public may know the calumny, vituperation, and misinterpretation of which our author is competent, I give one more quotation from his book. After quoting from the second division of our General Rules, "It is expected of all who continue in these societies that they should continue to evidence their desire for salvation by doing good," etc., he says, "Here is the bribe that is offered by the Methodist Church to increase and hold her membership, and the law that is a disgrace to the religion of Christ and is a blasphemy against Christ, as the Methodist Church pretends that it is authorized by the law of Christ. If I were a Methodist, the law of Methodism would compel me to employ Methodist workmen in preference to others. It would compel me to swallow pills rolled by a Methodist physician rather than from any other. If I should wish to purchase five cents' worth of gunpowder, this law would compel me to go to a Methodist merchant before going to any other. If I should go to the polls to exercise my right and my privilege to vote for men to fill the different offices created by the laws of my country, this law would compel me to cast my vote for a Methodist politician, in preference to any other, no matter what their qualifications might be."

Were there nothing else to justify my guess that Brother Gregory is not very well acquainted with Methodists, this quotation is sufficient. All who know anything about the Methodist Church, know that this is not our law or practice.

If our brother will read again, he will find that Methodists are admonished to do good as far as possible to all men, especially to them that are of the household of faith. Then, if he will read Galatians 6:10, he will find that Paul issues the same admonition, "Do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." By "the household of faith," did Paul mean the Methodist Church? If so, our church is much older than I thought, and I am obliged to Brother Gregory for thus enlightening me.

Now, if our author will read our ritual for administering baptism to adults, he will find that all candidates are required to testify to a belief in the Apostles' Creed, in which is the sentence: "I believe in the holy catholic church," which means the church universal, including all evangelical denominations. Hence, any unprejudiced person can see that to narrow the "household of faith" to the Methodist Church is a vicious misrepresentation.

In conclusion, I will say: while Brother Gregory is very much mistaken in his charge that the thirty-six indictments he lodges against the Methodists are restrictions thrown around the Lord's table, we entertain a conscious pride in the beauty of the phraseology and the catholicity of the spirit of our order of administering the Holy Communion, and that the only reason that he can endorse and appropriate Judge Longstreet's words, "You have ten thousand times more to fear from Methodists than from Catholics," is because, by sheer merit and divine guidance, we are increasing with a rapidity alarming to those who don't like us.

BOOKS.

By Rev. Carroll Varner.

Hanging in the library of a friend, I noticed these words on a wood placard, "Without a love of books the richest man is poor." How true! What would you take in exchange for your love of books and the privilege of reading them at your will? How much they contribute to our happiness, to say nothing of the information given!

And if there is any man who ought to have this love of books and spend much time in their company, it is the preacher. To be sure he is to be primarily a man of one Book; the Bible is to come first in all his reading and studying, but there will still be left much time which he will either give to other books, or waste altogether. The preacher needs to be a man of wide information if he is going to interest the same people year after year, and though his education be very limited, this information will be his if he spends time with his books. S. Parkes Cadman, the famous Brooklyn preacher, had little or no education when he entered the ministry, but he had the good sense to surround himself with a growing library as he went on, and today he is known for his wide and accurate information. In reading Roosevelt's "African Game Trails," I was amazed to note the great amount of reading matter, a large library, that he took with him to read in his spare moments while on the plains and in the jungles of Africa. One is not surprised at his extraordinary versatility after learning how great a reader he was. And, by the way, he says in that same book a thing which, for my own part, I am glad he said, and that is he did not care for Dr. Elliott's Five-foot Shelf of books; that no one could select the books for another person to read.

One is impressed also with the wide reading of F. W. Boreham as indicated in his own books. I am not more impressed by the freshness and charm of his writings than by his familiarity with books of all kinds and ages. There must be a close connection between the great popularity of his writings and the extensiveness of his reading. And the same can be said of President Wilson. In his "History of the American People" you can readily see that it was written only after he had done an amazing amount of reading and research work; and his voluminous reading must evidently account very largely for the fine diction he uses in both his writings and his addresses. Gladstone was a constant student of books throughout his long and busy career, and his great library at Hawarden was one of the chief joys of his life. Next to the man himself, the most interesting thing about a visit to the late Dr. Carlisle was the sight of his library. He always received his callers in his library and they could not but be impressed by two things, that here was a most extraordinary man, and that he had surrounded himself with an extraordinary collection of books. And the chief thing of interest at old Wofford today to the many visitors who go there is the library of Dr. Carlisle retained just as he left it, even to the furniture contained therein.

Dr. Rob't E. Speer, who always reminds me of the two men just referred to—though much younger—is another man who does a remarkable amount of reading, in spite of the fact, too, that few men are on the go as much as he is. On train or steamship, he is to be seen with a book in hand reading with the avidity of a boy over a detective story; and it is said that when he goes off on a vacation to enjoy a well-earned rest he carries with him a suitcase full of books to be read when not engaged in some form of recreation.

I sometimes marvel at the greatness of the blessing which is ours in these times in the abundance of books at our very hand. How rich the poorest one of us is! If we don't own them, we can procure them from the public libraries, or, failing there, we can borrow them from any number of friends. Biography, history, essays, philosophy, fiction, addresses, sermons; the wealth of the thought, imagination, study, research, inspiration, exaltation, and exhortation of the master minds and greatest hearts of all the ages! Verily we have a vast treasure house at our disposal and we can go in and help ourselves at will. By reading them we entertain ourselves, we feast to our heart's content, while at the same time we increase the store of our knowledge and information.

We covet the privilege of knowing and conversing with great men and women; well, it is ours any time we desire. Take down the biography of any one of the great characters of history and we can spend uninterrupted hours in his or her presence. We would feel something of the inspiration and share in the wonderful visions that have come to some of these great hearts of this and other ages. We go to the shelves and take down a volume of essays or devotional writings and soon find ourselves standing with them on their mount of vision, seeing what they saw and feeling as they felt. If we would laugh awhile; if we would cry; if we would witness the great tragedies of earth's history; if we would work with the conquering armies, or if we would spend awhile with the lovers in their shadowy retreat, we have but to retire to the library and lose ourselves in its rich contents.

Books are a veritable magician's wand by which we bring about any change we may desire and transport ourselves immediately to any place or time. Praise God for books and the ability to read them! Verily the words on the wall of my friend's library are words of wisdom—"Without a love of books the richest man is poor."

THE UNIFICATION ISSUE.

By Rev. R. A. Meek, D. D.

The Unification issue seems again to be forging to the front. A number of utterances bearing upon it have lately appeared in the organs of the two churches, North and South. Soon after the adjournment of the last Northern General Conference, Bishop James Cannon declared himself in favor of a Joint Constitutional Convention to formulate a plan of union, this being one of the methods of procedure suggested by that distinguished body; and Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, of North Carolina, in two recent articles in the Nashville Christian Advocate, earnestly pleads for the holding of such a convention. Dr. A. C. Millar, the courtly Editor of the Arkansas Methodist, chimes in from across the Big Muddy, and insists that something must be done, and the article of Bishop Mouzon in reply to Dr. Joy, of the New York Christian Advocate, though he affirms that the Southern Commission has exhausted the authority conferred upon it by the Atlanta General Conference, is ominous in its silence concerning the future. One can easily imagine that he will want to continue to go ahead, with those directing granted a larger measure of power. And, furthermore, I recall that a Western editor stated to me some months ago that a good many in his section are of the opinion that our General Conference should record its approval of the pending plan of unification, notwithstanding the fact that action concerning it was waived by the Des Moines General Conference.

None of this is to me surprising. For my part, I have never doubted that the extreme unionists of the Church, South, would make an effort at the next General Conference to prolong the negotiations to merge the two Episcopal Methodisms in America. The union microbe is not an easy one to get rid of. When once it is well embedded in one's system, it seems to develop an obsession that never again allows "a return to normalcy." There are two things that will bring this vexatious issue to the fore at Hot Springs next May: one will be the scheme formulated by the Joint Commission, which our representatives on that body will officially submit; the other will be the transmitted action of the Northern General Conference, which, while declining to adopt the Joint Commission's plan, proposes to keep a Commission at work, or to assemble a Joint Constitutional Convention to deal with the issue. In an editorial some weeks ago you, Mr. Editor, predicted that this question would be quickly disposed of by our great lawmaking assembly. If by that you meant it would be quickly dropped, I hope that your prophecy will be correct. But if the matter is to be got rid of by turning it over to a new Commission or a Convention, I trust that the disposal of it may be long delayed.

There are to my mind many compelling reasons why this long-drawn-out union agitation should cease:

1. Eleven years of persistent effort have developed no plan acceptable to either church. There are thousands of members in the two denominations who would feel grievously afflicted by the adoption of any scheme that has been proposed.

2. If the able men who have wrought energetically in numerous meetings for more than a decade to evolve a satisfactory plan have failed in the undertaking, what good reason is there to believe that others can now do better? Time alone can remove the obstacles that have obstructed the uniting of the two churches. Why not leave the matter to the providence of God for a while?

3. These union negotiations have been expensive. They have cost our church many thousands of dollars and have got us nowhere. True, there are some who think that the spending of money is a thing of little consequence, if it is spent as they wish; but in both State and Church we need to feel that every dollar obtained from the people is a sacred trust that we are obligated to use with the wisest discrimination and utmost care.

4. This agitation has disturbed many people in both communions, creating a spirit of uneasiness and dissatisfaction. It is not conducive to the prosperity of any concern to be always publicly figuring on going out of business. There is an important element of strength in stability. Even so great a Protestant layman as Mr. Gladstone is known to have been profoundly impressed with the solidity and durability of the Roman Catholic Church.

5. This union agitation has been hurtful to the cause of Christian comity between the two denominations. When it began a Federal Council of Methodism had been established to adjust conflicting interests along the border and elsewhere, each church having an equal number of representatives on that tribunal. This Council had been endorsed by both General Conferences, and bade fair ultimately to render a noble service. But the dream of organic union destroyed it, permitting it to pass out of existence. And now we have a Northern bishop telling the Southern Methodists of Florida that he no more minds erecting a house of worship alongside one of the Methodist Church, South, than he does alongside a chapel of any other denomination.

6. The grounds upon which the Northern General Conference rejected the plan submitted by the Joint Commission furnish no reasonable hope of the two churches getting together, unless Southern Methodists are willing to surrender practically everything and enter an obliterating form of organic union. Though the suggested Regional Conferences were whittled down to a mere semblance of what they were in the original Oklahoma City Plan, the Northerners yet balked at them, accounting them one of the chief objections to the scheme because there was about them a faint odor of local self-government for the different areas. And knowing how Southern Methodists had felt concerning the Negro's place in the proposed reorganized church, the Northern legislators flew squarely in their faces and elected two full-fledged Negro bishops—a thing that they had never done before, this action, too, coming after all the talk of their Commissioners about meeting the Southern Church half-way in the effort to fix the status of the Negro in the new organization. The fact that these two bishops were elected on a different ballot from the others is a matter of small significance, for legally they have all the rights and powers that any other bishop has in the Methodist Episcopal Church. But some of our ardent Southern unionists a few months ago, when they were trying to put through the merger movement, presumed to state in the public prints that the position of the Negroes in the Northern Church differed in nowise from that of a considerable number of Negroes in our own denomination (a contention that was trumped up to meet an exigency and which was without substantial merit), and that, though there is no law to that effect, the colored bishops referred to would never exercise episcopal function for any but Negro members. (Is it not strange that such assurances come invariably from the unionists of the South? We have never seen such a declaration from any Northern Methodist source.)

Certainly the Negroes of the Methodist Episcopal Church do not understand that the sphere of service of their bishops is to be thus restricted. The Editor of the Southwestern Christian Advocate of New Orleans, the official Negro organ of the Church, North, after stating a few months ago that Bishop Jones, a Negro, had just presided over the white bishops in a meeting at Portland, Oregon, commented as follows upon this question: "The colored bishops will preside over white Conferences in the Methodist Church (North), but the time will be long delayed when within that church there will not be individual objectors. This however, cannot be regarded as determining the attitude and spirit of the church. * * * The great heart of the church is right toward the Negro, and in due time Negro bishops will preside over white Conferences. He has presided over the Board of Bishops, he will preside in the General Conference in his turn, and he will preside over Methodist Conferences of any complexion when the time comes."

7. But there is yet another reason why the union negotiations should cease that it is more weighty than any I have yet mentioned, and that is the doctrinal situation in the Northern Church. It is easy to say blandly that the two denominations have the same Articles of Faith in the Book of Discipline. So they have. But it is the working theology of a church that counts, and it cannot be denied that German rationalism is largely in the ascendancy in the Church, North. Its Sunday school literature is streaked with it; it is in its schools and in its courses of study for preachers, and it echoes from its pulpits. It is true that the Southern Methodist Church is drifting rapidly in the same direction, but a storm of protest against this trend seems to be gathering, and there is yet a chance to save our communion from engulfment in this ruinous maelstrom. Union with the Methodist Episcopal Church would utterly destroy that chance. Being twice as large as ours, that denomination would dominate and type everything in the new organization. So if we merge with them, it will be bidding farewell to the faith of our fathers—the faith of the apostles and the martyrs, and the faith that has made the Christian church the wonder and hope of the world. The new organization might continue to grow, but it would be principally a growth in tares, not in wheat. Counterfeit Christianity progresses in numbers and in material possessions in much the same manner as true Christianity. What denomination is outgrowing the Roman Church? The Church of Christ must be built of LIVING stones, vitalized by her risen and reigning Lord and adorned with the beautiful fruits of the indwelling Holy Spirit. There is too much of the spectacular in the religion of our time—too much cataloguing and parading of what we are doing. "We need to get below glitter and show and plant our feet deep down upon solid reality." There is a day coming when "fire will try every man's work, of what sort it is;" and the genuine alone will stand. The important thing is not what we are writing in bulletins and scattering abroad in the land, but what the Recording Angel is writing concerning our deeds and achievements in the shining Book of Life. Soundness is better than bigness, and a single soul who is the Lord's alone is worth more than a multitude who are seeking to serve both God and Baal.

The foregoing are some of the reasons why I hope that our approaching General Conference will let the union agitation come to a stop for a season. But that it will do so, I do not by any means feel certain. Southern Methodists who are against the extinction of their church need to be alert and ready to make their influence felt in every proper way. Nothing that has been proposed would, in my judgment, be so dangerous to the minority body as a Constitutional Convention. The work would still be done largely by Committees, but there would be a pressure behind any plan thus formulated that would be well-nigh irresistible. It would likely be rushed through with a precipitancy that would not make for careful deliberation and the wisest action.

May the Heavenly Father, who has so wonderfully guided our church in the past, be her stay and guardian in this perplexing day of storm and peril!

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Co-Workers: May I earnestly call your attention to some things that need to be done in our Conference in order that we may "Carry On" to a successful finish the wonderful work accomplished so far in the Centenary and ask your hearty co-operation in finishing the task?

How to Collect the Pledges.

It will take persistent, systematic effort to collect the pledges, and the plan is that the pastor and Centenary treasurer select a Collecting Committee (as many as you need), either men or women, or both, have the treasurer make DUPLICATE cards showing the amount subscribed, amount paid, the amount due, then call a meeting of the committee, and let them select the cards they desire to collect from, it being understood that they all are to keep the work up until they have collected the full amount FROM EACH ONE WHOSE CARD THEY HAVE. It will take work like this to get the best results—then, WHY NOT BEGIN NOW?

"Francis Asbury Day."

October 27, 1921, will be the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the landing of Francis Asbury in America. How about celebrating it by collecting all our Centenary pledges that are due for the first three years, or 60 per cent of the amount subscribed by each church? WELL, BEGIN NOW, and prayerfully and persistently work until then—having as YOUR AIM the collection of 60 per cent OF THE PLEDGES DUE BY THAT TIME. This would be a very appropriate way of celebrating the anniversary of the landing of Francis Asbury in America, who contributed so much to making America Methodist, and, through the Centenary, we have the opportunity of making the world Methodist.

What To Do With Money Collected.

Send the money collected to W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Treasurer, Meridian, Miss. If you use a bank, deposit to John E. Edgerton, making duplicate deposit slip, and mail duplicate with name of church, charge, district, on the bottom of the slip to the address given above.

Reports.

Every treasurer should report each month, using the regular blank, always reporting full amount collected from beginning. This will help wonderfully.

Treasurer Books.

EVERY PASTOR is requested to appoint some one to audit the books of the Centenary treasurers on his charge—using the blank enclosed for this purpose—and sending his report to W. D. Hawkins, Conference Centenary Treasurer, Meridian, Miss. THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT.

Tithers on Your Charge.

Enclosed herewith is a list of the names of the Tithers in your charge. There may be more, but the names are not in the files of Dr. J. J. Stowe. If there should be any more, or if you can get more from time to time, please have them sign the "Tithing Cards" and forward to Dr. J. J. Stowe, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn.

List of Pledges: (Watch Out for Cross Mark.)

Some have not sent in a list of the pledges from their church, and it is very important that this be done, for should you misplace the cards or they get burned, I could furnish you with a duplicate list. If there is an "X" opposite the heading, "List of Pledges," it means that I haven't the list of pledges from your church, and in that case, please make a list, giving name and address of each subscriber, and the amount pledged for the five years.

Yours for Service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Centenary Treasurer.

That is a scientific conclusion by an eminent specialist in both geology and archeology. It confirms the "faith of our fathers" as to the "fall" of man as related in Genesis; but it plays the mischief with the evolutionary theory of history which regards the account of the temptation of the first man as a tale told to explain "why snakes crawl," as Dr. Rice asserts. Dr. Rice's theory makes much of the Old Testament mythology, and one effect of the theory is seen in Bishop Mouzon's disparagement of the Old Testament. The same reasoning applied to the New Testament will make mythology of that. Webster defines a myth, as

The Home Circle

BESSIE AND FANNIE.

Bessie was a little, fat, blue-eyed, curly-headed girl.

Fannie was a little black-hoofed, brown-legged lamb. Fannie's mother was very queer. She had two babies and wanted only one, and that one wasn't Fannie. She pushed Fannie about with her head and allowed her no milk.

Poor Fannie grew weak and thin. Then Bessie found her and took her to be her very own baby. She fed her on cow's milk.

Do you wonder how she did it? Bessie lived miles from a store where she could get a feeding bottle, and, as I said, Fannie was weak and thin.

She could not drink by putting her nose into the milk; no, the milk must be put into her mouth. A spoon was too shallow and hard, so Bessie took a goose quill and wrapped it with soft cloth, until it fit the mouth of a bottle. This was not exactly sanitary, and a new one had to be made every few days, but Fannie loved it just the same and she loved Bessie, too, for you know she was Bessie's baby now, her own little lamb.

Bessie would put her biggest doll's dress on Fannie and a little hood on her head and she would lie quiet for a long while, if Bessie laid her in the warm sunshine.

Now as the days grew warmer, Fannie grew larger, so well did Bessie care for her.

The bottle and wrapped goose quill were too slow a way for Fannie to get her milk. She stuck her little brown nose in a pan of milk and drank greedily, wiggling her woolly tail, the way lambs do when they are drinking milk.

She could eat corn and grass. Her body was cream-colored, soft and woolly, but her legs were still brown and her hoofs black, and to see Fannie run and jump along with her legs stiff was great fun.

She outgrew the doll's dress and she was so heavy Bessie could not carry her. She called her her "dog," because she followed her about everywhere.

Bessie thought Fannie must be taught to draw a little wagon. So she made one from four small wheels and a box. Now a wagon must have shafts for one dog, or one lamb, to be hitched to it, and these Bessie forgot to make. When Fannie was hitched to this wagon with carpet rags and strings it ran against her heels and scared her! My! How she ran, around and around the house, the wagon bumping her hind legs, but still she ran and ran until she broke the wagon all to smithereens.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

THE PAGE BOYS OF THE SENATE.

By Paul Creighton.

One will not find in any occupation upon which boys enter more alert lads than those who serve as pages in the United States Senate. It would be useless for a dull, grouchy boy to apply for the position of page in either of our houses of Congress. Only good-natured, polite, keenly alert, and always tidy boys can give satisfaction in this position. Naturally, it is a position eagerly sought. This is partly by reason of the fact that the salary is larger than such young boys could earn elsewhere and the environment in which the boy works is very interesting and highly educational. Moreover, it is a position in which the boys have a great deal of that which every normal boy likes—fun. Fun runs high when the Senate is not in session and the boys have the great rooms in which the Senate meets all to themselves.

There is a strong line of demarcation between the play and the work of a Senate page. He must "attend strictly to business" once the Senate is in session. His nimble feet are kept flying hither and thither at the beck of the senators he serves. If the boy is wise enough to keep his eyes and his ears open, he can acquire information that may serve him well in the years to come if he enters the world of politics. Not infrequently the congressmen take a special interest in some unusually promising boy, and he is helped toward an upward career.

When Charles Dickens was in our country and was a visitor to the Senate, he was much interested in the page boys he saw there, and he referred to them as "the rushing, dancing, little pucks of pages." Many jokes have been made about the dawdling of the messenger boys of today. Now the pages of the Senate are really messenger boys, but it is doubtful if one of them was ever seen dawdling when he should have been "up and coming."

What do they have to do? One who knows all about their duties answers this question for us by saying:

"The duties of a page to-day are substantially the same as were required at the beginning of the Government. The work is light, and therefore agreeable. At nine o'clock in the morning the boys report for duty. Upon the desk of each senator the pages arrange the files of the Congressional Record, also the bills and reports on the desk of each senator to whom such bills and reports have been officially assigned. The work must be done by noon, when the Senate convenes and the serious business of the day begins. Then comes the messenger work. The pages do not walk when on duty. They run, they skip, they try to fly."

We are told that every day, just before the Senate convenes, the page boys form a circle around the inner circle of the front row of desks, with their backs to those desks, all of them facing the platform of the Vice President of the United States. There they remain during the invocation of the chaplain. At the conclusion of the prayer they go at once to the carpeted lower steps on each side of the Vice President's dais, all ready to answer the beck and call of the senators.

The page boys dress alike. They wear knee trousers, natty little coats, black silk stockings, and either white or black shoes. If the shoes are black they must be polished to the last degree. A page boy is apt to acquire habits of extreme neatness in dress.

Nothing is more amusing or shows to a greater extent the mental alertness of the page boys than when they are "playing Congress." This they sometimes do when they have the Senate chamber to themselves. Then one of the boys will take the chair of the Vice President, while the other boys take the seats of the different senators. Then follows a merry burlesque on the regular sessions of the Senate. The way in which some of the clever lads mimic the real senators is very amusing. They loudly demand that this or that be "stricken from the records," and indignantly request that "the gentleman from Iowa," or some other State, "explain himself." The boy "Vice President" hammers violently for order, and then this session of the "Senate" may end almost in a riot.

The writer does not know the salary of the pages at this time, but before the war it was seventy-five dollars a month. No doubt it is larger now. Of course the boys receive a good many "tips," more's the pity—because the "tip" system is never to be commended. A number of men of national reputation and achievement were once pages in our Congress.

The page boys of the two houses of Congress form baseball clubs, and never were more spirited ball games played on the diamond. Every page boy is apt to be a good deal of a baseball "fan." No one knows every nook and corner of the Capitol better than the page. He can run instantly to any place to which he is told to go. He knows the name of every senator and every foreign diplomat, and is full of interesting information. He secures his appointment through some senator, and usually holds his position until he is too old for it. Then he is apt to retire reluctantly, but he is always a much wiser boy when he leaves the Senate chamber than he was when he entered it.—Zion's Herald.

A LITTLE VISIT TO ALEXANDRIA, LA.

A meeting of the presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference with Bishop W. F. McMurry at Alexandria, La., last week was the occasion of a delightful visit to that fine little city in almost the geographical center of the State. Convenient railroad schedules make it possible to spend the night on the train and the day in Alexandria, the only inconvenience connected with the arrangement being the high Pullman rates. After the Pullman Company has collected its ample fee, the railroad company has received its surcharge of fifty per cent of the Pullman charge, and the Government its war tax of eight per cent, the traveler is inclined to feel that sleep is rather an expensive luxury.

What business the Bishop and the elders transacted among themselves—if any—we have no means of knowing. It is probable that they reviewed the work of the Conference for the year fast drawing to a close, and it is possible that certain tentative suggestions were made concerning work to be done when the Annual Conference assembles in Alexandria on November 9. Our business there, upon invitation, was to speak a word in the interest of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Representatives of the Centenary Movement, of the Educational Commission, of the Sunday School Board, of the Memorial Home, and perhaps other causes were likewise in attendance and all were given a sympathetic hearing.

On Wednesday evening, preceding the meeting on Thursday, a banquet was given the Bishop and the elders by local Methodists, the banquet being served at the Hotel Bentley. We did not reach the city until Thursday morning, hence were not present on that delightful occasion; we heard many expressions that indicated that it was a very happy event, however, and the local paper the next day devoted a good deal of space to an account of the proceedings. Judge H. H. White presided as toastmaster, and toasts were responded to by Dr. R. H. Wynn, Rev. A. S. Lutz, Mr. W. S. Holmes, Rev. Alonzo Early, Mr. H. T. Miller, Mrs.

T. A. Holloman, Rev. J. G. Snelling, Mr. T. W. Holloman and Bishop McMurry. All the addresses were highly commendable, the one by Mr. Holloman attracting special interest because in it he suggested the advisability of making Alexandria the Headquarters of Methodism in the State. The Roman Catholics have made it their cathedral town, the Baptists have established their college there, and the speaker said there are many good reasons why the Methodists should select it as the center for their Conference-wide activities. The specific suggestion was that the offices of all the Conference field secretaries be established in Alexandria, which would result in the saving of a considerable amount of money each year on traveling expenses because of the convenient location of the city with reference to all parts of the Conference territory. The suggestion met with approval, and it was announced that it would be brought before the Conference for ratification.

We had the privilege of being a fellow-guest for dinner with Bishop McMurry at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Holloman. Measured solely by gastronomic ability, we claim henceforth a place in the episcopal class—at least we can hold our own with the distinguished gentleman with whom we were seated. It is only fair to say, however, that the dinner itself was such as would tempt even an ascetic to prodigious feats as a trencherman. The pleasure of the visit in the home was enhanced by the happy prattle of little Miss Holloman.

So far, so good; but what shall we say of the experiences of Thursday afternoon? Beguiled by an invitation from Mr. Holloman to investigate the mysteries of golf at the Country Club, and accompanied by Mr. Frank White, another princely gentleman whose kindly bearing gave no hint of the dark designs he must have harbored in his mind, about four o'clock we went out to the beautiful golf links connected with the Country Club. Let us say here that only once or twice before do we remember even to have held a golf club in our hands; and never once had we essayed to hit the insignificant ball with said club. Innocently enough we allowed ourselves to be garbed in the conventional golf costume, and have placed in our hands the implements of the game, profession, business, or whatever it is. A caddy was provided for our exclusive use, we were given preliminary instructions about "stance," "address," "driver," "brassie," "iron," "putter," etc., one of those insignificant balls was placed on a little elevation of damp sand and we were told to take the "driver" and knock that ball as near to a hole, marked by a small flag a half-mile or so away, as we could. Inwardly chuckling over the ease with which we would drive that ball so far that it would take us the rest of the afternoon to find it, we made a few preliminary swings—as we had seen other expert golfers do—and let go! As we did, we felt a slight sting on the left wrist. Thinking nothing of that, however, we turned our eyes toward the hole at which we aimed, to see how far beyond it the ball would land. We are not perfectly sure, but, as we were steadfastly gazing into the distance, wondering if the ball could have gone even further than we thought, we think we heard a kind of impudent snicker at our feet. We glanced down—and there was that pesky ball exactly where we had placed it at first! The only explanation of such a phenomenon we can think of, is that that ball saw what was coming, became afraid that it would be smashed into smithereens, and, as the club approached, hopped lightly down from the sand and as lightly hopped back again before we could detect it at its nefarious tricks. We glanced quickly at Mr. Holloman and Mr. White, thinking perhaps they would confirm our suspicion that the ball had played us a mean trick; but those gentlemen, with their backs turned to us, seemed to be immensely amused at something that must have happened over toward the road—anyway, they were looking in that direction and their sides were shaking with laughter. They apparently were greatly surprised when we told them what had happened, but they said it was nothing—such things frequently occurred.

But we got sweeter change on that ball. We knocked it off its little sand tramp, we hit it with the driver, the brassie, the irons, the putter and with everything else the little nuisance is from the bag he was carrying. It never got an English proclivities; when we hit it with all our might it would roll only a few feet. I've wanted it to go on the smooth grass, it would sail in the rough; if we tried to knock it straight ahead, it would curve far to the right or the left. But we got even with it. We finally put it into every one of the nine holes on the course, and when we returned it to its owner it was as sleek and fat as a ham, looking a little ball as we ever laid eyes on.

As we think it over, we are convinced that that sting we felt on the left wrist was the bite of a golf bug, and we are afraid our whole system has become infected with the virus. The wrist itself became very sore that night so that it was with difficulty that we could sleep on our return to New Orleans, there were increasing signs of infection of some kind—pains all over the body but especially in the muscles of the shoulders, back and abdomen. The pain at times was excruciating, so much so that we felt forced to resort to the use of emollients to relieve our suffering. We did not see the bug that bit us, but we intend to go to the links again soon to see if we can find and capture a specimen. In the meantime, we have bought and are reading a little book, "How To Play Golf," which we hope will throw some light on the happenings at Alexandria. A query: Is it possible that Mr. Holloman and Mr. White took that bug with them and turned it loose on us when we were not looking?)

ARTICLES CONCERNING DR. RICE'S BOOK.

We still have in hand several articles dealing with the book by Dr. John A. Rice, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day" which we will publish in due time. After these appear we feel that our readers will agree with us that sufficient space has been given to this particular subject, at least for the present.

THE CENTENARY COLLECTIONS.

We trust all our readers caught the significance of the statement on page 5 of last week's Advocate under the caption, "Will The Advance Continue?" In a little over two years there have been great gains in the work of the church at home and abroad, made possible by the Centenary gifts. During that time, one hundred and thirty missionaries have been sent to our foreign fields, and the advances in those fields have far surpassed any previous record.

In the home field nearly $1,000,000 has been made available to supplement the salaries of pastors on weak charges, and all our home mission operations have been greatly strengthened.

This advance has been made possible by the payment of $11,500,000 on the pledges that were made during the Centenary campaign. But when we learn that the amount due on those pledges was $22,150,000, leaving nearly $11,000,000 unpaid at this time, we can but wonder what the development in our work would have been if all these pledges had been paid in full to date. It is to be earnestly hoped that those who have not yet paid their pledges will do their utmost to meet those obligations during the month of September, when a great effort should be made to bring these payments up to date.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, of Greensburg, La., was in the city last week and honored the Advocate office with a call on Wednesday.

Bishop W. F. McMurry will meet with the presiding elders of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences at Jackson, Miss., on September 21.

Rev. J. L. Carter, our pastor at Wesson, Miss., reports that he has just closed the final revival meeting on his charge, and that all the churches have been greatly strengthened.

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., of Haynesville, La., writes: "We are getting everything ready for our new brick church—hope to let the contract by October 1."

The revival meeting at First Church, Laurel, Miss., began on September 4. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis, and the singing was directed by Mr. W. J. Murdock.

Mr. J. C. Bell, of Trenton, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "The paper is worth many times what it costs." We are glad to have that expression from so loyal a Methodist.

A revival meeting was announced to begin last Sunday at Ackerman, Miss., the pastor, Rev. W. L. Stormont, being assisted by Rev. L. H. Estes, of Memphis, Tenn., and Rev. C. T. Floyd, of Byhalla, Miss.

An appeal in behalf of the starving millions of Russia has been issued by the American Relief for Russian Women and Children, 1400 Westminister Building, Chicago, Ill. Miss Jane Addams is chairman of the committee.

Announcement has been made that Dr. J. L. Cuninggim, of the chair of Religious Education, Southern Methodist University, has been elected president of Scarritt Bible and Training School, to succeed Dr. E. F. Cook, who is now connected with the Christian Education Movement.

Bishop W. F. McMurry was a guest at the Kiwanis Club luncheon at Alexandria, La., on Wednesday of last week, at which he made an address that we heard most highly commended. He was elected to honorary membership in the Alexandria Kiwanis Club.

Rev. D. H. Crowson, of the North Mississippi Conference, has accepted a position in the Calhoun County Agricultural High School, located at Derma, Miss., and has taken up his work at that place, according to a news item in the secular press.

Hon. W. G. Evans, a prominent citizen of Gulfport, Miss., and for many years an active member of the Methodist church at that place, passed away on September 2. He is survived by his wife and five children, to whom the Advocate extends sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

Last week we inadvertently stated that among the improvements recently made on our church at Ellisville, Miss., was the repainting of the building. We understand that this improvement is being contemplated, but has not yet been undertaken.

The tenth annual session of the Seashore Camp Ground School began on Wednesday, September 7. Addresses at the opening were delivered by Hon. J. R. Abels, Dr. W. T. Bolton, Rev. W. W. Moore, and Dr. H. F. Tolle. Students were present from all parts of the country. Rev. H. W. Van Hook is president of the school.

A Standard City Union Efficiency Institute of the Epworth League will be held in Shreveport and in New Orleans next month, under the direction of Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, the State field worker of the League. The Shreveport meeting will be October 10-14, and the New Orleans meeting will be October 17-21.

A good meeting was recently held at Liberty Chapel, on the McCool charge, North Mississippi Conference, in which the pastor, Rev. P. R. McDougal, was assisted by his presiding elder, Rev. A. T. McIlwain. There were thirty-three additions to the membership of the church, and the whole community was greatly revived.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, formerly our pastor at Rich-ton, Miss., has accepted an appointment as field representative in the Mississippi Conference of the Memorial Home, New Orleans, and has entered upon that work, making Hattiesburg his headquarters. Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, of Rector, Ark., has been appointed pastor at Richton.

Many of our pastors have been in demand for addresses at the opening of the schools for the present session. Among them we have noticed the names of Rev. W. L. Stormont, at Ackerman, Miss.; Rev. T. H. Dorsey, at Hamilton, Miss.; Rev. T. M. Brownlee, at Starkville, Miss.; Rev. Guy Ray, at Mashulaville, Miss.

In a letter which reached Nashville on September 1, Dr. O. E. Goddard states that he has been in the greatest revival of his life during his stay in Czecho-Slovakia. The largest theatre in Prague, seating 3,000 people, was rented, and at many of the services the building was crowded. Dr. Goddard sailed from Liverpool for America on September 1.

The editor greatly enjoyed a call from Dr. John B. Howell, of Canton, Miss., on Monday of this week. His visit brought back many happy memories of the days when we were students together at Millsaps College. He and his wife are in the city to be with their young son, who underwent a serious operation at the Presbyterian Hospital last week and who is now making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

An "all-church" social was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Battle and Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes at the Church Annex, Lake Charles, La., on Tuesday evening, September 13. We understand that Brother Holmes was called upon to verify his statement that he walked about in snow while on his vacation in Colorado in August. We greatly appreciate an invitation to be present on that occasion, and regret that we could not accept.

Just before going to press, we received the following note from Rev. W. J. Newsom, of Clinton, La.: "Mrs. Louisa M. Lipscomb, mother of Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of the Louisiana Conference, passed away on September 7. She was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a devoted Christian mother. A memoir will be furnished later." We feel the deepest sympathy for our brother and all the sorrowing loved ones and friends in their bereavement.

From a personal letter from Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker, written from Karuizawa, Japan, we learn that Dr. Parker will be in the Orient until about Christmas; he will not, therefore, be able to answer to his name at the roll call of the Louisiana Annual Conference in November—the first time he will have failed to do so since he became a member of the body. This will cause keen regret to his brethren, who love and honor him both for his own and his work's sake. We shall have the privilege of publishing some exceedingly interesting travel letters from the skilled pen of Dr. Parker.

According to the Bunkie Record, Sunday, September 4, was a great day in the Methodist church at Bunkie, La. Services were held morning, afternoon, and evening, with "dinner on the ground," and the attendance was unusually large. A feature of the day was the meeting in the afternoon of the young people, the Bunkie Epworth League entertaining the Leagues from Alexandria, Bayhills and Evergreen. A "model program" was carried out by the Alexandria Leaguers, and the whole service was interesting and inspiring. The Record makes special mention of the sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. George Fox, at the 11 o'clock hour.

The following from Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of San Antonio, Tex., received on Monday of this week, gives a vivid side-light upon the recent tragic happening in that city: "San Antonio has just had a cloudburst and flood—about 100 drowned and millions in property lost. All Methodist churches standing except Travis Park Tabernacle, which is completely ruined, at an estimated loss of $20,000. The Red Cross, Boy Scouts, and other relief agencies are working overtime. I toiled all night in the water, rescuing the drowning. I now have a troop of 40 Boy Scouts from my church feeding the hungry and housing the homeless. Pray for us."

More than a year ago, following a political campaign in Texas, two libel suits for $150,000 each were filed against Rev. Bob Shuler, our pastor at Los Angeles, California, then stationed in Texas. The first was tried last January and Brother Shuler won the suit, after making a personal defense and argument. The suit was appealed. On September 1 the second suit was dismissed at the cost of the plaintiff and the first suit withdrawn from the Supreme Court. This makes four libel suits that have been brought against this pastor for a sum total of over a half million dollars as a result of his interest in civic and moral questions, but not a cent of judgment has ever been obtained and the court docket is now clear so far as Brother Shuler is concerned.

A delightful incident in connection with our new church enterprise in Algiers, Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, was the presentation of a fine bell on Sunday, September 4, by the Ship Carpenters' and Joiners' Protective Association, Mr. A. W. Kulp, one of the officers of the organization, being especially active in the movement.

The New Orleans District Sunday School Meeting at First Church last Sunday afternoon was well attended. The program was interesting and profitable. Plans were formulated for holding a District Standard Training School early next year. Rev. Alonzo Early, Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, was present and added largely to the interest of the meeting.

The following interesting item appeared in the Winston County Journal, published at Louisville, Miss., in its issue of September 5: "Will Dickerson brought to our office this week two copies of the New Orleans Christian Advocate dated July 5, 1856, and July 4, 1857. These papers were found in an old house that was torn down on Mr. Brad Triplett's place in Noxubee County recently. They are in good state of preservation except injured by rats in several places. The Advocate at that time was a seven column folio of wide measure, and typographically almost as good as it is to-day. One local item we notice is the marriage of David Carter to Miss Perry in Kemper County, by R. Y. Rew, May 11, 1856. Another item was the strenuous effort being put forth to raise $80,000 to erect a large Methodist church in the city of Washington, showing that it was a much bigger job then to raise funds from throughout the nation than it is now in the ordinary city to erect a church."

SALEM CAMP MEETING.

Dear Brother Carley: Please announce through the New Orleans Christian Advocate that the seventy-ninth session of the Salem Camp Meeting, Americus charge, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, will begin Wednesday, October 5, and run through the second Sunday, October 9.

Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, and Rev. J. W. Thompson, popular pastor of Lucedale, will do the preaching.

Everybody cordially invited.

Yours for Him,

V. R. LANDRUM, P. C.

If there be no fruit, then is everything a failure. The garden itself is a garden for this. For this it was bought and walled about; for this it is dug and dressed. The gardener works and watches for this. For this the seed was sown, the tree was planted; for this, weeding and pruning and everything else has been done. For this the rains have fallen, and for this the sun has shone. The seasons have succeeded each other for this. For this, all the life of the tree has been at work; roots have grasped the earth; leaves have drunk the dew; the sap has crept up; and blossom and bud have all been for fruit. If there be no fruit, then everything is a failure—everything.—Mark Guy Pearse.

The subject of this sketch, Brother ALBERT FRANKLIN McLENDON, was born March 2, 1835, and died June 9, 1921. He was married to Deborah Ann Davis, September 7, 1865. To this union were born ten children, nine of whom are living to join their mother in mourning their loss. One preceded him to the unknown just a few weeks. Brother McLendon spent the early part of his life near Pascagoula, Miss., where his father took an active part in the Methodist Church. He was converted in a revival during the Civil War and joined the M. E. Church South, and just as he was then giving his life for what he understood to be right he dedicated the remainder of his life to the church of his choice. It could be well said he was first a Christian and next a Methodist. For a long time it was through his efforts that his church, Hopewell, was kept alive. It gave him much joy in his last days to see his children take a leading part in the church work he had cherished so long. H. A. Wood and D. C. Garvin, the Methodist and Baptist pastors of Quitman, held the funeral service and his body was laid to rest in the family cemetery, June 11, 1921, while many relatives and friends were present giving their last tribute of love.

May the memories of this typical southern gentleman and Christian guide our feet in the path of right.

Hill Methodist church was erected and largely supported by this family. One of the girls, Ellen Josephine, who was born January 9, 1855, joined the Methodist Church when seven years of age, and devoted her young life to the cause of the church. She was married to J. Q. Skipper, December 24, 1877, the rites being solemnized by J. W. McLaurin. Five boys were born to them, of whom two are living—Virgil and Samuel. As a wife and mother she embodied the noblest qualities; no sacrifice was too great for her to make in behalf of her children. She was one of the most practical, common-sense Christians I have known. She went to Heaven June 30, 1921, and on July 1, at Spring Hill Church, her body was laid to rest and sleeps by the side of many of God's noblest people. The pastor was assisted by Rev. T. H. King. She approached death with the same faith that characterized her life; just a few hours before she died she sang alone, "God's Children are Gathering Home." We mourn "not as those who have no hope," for we know that with her all is well. May they be an unbroken family in Heaven.

Her Pastor,

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. SAPHRONIA TAYLOR EDDINS, was born near Coldwater, Miss., October 20, 1867, and died at her home near Rich, Miss., on August 27, 1921. She was the daughter of D. M. and Lucy Wright Taylor, was married to A. T. Eddins Dec. 16, 1886. Soon after their marriage they moved from Coldwater to the home in which she died. Sister Eddins has been closely identified with the social and religious life of her community all these years and the numerous friends and beautiful floral offerings at her funeral bore testimony to the esteem in which she was held. Three sisters and three brothers survive her and her husband and four of her six children. Louis R. and Thos. Jessie, with Chloie Elizabeth, live in the home with the aged father, and Mrs. Mary Irene Hopps resides in West Helena, Ark. Mrs. Eddins was a devout member of the Methodist Church, having professed faith in Christ and united with the church at the age of fifteen. She was happy in the consciousness of her acceptance with God and felt the love of God abiding in her soul. Hers was a genial disposition and self-sacrificing. She will be missed in the home where her last days were spent almost entirely since her health failed. May the sustaining grace of God be given without stint to the lonely husband who feels most keenly the loss and the children who loved her so dearly.

Lula, Miss.

When the spirit of Mrs. PINKNEY PALMER REES winged its flight from this world a great sufferer was released, but many hearts were made sad because of the separation. Mrs. Rees was born November 2, 1857, and died June 8, 1921. The funeral service was conducted from the residence by her pastor, Rev. J. W. Ward, after which the remains were conveyed by loving hands to the Booneville cemetery and laid to rest. She was happily married to Hardy W. Rees in the Methodist church at Rienzi, June 28, 1875, Rev. P. R. Hoyle performing the ceremony. Sister Rees joined the Methodist Church at Rienzi in October, 1881. Her life was largely spent in Prentiss and Alcorn Counties, where she made many friends who were devoted to her. It was my privilege to be her pastor four years, where I learned to love her devotedly for her many Christian virtues. She was an invalid seven years, but bore her suffering with a beautiful Christian fortitude. Hers was a type of religion all too scarce. She prayed without ceasing, rejoiced in tribulation, and in everything gave thanks. Her loving devotion to her faithful and loving husband and son, who subordinated business and all else for her comfort, was beautiful. "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." None miss her more to-day than the lonely husband and manly son who live together in the house made desolate by her going away, but they have the consolations of God's grace and are sustained by the precious memory of her splendid life. May the riches of His grace abound unto them and all the bereaved ones, and some sweet day may there be a happy reunion in heaven with mother and all the loved ones.

RESOLUTIONS.

Today our hearts are bowed in deepest sorrow over the going away of our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. C. W. Smith. God's call is heaven's gain and our loss; and to his divine will we must be submissive and also grateful for one who labored among us so earnestly and faithfully. Truly, "She hath done what she could," for she was always ready and happy to assist us in anything we undertook for the advancement of the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

We are thankful that in the providence of an always good, kind Heavenly Father, Sister Smith lived among us, and in her characteristic way gave expression of a strong and simple faith in a risen and glorified Christ. Let us as individual members of this excellent body emulate her character. May it be a beacon light to us when the storms of life seem to gather and clouds darken our pathway.

Therefore be it resolved: That we spread these resolutions on the hooks of our society; that we send a copy to her beloved husband and family, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Respectfully,

MRS. ADIE GILLILAND,

MRS. R. A. JONES,

Mrs. J. J. McLeod.

EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTES,
SEPTEMBER 20-30.

Plans for the holding of a chain of Epworth League Institutes, September 20 to 30, throughout the territory of the North Mississippi Conference, have been completed. Each of the seven districts has a Secretary, appointed by the President of the Epworth League Conference. Miss Ina Brown, of Nashville, with representatives of the Leaguers from the territory, will be present for a one-day institute, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on the day and at the places named in the following schedule: Starkville, Columbus District, Tuesday, Sept. 20; Pontotoc, Aberdeen District, Thursday, Sept. 22; Oxford, Grenada District, Friday, Sept. 23; Greenwood, Greenwood District, Monday, Sept. 26; Clarksdale, Greenville District, Tuesday, Sept. 27; Sardis, Sardis District, Wednesday, Sept. 28; Corinth, Corinth District, Friday, Sept. 30.

Every Epworth League in North Mississippi is requested to send representatives to the meeting nearest, or most convenient to it. Every pastor is a member of his district institute, unless he is nearer or more convenient to some other; also every Young Peoples' Society, and a representative from among the young people of each charge and church is expected to be present. It is hoped that large numbers of our young people and young peoples' leaders will gather for this one-day meeting in each of the seven districts named.

A NOTE FROM REV. A. W. O'BRYANT.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am writing you a few lines to let the people know that our work in Arkansas has come to a close and that within a few days we will again be back in Mississippi. We go to Richton to take the place of Brother Ormond, who goes to New Orleans to take charge of the Memorial Home.

We have had a very pleasant pastorate at First Church, Rector, and have enjoyed the hospitality of the good people, who have ministered to our wants in grand style. It is with a degree of regret that we leave, but health conditions make it necessary for us to go. While it is with a degree of sadness that we leave, it is with joy that we are able to return to the Mississippi Conference, and the McCOOL CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: Our third quarterly conference convened on August 27. Our much-loved and efficient presiding elder, the Rev. A. T. McIlwain, was at his best. We had good reports, the best made during the year, both spiritually and financially. Our people are looking up, and lifting up.

From our quarterly conference, we continued revival services for Chapple Hill, our presiding elder doing the preaching; and we must say, as he brought message after message, wonderful they were. God poured out His Spirit upon the people, and a revival of the old-time style and the old-time religion was the happy result. The church was greatly revived and many souls saved. There were 35 additions to our church, 33 on profession of faith, and the entire church community felt the spiritual atmosphere.

As our busy presiding elder bade us good-by for other fields of labor, we could but drop on our knees and thank God for the benediction his coming to Chapple Hill brought. We are hoping and praying that we can say, "Everything in full, Bishop." Pray for us. D. R. McDOUGAL, P. C.

DEATH OF MRS. J. E. THOMAS.

On Thursday evening, August 18, this good woman passed to her heavenly reward. She was spending the summer at Monteagle and was feeling better than usual. She had not been real stout since the death of her husband at Aberdeen two years ago. She and her stepdaughter, Miss Bessie Thomas, were spending the summer together at Monteagle. She had been to the auditorium for the evening's program and retired to her room at the usual hour. She fell asleep and awoke in the better land.

Her body was brought back to Greenville for interment. Mrs. Thomas was best known throughout North Mississippi as the wife of Rev. J. E. Thomas. She was a most useful woman, and her good name and the deeds which she did cannot be forgotten. She is survived by two sons, one of whom resides in California, and the other, Dr. D. C. Montgomery, is a member of the Board of Stewards in our church in Greenville.

DODSON WOULD STOP SALE OF CALOMEL

Says Calomel is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place. "Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 18.

Lesson Topic: Self-Denial For The Sake of Others.

Scripture Lesson: I Corinthians 10:23-33; 3:16-17.

Golden Text: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." I Cor. 10:31.

Home Readings: Monday, The Law of Liberty, I Cor. 10:23-33; Tuesday, Abstinence for the Sake of Others, I Cor. 8:1-13; Wednesday, An Ancient Evil, Isaiah 28:1-8; Thursday, The Fox Described, Psalm 10: 1-12; Friday, Victory Assured, Psalm 46:1-11; Saturday, For the Gospel's Sake, I Cor. 9: 19-27; Sunday, God's Goodness, Psalm 65:1-13.

Teaching Points.

1. Paul draws a distinction between what is lawful and what is expedient. It is best not to do some things for doing which we could not properly be condemned.
2. The principle that ought to govern our actions is the principle of brotherly love—doing nothing that would cause a brother to offend.
3. It is a helpful suggestion to remember that a matter of principle should not be allowed to degenerate into a mere question of casuistry.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The last Sunday in August was spent on the Fannin charge, at Drake's Chapel. We had a good meeting. Organized a Cradle Roll and raised money to get the material. I trust that this will be a blessing and inspiration to the community.

During September 1-5, I had the pleasure of being with Rev. R. G. Williams on the Escatawpa charge. We were at Orange Grove Thursday. This loyal band are doing real good work. They agreed to organize a Cradle Roll and to get the proper literature for the Primary, take an offering for the Sunday School Day, and to support the Orphans' Home.

Friday night we were at Escatawpa. They agreed to put on a survey of the community in a campaign for new members, to organize a Teacher Training class, to have a teacher spend a few days with them later. They agreed to adopt the program of work both for the Sunday school and for the Bible class, which filled out its application blank for a charter.

Saturday morning we were at Cass-

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is evident that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

well's Springs. We had a good congregation and we organized a Cradle Roll and got the promise that they would order the proper literature for the Beginners. They promised that they would support the Orphans' Home with a collection, and try and help enforce the Sabbath laws.

Saturday night and Sunday were spent at Big Point. They agreed to get the graded literature for the Beginners at least, to help the children to tithe and to support the church as they ought, to put on a Sabbath Observance Campaign, to meet with the officers and teachers and plan the work of the school, to support the Orphans' Home, and work on the enrollment campaign. Brother Williams is in high favor with his people and the work is looking up.

Please observe Sunday School Day and send the offering in. The Board will appreciate it more than words.

Do you take the Church School? It is the only Protestant magazine dealing with religious education.

Do you get the Methodist Superintendent and His Helpers? 25c a year. It is worth much more.

The following is the standing of districts on percentage of schools that have observed Sunday School Day this year and last:

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The preachers have witnessed the saving grace of Jesus Christ to a great degree this summer. Hundreds have been added to the church. The meetings are over, but the work of evangelizing has scarcely begun. We should add thousands to our Sunday schools during this month and intensify our soul-saving work, adding hundreds to our short list of soul-winners.

No superintendent should be at ease until he has as many in his Sunday school as there are members of the church. Observe Rally Day, Promotion Day, put on a campaign for new members the last week of the month. Get them in, and by all means give them something when you do get them.

No need to sit still and complain about "higher criticism," "modernism," and the like, in our colleges and other high places. Meet all this stuff with a Spirit-filled life, meet it with more Bible study, prayer, and hard work. This is no new thing they are palming off as scholarship. God is able to confound the mighty, he is able to deliver us. Revolutions do not begin at the top of an organization. God uses the humble, the lowly, often the unlearned to put to naught the proud. Begin where you are, you are not alone; others are busy at the same task. God will help us save the people.

Begin to apply saving grace to the child, the little child, before he is able to resist holy impressions. By all means use the graded lessons for beginners. The stories in these lessons bring the heavenly Father very near the child, they make him realize his tender love and care. For the sake of the child do not attempt to use the Olivet Picture card. That device was made when we knew little or nothing about making religious impressions upon the heart of the child. How long shall the children cry for bread and we give them a stone?

There are eighteen in the class for training at Vardaman. Four of the churches on the circuit are represented in the class. The text being used is Life in the Making. It is too early to predict the number that will take the examination. They all say they are learning some things they never knew before. We are planting seed that must produce fruit some day.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting was held at the Camp Ground, 35 miles northeast of Baton Rouge, from August 11 to 21. This is one of the largest and about the only camp ground that is maintained in the State of Louisiana which is governed by the M. E. Church, South. These grounds are supervised by an Association composed of Clinton charge, Greensburg charge, Olive Branch charge and Pine Bluff charge. E. O. Townsend, of Oak-nolia, has been the president for a number of years, but at his own request was retired and D. H. Harvell, of Harvell's Mills, was elected to succeed him. H. C. Lipscomb is the secretary-treasurer and has filled this office very efficiently for a number of years, and was re-elected. It is altogether probable that 2000 people visited the camp grounds during its recent session, as over 1200 tickets were sold, all under 12 being admitted free.

The presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Rev. J. W. Lee, was asked to have full charge of the services during the camp meeting. Brother Lee was present and preached a number of times during the meeting. His assistance was appreciated very much by the Camp Meeting Association. Rev. W. R. Harvell, of Rayville, was the regular preacher for the 11 o'clock and 8 o'clock services. Brother Harvell did some very fine evangelistic preaching during the whole camp meeting and the results will show this to be true. He was converted at this camp ground when a young man 30 years ago, and he frequently referred to his own life previous to his conversion and always with good effect. As Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. Alonzo Early had charge of the morning services at 9 o'clock, at which time he presented Bible subjects and some work on Sunday school methods. J. B. Grambling, Epworth League Field Worker, visited the camp ground and presented the work of the Epworth League. Miss Monita Goldsby, District Secretary for the Baton Rouge District for Epworth Leagues, remained on the camp grounds during its sessions and from time to time held helpful meetings with the young people. Dr. A. W. Turner, of the Anti-Saloon League, was present a couple of days and participated in its services, giving a lecture on prohibition enforcement at one time and preaching at another time. Rev. J. E. Selfe, of Epworth Church, New Orleans, had charge of the singing and delighted his audiences with his solos and in leading the choruses.

This camp ground is the property of the church and furnishes a splendid place for district meetings and should be utilized.

REORTER.

FROM HUNTER'S CHAPEL.

A great revival at Hunter's Chapel has just closed, where all denominations came together and worked for the salvation of souls. Rev. W. O. Hunt, our pastor, was assisted by Rev. N. A. Spencer, of Strayhorn, Miss., who was earnest, forceful, and deeply spiritual. His attitude toward sin and his uncompromising life make him one of our strongest preachers. By the faithful work of our Christian people and the help of God there were seventeen additions to the church. The church has been strengthened to a degree which cannot be measured. Pray for the Lord to bless us.

A MEMBER.

A GREAT BOOK.

During the discussion now going on in this paper regarding Higher Criticism and the book by Dr. Rice, it would be well if all could pause and read that remarkable little book just issued by the Sunday School Times, "Kanamori's Life Story," with introduction by Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, of Princeton University. This extraordinary man pays his respects to Higher Criticism in no uncertain terms. He has just made a tour of many of the colleges and universities of this country lecturing. CARROLL VARNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Newton District Conference, Newton,
Miss., Aug. 30-Sept. 1.

This conference was called to order Tuesday night at eight o'clock by the District Secretary, Mrs. W. L. Hunter. After a beautiful song service by the local choir and devotions led by Presiding Elder J. A. Moore, Mrs. B. F. Lewis brought a message to the conference body of the Council meeting in Richmond, Va. This was followed by a Musical Pageant, staged and directed by Mrs. W. L. Hunter. This pageant was one of the features of the conference. It showed the great needs of the world in tableaux and song and showed what our Council is doing to meet these needs. It closed with crowds of volunteers answering to the trumpet call of missions.

This was an unusual district conference in the number of conference officers present: Mrs. B. F. Lewis, President; Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. J. M. Smith, Superintendent of Young People; Mrs. C. R. McQueen, Superintendent of Supplies; Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, District Secretary of Meridian District.

Every department of the work was ably presented by the speakers on the program, and Mrs. McCleskey was of invaluable help to the conference with her keen interest in the work and willingness to serve in every way.

The Young People's and Children's Work had an important place on the program. Mrs. J. M. Smith presented the Y. P. work to the conference in a forceful manner, and urged the women present to go home and organize the Young People of their church, assuring them of her willingness to help them in every possible way. On Thursday of the conference at the dinner hour, around one table were seated twenty-five Junior delegates to the conference. This was record-breaking for the district.

A striking feature of the conference was a debate: Resolved, That the Y. P. and Junior Work is more Important than the Adult Work.

Affirmative: Mrs. L. Q. C. Williams, Mrs. W. G. Allen. Negative: Mrs. O. S. Hopkins, Mrs. J. S. Purcell.

Striking points in the work were brought out in these well-planned discussions on this subject.

The last afternoon session was devoted to the work of the Juniors. A discussion led by the Union Juniors—What We are Doing in Our Society—and a program by the Newton Juniors deserve special mention.

This was one of the best attended district conferences ever held in the district and thanks were offered to our efficient district secretary, Mrs. W. L. Hunter, for the splendid program and her untiring efforts to build the work in this district and to bring it to the Standard of Efficiency.

The conference adjourned at four o'clock Thursday evening, to meet at Hickory, Miss., for 1922.

Young People's Summer Conference.

The Summer Conference held at Vicksburg, July 26-29, was well attended by the Young People. It is hoped that this is just the beginning of a great and powerful force for the upbuilding of the Young People's Work in our Conference. Mrs. J. W. Perry, Council Superintendent of Young People, was present throughout the entire conference and brought wonderful and inspiring messages to this body of Young People. Mrs. B. F. Lewis, our own Conference President, was with us and stressed the fact that we must develop the young life of our Conference if we would be ready to meet the issues of the future that are facing our church.

Every phase of the Young People's work was carefully presented on the program through the diligent efforts of our Conference Superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Smith. It was gratifying to have so many Superintendents of Young People present at the conference. It was decided in business session, with Mrs. J. W. Perry presiding, that the Mississippi Conference memorialize the Alabama and Louisiana Conferences to join in a Young People's Summer Conference to be held on the coast for 1922. The consecration service held at the close of the conference was striking. These young people came forward in great numbers and re-consecrated themselves in the service of the Master and pledged themselves to go home and do definite work in the building of the Kingdom. MARY LEE PARKER, Secretary of Conference.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

How Natchitoches Auxiliary Combines Business with Pleasure.

Mrs. J. D. Idom, with Mesdames H. T. Young and B. Ford as co-hostesses, delightfully entertained the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church, at her home on Thursday, August 25. In spite of the intense heat there were 25 members present.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to a very helpful program from the Missionary Voice.

Roll call was answered by various Scriptural quotations.

The Bible Lesson and Prayer on "Our Beloved Community" was led by Mrs. V. G. Hyams. The Scripture thought from Acts II, 43-47, was followed by a talk upon "A Christian's Co-operation With and Separation From His Community." The many ways in which a Christian should very actively co-operate in the welfare and progress of his community were enumerated and insisted upon as a vital Christian duty—while a careful discrimination was made between such helpful co-operation and a wholesale indulgence in a community's worldly pleasures and Sabbath desecrations, which indulgence would forever forbid the blessed spiritual relationship—"With Christ in Separation."

The President, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, then introduced Mrs. H. W. Irwin, wife of Dr. Irwin, of the Health Unit, as the honored guest and speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Irwin made an urgent appeal to the Society for their co-operation in the specific task of bettering the health conditions of the community. She offered practical suggestions that every housewife might carry out and thereby help in this great work. She gave some splendid plans for organized co-operation, involving the whole community, which she hopes may be brought to materialization as soon as cooler days come and the work can acquire fresh impetus. The message was very earnest and inspired a desire for community helpfulness.

Mrs. J. E. Guardia then gave the Chinese story, "A Narrow Escape," which graphically pictured the wonderful rescue work done by the medical missions in China—rescue from the torturing superstitious practices indulged in by heathen Chinese doctors. In the story of this Chinese woman's "Narrow Escape" from physical death was interwoven the story of her rescue from spiritual death, giving thus the twin aim of these medical missions, the rescue of the suffering body and the lost soul.

This story was followed by a most interesting talk by Mrs. Irwin, who spent six years in China, where her husband was sent as a missionary. She gave very earnestly her personal verification of China's pressing need for both intellectual and spiritual help. She emphasized that NOW is Christianity's supreme opportunity in China.

With this concluding number of the program began the social part of the afternoon, the enjoyment of which was greatly enhanced by indulgence in refreshing punch, brick cream, and many varieties of delicious home-made cake.

Assistant State Publicity Supt.

TWO KINDS OF FOOLS.

As a man may be rich and not know it, so also a man may be a fool and not realize it. There are two kinds of fools. There is the intellectual fool, often known as the lunatic or imbecile, or the man who is half-witted. We look at him in pity and say: "He is not all there." This is an intellectual fool. But there are moral fools, men who are intellectually bright, sometimes even brilliant, and who nevertheless are fools. They are fools because they do foolish things. They throw away their most valuable possessions. Was not Robert Burns a fool? His intellect was fine. His intelligence was large. His brain structure was remarkable. His genius was great, and yet he was a fool. When he became famous as a poet he spent his evenings at banquets and guzzled wine. "What," asks Carlyle, "had he to do at such banquets, blending the thick smoke of intoxication with the fire that had been lent him from heaven?" A man who is dowered with the finest gifts and who burns himself up in alcohol and lust is most assuredly a fool.—Charles E. Jefferson, D.D.

TWO GOOD MEETINGS ON THE OAK RIDGE CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have recently held our last two meetings. We began in April and have continued until September, taking time between meetings to carry on the regular work of the church. I have had a great many invitations to help in meetings this year—nearly all from men who have not heard me preach—but have not accepted many on account of my own work.

Rev. J. O. Ware was with me a week at Porter's Chapel in August in a very satisfactory meeting. The people were cordial and appreciative and it was a pleasure to spend a week with them. Brother Ware preached earnest, thoughtful, and spiritual sermons, and the spiritual life of the church was strengthened by them. With one exception, Brother Ware is the most genial and brotherly helper I have ever had. Our third quarterly meeting was held on the last day and we were much benefited by the presence and preaching of Brother Jones.

Our meeting at Bradley Chapel has just closed. Brother J. M. Lewis did the preaching with his accustomed earnestness and zeal. He was pastor of this church for four years and the folks would rather have him preach to them than any one else. The congregations have been larger than at any other point on the circuit and the whole life of this church was built up.

WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. C. — "I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish." — ELIZABETH C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

GOOD MEETINGS HELD BY REV. W. T. GRIFFIN.

Dear Brother Carley: Just home from Blue Hill church, Barlow work. Brother Weems is pastor; meeting held at a new consolidated school house, centrally located, where the membership of Blue Hill and Lebanon churches will likely concentrate for a strong church.

The Lord blessed us graciously. Numbers gave their lives to Christ, and seven fine young people joined the church. The people are devoted to their pastor; all love to hear his strong sermons.

At Wesson we assisted in a fourteen days' meeting. Eleven united with the church and many gave their lives to God. Congregations were exceptionally good, day and night, and the people rejoiced as they reached "higher ground." Brother Ferguson has a stronghold on all, and the young people follow him as a true shepherd. He is such a good mixer, also loves and knows a good horse. This charge is moving upward on many lines. Such fine laymen! They work.

At Sarepta, Hermanville charge, an "old-time" revival came to the church. The altars were crowded. Some found the Lord, and seven united with the church. A more painstaking pastor than Higginbotham will not be found. They have a new church recently painted. All seem happy.

Brother Oliver, at Summit, is too busy to be seen often. He has a big work and is working it. Brother Ellis, the elder, reminds all by mail they are expected to be at quarterly conference; they are there, and go away saying, "It was good to be there."

No More Gas in Stomach and Bowels

If you wish to be permanently relieved of gas in the stomach and bowels, take Baalmann's Gas-Tablets.

Baalmann's Gas-Tablets are prepared distinctly and especially for stomach gas, and particularly for all the bad effects coming from gas pressure.

That empty, gone and gnawing feeling at the pit of your stomach will disappear; that anxious and nervous feeling with heart palpitation will vanish, and you will once more be able to take a deep breath, so often prevented by gas pressing against your heart and lungs.

Your limbs, arms and fingers won't feel cold and go to sleep, because Baalmann's Gas-Tablets prevent gas interfering with the circulation; intense drowsiness and sleepy feeling after dinner will soon be replaced by a desire for some form of entertainment. Your distended stomach will reduce by inches because gas will not form after using Baalmann's Gas-Tablets.

Send for Baalmann's Gas-Tablets. Get the genuine in the yellow package, for only then can you expect the beneficial results many others have experienced.

THIS GIRL IS A WONDER.

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. You start by investing less than $10.00 for supplies. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00, and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write to-day. Isabelle Inez, 37 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Adv.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"IMMORAL BACTERIA."

Under the above caption, we came across a little paragraph the other day that furnishes food for thought. It is as follows: "The Aztecs had a subtle poison which was said to wreck the mind with no visible effects upon the body. A bad book, a vicious play, a movie that moves toward vice and crime, may be surely and subtly at work, wrecking the morals of youth. The germs that set the soul afire with feverishly immoral thought may not be visible to any microscope. The bacteria of badness cannot be caught and counted, but the subtle fires may burn beneath while all is fair without." We can protect ourselves pretty well against the dangers that we can see plainly; but when the atmosphere is full of evil influences and suggestions that we can hardly lay definite hold of, we need to be doubly on our guard.

SCHOOL STARTS.

Public schools throughout the land have just begun their sessions or they will do so in the very near future. The teachers in these schools have probably enjoyed their vacations to the fullest extent and are now really anxious to get back to work—we hope so, anyway. And we hope that they realize how great is the responsibility resting upon them with reference to the development of the life and character of the boys and girls who are under their instruction. Our first hope for the future of our country is in the homes of the land; next to that would come the Sunday school if it were reaching as many children as it ought to reach; then comes the public school, where most of our children get practically all the intellectual training they ever receive, and where a great many of them get all the moral training they ever receive—not directly, but indirectly, through environment and the personality of the teacher. We trust, too, that these teachers realize the opportunity that confronts them, as well as the responsibility that rests upon them. If they do—and very many of them assuredly do—the school year just beginning will mark an epoch in the lives of multiplied thousands of children as they come into contact with these consecrated men and women. When godly parents co-operate with conscientious teachers, happy results are bound to follow.

A LUMP OF SALT.

We are inclined to take a good many stories of the failure of the prohibition law to prohibit, not only with a grain, but even with a lump of salt. Some of the self-confessed boot-leggers declare that practically everybody is opposed to the Volstead law—yet, in the same breath, one of them says that he has only 200 customers in a city the size of New Orleans. How many would he have if he were running an open saloon? There is no popular protest against the Eighteenth Amendment so far as we are able to see, and the violent agitation against it is confined almost altogether to interested parties whose respect for law has never been their outstanding characteristic. We believe if there should be a serious attempt to go back to the days of the saloon, there would be such a protest by the business interests of this country, to say nothing of the moral forces, as would satisfy even the most prejudiced that prohibition is here to stay. For members of Congress to assert that

BISHOP W. F. McMURRY,

Who will preside over the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences this year. He is now looking after the affairs of the church in this territory.

the men who went overseas were deprived of their "rights" while abroad is a humiliating example of gross ignorance or of barefaced demagogism. Take with a big lump of salt all statements to the effect that prohibition is a failure.

A GOOD START.

Press dispatches last week announced that the police authorities of San Francisco had barred a moving picture film in which the "star" was a woman who gained notoriety a few months ago by killing her paramour and in which the theme was the life she had led. This is only a start, but it is a good one in the direction of prohibiting pictures that can appeal only to the baser instincts. If the police of San Francisco can put the ban on one such picture, what could the American people do if they would unite in demanding decent films?

HE SAID HIS PRAYERS.

Not long ago we had occasion to spend the night in an upper berth of a Pullman. Just across the aisle, two boys—probably eight or ten years of age—were having what must have been their usual bedtime romp. They were as boisterous as only boys can be, and we began to fear that sleep was a remote possibility, until we heard one of them say: "Bill, you keep quiet now—I'm going to say my prayers and go to sleep." Bill kept quiet, they both evidently said their prayers, and we soon fell asleep, but not without a little prayer of our own that the Good Father would bestow his blessing upon the boy who was not afraid or ashamed to offer up his devotions in a crowded Pullman car. We wish their parents might read this, that they might know how faithful their boys were to the teaching they received doubtless at their knees.

A POOR PREACHER.

We read a story the other day the point of which was in the fact that the same man in a certain community was postmaster, bank president, lawyer, automobile dealer, and preacher. We imagine this story is wholly imaginary; but if it is not, we feel perfectly sure of one thing—no matter how well the man functioned in his other positions, he was a mighty poor preacher. Some men do nothing but preach—and they do not think of it as an easy job.

GOING UP.

It all depends upon the point of view as to whether the news that food prices are going up is good news or not. It will be good news to those who have foodstuffs to sell—the middlemen, not the producers—and bad news to those who have to buy, especially to the thousands of laborers in the cities who are out of work either on account of strikes or because of the industrial depression. According to the investigations by the Department of Labor, retail food prices increased an average of 4.3 per cent during August, these figures being compiled from reports from fifty-one cities.

FRANCIS ASBURY IN BRONZE.

By H. K. Carroll, LL. D.

The equestrian group which is to represent "the Prophet of the Long Road" in his continuous journeyings, has been completed in clay, heroic size, and is in the bronze foundry.

This great work of art which will speak to coming generations of the devoted labors of Francis Asbury, a pioneer preacher and spiritual statesman in the early years of the American Republic, has been long in the making. The sculptor, Mr. Augustus Lukeman, who is no stranger to Methodist worship, first got the historical view of the struggle of scattered settlers with a frowning wilderness and with conditions making civilized life difficult, and then made, with admiring reverence, a study of the man, his home training in England, his evangelistic ardor, his never-failing courage as he faced extraordinary difficulties and obstacles; his loyalty to the Gospel; his constancy under trying circumstances and his holy persistency when natural conditions and the envy and indifference of men combined to defeat aim.

Looking into the strong face of this man of God, as shown in his portraits, the imagination of the artist kindled into a vision of a consecrated hero who, without any of the sustaining influences of wife, children or home of his own, met unflinchingly the hardships of primitive conditions, that he might serve God and save men's souls.

It is the face of a strong and devoted man that lies in the shadow of a large bell-crowned, wide-rimmed hat, with no hint of softness, or ease, but of great determination. Holding the Bible in his right hand with thumb and finger between the leaves, with the saddle-bags under him, he is obviously thinking, thinking of a text which he means to unfold at his next stopping place. Perhaps it is from the eighth chapter of Paul's epistle to the Romans, where he speaks about his sufferings and says they are "Not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us."

The man on horseback has been riding many hours and is tired and weak from sickness. He found at his last stopping place that the company of believers had been led astray and they resisted his efforts to set them right. An ignorant, willful leader, full of conceit, spoke harshly and insolently to him. His spirit is depressed. However, his shoulders are not bowed, he is sitting erect, full of the indomitable courage which will never acknowledge defeat.

His eyes may seem to fall upon his horse's ears or upon the road a little in front, because he is intently thinking and, having the inward vision, takes no heed of outward things. His face is set toward the future. He thinks not so much of what he has done, but of what he is going to do. He must cultivate in his people loyalty to Jesus Christ and loyalty to the leadership and teachings of John Wealey. He must encourage them by Paul's example to think little of what they are called to endure and much of what they must accomplish, firing their imagination with the glorious picture Paul paints in the last two verses of the eighth chapter of Romans: "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come—shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Methodism must become a power in this land so needful of the saving and keeping power of the Gospel, and a large and fruitful future must grow out of the present rude beginnings. "Go on, silent companion of my journeys. You know not what you are doing for the Gospel; but go on a little further. God knows, and guides me and I know, and guide you. I must work while you rest in the stable to-night. Go on; go on and let us carry the Gospel through the wilderness."

The horse is not the conventional horse of art. He is not the rampant steed that carries the victorious general; not the spirited animal that carcoles in parade. The artist has abandoned the conventions to produce a horse which other sculptors will be glad to follow as a new model. He is rather slim and light, clean-limbed and exquisitely proportioned. He has had a long and somewhat trying day and he is feeling tired like his master. The man he is carrying is not heavy, nor impatient, nor exacting: but absorbed with his thoughts he twitches the reins more than is necessary and gives annoyance to a soft mouth: the road has been rough, with many holes, and the muscles of the patient animal ache with strain. Coming to the top of a hill he stops a moment and drops his muzzle to his knee, with his lips open and teeth touching the skin. His neck is beautifully arched and the muscles show full and rounded. It is an involuntary movement, but not at all uncommon with horses, if you will but watch.

Mr. Lukeman has been a student of the horse and can tell you the peculiarities of the various types, and particularly of that of the colonial days. His studio being near West Street, New York, where horses are numerous, even yet, he called in many drivers to see his model, inviting their opinions and suggestions, and, since some who claim to know horses intimately, have criticized the dropping of the head to the knee as unusual, he asked these men who are constantly with horses, tired horses, and have been familiar with them for years, whether this movement was natural, and they all said it was quite common to the weary animal.

This statue, man and horse, has been subject to the inspection of severely critical experts who are charged with the responsibility of seeing that nothing but creditable works of art are erected on Government property in Washington. Created by Congressional enactment, the Commission is composed of seven members representing the various departments of Art—Sculpture, Painting, Architecture, etc. This Commission has been in touch with the Asbury Association and the sculptor from the inception of the enterprise, agreeing after two or three hearings that an equestrian statue was the most appropriate monument to the man, though they discourage these memorials just now and urge other forms wherever possible.

The Commission visited the studio of Mr. Lukeman in July and inspected the clay model of the group, heroic size, and approved it unanimously, without even a suggestion of change, and they have also approved the design of foundation and pedestal which are to be quite simple. It will be an imposing statue and stand as a landmark in a beautiful locality. The pedestal will be about eight feet high and the statue nearly twelve feet, so that Asbury's hat will be nearly twenty feet above the level of the street. An inscription covering name, year of birth, and year of death is to be placed on the front of the pedestal and such other words as may be approved by the Commission are to go on the sub-base. It is to be hoped that those who have inspiration may submit to the Corresponding Secretary appropriate sentences for the foundation. The Commission suggested that the Association choose one of three sites and without hesitation the site at the intersection of Mt. Pleasant and Sixteenth Streets was chosen by the Association. It is a triangular plot fronting the Kenesaw Apartment House and looking down the Avenue of the Presidents to the Washington Monument.

It is greatly to be regretted that the memorial will not be ready for dedication October 27, 1921, the appointed day, the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the landing in America of the Apostle of American Methodism. The necessary funds have not yet been supplied by the Apostle's spiritual sons and daughters in America. And yet there are more than eight and a half millions of his progeny in this and the other continents of the world, with over 48,000 itinerants of the Asburian order and upward of 71,000 churches. Fifty thousand dollars is a small sum for so rich a communion to raise. A dollar for each church would yield $40,000 more than is necessary now; a dollar for each itinerant minister would be more than could be used and a cent a member would be $50,000 too much.

Apportionments have been made to conferences and districts of the Methodist Episcopal Church but not many have been fully raised; appeals have gone out to churches and ministers but the smallness of the amount asked has seemed too ridiculous to be worthy of attention.

American Methodism has permitted itself to be humiliated by attempting to contribute $50,000 and stopping short of the half of it; by asking Congress and the President of the United States to set apart a site for the statue in Washington and failing to produce the statue; by asking the sculptor to make an acceptable model and failing to give enough to pay him; by asking an architect to plan pedestal and foundation and contributing nothing to meet the expense.

Does Methodism care anything about its origin and achievements; for the men who made it what it is; for its place among the evangelical churches; for its great power and wonderful resources; for its reputation for liberality?

Let it come forward and make up the pittance needed. Because the masses will not see or hear this appeal, it will be necessary for those who do see and hear to make their gifts generous or numerous, or both.

Plainfield, N. J.

A SUPERANNUATE OUT AND GOING.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Eight months is a long time to be sick—I know, for I have tried it. I would say it was much longer but for the fact that I have counted them from the beginning to the time I was able to conduct a service, and found that there were just eight months. My, what a time I did have!

I have never been a vacation preacher. I have always been afraid that the time taken up in a vacation would be a season of backsliding to my people. I am sure that it takes several weeks' hard work to recover from a month's vacation. I always declined them with thanks when offered. I found it better to lighten up somewhat on work, but to stay on the ground and watch. I have found in every work I ever served some officials, even, needed watching and cheering and steadying. Besides, if I went off playing, I saw that I would be in danger of losing zeal. I stayed at home and worked fifty-two weeks in the year and seven days in the week. Even at that, I have never found it an easy matter to keep things moving normally, and myself in a vigorous working spirit.

I have found that there are two kinds of vacations that preachers take. One is for rest and pleasure; the other is, strange to say, for work and prayer. Between these two the first is by far the better, as I view it. This would bring better service because of a reinvigorated body and mind. His people would be the beneficiaries of increased fitness for work. The latter would mean additional work for him, and, because of it, greater weariness of body and mind. Instead of his being rested and strengthened for better service on his return to his work, he would be unfitted for doing as good work as he was doing at the time his vacation began. This is good common sense, Henry.

To speak the plain truth, I must say I am doubtful about the vacations given pastors in the hot weather by their churches. I am reminded of a joke that Dr. Cooper tells on me. He was presiding elder when I was pastor at Pearlington. The second quarter was a long one, full of work and success. My report to the Q. C. showed great things accomplished during the quarter. Some good brother moved that I should be given a vacation of indefinite length—that it should be left to me to decide when I would return and resume work. When the matter was suggested, I demurred on the ground that I was not needing a rest, but was in the very best working trim. The good brother insisted that I had been working too hard, and did very much need rest. To this I continued to demur. Finally he said, "If you don't need rest, we do," and so they voted me an indefinite vacation. This is what Cooper says.

But the vacation of the past several months was not of my choosing. I would not have had it if I had had any say so about it. It came in a powerfully authoritative way, and all I could do was just to accept it. The vacation was crowded full of pains and grunts. My, how I did grunt! I disturbed the quiet and peace of my own home, and that of my nearest neighbor. But the grunting was of immense relief to me. It did me about as much good as the medicine I took. I became an expert in the art of grunting. I believe I can beat anybody at it.

I don't know what has been the matter with me. I thought at the beginning that it was acute indigestion, but after having run the gamut of symptoms it settled down to a case of arteriosclerosis. I am doubtful about that compound word, Henry; that may not be the thing, and if it is the thing it may not be the way to spell it. Whether or not it is the right thing and the right spelling, one thing is certain and sure—I had something that hurt me mighty bad and kept at it a desperately long time.

I told the doctors that I thought it was a cancer in my stomach. They said that it might be, but they hardly thought so. But I told them if it was not a cancer it might just as well be, for it was literally eating me up. A cancer could do no more. Finally the doctor and my family persuaded me to go to Jackson to be X-rayed. It discovered no cancer, and they advised me to go to Allison's Wells. I went and stayed there three weeks. That is fine water, but it never faded the cancer. I then went to Jackson and had a stomach pump test. Drs. Galloway and Neal told me most emphatically and positively that I had no cancer or ulcer. That got the cancer out of my head and it left my stomach. I have felt better ever since. And yet some people say the mind has nothing to do with bodily ailments. I believe in psychotherapeutics.

Since having gotten rid of the cancer, I have been "out and going." I was terribly behind with everything. I had wasted eight months on pains and grunts. Some of the preachers had written that they were looking for me to visit them and preach for them as soon as I could get out. I have been to Hazlehurst, Deasonville, Wesson, Beauregard, Hattiesburg, Jackson, Meadville, Caseyville, Magnolia, Poplarville, Lumberton, and Fernwood. I have preached six times, and heard some mighty good sermons from my brethren. It has done me great good. The doctors and my family tell me not to get too smart and overdo it. I am trying to take their kind and wise advice, but I am making a poor out of it. I find it much easier to give advice than to take it.

Yesterday was full of unusual incidents to me. I have always feared and fought "woman's suffrage." But when it came in spite of everything, I decided to take it philosophically, and do all in my power to adjust myself to it. It was announced that Miss Belle Kearney, a candidate for the U. S. Senate, would deliver a political address at Bogue Chitto, ten miles from Brookhaven, on the 7th. I made up my mind to go and hear her. I thought it would be best for me to draw heavily on my reserve of courage, and dive head-foremost into the depths of woman's suffrage politics. I was afraid to risk myself at any quiet and easy process. I felt that I must do it with a dash, or my heart might fail me. So I decided to go to Bogue Chitto, and I went. I am glad I went. It was rather chilling to me while I was at it, but reaction has come, and I feel better. The ice is broken, and I am now ready for anything that may come hereafter.

You may be sure that I was bent on pulling off that stunt, Henry, when I walked fully half a mile in a rain to hear her. I was clad in a light Palm Beach suit and straw hat, and had no umbrella. I got very wet. I am sure I would have backed out but for my firmly fixed resolve to be a brave man and get through and be done with the impending shock. I did it like a sure enough man. I never faltered. Since having done it I am positively proud of myself, and feel like getting somebody to pat me on the back and say, "Hurrah for you!"

Miss Kearney's address was very fine. She was full and clear in her statement of facts that showed a desperate condition of things in our own nation and in the world. If she can convince me that women congressmen and senators could and would right all these wrongs, I am ready to vote for women. The men have made a terrible mess of things.

But in my effort to hear Miss Kearney I ran into a dance. What do you think of that, Henry? Isn't it bad for an old superannuate to go to a dance? If you'll promise not to tell on me, I'll promise never to do it again. It just happened this time. I never intended it. But having been caught unawares, I sat in the shade of a big tree and looked and looked. It has been nearly fifty years since I have seen a dance. I didn't like it. There was too much work and sweat for the fun. There were several mixed couples, boy and girl, and one couple of girls and one couple of boys. I noticed that the two girls dancing together, and the two boys, were not so closely and tightly hitched up as the mixed couples were. That was not surprising to me. The question of sex accounts for many things, and makes some things mighty dangerous. Well, I am not going to any more dances. I am sure I would never grow in grace attached to a dance.

Brookhaven. Miss.

"DR. RICE'S BOOK."

Dear Doctor Carley: I have not seen a copy of Dr. Rice's book, and have no present desire to discuss it. At an early date I shall give it a careful reading. I do very much desire to make a few observations on your editorial of Sept. 1 regarding same.

"It is an axiom of literary criticism that no literary production can be properly evaluated apart from the life of the man who wrote it, and it is manifestly an unjudicial procedure to attribute to a volume teachings that are out of harmony with a lifetime of work that lies as an open book before the world."

What of the effect of dubious statements on the mind of those who know nothing, and can know nothing of the life of the writer? What of the effect on the mind of the young and untrained who attempt to answer, or accepting without question, attempt to use the material in their messages to the public? (Even the college boys who came to the rescue had no first-hand information; they took the deductions of Dr. Rice like a baby takes predigested food.) Is it not true that the larger and cleaner the life, the greater damage error from that source is likely to cause? Instance the attitude of Sir Oliver Lodge, Sir Conan Doyle and others on communication with the dead. What good can ex cathedra statements on questions impossible of settlement do, though they come from the greatest scholars? If one of our bishops feels called upon to defend the book, and at the same time express his regrets that certain things have been said, and evidences the goodly hope that they may be left out of another edition, while confessing that he, the friend and defender, has no first-hand information, surely those who "stand for the faith once delivered to the saints" have a right to speak in no uncertain tones, and seek to keep such leaders from places of general authority. This is particularly true when the whole church is being courted and combed for money to make strong and certain her institutions to the end that CHRISTIAN EDUCATION be given her youth to offset the uncertainty of these days of waning faith and disintegrating jazz. When friends deplore and enemies take severely to task, it is time for the church to take notice, regardless of the life of the writer.

If that book is so questionable that a Baptist preacher can put Texas Methodism on the defensive, call to the colors the undergraduates of her great school, provoke the solemn protest of some of our best known leaders, and inject into our theology doubt and disputation—is it not time for "modern scholarship" to "be brought into court?"

"A man's professions, too, should be taken at their face value when made under circumstances that admit of no doubt as to their sincerity."

What of "Saul of Tarsus?"

Comparatively recently I heard Dr. Rice in a series of lectures on the minor prophets. There was no uncertain sound in them. Had the messages ended with their delivery, no doubt had been generated. But when he felt called upon to defend himself, no one present accusing, he provoked many doubts. He left me, at least, wondering just what he did teach, and saying over and over again to myself, "By their fruits are they known."

"Then, too, the opinion of those who have been intimately associated with a man whose teachings have been called in question must, in all fairness, be taken into consideration."

What of those who know Dr. Rice intimately yet seriously question his orthodoxy? More definitely, suppose he begins teaching that Jonah is a myth, Isaiah a kind of questionable double-header, Genesis a dream of the ancients on a par with "all other remains of primeval literature," and the book of Revelation of the same value as the Apocalypse of Baruch and the fragments known as Eldad and Modad, and that, after all, the integrity of the book is of small moment, is he to be praised, "raised and advanced?" No one, I presume, questions his sincerity. His judgment is being called in question EVEN BY HIS FRIENDS. According to Bishop Morrison the good doctor is a bundle of "ifs and ands," a whole box of question marks.

"The Bible has withstood the attacks of its enemies too many centuries for us to fear that it is going to suffer greatly at the hands of its friends."

Its friends are the only ones who can make it "suffer greatly." Sampson knew no defeat till he went to sleep "in the hands of his friend." Delilah evidently had sharp scissors. Possibly she was a "higher critic." David was an unchallenged leader till his own son sought to remove his crown. "A man's foes shall be those of his own house." "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Why should any attack be made on the "old book" by its friends? If it is God's book it is God's message to humanity. None of us are likely to improve on that message. Study it? Yes. Pass on the value of its teachings? Certainly. Get every angle of approach, if you please. But in times like these, when the Bible has lost much of its authority with the masses, and when the preacher is becoming a kind of expensive luxury to be endured for decency's sake, but not to be taken as one having authority, is it not decidedly inopportune to attack the validity of the book in any way, though it be done by a FRIEND?

"Modern criticism goes back centuries, delving into the musty pages of all but forgotten lore, deciphering painfully the hieroglyphics (worm-tracks) of the ancients, for much of its thunder. Why should we play the mole for our truth? Is there not enough of known and accepted fact to save the world without all this "hue and cry," this "STRAINING at a gnat and SWALLOWING a camel?" But science—Yes, I have heard it before. Might it not be well to wait till scientists of equal ability and opportunity are agreed on something definite and final? When recently a splendid young person, a graduate of one of our accepted schools, said in substance, "I would give all I possess could I get away from the doubt generated by the school from which I graduated," I wondered if any greater doubt would have been generated by a state school.

"If devout modern scholarship must be brought into court, let those who are ready to prosecute it prepare the specifications."

The whole Education Movement was launched on the theory that "devout modern scholarship" must stand the test of the COURT. It had and has no other justification. If I am able to read between the lines the specifications have already been prepared, and the prosecution is calling for trial, and just as devout scholarship seems to be prosecuting as is found on the defense.

If we have no more FIXED TRUTH to hold and present to our people than is found among the great scholars of this and other ages let us all go to the Christian (?) Science (?) Church (?) and be properly DUBBED together.

When our great leaders become like ancient philosophers, going around with itching ears, to hear some "new thing," or belabor some helpless, patient individual with condensed atmosphere that has in it the odor of age and decay; when the rank and file of our leaders, and their multitudinous underlings, spend their time gathering in the coin, while the flock find their bearings in hot devotion to JAZZ—well, WHEN WE REACH SUCH A TIME, WRITE FINIS.

If Dr. Rice is NOT "in a hole" let the brethren quit shoveling dirt on him. If he has "slipped a cog," given to the church a hurtful and uncertain sound, I pray that he may find an open place to brush the dirt from his clothes, hold a few revivals where souls are saved, and make the contribution of his life to the "coming of the kingdom" in the next few years.

In the meantime, friend of mine, YOUR EDITORIAL WON'T STAND THE TEST. You have allowed your big-hearted generosity to grant entirely too much by inference.

Cordially and fraternally,

JAMES H. FELTS.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Mr. Wells says the world needs a new Bible and there are echoes and re-echoes of the same or like statements from other writers. Even some ministers are pleading for this strange thing. Judging from the writings of these modern and quite recent reformers, they know but little of the old Bible, else I can't well see what is wanted with a new one. For I do not believe the Lord is quite ready to give us another until we, in some measure, begin to learn more of the precious truths contained in the old. Nor can I for one moment imagine some rare genius so gifted as to evolve from his mind one superior to the present current edition. When this genius appears, surely Moses, Isaiah, Paul, John, Luke, and some others who interpreted the mind of God to the world, will have to take a secondary place in the galaxy of the great. And where is this super-genius going to get his principles of ethics, morals, and laws for governing and directing men? He can not possibly reach higher than Jesus did. If he does, he will have to go further than the throne of God. Where will he find nobler examples of sacrifice and service, where deeper, more sublime thought, touching all life and life's meaning and mystery? Now, let some modern iconoclast plead for a new sun to light the heavens, or new stars to shine in the deep vault of the arching sky. Yes, by all means, for the sun and stars are old. Now read what Dr. S. D. Gordon says, for he knows this Book:

"Wherever it is known, it is accepted as the one standard of moral teaching, unapproached by any other. By common consent, its contributions to jurisprudence, to political economy, to moral philosophy, business ethics, sanitation and hygiene, are the underlying foundation of all books on these subjects. It is characterized by a fine reserve, a conservative caution of utterance, and a rare modesty about itself.

"In its ideals of life, unmatched and unapproached, its originality, its unfailing freshness and adaptation after centuries, its subtle touch of something more than human, through the human medium, and its one outstanding person—Christ—it stands in solitary grandeur among all books of whatever time or clime. The Bible is a fact in the life of the race."

HOW I SPENT MY VACATION.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

The place was not Europe, or Atlantic City, or Junaluska; I could not afford to go to either of those places, so, for the third year in succession, we went to Cote Blanche Island, Louisiana. How few of your readers know where that place is? If you draw an equilateral triangle with Franklin and Jeanerette as the base, I think you may say Cote Blanche is the apex. (Brother S. Davies will correct me if my mathematical term is incorrect.) It is near Week's Island on the Louisiana side of the Gulf. The island is owned by Mr. J. Caffery, or the Caffery family, I am not quite sure. I do know that it is owing to the courtesy and generosity of Mr. and Mrs. J. Caffery that we were given the permission to use their house and to the financial help of my charge that we went there.

I do not know how large the island is. There was a time when merchandise for many towns in St. Mary and New Iberia Parishes was brought by boat from Bayou Sale. There was a Roman Catholic Ladies' College at one time, and there are the remains of at least two long landing places, or piers. But its commercial glory has departed. There is one large, good house, which, on our first visit, was tenanted by a planter, who made good crops of cane and corn. There are now about eight little cottages that are used in summer time, rented out to those who enjoy bathing and fishing. Mr. J. Caffery's big screened house is used by them as a camping out place. It is built on a bluff fifty feet high, and within forty feet of the sea. The island is used principally for grazing cattle, but there is plenty of quail, rabbits, deer and other game.

Every cottage was tenanted during our stay of over two weeks. People came from New Orleans, Lafayette, Jeanerette and Franklin to bathe and fish, and enjoy the sea breezes. Having been reared near the sea (the English Channel), it is my best tonic. I never expected to enjoy the country life as I have done; I wanted the sea, never expected to be contented away from the sight of the sea. We (when I say we it includes Mrs. Hill and our English fox terrier) took our first dip into the sea every morning about 6:15. I got up and prepared the coffee before we left. That shows how we have degenerated, or, to avoid offense, how we have become acclimated and have taken to Louisiana customs. Then after our swim, we would pull in the trot-line—set the previous night—and take home the fish caught for breakfast. And thanks to some visitors from Franklin who were permitted to share the house with us, we had abundance of fish. These boys would seine in the evening for shrimp, and we had large quantities of them, sufficient for bait and also to eat. Then until dinner time came we rested, did a lot of reading, sometimes went crabbing, and then before supper, took another dip in the sea, and after supper played chess, checkers, dominoes, or more reading. Our mail was very irregular, but it brought, in addition to the local papers, a good supply of English papers, especially just then the Methodist Recorder, which was giving us a full report of the Annual Wesleyan Methodist Conference. And we must not forget the British Weekly, The Spectator and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

We could not escape being reminded of the war, for there is one big house, now used as a restaurant and, I am sorry to add, with a room for dancing on Sundays, that was used by five Germans. They came over from Galveston in a fishing sloop. The hull of the boat lies high and dry on the beach to-day. These Germans were gentlemanly in appearance, educated, and splendid cooks. Suspensions were aroused and the house raided. I have been told they found a wireless outfit, lots of blue print charts of the Gulf and coast, and some of the men were interned and others deported. They also built some bathing houses, which are still being used by visitors.

On the first Sunday there were over 250 persons in the sea at one time. I counted over 50 automobiles on the shore. The roads from Jeanerette and Franklin have been wonderfully improved, hence the popularity of the place when the weather is fine. I was tempted to hold an outdoor service, but as the majority were Roman Catholics, I thought it best not to do so. We had family prayer every morning, of course. On our first visit we were marooned four days by a tropical storm, but this time we were spared any excitement apart from a few heavy thunder storms, and when I helped Mrs. Hill to land a good-sized dog shark, caught on hook and line. We astonished the natives by eating stingarees. "Eve Up To Date" will support us when we say that there are few sweeter fish to eat than stingarees, however much afraid one may be of them because of the sting in the tail. I caught a beauty one morning on the rod, and knowing the class of fish they belong to, we enjoyed it.

Brother Carley, you know the pleasure of throwing the fish on the bank just before you start for home, and counting how many are caught? Then you will understand why it was that St. John, when years later writing his fish story, he tells us, "Simon Peter drew in the net and there were one hundred and fifty-three "great fishes." One morning the boys caught 47 by rod; another time, 25; one red fish weighing twenty-five pounds was caught, also a flounder of about three pounds. Croaker, trout and drum made up the other sorts.

For sixteen days I did not wear a collar, and did not button my shirt collar, so when I got back to town and found hot weather again, it was a big task to feel comfortable. Being on vacation I read some new fiction—"Mare Nostrum," by Ibanez, "The Age of Innocence," "The Brimming Cup," and Zane Grey's "Mysterious Rider." We visited friends in Jeanerette, and by the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. S. A. Seegers, I preached at Patterson on my way home. We certainly had a good time, and even our dog "Blighty" had a vacation.

THE CENTENARY WORK IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Fellow-Worker: When the church said, "Make the Centenary go," you and I did our best; now when those who direct the present work say for us to combine the work of Missionary Secretary and Treasurer in our Conference I ask you to join me in succeeding again. From this date on I am to fill both offices. All money will be deposited in banks to the credit of Col. John E. Edgerton just as heretofore. Please let no one do any other way, since to do so is to go contrary to the general plan and to cause confusion. We want to do the following things:

1. Let all pastors audit or have audited the records of all treasurers, and fill out Audit Report at once. This protects the treasurers because I make a permanent record of all facts. This is not a treasurer's report. It is the auditor's report. One such report last week solved several problems and located a thousand dollars that we had not credited churches. Then, where several churches deposit in the same bank, I can tell what belongs to each church.
2. Be sure to ask for a Mission Special for each church, charge, or district, to cover your Centenary pledges.
3. If your Centenary Committee, of which the pastor is chairman, has not been appointed for each church, please see that it is appointed to at once and report the names and post office addresses to me so that I can help you.
4. Let this Committee organize and between October 23d and the 30th call on each person who has made a pledge and collect as much as 60 per cent of the whole where possible.
5. Report to me each month on regular report blanks as per copies enclosed.
6. If not already sent to Mr. High, please send to me a list showing the name, address and amount of each subscription to the Centenary from your church.

Whenever you think you need me or my advice, write me, and I will do all I can. Let me know your problems and then we can work on them. When we read Malachi 3d, and Matthew 25th, we learn exactly how to make prosperity sure and how to get to heaven. Ministering to the world's needs through our missionary work meets the conditions in such a large way that we can afford to devote our best efforts to it. To fail by neglect would be criminal; to succeed by loving devotion offers rewards beyond our power to conceive.

BEN P. JACO.

GOOD FOR ALL METHODISTS.

To the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Columbus District:

We are now entering the fourth and last quarter of the Conference year. Our Annual Conference meets at Amory, Miss., November 16, just a little over two months off. At this Conference your pastor will be called upon to make a report of the work done in your charge and church during the year. What kind of a report do you want him to make? The manner in which the members of the church have stood by him and held up his hands will determine what kind of a report he shall make. You can assist very much in helping your pastor make a good report. ARE YOU WILLING TO DO YOUR PART?

It now looks as if our district will report a large ingathering of members for the year. Reports coming in from the revivals indicate that our people are turning back to God and spiritual things, and large numbers are being received into the church on profession of faith. There also seems to be an increased interest in Sunday school work throughout the district. Most of the churches have active schools doing a great work. In making my rounds over the district I have been much pleased to note the fine spirit of co-operation found among our people, both on the part of pastors and people. To me, the year's work so far has been very pleasant indeed.

While we have made progress along other lines, many of our churches are badly behind with finances. This has been indeed a testing year for many of our faithful preachers. Many of them have had to make sacrifices and deny themselves and families, not only of luxuries but actual necessities in order to stay in the work. But through it all they have remained faithful, hoping and expecting the assessments to be paid in the fall. Nothing hurts the preacher and the cause more than for the preacher to get in debt. Many of our preachers have been forced to go in debt this year, but with the assessments paid in full they can pay their debts, go to Conference feeling good, make a fine report and enjoy the occasion.

Please let me urge the co-operation of the entire membership of your church in raising its assessment in full. When money is plentiful, a few can bear the burden alone; but with money scarce, it takes all to bear the burden. If all of our members will do their full duty, the financial burden will be light and the assessment can be paid in full. REMEMBER, the preacher and his family look to you for their support. If you fail, he has no other means of support. If the preacher does his duty on an important charge, such as your charge, he has no time to make money and is absolutely dependent upon the assessment for support for himself and family. "The laborer is worthy his hire," Luke 10:7. "Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." I Cor. 9:14.

Thanking you for your co-operation during the year and praying God's richest blessings upon you and yours,

Yours fraternally,

A. T. McILWAIN, P. E.

THE FRAGMENTS THAT REMAIN.

How seldom most of us regard waste as a sin at all, especially if we are surrounded by plenty! But waste of any of God's gifts, great or small, is in His sight a sin. Our Lord's disciples might have thought: "Why gather up these fragments of bread which He scattered among the grass? The Master has no need of them. He can work miracles and provide bread at His pleasure, without stint or effort. Why, then, should we trouble ourselves about fragments?" Their Master's command taught them another lesson. So now a servant may think: "My master is rich; so I need not be so very particular about his property. I need not trouble myself about fragments of time, or food, or furniture, or money. If he were a poor man it would be different. Then of course it would be wrong not to be careful about everything, even fragments. Then waste would indeed be sin. But what does it matter in the case of a rich man? He can so well afford it." Now the mistake in all this reasoning is that men forget that they are stewards under one Supreme Master in heaven. And He is rich—who so rich? Yet it was He who gave the command: "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost." But it is not servants alone who are prone to waste; it is a sin of which we are all guilty. And the fallacy which lies at the root of it is not understanding that waste is a sin in itself, quite apart from the loss or gain of any one.—Malcolm MacColl.

A LETTER FROM DR. BRISCOE CARTER.

Dear Brother Carley: After a pleasant trip on the train, at the end of 47 hours' travel I found myself in New York, the most remarkable city of all the world and of all time. If Pope's assertion that "the proper study of mankind is man" is true, then you have in New York the greatest human university in the world and a greater variety of species.

The first thing that impressed me was, it is not American, except in spirit and progress. It is the most cosmopolitan city of all times. Whole sections of Europe and Asia, and small sections of Africa, are literally transplanted here. A walk up Broadway at the lunch hour took me through a seething mass of folks of various nationalities, where in some sections it seemed to me all languages except English were spoken. I never saw so many foreign language papers as you see on the public vehicles in a day's ride. It is said that the foreign language dailies published here run thus: Arabic, 4; Bohemian, 2; Croatian, 2; French, 1; German, 1; Greek, 2; Hungarian, 2; Italian, 5; Polish, 2; Russian, 2; Serbian, 1; Slovak, 2; Slovenian, 1; Spanish, 1; Ukrainian, 1; Yiddish, 5. In addition there are newspapers other than dailies, printed in Armenian, Chinese, Danish, Finnish, Hebrew, Japanese, Lithuanian, Norwegian, Swedish and many other languages and dialects. Some idea may be got of the various peoples when we know that it is the world's largest Italian city, the second largest Russian city, and the third largest German city. It is also the Mecca of the Irishman and the Jew. In one public school on the lower east side of Manhattan, there is a registration of 2000 pupils in which 27 nationalities are represented.

This will give some idea of the contents of this melting pot at the gateway of the Republic. You can readily see that as the years go by the city will become less American in its population when you consider that at present nearly 50 per cent of its population is foreign born, and that the government reports show that 50 per cent of the immigrant aliens that enter the port remain in the city as residents and that only 25 per cent are distributed outside the State of New York.

I tried to see as much of the city as I could in the limited time at my disposal. The immense buildings are wonderfully impressive. A trip around the Island by boat, seeing the entire harbor, is one long to be remembered. The traffic in the harbor is as heavy as vehicle traffic on Canal Street. Flags of all the maritime peoples are always in evidence and vessels of all sizes, from the Leviathan to the motor boat, are constantly weaving their way in and out. Some of the hotels are a world within themselves. The one in which I was had 2200 rooms. You could have spent a whole day sight-seeing in it and then not have seen everything. It is said to be the biggest in the world and I am willing to accept the statement.

Saturday, August 20, at 12 noon, New York time, I went aboard the Albania, a fair sized Cunarder, bound for Liverpool. I left the choice of my roommate for the voyage to the shipping people, with this limitation, that he should be of the Caucasian race—I knew the disposition of certain folk in the upper country to foist a certain race upon other people, but to preserve a line of demarcation for themselves. To my surprise and delight, I found that I had drawn Judge M. E. Lawson, of Missouri, a particular friend, for my roommate, than whom there could be no better. Reverting to the color line: there are two aboard, delegates to London, whose ancestors, according to the late Bishop Newman, drifted too near the Equator with the result that their descendants have been permanently sunburned. Of course when the bell rang for meals they proceeded to the dining room and took the seats allotted to them at a table of eight. The result—hear it, ye unreconstructed rebels, whose perverse conduct along these lines still offends the negrophile: when the six white people found the two Negroes at the table, they waited; and not one of the six was from our side. In a day or two suitable adjustments were made, and now the two blacks wait, and have the dining room to themselves.

There are about 21 delegates to London on this ship; from our church, Dr. Tyler, from Epworth, Washington; Dr. Paul Linn, from Central College, Missouri; Dr. Cooper, from the Missouri Conference; Dr. Plyler, from the North Carolina Conference, and Judge Lawson, from Liberty, Mo.

From the M. E. Church, I have met Dr. Elliott, Editor of the Review; Dr. Pritz, who has the chair of Semitic Languages and Old Testament, in Syracuse University; Dr. H. K. Carroll, of statistical repute; Dr. Zaring, Editor of the Northwestern, at Chicago, and one of the most interesting specimens I have ever met, a keen-nosed heresy hunter, who is on his job in season and out of season. I leave him to the doctors and mentally revert to some well-known lines in Goldsmith's Deserted Village.

After eight days we are again in sight of land. We are skirting the southwest coast of Ireland, with the promise to anchor in Liverpool about 9 p. m. to-night, August 29, and will land about 8 to-morrow morning. I will have about a week to visit various places in England before the Conference.

I get from Dr. Carroll, of the Executive Committee of the Conference, that our church has many important places on the program unfilled—these places are on the first few days and will be hard to get volunteers for. This seems to some of our brethren aboard a grievous oversight. I suppose somebody said, "The Lord will provide"—a sacrifice?

I am going up to the Conference with great hopes. I pray that it may open to world-wide Methodism a vision of usefulness surpassing all past achievements, and that grace and strength may be given her hosts to realize her highest ambitions in the accomplishment of the divine purpose.

BRISCOE CARTER.

DR. RICE'S BOOK.

By Rev. Henry T. Young.

I think the discussion of Dr. Rice's book, "The Old Testament in the Life of To-day," is a matter of extreme importance to our Methodism. Since Dr. Rice has a chair in our Southern Methodist University, what he says and does is a matter concerning even the most humble member of our church. We sowed higher criticism, new and modern thought, and such like demoralizing stuff in our university at Nashville until we lost the property and left a scar upon our church. Quite a few of our young preachers are under Dr. Rice. He is a great man; a man of magnetism and brilliancy, all of which makes him more dangerous to us, if it should prove that he is not in thorough accord with our view-points on the Bible.

We are a peculiar people. Some call us old-fashioned. We hold a great many religious views in common with all Christian bodies, but some things are ours to hold and to defend. A great deal that is called new and modern has no place among us, and yet some denominations are glad to own it. We are a deeply spiritual people, and anything that does not help our young preachers to develop in spirituality should not be tolerated in our schools. The most of our young men are but recently from an experience in which God spoke to them. They have heard and answered the Divine call. They know vividly that God is, and that He saves. The Bible is to them the Word of God. They have tasted of it and found it so. Too many of us have had to come into the ministry, fresh from altars of consecration and real experience, only to be chilled and pained by books written by men whose religious efforts have become merely professional, and to whom the gospel, God's power for salvation, has become but one of the many religions of the world. Personally, I can say that but little that was given to me to study, and recommended by our church, helped me to be better fitted to be a soul-winner.

Our church has passed on the Old Testament in her Articles of Religion. The fifth Article states our view of it. Therefore if the Doctor is trying to serve our church, and at the same time contradicts our stated position, he has signally failed. Jesus Christ was in a position to point out to the world all errors in the Old Testament, a position unapproached by any of our modern critics, and His attitude toward it was quite different from the startling things said by Dr. Rice.

Our Lord chose apostles and gave certain gifts and authority to them that have not been given to the rest of us. How different was their attitude from Dr. Rice's! To them, God was its author. I much prefer their criticisms to those of any of our very modern thinkers. Look at Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, or at Paul's before Felix. Also compare the results with those gotten by Dr. Rice's book. The results of the life of D. L. Moody, in comparison with the results of the lives of our critics who pull to pieces our Bible, should convince us of God's attitude to His Word. Moody was no great scholar, but faith in the Bible as the Word of God enabled him, by God's help, to move more than one continent toward heaven. There are many others of the Moody class, as there are many others who flippantly pick to pieces our Bible. Look at them and judge by their fruits.

Now just a word in reply to Bishop Mouzon's defense of Dr. Rice. Samuel might have been primitive, but had a better knowledge of God and His will than many who think him primitive. He surely was not wandering in some dense forest of spiritual bewilderment, mistaking every sound for the voice of God. He knew God—the highest privilege and attainment of man. Joshua might have been uneducated, and fortunate for him, perhaps, that he did not know what men of to-day know and call education, but his life's work makes some of our modern leaders look small indeed.

There is no parallel between Luther's position on the Epistle of James and Dr. Rice's on the Old Testament. John Wesley's difference with Whitefield and others affords a poor horse indeed for the Doctor and his defenders to ride on. Whitefield and Wesley disagreed on interpretation of Scripture but neither doubted the Bible to be the Word of God.

THE MEDIOCRE MAN.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Who feels disposed to write his history? Who will sing his praise? Are there any who remember him? Whose heart holds him in grateful affection? What is the need of him?

He is a loyal man. He does not stir up mobs. He takes a burning interest in them, once they are planned.

He is no dreamer. He has no wide vision. He stretches no line over empty space. He enters no new and far-flung plans. He follows beaten paths—waits for orders—or looks for footprints.

He asks for no survey of the Alps. He drags the guns over its dizzy heights, when the engineer has said the task is barely possible. He responds with success, when the intrepid Napoleon has said: "Go forward!"

He makes no discoveries in nature; develops no seedless oranges; creates no new hybrid in vegetable or fruit; but he follows the soil, plants the seeds, reaps the harvests and fills the granaries, and adorns the markets of the world.

He sleeps in his tent while the councils of war are held at headquarters. After Napoleon at midnight had fought on paper, this man won Trafalgar with musket, gun, and bayonet the next day.

He sits in no church councils, outlines no creeds, stretches no cords of plans over the seas and continents, but at marching orders, he goes forth, over mountains, into the wilderness and the solitary places, across streams, through the jungles, into the presence of the lowly, and declares the message, proclaims the doctrine that wins the generations to life.

Communion without service is a dream; service without communion is ashes.—Robert E. Speer.

The Home Circle

BY THE ROADSIDE.

By Mrs. George S. Brown.

Mrs. Gibbs was returning from the monthly missionary meeting of her church. She was president, and a very enthusiastic president, but she was one of those women who do the work of ten rather than get ten women to work. She had labored long and hard for that particular meeting. It had not only been an afternoon's work, but a month's work, for she had written to missionaries so as to have letters to read from the field; she had gone to the extreme end of the city to secure a returned missionary to address the meeting; she had arranged an elaborate program, gotten several new members, and collected dues from absentees. Everybody said she was wonderful and the meeting was indeed a success. But somehow or other Mrs. Gibbs did not feel quite satisfied. The night before, her son had asked if he could bring some friends home to dinner and she had told him that it was her missionary afternoon and she was too busy to see to the dinner. Her daughter had stayed out all night with a friend because she said it was lonely at home and there was no one to talk to, with mother pouring over missionary magazines; and her husband had asked her if she would ever have time to write some letters for him. She did not understand how they could ask so many things of her when they saw what a responsibility she had in the meetings of her church. She had really longed to be a missionary and sometimes she felt sorry that she had not gone to foreign fields instead of marrying and staying at home. There was so much to do over there and so much that counted. Things at home seemed so trivial and commonplace. She was sure if she could only go to Korea or China she could bring scores to Christ.

At the gate she met two friends who were coming from a bridge party. "O, you good little woman!" one said, "I really expect to see you go to heaven without dying. Here you are laboring at a missionary meeting while we are gadding about in frivolous style." "Yes," echoed the other, patting Mrs. Gibbs on the back, "I see wings sprouting now."

They passed laughingly on their way, and Mrs. Gibbs went in, and, too tired to go upstairs, threw her hat on the sofa and leaned back in a chair while waiting for her family to come home to dinner. She brushed the hair back from her forehead and closed her eyes.

In a moment she was dreaming and she felt the wings sprouting on her shoulders and soon she began to fly, on and on through the fleecy clouds, straight up to a gateway. Way up on a hill, she saw a city, bright and beautiful, and she thought it must be heaven. She knocked at the gate where she had alighted, expecting to be admitted, but a man stood there guarding the gate and he said, "Surely you are not coming here alone. We admit no empty-handed people. Have you no souls with which to greet your Savior?"

"Alas, I knew it would be like that," answered Mrs. Gibbs, weeping. "I wanted to go to China and teach the heathen, but I had a family and could not leave them." "Were there no heathen about you?" said the man at the gate. "It was not necessary to go to China. Where is the man that brings your laundry every week? Couldn't you bring him?"

"O, I did not think to do that," answered Mrs. Gibbs. "I thought of the Chinamen across the sea. I longed to go there, and I would even have gone to Africa and braved the savages."

"How about the African in your kitchen?" answered the man at the gate. "She has a soul to save and she is precious in the sight of God. Did you ever teach her about the Savior?" "Why, no," said Mrs. Gibbs in surprise, "the colored people have their churches and their preachers and I did not think that necessary."

"How about your little newsboy, and the milk boy and the grocery boy? Have you told them how sweet it is to learn to remember their Creator in the days of their youth?"

Mrs. Gibbs shook her head sorrowfully. "I was so busy with my missionary meetings, I did not think to talk to those I saw every day."

"Well," said the man encouragingly, "if you forgot those who serve you, perhaps you have with you your own family. Surely your husband and children are coming to heaven with you. Where are they?"

"O," stammered Mrs. Gibbs, "of course they are, but they are not with me to-night. John is so busy at the office he hasn't much time for church, and my boy—well he does not think much about such things yet awhile, and my little daughter is just a child; but they will all come, I am sure."

"Are you so sure of that?" asked the man wistfully. "Look at the path that leads away from heaven just over there." Mrs. Gibbs looked, and she saw the Chinaman that brought her laundry trying to climb the hill and he kept slipping down and sliding into the path that led away from heaven's gate. "Poor fellow," said the man, "he does not know the way and he has no one to help him."

Then she heard a loud weeping and wailing, and there sat the old cook by the side of the road and over and over she said, "If my missus had only told me all about it. I am just a poor ignorant darkey and I didn't know the right way. Sometimes I wanted to ask her, but she was always too busy to talk to me."

Turning around, with her eyes swimming in tears, Mrs. Gibbs saw her husband and son and daughter, and they were holding each other's hands and running down the path that led away from heaven. "Come back," she called, "I will show you the way. This is the Heavenly Road." "O, you are too busy, mother; you never have time," called her son. And Mrs. Gibbs bowed her head in her hands and wept bitterly.

"I guess you have tried and you have worked very hard at the meetings and done a lot of missionary work," said the man at the gate, "so I will open the gate and let you in."

"No, no," cried Mrs. Gibbs, "I do not want to go in yet. I want to go back and get those I have left behind. I want to give more time to my husband and children, and I want to teach the Chinaman and the cook and the little boys who come to my house every day. It will not be heaven without them. Let me go back and try again. I have been so eager to make the missionary meetings a success and to go abroad where I could do great things that I have neglected the little things and those at home. These things I ought to have done and not leave the others undone."

"Ah," said the man at the gate.

"What silences we keep year after year With those who are most to us and dear. We live beside each other day by day, And speak of myriad things, but seldom say The full sweet word that lies just in our reach, Beneath the commonplace of common speech."

"That is so," said Mrs. Gibbs, waking with a start, and then in meek humility she bowed her head and prayed:

"Dear Lord, grant me wisdom; not that I May pose as one who clambered high, And count myself superior clay To those less learned. God, I pray For wisdom and a clearer mind To aid the ones who come behind." New Orleans, La.

"TIME OUT."

A Rushing Business.

"Cancel my order at once," came the telegram to the factory. The owner perpetrated the only new joke in the millennium. His telegram in reply read: "Your order cannot be cancelled at once. You must take your turn."—New York Evening Post.

A Real Accomplishment.

"Don't you wish you was a bird, Jimmy, and could fly away up in the sky?" mused little Jean dreamily.

"Naw!" scorned Jimmy. "I'd rather be a elephant and squirt water through my nose."—Kind Words.

"A Bird In The Hand."

"I'm a very busy man, sir. What is your proposition?" "I want to make you rich." "Well, leave your recipe with me and I'll look it over later. Just now I'm engaged in closing up a little deal by which I expect to make three dollars and a half in real money."—Selected.

A GOOD SHOWING IN CENTENARY GIVING.

The Sunday schools of the church are making an excellent showing in the matter of Centenary payments. Some weeks ago the statement was made that for the seven months of 1921 payments by the Sunday schools on Centenary pledges showed gains over 1920 with the exception of one month of the seven—August, 1921, went beyond August, 1920; hence for seven out of eight of the months of the present year payments were in advance of those of the corresponding months of last year.

In total amounts paid by Sunday schools to August 31 the following are the first ten Conferences, with amount paid by each: Virginia, $81,613.88; South Georgia, $42,834.12; North Alabama, $39,958.82; North Georgia, $38,868.15; Western North Carolina, $35,438.86; Florida, $29,551.74; Holston, $28,155.85; Central Texas, $26,342.11; Alabama, $26,071.38; North Texas, $25,487.65.

In amount per member paid, this on the basis of total Sunday school membership for 1920, the first ten Conferences, in order named are: Florida, West Texas, Virginia, Los Angeles, South Georgia, New Mexico, Denver, Little Rock, Illinois, Kentucky. The largest per member payment, Florida, is 81 cents. When we take into account the fact that figures are on total membership, both the schools that made pledges and the schools that did not answer the call, it is hardly fair to the Sunday schools that are meeting their Centenary obligations. But the plan of the church in the Missionary Centenary was that each school make its pledge of five cents per member per month. The way is open for any school to make its Centenary pledge, beginning the present month or with October to make its monthly payments. The goal now before the Sunday school is "A Round Million Dollars by March 31, 1922." It can be reached if during the next few months all schools pay their pledges to date.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The latest report we have seen shows that about $688,000 was pledged in Louisiana to the Christian Education Movement.

Rev. Raymond Browning, one of our general evangelists, is assisting Rev. Wm. Schuhle in a meeting at Coushatta, La.

"We are progressing very nicely with our work on the Walnut Grove circuit, Mississippi Conference—the Lord has wonderfully blessed us this year," writes Rev. J. W. Price.

Revell and Company have announced that they hope to have Dr. S. A. Steel's new book, The Modern Theory of the Bible, ready by the last of October.

A National Prohibition Conference will be held at the Great Northern Hotel, Chicago, on November 29. The Prohibition National Committee will meet on the following day, at the same place.

A recent issue of the Daily Herald, of Biloxi, Miss., contained in full the sermon preached at the Methodist church on the preceding Sunday by the pastor, Rev. M. B. Sharbrough. It is good reading.

The Mission Board of the church is calling for more than 100 missionaries for the various fields in which it is operating at the present time. Preachers, teachers, physicians, nurses, deaconesses, and business men are wanted.

Rev. Dan Kelly, Mississippi Conference evangelist, has recently held successful meetings at Ida and Hosston, both in the bounds of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, and he will also assist Rev. I. T. Reames at Vivian.

Sam Haddad, a little Syrian boy, a member of the Sunday school at Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., now has his name on the Advocate subscription list through the kindness of his teacher, Mr. Rogers. We pray that it may be a blessing to him.

The Presbyterians and the Methodists of Brookhaven, Miss., began a union revival meeting last Sunday—the Baptist minister having declined to co-operate—in the Methodist church, with Rev. Geo. L. Bitzer, Presbyterian evangelist, doing the preaching.

The meeting at Pace, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. R. Goudelock, was assisted by Rev. John W. Robertson, of Rosedale, Miss., resulted in twenty-eight additions to the membership of the church. The meeting closed on the evening of September 10.

Mr. Allen B. Kling, of Sartartia, Miss., long a faithful and efficient official member of the Methodist Church, spent a day or two last week in New Orleans visiting friends and relatives. He favored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

A personal note from Rev. Robt. A. Clark, presiding elder of the Union City District, Memphis Conference, brings many pleasant memories of the days we were in college together. Brother Clark is well known in North Mississippi, having formerly been a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. J. A. McCormack, our pastor at Dubach, La., was assisted in a meeting at that place last week by Rev. J. M. Alford to do the preaching, and Rev. Frank C. Collins to lead the singing. In writing of his work, Brother McCormack says: "I have never served a more delightful charge."

In the recent training school for Sunday school workers conducted in Havana, Cuba, by Rev. J. L. Neill, one hundred and ten credit certificates were awarded for the completion of the courses offered. All the instruction was given in Spanish except the addresses by Brother Neill, which were given through an interpreter.

The Licensing Committee of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, granted license to preach to O. L. Tucker, of Crowley, La., at its recent meeting, and recommended him for admission into the Annual Conference on trial. The Committee also recommended Rev. Clell C. Gray for admission on trial.

The following significant item is taken from the Methodist Church notes in a recent issue of the South-Reporter, Holly Springs, Miss.: "Has your boy or girl gone off to school? Now is the time to make an impression. What will they read while away other than their books? Why not send them the New Orleans or the Nashville Christian Advocate?"

The Adult Missionary Society No. 2 of the Methodist church at Durant, Miss., adopted a unique plan to raise funds and entertain its friends recently—a trip around the world. To be sure the trip was altogether within the bounds of the city, but it was delightful and instructive, according to a news item we saw in one of the secular papers.

There is a fine suggestion in the note from Rev. C. A. Northington, Boyle, Miss.: "Dear Advocate: You will please visit my daughter, Miss Emma Northington, at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., for nine months." The suggestion is this—parents would be doing a fine thing to send the church paper to their sons and daughters who are off at college.

The Louisiana State Epworth League, in co-operation with the Shreveport City Union League, has opened an up-to-date office and library in the Kittrell Building, Shreveport. Rev. Jas. B. Grambling is the State field worker of the League, and he is energetically and enthusiastically at his task. Mr. W. B. Glover is president of the Shreveport City Union.

Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper will reach their home at Brookhaven, Miss., about October 1, after a delightful trip through Europe. Whitworth College will open before their arrival, but every detail of its management is in thoroughly competent hands, and indications point to one of the most prosperous sessions in the history of this great school.

The meeting at Boyle, Miss., Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor, will begin on October 9. The preaching will be done by Rev. W. C. Swope, one of our general evangelists. The work of the Boyle charge is in good shape, indications now pointing to "Everything in full, Bishop," at Conference. There have been eighty additions to the church since the first of the year.

A note from the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, informs us that the work on the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, is progressing nicely. The pastors are doing fine work and the people are appreciative and responsive. There have been splendid revivals throughout the district. The increase of the price of cotton is greatly cheering the farmers, and there will be good collections.

All the Methodist churches of Shreveport, La., are co-operating with the Texas Avenue Church in a great tent meeting that is being conducted by Rev. George Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., and Charles B. Wiatt, musical director. Two thousand people were in attendance at the meeting last Friday night. Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, writes that great results are expected from the meeting.

Centenary College opened at Shreveport, La., on Sept. 14, with an attendance in college and academy of 150, and the number is increasing from day to day. The citizens of Shreveport are interested in Centenary as never before, and are following the enthusiastic leadership of President Sexton in making it one among the very best of all our institutions of learning.

The revival meeting recently held in First Church, Laurel, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. O. S. Lewis, did the preaching, was attended by gracious results. Five adults were baptized and received into the membership of the church at the closing service of the meeting, and others will be received later. Thus far, eighty new members have been added to this church since the first of the year.

The Daily American-Press, of Lake Charles, La., is very generous in the amount of space it devotes to matters of church interest. In its issue of September 14 it gave a full account in prominent position of the reception tendered to Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes and Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Battle by the congregation of the Broad Street Methodist Church on Tuesday evening of last week. In the same issue there were several other items of church news also.

Under date of Sept. 16, we received the following note, which brought sorrow to us, as it will, we are sure, to the many friends of Brother Barr: "Our father, Rev. R. H. Barr, is very low, here at his home in Foxworth, Miss. All that is possible is being done, though it seems that the end is very near. We ask the prayers of the Christian readers of the Advocate." The note was signed by Miss Ursula Barr, and we are sure our readers will comply with her request.

Among the ministers of our church taking part in the opening exercises of the public schools, we have recently noted the names of the following in the press dispatches: Rev. S. H. Caffey, at Webb, Miss.; Rev. J. D. Wroten, Rev. E. B. Sharp, and Rev. W. N. Duncan, at Moorhead, Miss.; Rev. J. M. Guinn, at Crenshaw, Miss.; Rev. J. T. Abney, at Hazlehurst, Miss.; Rev. W. S. Shipman, at Ruleville, Miss. There were many others, doubtless, taking part in these exercises whose names we failed to see.

Rev. Ben P. Jacob, who, all along, has been Centenary Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, has recently been made Centenary Treasurer also. The week of October 23-30 has been designated as the period within which payments on all pledges should be brought to 60 per cent of the total amount pledged, and all presiding elders, pastors, treasurers, and collecting committees are called upon to do their best during that time to reach the goal.

The following instructions, issued by the War Department on September 1, are a fine acknowledgment of the significance of the Sabbath in the life of the nation: "The sentiment of the nation concerning Sabbath observance should be respected and no marches, except in cases of necessity, be made on Sunday. Opportunity should be provided for religious services, conducted by the chaplain or through community co-operation, and dignified publicity of such services should be made."

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor at Indian Bayou, La., still has a supply of the leaflets containing his article, "The Relation of the Public School Teacher to the Church," reprinted from the Bulletin of the Board of Education, which he will furnish in lots or to individual addresses for five cents a copy. It would be a fine thing for this leaflet to be placed in the hands of all our public school teachers if possible, and we should be glad to see our pastors and others interested in the work of the church and of the schools take advantage of Brother Lowrey's proposition. The article is well worth anybody's reading.

The death of Mr. Henry Ueber, in San Antonio, Texas, on Thursday morning, September 15, brought great sorrow to a wide circle of friends in New Orleans, where he had lived most of his life, and in other places in Louisiana where he was well known. Mr. Ueber was the father of Mrs. A. I. Townsley, wife of Rev. A. Inman Townsley, now pastor of Alamo Heights Church, San Antonio, but formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, and he had made his home with his daughter and son-in-law for several years. The body was brought to this city for interment and the funeral services were held at Second Methodist Church, of which the deceased had long been a member, on Saturday afternoon, the services being conducted by Rev. J. A. Alford, the pastor, assisted by the editor of the Advocate. The large number of people at the church and the many beautiful floral offerings attested the esteem in which the deceased was held in this city. He is survived by his two children, Mr. H. J. Ueber, of this city, and Mrs. A. I. Townsley, of San Antonio, his wife having died several years ago. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to these upon the going away of so good a man as was their father.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, McComb, Miss., 3; Rev. H. B. Thomason, Standard, La., 2; Rev. Jas. M. Lewis, Collins, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Price, Walnut Grove, Miss., 2.

PALMER CREEK CAMP MEETING.

We have been requested to announce that the Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will begin at the well known camp grounds near Saucier, Miss., about October 1. Rev. Aden P. Williams will have charge of the meeting, and B. G. Grenfell, a noted revival evangelist, will conduct the music.

CHURCH DEDICATED AT GEORGETOWN, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Yesterday I had the pleasure of dedicating our beautiful Methodist church in Georgetown. The church was beautifully decorated, and the choir rendered special and inspiring music. It was a delightful service. No collection was necessary.

The good women deserve great credit for their heroic, consecrated and unremitting labor of love in paying off the debt and keeping things in good condition.

Brother Baggett is doing a good work and is greatly loved by his people.

Sincere regards and best of good wishes.

Most cordially,

H. M. ELLIS.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

III.

One of the significant things in Korea is the crowded condition of the schools and the new eagerness for education. Previous to this time the Koreans have not manifested the interest in schooling that is so universal among the Japanese. But a new educational era has struck the land. Capacity attendance is found in all of the institutions, and great numbers have gone to Japan for higher training. It is said that there are more than one thousand Korean students at present in Tokyo.

At the present time (June) there does not appear any revolutionary demonstration among the people. It is said that the futility of the demonstration of the past year has been the reason back of the large influx into the schools. A free people must have not only a desire for, but a capacity for liberty. Certainly the desire for liberty is the most active emotion in the life of the people. And now they are determined to achieve the capacity for liberty also.

The new educational era presents both hope and foreboding to the church. It may be a bright hope if it is utilized for evangelism. It is full of foreboding if it is ignored or dealt with slightly by the church. Satan will not surrender his grip in Korea without a struggle. And the beginning of a larger struggle than ever before seen is at hand. Already the atheism which has so largely burned out the educational institutions of Japan is beginning to appear. It is seeping in with increasing volume through Japanese literature and education. A race is now on in Korea. The contest is between Christ and Atheism. Great waves of materialistic philosophy within the next few years will do their utmost to poison the spiritual and intellectual life of the people. Now is the golden hour for Christianity to erect bulwarks against this invasion. The native church in Korea is not strong enough to withstand the shock of a wave of rationalism which within a decade, or at most two decades, will strike the nation. Japanese education is pagan education and is being mightily used to hinder students from finding the truth that saves.

To meet the crises a new educational program must be considered by the church. The M. E. Mission conducts a Middle School in Seoul with 700 students and only one missionary in the institution. This is young Appenzeller, the principal. I preached for a week to this student body and about 500 pledged themselves to follow Christ. With those who were already Christian, practically the entire school has decided to believe. I shall not soon forget the burden on Appenzeller's heart which looked out of his eyes when I left the closing service. Several hundred young men to save and to shepherd and to defend against the combined forces of heathenism and atheism! And a great church has been able to give one man to this task. Our own institutions present a similar need. Spirit-filled men and women must come forth to educate in order that Satan may not build again with materialism the walls of heathenism which have fallen down.

An outstanding need is a great Christian literature. There is no department of Missions that will yield a higher increase upon the investment than this department. The cost is so small compared with the results to be achieved, that every dollar which can be expended in this way should be forthcoming from the church. How can you develop a great ministry without books? Methodism has never tried to do it in England or America. Publishing plants have from the beginning been an essential in our evangelism. But Christian literature is crowded into a corner over here. What is the reason? The force is too small, and men can't be spared for this work.

Probably no mission field is more fortunate than Korea in its missionary personnel. But to meet the present crises the church must at once recruit its force with a large company of men and women, "full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." A missionary without a Divine Christ and a Holy Bible would be both embarrassed and an embarrassment in this land. He would be embarrassed by the responsibility of leading a native church further advanced in Divine revelation than himself. He would be an embarrassment to a people whose only salvation is the blood of Christ, and whose only source of truth is the inspired word. But what an opportunity is offered to the preacher of the Christ and his cross! An opportunity to win souls that thrills the heart, and stimulates body, mind and soul to its best endeavors. Korea must have more of these preachers, men and women, to make sure the victory of Christ and to build a church that the gates of hell may not prevail against it.

On all my expeditions prayer made me stronger, morally and mentally, than any of my non-praying companions. It lifted me hopefully over the one thousand five hundred miles of forest tracks.—Henry M. Stanley.

JAMES WAVER BORING was born April 8, 1848, and was married to Carrie J. Johnston in December, 1877, who made him a wife of remarkable strength of character. The fruit of this union was Charles Boring, Mrs. R. L. Wilson, Clarence W. Boring, M. D., Emma Boring, Mrs. James Montgomery, Anna Boring, Alice Boring, Mrs. E. V. Chauvin. There are seven grandsons, one granddaughter. Brother Boring's church membership was held in the Opelousas church. Such men are the quiet, loyal, vital force in Methodism. They carry on through the heat and burdens of the years, and make the itinerancy possible. Unselfish, charitable, a good church-worker and a helpful neighbor, he was superintendent at Bellevue until his health broke down, and was assistant superintendent until his death. His sickness extended over a period of six years, and the crisis came on the 8th of June, and his tired body offered up the spark of life on June 23, 1921. After he had suffered much in the flesh, he was strengthened, settled, established in the beautiful grace of God. The day of his decease his remains were brought to Lafayette Methodist Church, and the presence of a large concourse of friends bore witness to how the good man was cherished in these busy days. He was buried by the Rev. Harry W. Rickey of Lafayette at the Protestant cemetery.

On August 21, 1921, W. B. DIAMOND passed to his reward. Brother Diamond was 78 years old. He served in the Confederate army during the war between the States. After the close of the war he settled in Franklin Parish, near Winnsboro, where he lived until his death. He was honored and loved by those who knew him. He became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at old Magnolia Church, in 1909, under the pastorate of Rev. T. S. Randle. Since that time he has loved his church, and died in the faith. He is survived by his wife and two sons, and a host of friends, who miss him. Our loss is his gain, and we weep not as those that have no hope. The funeral services were held in the Winnsboro Methodist Church, and were conducted by Rev. H. W. May and the writer. His body was then laid to rest in the Winnsboro cemetery. A. D. GEORGE.

Gilbert, La.

F. M. MORGAN was born February 8, 1844, and died August 26, 1921. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his going, besides a host of grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and friends and relatives. A wife and three children await him on yonder bright shore. He was one of the few old Confederate soldiers living—and now gone to his reward. His home was near Cato, Miss., and his remains were laid to rest in the Ross cemetery at Cato. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Charles Strait. He had for many years been a patient sufferer of untold miseries but through it all he always looked to higher things, and just before going he said, "I want to go home." To the bereaved ones we can only say, "Weep not as those who have no hope, for ere the tide turns we will see him again if we only follow in his footsteps." His great-granddaughter, MYRTLE SMITH.

FROM BENTON CHARGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: We have just concluded our revivals on the charge. Our charge is made up of three churches, Benton, Midway, and Zeiglerville.

We held our first meeting at Midway. Here we were assisted by Brother Barney Lewis, of Eden. Brother Lewis did us some excellent preaching. As a result we had eight accessions on profession of faith.

From Midway we went to Zeiglerville, where we were assisted by Brother C. H. Strait, of Florence. Brother Strait did not fail to declare the whole counsel of God, and as a result of our labors God blessed us by giving us nine bright children on profession of faith. On the last night of the meeting the good people of Zeiglerville filled the pastor's flivver full of good things to eat, making glad our hearts and assuring us that they were behind us.

We concluded our campaign at Benton. Here we were assisted by Brother T. B. Cottrell, of Vicksburg. Brother Cottrell did us some very excellent preaching, as a result of which the spiritual condition of the church is greatly improved and we had one accession by transfer.

On last Wednesday afternoon our hearts were made glad by the good people of Benton, after we had enjoyed a meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society. On our return from the church to the parsonage, the good ladies began to pour in with armfuls of good things to eat.

Truly God will care for his own. As we pen these words we cannot help but exclaim: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." Pray for us that God may use us for his glory and the bringing of his kingdom in.

E. A. KING, P. C.

WHAT THE GENERALS SAY.

The Duke of Wellington declared: "If you had seen but one day of war you would pray God never to see another."

Marshal Foch, according to Dr. Jordan, is recently quoted by LA PAIX PAR LE DROIT, as follows: "Napoleon fell because he forgot that a man cannot be God, that above the individual is the nation, above man is righteousness and that war is not the supreme end—above it is peace."

General Sir Ian Hamilton, of the British army, is quoted as saying: "If you wish for peace, away with hate propaganda."

Field Marshals Haig, Plumer and Robertson, and Generals Horne and Rawlinson, all of the British Empire, recently subscribed to the following: "The passions from which war springs are not dead. There is only one hope of peace on earth and good will among men, and that lies in nations framing their ideals and their policy on the plain, old, simple rules of right and wrong, and on the teachings of Jesus Christ, the world's only social hope and the sole promise of world peace."

General Pershing, in an address in New York, December 29, 1920, speaking of a reduction of armaments stated: "Unless some such move be made, we may well ask ourselves whether civilization does not really reach a point where it begins to destroy itself and whether we are thus doomed to go headlong down through destructive war and darkness to barbarism."

General Bliss, late chief of staff, U. S. Army, wrote March 27, 1921, to the Church Peace Union: "If the clergymen of the U. S. want to secure a limitation of armaments, they can do it now without any further waste of time. If the churches cannot agree upon that, it will not be done nor will it be done until the good God puts into them the proper spirit of their religion."

Maj.-Gen. Sir Fredk. Maurice states: "I went into the British army believing that if you want peace you must prepare for war. I believe now that if you prepare thoroughly for war you will get war."

After all, the ultimate authority should not be the generals, but Jesus Christ. And if they urge the necessity of a policy leading to disarmament, should we not support our president and representatives at Washington and let them know what we want? Write them. W. C. ALLEN.

"There cannot be an afterward of elation unless there is a now of obedience."

WHAT MAKETH A PALACE?

There's a Something that maketh a palace

Out of four little walls and a prayer;
A Something that seeth a garden
In one little flower that is fair;
That tuneth two hearts to one purpose
And maketh one heart of two;
That smiles when the sky is a gray one,
And smiles when the sky is blue.

Without it no garden hath fragrance,
Though it holdeth the wide world's blooms;

Without it a palace a prison
With cells for banqueting rooms;
This Something that halloweth sorrow
And stealeth the sting from care:
This Something that maketh a palace
Out of four little walls and a prayer.

FROM JACKSON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Our beloved presiding elder, J. W. Lee, began his fourth round of quarterly conferences here on September 4, and preached both morning and evening to excellent congregations. Needless to say, both sermons were very helpful and fully appreciated. At the morning service, Holy Communion service was held, and the communicants were more numerous than usual. Six adults were baptized and six received into the church by vows. The quarterly conference was held in the afternoon, with an excellent attendance of church officers. Written reports were furnished from every department, and there will be very few places on the Baton Rouge District that will excel

Teaching Points.

In this review of the life of Paul as we have studied it thus far, we may very well lay special emphasis upon the missionary significance of his life and ministry. The thoughtful teacher will find many events that are exactly in line with missionary work to-day.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Sunday, the 11th, was spent at Pearson, with Brother Applewhite. He had his fourth quarterly conference, which for this early was mighty fine. The school, under the superintendency of Brother Corley, promised to introduce the graded literature for the Beginners and they agreed to have a Cradle Roll. They purchased two dozen leaflets, "Methodism," to distribute among their membership, and 50 for Rankin Street. They still are talking building at Rankin Street. I trust that they will succeed in putting it over.

Tuesday was spent at Spring Ridge Church, on the Terry charge. They agreed to observe one Sunday for missions, to introduce the graded literature for the Beginners, and to have a Cradle Roll.

Wednesday was spent at Terry. We had the pleasure of attending the fourth quarterly conference here.

Thursday was spent at Forest Hill. We had a good day here. A Cradle Roll was organized and graded literature was introduced for the Beginners and they agreed to have missionary Sunday.

Friday was spent at Byram. A

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots. Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin, and gain a beautiful clear complexion. Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Cradle Roll, Missionary Sunday and graded literature for the Beginners.

This was a missionary mass meeting for the Terry charge, meeting one day at each church. Brother Hawkins was present with his happy experience and messages. Brother Burton preached each day on Missions, and Mrs. B. F. Lewis and Mrs. T. B. Gaddis represented the Woman's Missionary work. The ladies succeeded in organizing two Missionary Societies, one at Forest Hill and the other at Byram. Brother Hawkins got an Epworth League organized at Forest Hill.

Brother Burton stood back of all the work and really was the cause of much of it being done. He is on the job and going strong. These meetings were to my mind very profitable and worth while. The folks were very kind to us and showed us many favors. Brother and Sister Harkey are doing a great work and are really trying to do constructive organized church work.

Sunday School District Institute for the Meridian District meets at Herbert Watkins Memorial, September 27, 2:30 p. m., and closes the next afternoon. Every school in the district should be represented. All Sunday school workers invited.

Please attend to the observance of Sunday School Day. At least take the offering and send it in.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

One of the important matters to look after on Promotion Day is the program of training teachers during the coming year. It is said, out of every hundred teachers in the Sunday schools of this country, only fourteen are college trained, and fifty-two per cent are under twenty-one years of age. We must give our teachers some training in the prayer life; we must teach them something of the nature of the children they are to train; we must teach them something of what and how to teach; or else they will unintentionally mutilate the immortal souls they mean to help. Every day this work is postponed, souls are slipping away from us.

In the class at Yardaman we had eighteen students; half of them came regularly, five schools were represented, and five took the examination for credit. All of them were benefited by the study. It will take time for our people to get away from the idea of the convention and the institute. Six days of real study and the passing of the examination makes them appreciate the meaning of teacher training.

Rev. Guy D. Burt and his wife are doing effective work on the Lamar circuit. It was my privilege to be with them at Harris' Chapel for four days, helping them to organize a Sunday school. The school will begin with four classes, beginner, primary, junior, and the home department. A committee to look after the recreational life of the young people was appointed by the pastor.

Rev. J. B. Randolph has organized twelve or more schools in his district during the year. There are other waste places in the Conference that ought to be occupied at once. The first of October is the beginning of the new Sunday school year.

It is said that only forty per cent of the children of Sunday school age are in church or Sunday school. Why so much lawlessness of every kind all over the country, why so many divorces, murders, "moonshiners," "bootleggers," suicides? As the Sunday school and the home fail to teach the rising generation, lawlessness shall wax worse and worse. Conditions are becoming intolerable in some places already. Nothing less than a desperate struggle can save us from paganism. "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent taketh it by force."

Loss of Vitality is loss of the principle of life, and is early indicated by falling appetite and diminishing strength and endurance. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer—it acts on all the organs and functions, and builds up the whole system.—Adv.

TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY.

Between August 25 and September 8, I saw considerable of these States. For nine days I was engaged in a camp meeting near Watertown, Tenn., under the auspices of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. I believe the camp ground was as pretty sight as I almost ever saw. The tents were so beautiful and white, nestling among large cedars, such as grow in Tennessee and Kentucky. It was my first experience of sleeping under a cloth tent, but I really enjoyed it. The meeting was of the old type—where the saints sang, prayed, fasted, and shouted, while sinners were deeply convicted, mourners genuinely converted, and God's children made perfect in love. It was worth the trip (to me) just to be in such a meeting as it was. The Presbyterian, Nazarene, and Methodist denominations were represented among the preachers.

The Kentucky Conference convening at Somerset, not so very far from the camp meeting, two days after I was to leave the camp, I decided to go by for a few days. Having attended Asbury College once, being there at its commencement in 1920, I knew several of the preachers; and I just naturally like to go to an Annual Conference anyway. Too, I thought I might be able to find a location in Kentucky that would be conducive to Mrs. Wells' getting well faster, as she still suffers with chronic malaria. I could easily find a place, but, without going into details (haven't the time nor space), I found Kentucky Methodism trailing considerably behind Mississippi Methodism, and we were fully convinced it was not the place for us, even though there is some less malaria there than here. But, the conference session that I attended (having to come home before it closed) was interesting. I heard Bishop Denny give the charge to two young men being taken into full connection. It was a masterpiece against the present trend of things; and he was so definite and clear in what he had to say about the Methodist preachers of to-day who are being led away into modern thought. Thank God for the man and his message!

I am glad my revival meetings are about over, for I am certainly getting anxious to be with my family and flock more. Cordially and brotherly,
J. A. WELLS.

FROM VAIDEN, MISS.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed here one of the most successful and far-reaching revival meetings ever held in this midst, so the old residents say. The preaching was most ably done by our capable and talented Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Amory, Miss. Smoot is a great preacher; he is sensible, sane and very evangelistic; he is a great scholar and his knowledge of men and the ways of the world makes him indeed very acceptable and worth while to have in a meeting. He ought to be filling the largest pulpit in Southern Methodism or at the head of some district in our Conference. Our beloved Rev. W. W. Woollard, of Grenada, Miss., was with us some time during the meeting. He, too, says Smoot is one of the biggest preachers in Southern Methodism. Brethren, those of you who can get Smoot's services, do so, for he will help you in many ways. He does not resort to any clap-trap methods—just gives the plain, pure Gospel in its simplicity, yet in a most attractive way, with choice English and impressive and emphatic manner. With the help of the Lord he moved men to action and to take a stand for the cause of righteousness who had heard Sam Jones and McIntosh and others, and yet had never moved before. We indeed had a glorious meeting. The entire community is on higher ground spiritually. Pray for us that we may scale greater heights. All glory and praise to the dear Lord for what is done.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

Make all checks payable to Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Treasurer.

Please be sure your check is correct before mailing—that is, that you have the correct amount and that the written part and the figures agree.

Those who handle City Mission vouchers please attend to this matter every quarter, and do it just as promptly as the other work. Don't wait until the close of the year and then have to wire figures. It is not a good plan.

Also list Bible women and scholarships, with amount for each, just as you formerly did. Also give names of life members, whether Adult, Young People, Juniors, or Babies, with amounts for each. It is very necessary for this to be done.

Please do not include in your quarterly report anything you have already sent in. Your Conference already has credit for it, and it should not be reported.

Do not wait until the very last minute to mail your reports. If there are delays in the mail, yours may be left out for that quarter, for the books must close on October 20, also January 20. Send in time for same to reach the office before that date.

A strict observance of the above will greatly help your Treasurer in Nashville.—Council Bulletin.

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY IN CHINA.

Much that is not only good, but of great value to the rest of the world in the life of China to-day needs to be conserved and adapted to the new order. It is certain that unless conscious thought and effort are given in this direction all good in the present social and economic life will be destroyed. To-day the agricultural village and the domestic form of industry characterize Chinese life. In this system women play a large part. They are found on tea plantations, in rice and cotton fields, and within the homes and shops. They are again found alongside the men in the handicraft guilds as embroiderers of fine silks, spinners, weavers, makers of fire crackers and spirit (paper) money, as well as in many other crafts. Both the women of the South and the "big feet" women (a group who have never bound their feet) of Foo Chon, have from time immemorial worked side by side with the men, carrying bricks and mortar, driving piles, and piling loads. One such group of women in their guild union had a vow to the effect that since they now earn eighteen cents a day and were economically independent they would not yield to a forced marriage or submit to the mother-in-law rule. Thus in China to-day the woman laborer joins the student in her demands for independence.

The conditions of life in these agricultural and domestic industries have caused a high percentage of tuberculosis, elephantiasis and anemia. The work is incessant, and the standards of living are very low. They know no comforts, are usually crowded in living, and rice, very often, is the only food.

What are the elements, then, in the old system that are of value? What experience have the Chinese had that leads us to feel they can make a contribution to a better modern industrial system than we have yet evolved.

First of all, her craft masters, a nation of skilled hand workers. Patterns surpassing any tapestry in the world; china equal to the rarest, and all done by whom? Plain working men, farmers, wives and daughters. Individual initiative and skill among her working people are universal. Secondly, there is in their lives to-day the element of variety. In the street shop or in the home the worker carries the job from its beginning stages to its completion. At the same time the day's work is interrupted by the life in and about the home and the shop. Thirdly, we see in the old China a marvelous ability to conserve human energy by careful adjustment to one's work. At the hand loom in the home the worker adjusts her seat, whether tall or short, to the proper height. It is only because of such elements as these and as equally marvelous mental control that the masses in China have been able to sustain life in spite of their lack of sanitation, their incessant work, and low standards.—From the Report of the Deputation from the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions.

FROM THE MACON CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: As it seems to be the order of the day "to render an account of thy stewardship," I will send a short report of my year's work, which I think will be of interest to some.

We have made some progress in the work during the year. When I came to the work last fall, I found work had been begun on one of the churches on the charge and a new roof had been put on the same. The work was continued on this church until about $1,000 was spent in improving the church at Salem. Then, later on, the ladies of X-Prairie decided that their church needed overhauling and they went to work and spent $300 on their church. This gives us two of the best country churches I know of anywhere. These should be a source of pride to the citizens of both these communities.

We have just finished our revival work for the year, with fairly good success. I was assisted in my meeting at Soul's Chapel by Rev. Olin Ray, of Macon, who did us some very effective preaching. We had a fairly good meeting at this place. With very few people living in the community, our attendance was not very good. We had one accession to the church on profession of faith. Our next meeting was held at X-Prairie, with Rev. E. H. Cunningham doing the preaching, which was well done. The meeting continued to grow in interest till the last service. We had a very fine meeting here among the membership of the church. Cunningham is fine help and a hard worker if you will just give him plenty of ham to eat. My next meeting was at Salem where I had as my help Rev. T. E. Gregory, of Columbus, Miss. We had a very fine revival at this place, with 20 conversions and 16 additions on profession of faith. We had an old-fashioned revival here, with the shouts of victory. Gregory is very effective help and one of the hardest workers I have ever had.

We rejoice in these evidences of God's blessings upon us and our work, and give Him all the honor and praise. It has been our chief end and aim to hold up Jesus as the only means of salvation from sin, and the burden of the messages that all the brethren brought was to this end.

C. WESLEY BAILEY, P. C.

The appeal of religion calls us to the knowledge of the constraining love of Christ. It is not the church which is at stake. That is only an instrument. It is not religion itself, for that cannot be destroyed. But it is our life and the life of this generation in which we live. Therefore, oh, how overwhelming the logic, let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering.—F. Q. Blanchard.

LORENZO DOW.

By Rev. Alfred Ngou, Ph. D.

Many years ago, a lone wood-chopper was at work in the recesses of the forest near Montville, Conn. The monotony of his task was relieved in an unusual way. In a desolate place not far from his work, a singular character stopped his horse, dismounted, and proceeded to a stump near by. Mounting the rude pulpit, the plainly-clad stranger drew from his saddle-bags a Bible and perhaps a song book and conducted a religious service of song and prayer and sermon to an audience entirely invisible—unless the speaker had chanced to spy the workman. At the close of the service, the preacher put away his books, and announced that he would speak again at the same place one year from that day, and forthwith proceeded on his journey. The wood-chopper spread the story of the service, and at the appointed date a good congregation was awaiting the message from the strange prophet, who appeared on time and again made the Montville woods ring with his stentorian tones.

Such is the story told of Lorenzo Dow, the eccentric preacher of the earliest American Methodism. No name among the pioneer New England Methodist divines was better known than his; no name, perhaps, has been repeated oftener in the six-score years, for Methodist women in large numbers named children for him. Not a few preachers, some of them of wide fame and great usefulness, were called "Lorenzo Dow." He was never a full member of a Conference. After much discussion he was admitted on trial, and served two or three years in that capacity. When finally told that the brethren had declined to admit him "in full," he was in deep distress, but to no avail. What were the reasons for the meteoric career of Dow and why did he not find a place in the regular ministry? Such questions will persist in the mind of any one reading the annals of those early days.

Lorenzo Dow was an extremely active man. We find him by the Atlantic shore, in the hilly interior, on the mountains of New England, in the Hudson Valley, across the line in Canada. Under a singular obsession he hies his way across the ocean and takes up a voluntary but nearly resultless mission in Ireland. He was an attractive preacher. In Chester he conducted a preaching service in a home, and introduced his sermon by saying that he would give out a text that would never be forgotten. Then, taking from his capacious pocket a huge time-piece, often carried in those days, he held it up and said, "Here is the text: 'What I say unto you I say unto all—watch!'" He was very fond of the camp-meeting, and perhaps introduced it to New England. We find him in Norton, near the present East Mansfield, "where Zadock Priest died at old Father Newcomb's," on whose ground "George Pickering, with eleven of his preachers and myself, by agreement, held a camp-meeting." The content of the specimen of his sermon before me shows no brilliancy or special power; but the people thronged to hear him.

He was evidently a man of deep piety and strong sympathy. His methods may not have been wise, but his heart was in his message, and he impressed the people with his sincerity and zeal. He often persistently refused compensation for his services. Yet his eccentricity was always in evidence. The story of his marriage is characteristic. At Weston lived a man named Miller, whose house was a so-called Methodist tavern. Miller had traveled a hundred miles with Dow, to his several appointments, and came one night near his home, to which he invited the preacher for the night. Miller had an adopted daughter, Peggy, who had said she would never be married unless it were to a preacher who would continue traveling. Mr. Dow, meeting Peggy, asked if the report were true, and she said it was. Thereupon, with little or no previous acquaintance, he said, "Did you think you could accept of such an object as me?" He told her later that if she were so inclined, he would, if alive, be back in about a year and a half, and if she were still single, and would allow him to travel without her twelve months out of thirteen or three years out of four, and he found no one he liked better than he did her, perhaps something further might be said. The time passed, he returned, and they were married on September 3, 1804. Peggy proved to be a fine helpmate, and they journeyed far and wide for many years.

Were the preachers in error in rejecting Lorenzo Dow as a regular preacher? Possibly sympathy for him, thus rejected, helped to enhance his popularity. Yet it is plain that Asbury could not have consented to any other procedure. Dow had a way of leaving his appointments for months. At last, when he was appointed on the Hudson, we find him straying to Canada and to Vermont, without leave, and even darting off on a self-constituted mission across the seas. Yet his memory was long cherished, and for many years his name was a household word in New England Methodism.—Zion's Herald.

A LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE ITS SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

WIFE TAKES HUSBANDS ADVICE

And Is Made Well Again by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Springfield, Mass.—"The doctor told my husband that I had to have an operation, otherwise I would be a sickly woman and could not have any more children on account of my weakened condition. I refused to have the operation. My husband asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it would not help me. For the first four months I could do but little work, had to lie down most of the time, was nervous and could eat hardly anything, but my husband was always reminding me to take the Vegetable Compound, which I did. Of my eight children this last one was the easiest birth of all and I am thankful for your Vegetable Compound. I recommend it to my friends when I hear them complaining about their ills."—Mrs. M. NATALE, 72 Fremont St., Springfield, Mass.

Sickly, ailing women make unhappy homes, and after reading Mrs. Natale's letter one can imagine how this home was transformed by her restoration to health. Every woman who suffers from such ailments should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It is surely worth while.

FROM THE GUEYDAN-ESTHER- WOOD CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: A word from the Gueydan-Estherwood charge. Crops are fine and the prospects of a good harvesting season and good prices are encouraging. We are happy to report that we have one fine young lady off for Mansfield, Miss Martha Amy, of Iota, La.

We recently held a splendid revival in Estherwood, La. The weather was hot, but Brother P. O. Lowrey, who did the preaching for us, was equal to the occasion. I would just like to say that Brother Lowrey did some fine work and real eloquent preaching for us, if, as some one has said, eloquence moves the folk to break away from sin. He knew when to quit, too.

Two men were reclaimed; one man, two women, and six young people were converted. The two ladies and the six young people joined the church. Also we baptized two children during the meeting. Besides this, the whole church was revived and every one was glad that God had blessed us in such a way.

As I did not report our Easter Sunday services at Gueydan, I will do so here. By the co-operation of our teachers in Gueydan, our Decision Day services resulted in the accession of eight young people to our church.

Wishing you the best of all things,
I am, your brother in Christ,

A. A. BERNARD.

FROM JACKSON, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Our beloved presiding elder, J. W. Lee, began his fourth round of quarterly conferences here on September 4, and preached both morning and evening to excellent congregations. Needless to say, both sermons were very helpful and fully appreciated. At the morning service, Holy Communion service was held, and the communicants were more numerous than usual. Six adults were baptized and six received into the church by vows. The quarterly conference was held in the afternoon, with an excellent attendance of church officers. Written reports were furnished from every department, and there will be very few places on the Baton Rouge District that will excel in attendance and spiritual atmosphere this conference.

Brother M. McLean, from Istrouma—a native of Jackson—is preaching here twice next Sunday. Brother Carley, your esteemed father was the first pastor to live in our parsonage, and you, as a little boy, ran around. Won't you visit us some day and preach for us, and renew your boyhood recollections of this hallowed ground? The same invitation and welcome is given to other preachers who knew Jackson in better days. Yours fraternally,

OXFORD CAMP MEETING.

Dear Advocate: As the Oxford Camp Meeting has long since ceased to be a local affair, I feel that a short sketch of the fiftieth anniversary of this celebrated place would be of wide interest.

Six or seven States were represented in the vast crowds which gathered there August 13-19. These were the friends, converts and many of "the old guard" and erstwhile neighbors and citizens of Lafayette County who used to attend the great annual revivals in the years gone, and who, although far and wide now, still have a warm place in their dear hearts for the noted and sacred place which has been to them as Jerusalem to the affectionate old Jews. They persist in coming back home, many of them, every summer to see the faces dear to them through all the year and especially at the time of the camp meeting. There are two mighty forces in every good life, fellowship and Christian association. These two make us hang together forever, but the Spirit of Christ is the greatest cement and welder of human hearts. No power like that magnet to lift and unify and give highest social joy. Those who are strangers to that deep mysterious source of good will and love have never responded to the nobler feelings that lift men above the sordid, leaden instincts of material drudgery.

To our wise and deeply devoted Mrs. A. F. Calloway is due the praise of the interest taken this year more than to any other single individual. She early espoused the cause after last year's meeting, when it came near closing out. The tents were badly out of repair, concern for keeping it up lagging. She saw this and felt it keenly. It got possession of her heart. She rose up to agitate, by word and pen, and kept it before the people, not only of the local community, but through the press she stirred some lost chord every week and this awakening reached to people in Washington, D. C., Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Kansas, etc. Money was forthcoming from all these places and about $500 were sent in, which was spent on concreting the springs, putting down a fine pump well, repairing and building tents, etc. The preachers' tent was entirely overhauled, and the tabernacle is being recovered now in view of a greater Camp Meeting next year. Sister Calloway still has it in hand and is determined to make it greater and better in the years to come. Those who have frequented the historic old place for fifty years would hardly recognize it.

This was the fiftieth annual camp. Brother J. W. Poston, of precious memory, founded it. He selected a lovely spot suited by nature for such an end. Brother W. A. Wilson, our Conference evangelist, did the preaching this summer. He did it well and to the delight and profit of all. He is a strong, tireless, direct, fervid gospel preacher. He hews to the line but never cuts it. His preaching is a fine sample of the rational and spiritual attractively wedded.

There were three people who had attended every camp meeting for the entire fifty years. There were nine who attended the first one held in 1871. At the service when the test was made on rising, there were about sixty who had been converted at that altar.

This meeting was by far the best in fifteen years, according to the verdict of many. The crowds were immense—the great tabernacle would not accommodate half of the people. They came from far and near and the interest was the very finest from start to finish. Not one young man or woman of all the thousands who came day or night was ever seen or known to misbehave by word, act or insinuation. Now, put it in bold type. It deserves it. That of itself is the best index to the people who live in the community and their friends who come to enjoy the meeting with them. Mr. Editor, they are a rare, refined, noble, Christian people.

In addition to the vast numbers of visitors who came back, we were blessed and not a little cheered and comforted by the presence of such noble itinerants as Revs. A. W. Langley and James Porter, who preached once each to the delight of all. Those men know where the deep channel is and keep to it. Prof. J. R. Williams, of singing fame, led the singing and well, too. The whole week was an unusual time. No one can begin to tell or know what was accomplished in those days of mighty preaching and work. Long live the old Oxford Camp Meeting!

Every tree and shrub is a witness to the mighty heritage of the past. In those days far back such men as Dr. J. J. Wheat, no doubt the greatest preacher of his church in his day, Dr. Walker, and others (I forhear to call the roll of those worthies) ministered here.

LEE M. LIPSCOMB.

"PLOW AROUND IT."

This was Lincoln's counsel as concerning obstacles. "When you can't remove an obstacle," he said, "plow around it." But evidently he was not thinking merely of getting around the obstacle. Plowing usually implies planting. Men plow in order that they may drop seeds and look for harvest. To plow around an obstacle, then, may mean to invite harvests, hardly by our hindrances. And I can but think that an obstacle has a different aspect when we look at it across a waving harvest field. Life has obstacles aplenty. And some of them are irremovable. We cannot get them up and away. They may be left when we have passed on. Meantime to plow around them, making even the opposing rock yield cooling shadow, is to bless the world, and ourselves in the bargain.—George Clarke Peck.

Your Greatest Problem— That Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? You know, every parent knows, that it depends entirely upon the training he is getting right now, his associations, his ideals, his inspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of the Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys for twenty-five years. He wants your boy. He recognizes in him one of the men who may some day manage big affairs and he wants to train him for that end. His school has been built and equipped, and his instructors chosen with the first and only consideration of giving the boy the mental and physical training, the associations, with clean, high-minded men, the ideals of character, the inspirations to ambition, which the world expects. Robert K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome, inspiring personality, and his school is the material projection of that character. Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tennessee, today, and let him send you a catalogue and tell you what this school can do for your boy.

THE WORLD OUTLOOK OF METHODISM.

By Rev. J. Scott Lidgett, M.A., D.D.

An assembly of the representatives of the most numerous Protestant Church in the world ought in any case to be an event of great importance. Still more should this be so at one of the most critical epochs in the history of mankind, when vast issues are in the balance, when the world needs, above all else, great spiritual inspiration and leadership, and when the Christian Church is challenged to give that leadership by the fearless acceptance and application of the very truth by which and for which it lives. And, in addition, the numerical preponderance of Methodism is due to its position among the English-speaking peoples of the world, into whose keeping above all others Providence has, for the time being, committed the peaceful progress and well-being of mankind. Above all, Methodism, holding this position, has, from the first, been entrusted with exactly that conception of the meaning of the Gospel, the full realization of which would do more than all else to meet the manifold needs of a world which is groping and pining for the discovery of Sovereign and Universal Love. It is impossible that the Methodist Ecumenical Conference should meet without giving some indication of its World-Outlook, which will show clearly, if not conclusively, whether Methodism has or has not the spirit to fulfill its untold possibilities and to discharge its sacred trust.

A Strong Vantage Ground.

The vantage ground of Methodism is immensely strong. Its organization, diffusion, and numbers as a distinct denomination are the least part of its historic achievement. Its pervasive influence in all directions is vastly more important. Methodism was the means by which all the English-speaking churches of the eighteenth century were quickened. Under its influence, Anglicanism threw off its lethargy and became ashamed of its cold respectability, while Calvinism was transformed, and this not so much by the polemic of Wesley as by his evangelic sympathy and ardor. Even the Catholic Revival in England and beyond is directly traceable to Methodism, for Newman, the prophetic, and Manning, the organizing genius of that revival, owed the originating impulse of their religious faith to Methodist influence. The adventurous and fearless evangelism of Methodism carried vital Christianity far and wide, throughout the United States, to all parts of the British Empire, and over the mission fields of the world. It gave its witness to the experience and freedom of the Gospel in Roman Catholic countries. In doing all this, Methodism gave a great impulse, on the spiritual side, to the coming of democracy. It deepened and broadened the philanthropic temper, took a prominent part in the abolition of slavery, in the development of popular education, and in other movements for expressing high spirituality in terms of broad humanity.

To what has all this been due? There can be only one answer to this question. It has been brought about by the fact that Methodism, notwithstanding certain limitations, was led to interpret and proclaim God, not in terms of Sovereign Will, but as world-embracing and redeeming Love; and did this, not by the rejection, but by the inclusion of all those elements of the Christian faith which give the highest spiritual and the most far-reaching ethical contact to the doctrine of Love. The theology was as precise as the informing sympathy was all-pervasive. This apprehension of the Gospel of Love carried with it the four following implications. In the first place, the Divine Love sought after and gave itself for all mankind. Every man, therefore, however poor, alien, or degraded, had his inheritance in it. In the next place, all those who came to know this Love were thereby constrained to manifest its meaning and to further its purpose of universal self-bestowal. A self-centered and self-contained Christian was a contradiction in terms. Furthermore, this apprehension of God as Love came by way of a direct, soul-transforming and continuous experience. It established certitude, confidence and boundless hope at the heart of all true religion. Finally, Love, as thus revealed and imparted, became the primary and comprehensive motive of Life. The highest and yet the truly normal experience of every Christian was that of perfect Love. Herein—though this was for the time being not clearly disclosed—lay the spring of all progress, the making and safeguarding of all rights, the solution of all difficulties, and the remedy of all wrongs, for

"While the Truth of God remains,
The Goodness must endure."

Herein, then, is the distinctive witness, the permanent equipment, and the world-outlook of Methodism.

A New Order.

And what is the world-situation which the representatives of Methodism are called to consider, and with which, according to its measure, Methodism must deal? Men of every race and nation are seeking after a new order, international and political, social and economic. They are constrained to discover the guarantees of peace and security for freedom through the common pursuit of righteousness. They demand ampler self-fulfillment for the individual and a higher sense of social obligation for the community. They are inspired to seek the attainment of these ideals by hope; they are driven to them by fear. Yet they are suspicious of one another, distrustful of themselves, negligent or uncertain of God. For lack of the sovereign dynamic of Love the fulfilment of high hopes is delayed, the impulsive folly of fear spreads and grows. The old habits and methods of life, which seemed to have been cast out by the heroism of the war, are returning in full force and seeking to entrench themselves in more impregnable positions. Fresh illustrations are being given, day by day, of the poignant lament of the Prophet; "The children are come to the birth, and there is no strength to bring forth." In the absence of Love, Bolshevism sought to blast out a new road by terror. It has hopelessly and even avowedly failed. Yet what other way is open, save that of violence, now discredited, on the one hand, or of disheartened relapse into the old order, on the other? "I tell them," said a well-known English labor leader recently, speaking of the advice he had given to a meeting of poor women gathered to demand a rise of wages, "I tell them that, if they are to get anything they have got to fight for it." Thoughtful men, and, above all, religious men are everywhere asking if this be indeed the last word on the subject. For if it be so, then the very effort to seek ampler well-being and universal justice will bring about the destruction of the human race. Such a result would indeed be the negation alike of reason, of goodness and of God. Can the universe and its history be so meaningless? the life of man so self-contradictory and pitiful?

"The Energy of Love."

The fact is that the world is being led slowly and painfully to discover that, as Wordsworth said, Life "is energy of Love." It cries out for the assurance that Love "moves the sun and all the other stars." The truth of Divine, Sovereign, and Universal Love is the only foundation upon which a satisfactory world-order can be built. The manifestation and experience of this love will alone provide Society with its bond of union, the individual with the spring of life and the joy of self-giving, the reformer with the enthusiasm of patience, the plain man with the chivalrous sympathy and insight which will put him at the service of his fellow-man. In other words, the world must needs cry out for the gift of perfect love, of which Methodism had the vision, and await the more effective proclamation of the original Methodist message, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God," or, it shall be added, the Kingdom of Man.

To what end then will world-wide Methodism live on, except it have such fullness of its early experience as will renew for itself and enable it to proclaim to the world its original vision of the world bathed in the light and life of the Love which is revealed in Christ Jesus, our Lord? Such a renewed vision must be purged of its original shadows and limitations, must reveal, in a larger way, how all human concerns and needs are grounded in and articulated by Divine and universal love, and must provoke to a courage and rap- ture of devotion and service, such as were displayed by St. Francis of Assisi. The world would be saved in its present crisis were a double portion of the spirit of early Methodism to be bestowed upon its present adherents and were its original and originating world-outlook to be renewed, and to be perfected by the broader humanity, which is within our reach at the present day. Failing such renewal and perfecting, Methodism will never fulfill its promise and will linger on as the feeble ghost of a once great spirit. Its size, should it not shrink, will remain, not as a witness to the Divine power within it, but as the sign that it suits the convenience of the average man, provided he be a sufficiently good fellow to possess a sanguine and generous temperament.

Reunion.

At this point we are brought up against one of the principal questions that will occupy the attention of the Conference, the subject of the Reunion

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Second Paper.

I.

The organization of the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences into a separate, independent ecclesiastical connection and jurisdiction was an Ecclesiastical Revolution, achieved in strict conformity to constitutional principles, and in due and legal form; the General Conference of 1844 was vested with full legal and constitutional power to assent to, and did, by solemn compact and covenant, made manifest by regular parliamentary proceedings, assent to the creation and establishment of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. (Smith vs. Swormstedt, 16 How. 283-312.) The organization of Southern Methodism as a separate and distinct ecclesiastical jurisdiction was not a secession, but was pursuant to inherent and constitutional right, supported by precedent. Although the Southern Church was born in a revolution, its legitimacy is invulnerable; and it has received the seal of God's approval in a career of usefulness, which, under its peculiar limitations, is unsurpassed in modern times.

The revolution effected no change in doctrine, nor in the principles of the itinerancy and general superintendency inherent in American Methodism; but it introduced radical changes in constitutional and administrative principles, the rights and powers of the "traveling preachers" and bishops, and the relations and attitude of the church toward civil government and party politics. By those changes, Southern Methodism disencumbered itself of political entanglements and all ambitious schemes of a worldly nature, and addressed its energies solely to the salvation of men, the advancement of Southern civilization, striving alone for the laurel wreath of evangelism and Christian culture.

II.

Any attempted examination of the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the ascertainment of its intent and meaning and its application to the present-day life and activities and policies of the church, must be made and done in the light of contemporaneous history—the history of the period of its formation, 1844-1845. Any other method would be absolutely futile—the method of the sciolist and charlatan. Evidently, the eminent, learned, consecrated Christian gentlemen who led and the people who supported them in the organization of the Southern Church, and the formation of its government, examined and were conversant with the state of things as they existed at the time, and the then existing evils and mischief, and provided remedies intended for their correction and for the protection of the church against them for all time. The founders could not have intended less; they intended to provide full and adequate remedies, the first and foremost of which were separation and independence.

In the present state of feeling and sentiment, even in the South, it is an "invidious office" for any one to assume to state in the public prints the historical facts which led to the separation, the establishment of the Southern Church and the erection of its government. But, countervailing that consideration, it must be apparent to every thoughtful, observant Southern Methodist that Southern Methodism, with its distinctive characteristics, its sacred trust, its vast properties and institutions, educational and otherwise, is in peril—perhaps not imminent; but nevertheless actual and impending. The munificent contributions of the membership during the present quadrennium implies abiding faith in the official leadership of the church and permanency of the present status. "History is philosophy teaching by example." Now is a time when Southern Methodists should look each other in the face and tell the truth—the truth of history—the truth of present plans, purpose, opinions, and intentions—in so far as they affect the hope, usefulness and destiny of Southern Methodism.

III.

And the facts should be given to the membership at large—to the people of the church. For emergencies may arise when it may become the duty and the right of the people to judge of the constitutional powers of their Annual and General Conferences and of their bishops and other officers, and to construe and apply their own ecclesiastical constitution. As will be subsequently shown in this correspondence, it was by the immediate and direct sovereign power of 500,000 Southern Methodist people, affirmatively voting in the ratio of 95 to 5, that the jurisdiction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church over the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences was "entirely dissolved," and those Annual Conferences "constituted a separate ecclesiastical connection." In 1844-1845, the people of the church were advised, informed, consulted and acted in respect to a great matter which lay at the foundation of their social system, and, indeed, their civilization; and their "delegates in General Convention assembled" heard and obeyed their voice, and respectfully reported to them their action.

But in the recent history of the Southern Church, there has been a pitiful decadence in respect to all these things; the history of the creation and organization of the Southern Church, the causes necessitating it, the agencies active in its consummation, and the great principles involved, seem to have entirely faded from the memory of the present generation of men and women. In the old South, the home of every gentleman in the church was a school of Christian theology; he, as a general rule, possessed an adequate and liberal knowledge of the history and polity of the church, and his advice was sought and his opinions treated with deferential respect by the clergy. Those auspicious conditions have, however, vanished; the sociological and educational changes which have come to the South during the last 30 or 40 years have been a blight, a mildew upon ecclesiastical learning and ideal church life. The great body of the laity are now consulted only in regard to finance and investment. To the young people of the church, our ecclesiastical history is terra incognita. In the great educational movement, is this subject receiving any consideration? Mr. Gladstone declared: "No people can afford to effectually break with its past."

Intelligent, consecrated, loyal, militant Southern Methodism depends to a great extent upon its historic ideals, a consciousness of its superior ecclesiastical inheritance, and the power to know, construe and apply the principles of its polity to the vital living issues of the hour.

There can be no patriotism without a knowledge of the principles, and a belief in, the superiority of one's own government; the absence of these conditions has brought to the United States hordes of anarchists, and filled the land with crime, bloodshed, treason, defiance of law. May there not be ecclesiastical anarchists? And if so what is the remedy for the distempered, diseased Christian mind? Should not the church in its own government set an example for the world? The only hope of the South is an intelligent, pious church membership, humble before God, but loyal to and proud of its ecclesiastical history and polity, and faithful to its doctrines of salvation; and the current rant about Reconstruction is a delusion and a snare. Southern Methodism, aided by other evangelical churches, builded Southern civilization, and it must be preserved and advanced by the same spiritual forces.

IV.

The causes of the revolution which blessed the South with a separate, independent, indigenous Methodism, suited to the spirit and genius of its people, in accord with their views of civil and religious liberty, and the individualism taught by Jesus (Matt. 23:8-23) are many and varied, social, political and economic, some of them hidden away in the dusty records of the past. The constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is an evolution, unrolled out of the providence of God; a devout study of the subject must lead to this conclusion. The fact that the agencies of men have been active in the development cannot obscure the divinity of the controlling power; He maketh even the wrath of men to praise Him.

1. The personal, hierarchical government of Mr. Wesley which he had exercised over Methodism for full fifty years (Tigert's Constitutional History of American Methodism, 2d Ed. pp. 15-17), withered in the presence of the spirit of liberty which animated the American Colonies in the war for Independence and in their efforts to establish free political institutions. (ib. pp. 205, 206.)

For more than a century before the Declaration of Independence and the Christmas Conference, the colonists, many of whom had come to these shores to escape persecution and oppression, had been studying the civil, political, social and religious rights, liberties and immunities of men; their statesmen and jurists had studied and analyzed the history and nature of every government known in the record of time; they had suffered by the oppressions of the British crown and the exactions of the English Church; they knew their rights, the spirit of liberty permeated and inspired the whole people (except a small contingent of Tories), and it was impossible for an autocracy, whether civil or ecclesiastical, whether vested in one person or in many, to have gained a foothold in this country.

The Christmas Conference was cognizant of all these things; and hence the passing of Mr. Wesley and his government without a personal successor; and hence, also, it is seen that, from the beginning, the preachers carried their political opinions and convictions into their church councils and acted upon them, and so it has ever been.

2. The rejection of Mr. Wesley's governmental schemes, although a step toward ecclesiastical freedom and "soul liberty," fell far short of a just and well-balanced government, capable of securing the rights of all persons to be affected by its operation. All the powers of government, legislative, executive and judicial, were vested in the "traveling preachers," exercised by them first in "Mass General Conference," and afterwards in the "Delegated General Conference" established under the Constitution of 1808. The entire church sovereignty was vested in that body; there was no division of powers. (Smith vs. Swormstedt, supra.)

"When the legislative and executive powers are united in the same person, or in the same body of magistrates, there can be no liberty. There is no liberty, if the judiciary powers be not separated from the legislative and executive." I Spirit of Laws (Rev. Ed.) 151, 152.

The General Conference did, by the constitution which it made, impose limitations upon itself, and also enacted statutes for the protection of minorities; but there was always an element in the body which contended that the Conference, being supreme, could at any time override all statutes, restrictions and limitations; and that contention finally triumphed in 1844.

3. At an early date, the delegates carried into the General Conference the conflicting political theories of Hamilton and Jefferson, the one favoring a centralized government and a broad and liberal construction of the Constitution, whilst the other element were strict constructionists; and this divergence of opinion increased until it produced an "irrepressible conflict."

Doctor Tigert, in his Constitutional History, (2nd Ed.) pp. 371, 372, says:

"But this fact," a fact which he had just stated as one of the causes of estrangement, "must not blind us to an antecedent difference, which radically divided the northern and southern sections of the church on the nature of an ecclesiastical government, and particularly on the powers which the Delegated General Conference was entitled to exercise under the Constitution which had been given it. In our church, as in our nation, the division was along the line of strict construction of the powers delegated by the constitution, on the one hand, and a loose and broad interpretation of those powers, on the other. These differences in the church, instead of fading away with the lapse of time, have been accentuated at critical junctures, before, at, and since the division of Episcopal Methodism, until distinct and opposing conceptions of our church government, particularly of the powers and relations of the General Conference, the Annual Conferences, and the Episcopacy, have been crystallized in the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

It must be accepted as an indisputable fact that, apart from the question of slavery, there existed from the date of the adoption of the Constitution of 1808 "fundamental differences" between the northern and southern sections of the church in respect to each and every essential feature, branch and power of the government, and that those differences were the ultimate cause of the separation. In the last analysis, that is the whole case.

Nothing is more reasonable than that it should have been so. The traveling preachers, always patriotic, intelligent, and interested in public affairs, naturally carried into the church conferences their opinions respecting civil institutions, and hence arose the tendency to apply civil analogies to ecclesiastical affairs, and that tendency determined the fate of the church.

(Discussion of the events of 1844 must be deferred to another paper.)

Holly Springs, Miss.

A DELIGHTFUL VISIT TO THE WEST.

By Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D.

I met people in Los Angeles who could scarcely find words with which satisfactorily to describe the wonders of the city and the greatness of its future. One man who had prospered there for ten years, asked: "Where in all the world can you find a city that is building a thousand new houses every month?" Another one declared: "This country is the poor man's paradise. For two hundred and fifty dollars, a man can build a shack on Uncle Sam's reserves at a rental for the ground of $15 a year, and do business in Los Angeles by day."

Cheap living in this day of profiteering prevails to a large extent, and a marvelous unanimity among the people to popularize their city and make it attractive, largely explains its rapid growth. Nature has done everything for that city. It is within twenty miles of the Pacific, which makes it a seaport, thus opening up communication with the East, as well as the West, via the Panama Canal.

People from all over the world come this way. I saw a few negroes on the streets of San Francisco, and possibly one in Los Angeles. Of course, this race has representatives in both places, but I did not happen to see them. Chinese and Japanese are in evidence.

I rode through hundreds of miles of groves and orchards. On either side of the road golden oranges, pink peaches, rosy apples, yellow apricots, purple prunes, red cherries and green olives abound. Many of the vineyard people have grown rich, and live luxuriously. Grape growers from Italy, Greece and Japan, as well as different sections of the United States, are prospering. Their wine vats are dry, but they are selling their grapes at from eighty-five to over one hundred and twenty-five dollars a ton. The purchasers of these grapes claim that, under the Volstead law, it is lawful to manufacture wine for their own consumption.

A ton of grapes will yield about 150 gallons of wine. Much wine is used by Californians, but the accursed saloon is closed, though the bootlegger is doing business.

The national convention of the W. C. T. U. was held in San Francisco while I was there—the key note being the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Los Angeles is both a summer and winter resort. However warm the day, the night is always cool. Long Beach, twenty miles away, with its many hotels and apartment houses, is crowded with tourists. This city beside the ocean has a population of 60,000. It is not a suburban village, as is supposed, but a city with its own government and business houses, churches, schools, and so forth. The coast, for more than a hundred miles, is skirted with cities, bathing and amusement resorts. On the bluffs, within full sight of the ocean, are many residences of the rich. Oil wells are doing prosperously, and, of course, the sections devoted to the creation of moving pictures are thoroughly alive. Fairbanks, Chaplin, Mary Pickford and others of that class occupy beautiful residences in Hollywood. Some say that the city is indebted to the film makers for its magic growth.

While the theatres are said to be crowded, the churches are well attended. Our own Trinity Church, under the pastorate of Rev. Bob Shuler, musters an audience of perhaps a thousand at each service. He is popular in and out of Trinity. Big-hearted, sympathetic, fearless, mentally alert—he is doing a fine work.

Rev. C. C. Seecman, who worked here six or more years, is remembered with love by the people. Southern Methodism has a place and a work in that land of flowers and sunshine. I once questioned the wisdom of continuing our work in California. If our church was founded for the work of soul saving, it has an increasing reason for continuance and expansion in the West.

The man who gets the ear of the people in California is the church builder. It is not a question of ecclesiastical organization. That counts for little among the classes. The man in the pulpit counts for much. There are more distinct denominations, isms and cults in Los Angeles than can be found in any city in the world of 750,000.

I was the guest one day of an influential layman of Trinity Church, W. G. Wadley, father of our Mr. W. D. Wadley, wide-awake steward of First Church, Alexandria. The other guests were Brothers Shuler and wife, Seecman and wife, C. R. Gray, presiding elder, and wife, Millikan, pastor at Downey, and others.

I met Bishop Du Bose in San Francisco at the headquarters of the M. E. Church, South. He is on his job with a vim that is contagious. He thoroughly believes in the possibilities of Southern Methodism in the West. I have not at any time seen him looking better. The brethren are fond of him and believe in him. He showed me the Wesleyan Community House, Mary Elizabeth Inn and the Fitzgerald Memorial Church, all of which have been constructed since I was last in San Francisco, twelve years ago. The best way to judge of the progress of the church is to contemplate it at different intervals of time. I see decided expansion here in San Francisco since my last visit.

The Bishop is on the wing continuously. He visits the churches under his jurisdiction. I heard of him at San Jose, next at Santa Rosa, now in the San Joaquin Valley, and again in Washington and Oregon.

Our W. H. Nelson, a New Orleans product, is editing the Pacific Methodist. He has the style and sweep of a wide-awake editor. Watch Nelson!

Hubert and Percy Knickerbocker were enjoying the attractions of Los Angeles. They deem it a great resort for the summer. I heard Dr. Norris, Baptist preacher of Fort Worth, who has a Sunday school of 5000, at the Church of the Open Door—the work inaugurated by Dr. Torrey. He had an audience of perhaps 2000. Our genial evangelist, John E. Brown, began a meeting there shortly before my departure for the East.

Our well-known evangelist, D. L. Coale, lives in Los Angeles, and was conducting a meeting in Merced when I left for Louisiana.

New Orleans people will be interested to learn that T. V. Ellzey lives in Los Angeles, and is associated with Sunday school work in the capacity in which he served formerly in Louisiana.

UNDER PRESENT CONDITIONS, THE EPWORTH LEAGUE IS NECESSARY TO THE CONSERVATION OF THE METHODIST IDEA.

By James T. Bagby.

ARTICLE II.

In this article, I am to show that the Epworth League is, under present conditions, necessary to the conservation of the Methodist idea, which is: "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners; that all sinners may be saved by faith in Christ; that Christ died for all men alike; but that they are all saved on the condition of exercising faith in the living Christ by the regenerating grace of the Holy Spirit."

Man was designed to be the defender of the helpless, the benefactor of the poor, and the friend of the afflicted and unfortunate ones of earth; but this he will never become, in the truest sense of the word, until he is turned from death to life and from bondage to liberty. In the realm of science we demonstrate the laws and principles of things by putting our theories of them to the test of experiment, and in the realm of grace, faith acts upon evidence and finds the certainties of experience, and by faith one knows he has salvation. When a man finds faith's saving power, he will endeavor to live in that peace and harmony which become a child of God and a follower of a crucified Savior.

I suppose that no one will dispute the fact that the youths of our land are the raw material out of which the silent and imperceptible influences of church and State are to fashion this finished product. It has been found out by counting, analyzing, and classifying that conversions take place in greatest numbers from sixteen to twenty-five. All the great life choices are made in youth. The professions of life are settled in the halcyon days of youth, and those who choose in the years of mature wisdom seldom succeed. This being true, we can all join in saying, "How great is conversion," and then begin to realize the supreme importance of redeeming the lives of our young from destruction, and since the youths are the most valuable of all things we have in our national life; since they are the future statesmen, preachers, authors, teachers, fathers, and mothers of our republic, we must teach those youths how to live; not how to live in a selfish sense, but to live the unselfish life. We must teach them how to treat their bodies, how to treat their minds, how to manage their affairs, how to bring up a family, how to behave as citizens, and how to use all their faculties for the glory of God and for the greatest benefit to themselves and others.

The Epworth League, through its social, recreational, and spiritual activities, prepares young people to battle with the great problems of life. It teaches young people how to labor for the benefit of humanity. It teaches them how to be helpful to men either in wealth or poverty, in eminence or obscurity. It is ever on the alert to check any and every tendency that would cause men to be less sympathetic with the Methodist idea of life and service. It teaches that the fundamental element in religion is the proper attitude of the heart toward God and toward man; that whatever else Christianity may or may not be, it must be this, and all that a loving heart implies. It develops the idea that labor is worship; that the man who tills daily in the fields robe the earth of morning, and that he only gives his labor in exchange for the products obtained.

The Epworth League makes an earnest appeal for work of all kinds, whether it be on the streets, upon the farm, or in the music room. It teaches that a single dollar earned legitimately by a worthy young man is of more real value to himself and the community than many dollars given a dissipated son by an indignant father. It teaches the youth not to be satisfied with anything less than an honest effort to do God's will and make the most out of life. It teaches regeneration and the witness of the Spirit as the indispensable foundations and the roots of religion. It teaches young people that for them to be leaders in world thought and in world actions there must be expressed in their lives the best morals and the best religious thought of the age. By their words and deeds they must show that they are in sympathy with every enterprise that seeks to do good to the bodies and souls of men.

The Epworth League fosters every branch of good work and philanthropy and shows the young people that they must be in sympathy and agreement with every form of work that makes good citizens, emphasizing the truth that the intellectual and spiritual atmosphere of one's training helps to make him a good or a bad citizen. It shows that increased information without increased character weakens one's ability to injure society and makes him a dangerous subject in a republic like ours. It is, therefore, greatly interested in the ideas, standards, and purposes that enter into the educational foundation of the boys and girls who are to be the heroes and heroines of the future, and the philosophers, the statesmen, the philanthropists, and the great reformers and molders of the next age. Any one who has studied our lives has discovered that things are badly mixed in our nature. In our outward lives, we are colored by the mighty forces of materialism. In our hearts, we hunger and thirst after a profound idealism. But if this inward idealism is to triumph over a coarse materialism and come to have vigor, vivacity, and love, and be able to hear God's voice sounding in the midst of the church in this age, we must do so through the power of the gospel of life purity, and this can only be imparted to men through the regenerating grace of God as they accept the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit.

If our church is to measure up to its responsibility and send forth laborers into the vineyard in sufficient number to save the world from sin, it must go to the young people of the community and show them that they are meant for greater works than serving self. They are made to glorify God and serve humanity faithfully; and nothing short of this will ever satisfy an immortal soul.

To leave behind us the well-matured fruits of love, righteousness, and holiness, we must do team work. In this respect we may gain a lesson from the migratory birds. At the approach of winter, wild ducks go to seek milder climates. They assemble on a certain day and leave the country in a flock, which is generally arranged in two lines united in a point, like two sides of a triangle, a single bird leading forms the point, and the rest follow in two lines more or less extended. The duck that thus takes the lead cuts the air and facilitates the passage of those which follow, whose beaks rest on the tails of those that precede. The leader holds his commission only a certain time, and wheels from the point to the rear and rests while he is replaced by another. Similarly, we should do teamwork in such a way as to facilitate the work of others and seek through Christian cooperation to implant and develop the divine life in every heart and hasten the time when all men will recognize God as their Leader and never turn aside into crooked paths.

I resolve to devote an hour morning and evening to private prayer, no pretense, no excuse whatsoever.—John Wesley.

We must not conceive of prayer as an overcoming of God's reluctance, but as a laying hold of his highest willingness.—Archbishop Trench.

LITTLE TALKS ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By Honorable Josephus Daniels,
Former Secretary of the Navy of the United States.

The Spirit of Whitefield and Wesley.

Whitefield stands out as the man of his day who had the most compelling power of persuasion. Franklin's oratory is his persuasive eloquence is the best proof of his effectiveness, for the practical printer prided himself until he heard Whitefield, that no eloquence could change his fixed resolve. Whitefield, moved by the deplorable condition of children in Georgia, determined to establish an orphanage. Franklin advised against it, and thought orphans ought rather to be brought from Georgia to a home in Philadelphia. Because Whitefield insisted upon his own plan, Franklin refused to contribute. "I happened," wrote Franklin, "soon after to attend one of his sermons, in the course of which I perceived he intended to finish with a collection, and I silently resolved he should get nothing from me. I had in my pocket a handful of copper money, three or four silver dollars, and five pistoles in gold. As he proceeded I began to soften, and concluded to give the coppers. Another stroke of his oratory made me ashamed of that and determined me to give the silver, and he finished so admirably that I emptied my pocket wholly into the collection dish, gold and all.

"At this sermon there was also one of our club, who, being of my sentiments respecting the building in Georgia, and suspecting a collection might be intended, had, by precaution, emptied his pockets before he came from home. Toward the conclusion of the discourse, however, he felt a strong desire to give, and applied to a neighbor, who stood near him, to borrow some money for the purpose.

"The application was unfortunately made to the only man who was not affected by the preacher. His answer was, 'At any other time, friend Hopkinson, I would lend to thee freely; but not now, for thee seems to be out of thy right senses.'

The man who gives more than he intended for the care of orphans or the education of youth, is the only wise man, for his investment will be returning vitalized dividends long after he has retired or has passed away. Some men have found that the only money they saved was the money they gave away.

Something like a quarter of a century ago a New York business man, worth millions, gave one hundred thousand dollars to Emory College, one of our Methodist institutions in Georgia. It was not a large sum for him to give out of his abundance, but it was a large sum for a Southern Methodist College in the South's lean years. Some years later the tide of business turned and George I. Seney, the generous giver, found that his entire fortune was swept away almost in a day. He had to begin life over again at the bottom. He paid a visit to the college to which he had contributed and was happy to find that the money he had invested in that institution was helping to educate ministers and missionaries and teachers and doctors. "The only thing I saved was what I gave away," he is reported to have said. If he had not made the gift when he did that sum would have gone in the crash, and he would have saved nothing.

But explain it as you will, the generous giver, wise in his business and wise in his liberality, finds that increase comes with generosity, that it does not impair his ability to extend his business. The man who denies the stewardship of his money should wrap it in a napkin and hide it in the earth. But the man who respects the fact that money is to be used for good purposes finds that it increases tenfold and an hundred-fold.

The world to-day needs a double portion of the spirit of Wesley. John Wesley was quick to found institutions, orphanages, dispensaries, and schools. His church was an institutional church from the beginning. The inspiration of Methodist thought and Methodist liberality truly comes from his admonitions as he interpreted them from the Word. On one occasion he was preaching a sermon on giving. He divided his text into three parts:

First: "Make all you can," and he enforced the virtue of this with logic and illustrations, and an instructions heardy sitting in the "amen corner" cried out in good old-fashioned Methodist style, "Amen" and "Amen."

Second: "Save all you can," and he emphasized the wisdom of economy and simplicity in living to the end that a portion of all earnings might be saved. Again the brother who believed in laying by for a rainy day manifested his approval by crying out, "Amen."

Third: "Give all you can," and Mr. Wesley quoted Scripture to prove that Christian liberality was one of the duties of Christian men and women. But this time he heard no approving "Amen" from the brother, who was silenced by the appeal to a generosity he could not command. Later he said to Mr. Wesley, "You spoiled a great sermon by that thirdly, advising men to give away what they had saved." Certainly the blessing promised to the generous soul gave him no benediction and no joy.

IMPORTANT MEETING.

There was held in Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., Wednesday, September 21, a meeting of all the presiding elders of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences, the Missionary Secretaries from the two Conferences, and Dr. W. B. Ricks, Associate Secretary of the Centenary, of Nashville, and Bishop W. F. McMurry, who called the meeting to discuss the work necessary to a successful finish of the Centenary in the two Conferences. Rev. B. P. Jacob was chosen Chairman of the meeting, and the writer secretary; very appropriate and helpful addresses were given by Dr. Ricks and Bishop McMurry.

The following were named as a committee on "Findings": Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. R. A. Tucker and Rev. P. D. Hardin.

All of the presiding elders were called upon to report for their respective districts as to the condition of the Centenary and what they thought would be the final results, and their reports showed that the "spirit of the Centenary" was good, and the people were going to pay, even though they were behind now, and they were keeping the matter before the pastors and Treasurers. It was a very encouraging meeting, productive of good results.

Rev. M. L. Burton and wife entertained all who were in attendance at a luncheon in the district parsonage, which was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated.

The Committee on "Findings" made their report, and after some discussion the report was adopted.

W. D. HAWKINS, Secretary.

Report of the Committee on Findings.

Your committee on findings submit the following recommendations:

1. We rejoice over the progress of the church, both at home and in the foreign fields; not only in material things, but in the great awakening to the evangelistic obligation and the gracious results of evangelistic effort.

2. We are profoundly impressed with the fact that we should renew our efforts in point of inspiring our people with the importance of both recognizing and practicing the scriptural doctrine of stewardship and tithing. We can most heartily recommend the literature that is being issued on the subject of tithing and stewardship, and at the same time pledge ourselves to preach and also urge our preachers to preach more frequently on this subject.

3. We feel more deeply the responsibility resting upon us as presiding elders, and feeling this responsibility as we do, we pledge ourselves to lay upon the hearts of our pastors, more than ever before, their responsibility of leadership in the collection of Centenary Pledges, and to this end to give out information from time to time on what the Centenary is doing, and what is becoming of the money.

4. We feel that the pledges made by our people are a solemn and sacred contract, and that the integrity of our church in the redeeming of these pledges is involved as never before.

5. We would magnify the office and place of the local Centenary Treasurer in the Centenary Movement, and would urge that he attend the quarterly conferences, and be asked to make his reports. We would also suggest that where the treasurer can not look after all the delinquent pledges, he have a committee from the church to help in this work.

6. We recommend October 23 to 30, 1921 (or as soon as practicable thereafter), as Pay-up Week for Centenary Pledges.

FROM THE BOGALUSA PINES.

Dear Brother Carley: The Advocate came this morning and found me suffering with the writer's itch. I had it on my mind to write something for the paper and seized your valuable periodical fully expecting to gain an inspiration of some sort and then break forth at great length on my machine. But my enthusiasm cooled when I read that your stock of discussions about Dr. Rice's book was oversubscribed. I have not read the book, but Dr. Steel's articles have me feeling like fighting something, but I hate to go against cold steel at the sunrise of a disarmament conference and I dare not destroy rice, with millions starving in China and Russia. Dr. Meek kindly opened up my writing humor and I found myself unconsciously putting out my hand to shake with our old friend, "Unification." But I read on and ran right across that golf course that you tangled up with and decided to stop right there and begin writing, so here is what I have to say.

Chasing a little freckled golf ball with full intention to knock it every chance you get and finally put it in the hole reminds me of the way some people treat every progressive movement that comes along—knocking it for the purpose of putting it in a hole. Pardon me for moralizing. Golf is a great game if you don't weaken. It is the art of keeping after a small thing a long way and a long time and real skill is manifested when you get to the putting point. I never knew what it meant to putter around until I learned it on the golf links. You see, golf is the natural game for some people. They can chase a small thing forever and actually pick it out of one hole for the purpose of putting it into another.

The real purpose of golf is to develop a sweet disposition. It is easy for a man to smile when all goes well, but when you go into the rough four times on one course, finally light behind a bunker, get over in about four strokes, put five times to land in the hole and tally up 17 strokes when 4 was par, a fellow has to hold his temper with both hands to keep from bending every commandment and breaking at least one.

But, Carley, I am concerned about Dr. Steel and his fight on Dr. Rice's book. The Pelican Plover is doing all the playing. Thus far it seems like a case of shadow boxing. Where is the enemy? I remember being in Nevada, Mo., once when a greyhound trotted west off the public square and passed lightly along for a block. Just then a big English mastiff jumped the fence and started after the greyhound. That hound was off for speed. It was almost no time till that hound disappeared in a cloud of dust many blocks away. But the big mastiff sat down on his hunkers and lolled his tongue out and sat there. It was great running the greyhound did, but there was no dog after him. Dr. Steel has been skipping like a Nebraska jack rabbit, but there is nobody after him. Us poor boobs out here where real plines grow would never have known that Rice wrote a book had it not been for this publicity work of Dr. Steel. I'm going to read that book, sure as shootin' I am.

A man by the name of Sheridan had a melon patch when I was a boy that he guarded with a shotgun. I never wanted melons out of a patch so bad in my life as I wanted melons out of that patch—and I got them. I'm not making confessions, but I'm simply indicating that the fireworks over Dr. Rice's book has got me all stirred up and I'm going to have a melon out of that patch.

Now, honest, Carley, I did not start out to write much, but simply to satisfy a terrible itching to see something in print of my own. I'm in favor of writing once in awhile, even if there is nothing more important than a tenderfoot on a golf course to write about.

Yours truly,

A. J. GEARHEARD.

REV. JAMES CARTER McELROY.

Rev. James Carter McElroy, son of William C. and Elizabeth McElroy, was born in Winston County, Mississippi, January 24, 1862, and passed to his reward from the Superannuate Home, Welr, Mississippi, on the morning of June 20, 1921. In 1905 he was married to Miss Ethel G. Stevens, of Montgomery County, Mississippi. To this happy union four children were born, one of whom preceded him to the great beyond some years ago.

Brother McElroy was converted and joined the church when he was a young man of twenty-seven. Soon after his conversion he was licensed to preach in the Baptist Church, and for sixteen years he preached in that church. He then joined the Methodist Church and for fourteen years he was one of her most faithful preachers and pastors. His devotion to the church and the cause of Christianity was nothing short of inspiring as he took up the work of his charge. His field of work lay among charges that were large, where church houses were poorly built and furnished, and where the comforts and luxuries were almost unknown. Brother McElroy was a called man, and gave himself exclusively to the ministry. No field of labor was too hard for this man of God, and only the Judgment Day can make known the full service of this faithful man. More than five hundred were added to the church, and thousands were sent on the way rejoicing because of what they had seen and heard.

In 1907 Brother McElroy served Mooreville and Saltillo charge as a supply. In the fall of 1907 he joined the North Mississippi Conference, at Columbus, Mississippi, and served the following charges: 1908, Smithville; 1909, Wall Hill; 1910-11-12-13, Slate Springs; 1914-15, Mashulaville; 1916-17-18, Sturges; and, 1919-20, Chester.

He was ordained deacon in 1909 by Bishop Hoss at Okolona, Mississippi, and elder in 1911 by Bishop Wilson at Macon, Mississippi.

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

To his faithful wife and dear children we extend our love and sympathy, and commend them to the love and blessing of the God whom the husband and father so faithfully served.

WORK DAY FOR THE ORPHANAGE.

By action of the last Annual Conference, Saturday, October 8, is "Work Day" for the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, followed by "Harvest Day," Sunday, the 9th. We urgently request every Methodist in the State to observe these days and contribute at least the equivalent of one day's earnings for the support of our Orphanage.

This will be the only opportunity given our people to contribute to this cause. No agents or hired solicitors are sent out to collect money for our work. We depend solely on the efforts of our preachers, Sunday school superintendents, and Christian friends in each community to secure the funds necessary to maintain and carry on this work. Unless our friends rally to our cause at this particular time, suffering and curtailment of the work will be inevitable; so we look to our people and their loyal support to enable us to meet the extra heavy demands that will be required of us this winter.

We now have over 140 children under our care, and almost every day is bringing increased demands upon our strength and means, so we very earnestly appeal to our people over the entire State to make the most generous offering possible to this important work.

Looking with confidence and hope and trusting God will bless every pastoral charge in the Conference, I am,

Faithfully,

ROBERT W. VAUGHAN.

Supt. Louisiana Methodist Orphanage.

Ruston, La., Sept. 23, 1921.

LISTEN, MOTHERS.

From facts brought to me from many reliable sources, I am sure there is much harm coming from our young girls' going in swimming with the men. Mothers, please consider this question, for I am about convinced that more danger comes to our young people from the modern swimming than the modern dancing. Let us not neglect this warning.

A MOTHER.

AN EXHORTATION.

To the Pastors and Officials of the Seashore District.

Dear Brethren: We are now on the "home run"—what we do must be done quickly. Now please have full reports from trustees, Sunday school superintendents, Woman's Missionary Societies, for the fourth quarterly conference. Also see to it that the Centenary collections are up and ready to report. Let the stewards see that pastors are paid in full. I shall be glad to confer with any board that will pay the pastors all they promised them.

Let me urge the pastors who are responsible for the assessments on Conference work and General work, to get all of it. Let us all pray and work. God will give us victory.

We have licensed five brethren to preach this year. Hundreds have joined the church. If we will all work and pray together for the next two months, we will make the best report the district has ever made. If you have not sent the names of your educational collectors to Brother Morse, do so at once.

Yours for service,

W. M. SULLIVAN.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT— PAY-UP WEEK.

By order of the Commission of the Christian Education Movement, October 30-November 6 is set apart as "PAY-UP WEEK." This is to get in the first installment of the subscription to the Christian Education cause. Our task will not be finished until this money is placed in the hands of the schools and loan fund trustees for which it was intended.

May we ask the pastors to see at once that all subscription cards that may remain in local hands be sent to the Conference office, and that all churches have at once a local collector elected by the quarterly conference? If the conference is too far off for this, let each pastor nominate to the elder a collector for each church. This information is needed in the office NOW. A few charges are delinquent.

The Conference Secretary is dependent on your help.

The North Mississippi Conference office is now located in NEW ALBANY. We have here Mr. J. G. Houston, Conference Director, who holds until next General Conference in May; Mr. D. H. Hall, Conference Lay Leader; Mr. G. L. Moskos, Conference Director of Lay Speakers, and Mr. Walter Rogers, Chairman of the Conference Advisory Committee. These, together with the Conference Secretary, will constitute an Advisory Committee.

ALL matters concerning the Educational Movement and all moneys go through this New Albany office. It is heavily bonded and its books and accounts periodically audited by a special accountant.

DON'T FORGET OCTOBER 30-NOVEMBER 6—"PAY-UP WEEK."

J. H. HOLDER,

Conference Secretary.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

By Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker, D.D.

I.

The realization of a dream of visiting our Oriental mission fields and having some fellowship with our missionaries amidst the scenes of their labors became a prospect when the Board of Missions, at its spring meeting, commissioned me to travel in the Orient and do three things. The first, as a matter of course, was to study the Epworth League and the conditions of its successful work in the East; the second, to study on the field the subject of missionary preparation; and the third was to fulfill a ministry of the gospel as occasion might offer during my travels.

Eleven years of responsibility as General Secretary and Editor, spent largely in touch with the actual working of our young people's religious society and in personal association with leaders in the home land, have not passed without an increasing and almost constant desire on my part to do something for the young people in mission lands. The late Bishop Ward said: "You may think you can do without the Epworth League in the home land, but it is indispensable on the mission fields." This is the testimony of a martyr, who, here in Japan where I am writing, laid down his life, overworked in Christ's cause; he is a faithful witness. The contribution of the Epworth League to the life of the church at home and in the promotion of missions abroad is too vital to be evaluated in statistical form and too varied to admit of easy summing up. In a financial way the Epworth League is to be credited with the opening of our Korea, our Cuba and our Congo Missions; the first the most Pentecostal, the second the most national and the third the most apostolic of our nine foreign missions. In the way of personal service the contribution of the League has been even greater; for among the younger missionaries in all the fields are many of those who look back to some mission study class in the local Chapter, some hour of vision at a summer Conference, some personal contact in an Epworth League Assembly as the occasion of the momentous decision that has resulted in their presence among the forces on the firing line.

As Chairman of the Committee on Candidates of the Board of Missions it has been my duty to join in decisions respecting the fitness of many young men and women who profess to be called of the Holy Spirit to this separate work. It is a grave matter. One may be sincere, yet mistaken. No more serious question was proposed by Wesley in directing the organization of Methodism than this: "How shall we try those who profess to be called to preach?" It may seem an impertinence for a committee to be engaged in trying those who profess to be called to the mission field; it is also a grave responsibility and an expensive error to send forth those who, sooner or later, manifest incompetency and prove that they were mistaken. I am impressed with the importance of this part of my mission.

As to the third, I do not perceive the need. I feel that I have everything to learn and little to impart to men and women who have labored and suffered and achieved as our missionaries have, and who, to begin with, were among the choice spirits and cultivated intellects of the home church. I suppose the "people of strange speech" will hear with patience improved versions of what I may have to say as the message is interpreted by linguistic genius. If I shall have fruit among these Gentiles also, it will give me great happiness.

Thus commissioned and provided with a document bearing the signature of Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, placing the traveler under the aegis of the Stars and Stripes, with suitcases, rather than trunks, containing what one could anticipate as needful and excluding all that might be deemed superfluous "impedimenta," I left Nashville accompanied by Dr. O. G. Nelson, returning to his work as a medical missionary in our hospital at Huchow, China. The magnificent service of the Wabash and Union Pacific to Ogden, and the Southern Pacific thence to San Francisco, made the trip across the continent restful and pleasant, save the passage across the Nevada desert, hot and uninteresting for the most part, and yet a region having possibilities that population will develop. How a State can maintain itself with a population smaller than that of the city of Nashville is a fiscal puzzle. Nevada had in 1910 something over 80,000 inhabitants, and has now above 100,000. One's satisfaction at saving expense of travel through the courtesies extended through our excellent Bureau of Transportation is somewhat diminished when a certain section is not covered by his passes and he has to take chances of securing sleeping car accommodations for that part of the way; but I had good luck and suffered nothing on account of this incident.

The most interesting feature of the many that this transcontinental way has is the great Southern Pacific bridge and causeway across Great Salt Lake. In 1831 Captain Bonneville saw high up on the cliffs of the Rocky and the Sierra Nevada Mountains marks of the level of a prehistoric lake, having its eastern shores on the Rocky Mountains and its western on the Sierras. It had a circumference of over two thousand miles, was fed by abundant rains and drained through a river that reached the Pacific through Snake River and the Columbia. As aridity increased with the passing of years, the lake receded until its outlet was high and dry, its surface nine hundred feet below its former level and its area reduced to the present dimensions. Around the north end of Great Salt Lake, climbing grades fifteen hundred feet high and traveling forty-five miles out of the way, the Southern Pacific tracks used to run until the present direct line over the level bed of the ancient lake and the waters of the present lake was constructed, including a distance of thirty miles over water, along all which one enjoys a scene of ever-changing tints and outline as the train goes full speed ahead over trestle and causeway. Numerous gulls and pelicans live on the island in the lake, but as its briny waters bear no life except a small shrimp one wonders what these marine birds live upon.

To one reared in a river town, the Sacramento valley and the city of Sacramento, where the train stops twenty minutes, bring up familiar associations. Sternwheel steamboats ply in the river, the opulent fertility is evident in the valley. It is only the fourth day out from Nashville and early morning, but one begins to feel the peculiarly invigorating atmosphere of the central Pacific coast region, and by noon we are enveloped in one of the delicious fogs that make the summer climate about San Francisco Bay as invigorating as the winters anywhere else. There is nothing else quite like it. A heavy overcoat is comfortable in mid-July, yet it is not cold. The people are hurrying along the streets, some robed in furs, some in great coats, none in summer lingerle. Palm beach is not advertised, and it is a fair guess that the clothing stores sell garments of the same weight the year round. What a boon during these times of reconstruction! The hotels of San Francisco are justly famous and the cost of entertainment is about 50 per cent below that of our Southern and about 100 per cent below that of the Eastern cities. All our missionaries stop at the "Ramona" on their way to and from the Orient; therefore Dr. Nelson and I register there, and, placing business before pleasure, we immediately seek the Chinese and the Japanese Consulates and have our passports vised; then find the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's passenger office, where we exchange a very expensive piece of paper for first-class tickets on the "Empire State," a United States Shipping Board vessel, bound for Manila, via Hawaii, Yokohama, Kobe, Shanghai, and Hong Kong. We have also another piece of business to attend to before we shall be permitted to leave our native land: we must obtain from the United States Revenue Office a permit, and this is issued only upon presentation of a certificate that we have paid our income tax. If it is so complicated a matter to get out of the country, what must it be to get in!

One of the pleasures that I anticipated in passing through San Francisco was that of seeing my friend and some time protege of Centenary College days, the Rev. William Hamilton Nelson, now Editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, our Connectional organ published in the interest of the far Western Conferences. Nelson emanated from New Orleans, where he was once a member of the Moreau St. Church, now Second Church. At one time he was in charge of the Salvation Army post in Nashville, where Bishop DuBose, then General Secretary of the Epworth League, found this genius and set him in the way of becoming a Methodist minister. So the Epworth League has had a good deal to do with the production of this journalistic genius, whose writings are likely to strike you in apt quotations on the pages of many church weeklies. Of course Nelson was glad to see us and made our stay in San Francisco and thereabouts both pleasant and profitable. A call at Mary Elizabeth Inn found Miss Gatewood, the Head Resident at home, also Mrs. Townsend, the matron. This is a great philanthropy which is at least showing a way to throw around the employed girl the protection of a Christian home, in which the beautiful, free life of virtue and high ideals forestalls and neutralizes the lure of worldliness. On Bush Street, within a few doors of Mary Elizabeth Inn, is Fitzgerald Memorial Church, the successor to old Centenary. After numerous moves and periods of houselessness, at last this old congregation of Southern Methodism seems to be permanently domiciled. The building is handsome and commodious, a combination church and parsonage. Dr. Smith, our able pastor, was not at home, so we could only leave our cards. We were more successful at Wesley Hall, the settlement house operated under the Woman's Council. There every modern device for social work has been provided and an ample assembly hall for gospel services and other community meetings. Space will not admit of a fuller description of this institution, through and by which a demonstration can be made of the value of the institutional church as an evangelizing method. It seems to me that, as a general proposition, the institutional church is valuable not chiefly in bringing people under the gospel influences, but in providing for them an island of safety amidst unfavorable seas of worldliness after they have been brought to know Christ. Wesley's great institution at the foundry in Moorefields was of this character. It was a necessity for the conservation of the fruits of the great revival.

The Pacific Conference Epworth League was holding its annual assembly at Mt. Hermon, so Dr. Nelson and I went thither for a day and enjoyed some fellowship with the brethren under the big trees. This is the second session of the Assembly since the joint annual meeting with the Methodist Episcopal Epworth Leagues was the order. The division was not sought on our part, but has proved advantageous and we have a well organized and growing Conference organization. That, indeed, is the character of all our church work on the Pacific. The energetic and competent administration of Bishop DuBose has breathed encouragement into the men and wisely directed the activities of a very capable band of ministers and laymen. Over forty churches have been built within the Episcopal District without impinging upon the territory occupied by any other church. It is simply a declaration of ignorance to say that our church has no place in the work of this vast and wonderful region, in which ours was the pioneer Methodism and where we are as greatly needed as anywhere else on earth.

My letter has been prolonged without any reference to visits to the two great universities, the University of California, at Berkeley, and the Leland Stanford, Jr., University at Palo Alto, an hour's ride south from San Francisco; nor may I venture upon an account of these interesting institutions. I will say only this: that I observed a higher educational average among our own young people in this region than elsewhere within the territory of our church. Most of them have been students at one of these universities. With thousands of students filling their class rooms and dormitories and year after year going into all occupations of life, these universities are perhaps the most potent influence in forming ideals and standards. In both there is "a kindness toward religion" and about the University of California the churches are doing some good work, our own among them, through student churches and pastors.

THE SPITE WEED.

By Priscilla Leonard.

The Spite Weed sprang in a garden bed.
I'll give it room," the gardener said,
"Because I'm sure I've a perfect right
To choose and to cultivate this spite!"

So mid the flowers the Spite Weed grew;
It drank the sun, and it sucked the dew,
And the gardener smiled, "Touch it who dare!
If it spreads, why, let it—I don't care!"

Beneath the ground the roots gripped wide,
And it raised its ugly head with pride;
Its coarse, rank leaves shut out the sky,
Until all the flowers began to die.

Yet still the gardener smiled, and still More deeply the Spite Weed rooted, till
With blooms of Hate it crowded the place,
And breathed out poison in every face.

Too late, the gardener stood aghast
And started to root it up at last.
But when it was done, from hedge to gate
Lo, the whole garden lay desolate!

WHERE IS HEAVEN?

One time a man stopped the evangelist, Sam P. Jones, on a village street and said: "Mr. Jones, where is heaven?"

Now, if Mr. Jones had been like some preachers or Bible teachers he would have started a discourse on what the Bible teaches about heaven, what sort of a place it is, and how to get there; but Mr. Jones was a wiser man than that. Instead he turned and raising his hand, pointed.

"Do you see that cottage over there?"

"Yes."

"The Widow So and So lives there, and she is poor. I'll tell you what to do. Go and get a basket and take it to the grocery store and fill it with good things: bread and butter and eggs and tea and sugar, and take it to that poor widow."

They parted. A few days later they met again, and the man said: "Mr. Jones, I know where heaven is."

"The kingdom of God is within you," said Jesus; and Paul added later, "The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, but righteousness, peace and joy with the Holy Ghost." There is a kind of religion that is seeking God and heaven afar off. Such a God and such a heaven will never be found. God is near, heaven is ever present, for heaven is God's presence. Let us seek for the joys of heaven upon the earth, where Mr. Jones told his inquirer to seek them, in the expression of the love of God toward others.

Pleasure sought for its own sake is not found. God sought in the external and distant is never realized. The vision fades if duty and love are neglected. The commandment, "Love thy neighbor as thyself," goes along with "Love thy God with all thy heart." The man found heaven upon the earth, and so may you and I; and the kind of heaven we will find the other side of the grave will be the same kind. The heaven above will be a continuation of the heaven below, only more glorious and complete.—Selected.

THE WHITE KITTEN.

She was a white kitten, and she had no tail. Otherwise she was quite ordinary and spent her time in making a reluctant grown-up cat play games with her or in chasing balls of paper or anything else that offered the chance of a frolic.

One day she got into sad trouble. Out in the field there was a hen with a family of tiny chickens, also white. Although the kitten was not really hungry, she decided to catch one of the chickens. So she crouched close to the ground, set her ears back, and moved stealthily and noiselessly through the grass toward the chickens. Not knowing the danger that was near, the chickens ran about happily, pecking at the grass.

The kitten moved nearer and nearer, and she was getting ready to spring when—something happened.

Making loud and angry clucks, the hen flew at the kitten, flapped her with her wings, jumped on her, and made peck after peck. Cyril heard the noise and, running up, rescued the kitten, which was mewling piteously, while blood came from its ear.

That night a very sick and sorry kitten slept in a basket that Cyril prepared especially as for an invalid. The older cat was not pestered to play, and a saucer of milk placed invitingly near the basket was left untouched.

Now the kitten is better, and her pecked ear is almost healed. She goes about again, but keeps at a safe distance from the hen and her brood.

Cyril, who owns the kitten, is inclined to be angry with the hen. I pointed out that the hen was right to defend the chickens just as the big fellows at school are right to defend the little chaps against bullies and others who would harm them.

"But she pecked the kitten too hard," urged Cyril, who rather likes to argue.

"Hens are not merciful," I said, "and they are specially severe with enemies that attack their chickens. Most animals are not as kind to each other as they might be. I know a certain small boy even who is not always kind to animals. One day he forgot to feed his rabbit."

But Cyril decided that the talk had better end, and he ran off to throw stones into the pond.—Christian World.

A FISH THAT CLIMBS.

There is a strange fish called the "climbing perch." It lives in far-off Asia, and is as much at home on land as in the water. In a land where streams dry up in which this fish lives, it would die if it did not go in search of another body of water, over hot, dusty ground, and over hills and valleys.

Lieutenant Daldorf, of the Danish navy, in his memoirs of 1797, mentions that he captured such a fish in the act of climbing a tree. He found it with the spiny margin of the gill-covers hooked into the cracks of the bark, and watched while it curled its tail around, thrust its pectoral fins forward, and pushed ahead. The fins are remarkably mobile and may be moved outward almost at right angles to the body, and the mere closing, if in contact with an object, is sufficient to pull an average fish half an inch.

In his "Natural History of Ceylon," Sir J. Emerson Tennent states that on one occasion he saw hundreds of these fish crawling up the bank of a dried-up pool, diverging in every direction, on reaching the top, to a distance of fifty yards, and still traveling onwards. The supposition is that they travel by night or before sunrise. One peculiarity is the large size of the vertebral column, quite out of proportion to the rest of the body. In migrating they keep their gills expanded and moistened by a curious vessel above the gills that holds water. When the fish leaves the water it carries with it enough water to moisten its gills as often as necessary to sustain life.

The eggs float loosely at the surface of the water, and hatch in two or three days. The color of this fish is a light brassy olive, with eyes of orange. Its length is up to seven inches.—Our Dumb Animals.

"TIME OUT."

To Be Sure!

Clerk (selling modern lead pencil): "Then you unscrew this cap, take out the small unused leads, put new leads in each slot, press down firmly until they meet grip of inside thread, then put in case, slide down flush with point, screw on top, and the pencil is ready to write. As simple as A B C!"—Life.

A Way Out.

A tailor with more ingenuity than education had occasion recently to order two large flatirons of the variety known as the "tailor's goose." He scratched his head in some perplexity over the proper plural form to use.

"Two tailor's geese!" he muttered. "Two tailor's geese—that sounds worse!"

He puzzled over the question till it began to worry him, but suddenly a bright idea popped into his head. He wrote:

"Messrs.—: Please send me one tailor's goose. P.S.—Send two instead of one."—Sunday School Advocate.

THE EPWORTH LEAGUE AND THE CENTENARY.

While no definite amount was asked of each Epworth League as a Centenary pledge, many of the chapters made pledges during the Centenary Campaign. To date the Epworth Leagues have paid on these pledges $154,346.87. In amounts paid to the Centenary by Epworth Leagues, the following Annual Conferences have made especially good showing: North Texas $13,612.50; Virginia, $12,049.19; Baltimore, $9,168.20; South Georgia, $8,060.98; Missouri, $7,008.77; North Alabama, $6,314.61; Memphis, $6,100.00; Little Rock, $5,916; North Carolina, $5,406.60. These are the first ten Conferences in Epworth League contributions to the Centenary.

In the Epworth Leagues are the larger number of our young men and women who are to be leaders in the church of to-morrow, both those who are Life Service Volunteers and those who will be leaders in local churches. It is of vital importance that these future leaders be trained according to the Centenary ideals and the Centenary program. Line up your Epworth League with the Centenary and thus help to make the church of to-morrow a real missionary church.

CENTENARY RECORD TO SEPTEMBER 1.

The statement of the Finance Department of the Centenary Commission shows that the grand total paid on the Centenary pledges to September 1 is $11,608,892.50. This total does not include regular credits, but does include payments by Sunday schools and by Epworth Leagues. The total on individual pledges is $10,721,942.62. The one encouraging feature of this report is that August payments went beyond the amount of July payments for 1921. In 1919, July led August by a good margin. It looks, therefore, as though we are beginning to "pick up" in the Centenary payments. Some of the interesting features of the September 1 report are: Four Conferences have paid more than forty per cent of amount pledged—Pacific, 47.8; Missouri, 43.1; Kentucky, 41.2; Baltimore, 40.3. The Conferences above thirty-five per cent are, in order named: Denver, North West Texas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Illinois, Virginia, Louisville, Western Virginia, Northwest, Southwest Missouri. Twelve other Conferences have paid thirty per cent and above while twelve Conferences are below thirty per cent.

To bring the total amount to sixty per cent now due on pledges, the church must pay $10,542,000. This appears to be a big sum, and it is, but it is not impossible to reach that goal by December 31. It is important that during September and October especially, effort be made in every church, Sunday school and Epworth League to bring up to date Centenary pledges. It is a task worthy of a great church, and by God's help we can do this. In view of financial conditions throughout the South the matter of payments of Centenary pledges has not been pressed during the past six months. With the coming of better times, we are to take up in earnest this task.

WORK DAY FOR THE ORPHANAGES.

The time is almost at hand when the church in Louisiana and Mississippi will be called upon to observe the annual Work Day and Harvest Day for the benefit of its orphanages. We feel that it is hardly necessary for us to emphasize the importance of observing these days in all our churches, because the orphanages represent a cause that is dear to the hearts of our people; but we cannot be too often reminded that these institutions are absolutely dependent upon the liberal support of their friends for the maintenance of the work they are engaged in. We are called upon to contribute to many causes, and sometimes we may feel that we have given all that we can possibly afford to give; but the cry of needy children is not going to fall upon deaf ears, and we are going to do for them all that needs to be done in providing for their temporal needs and in bringing them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. The income from one day's work is, after all, a small contribution to make to the welfare of those who have no fathers and mothers to support them.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, of Farmerville, La., reports that the outlook is for the winding up of a good year on his charge.

We appreciate very greatly the kindly expressions of Mr. Bob Myers, of Water Valley, Miss., contained in his letter renewing his subscription to the Advocate.

Rev. W. D. Bass, evangelist, of Corinth, Miss., recently began a tent meeting at Hulbert, Ark. Brother Bass states that he has met with great success in his tent meetings.

The Chaplain's Calendar, issued by Chaplain Randolph, of Fort McPherson, Ga., is a very interesting leaflet. Chaplain Randolph is a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

The Protestant churches of Clarksdale, Miss., have recently planned to take a religious census of that city—a work which, we are sure, will be very helpful to all the churches in carrying forward their work.

We are very happy to be able to state that Rev. R. H. Barr, of Foxworth, Miss., whose serious illness we mentioned last week, is very much better and the indications are that he will soon be restored to health.

Dr. Theodore Copeland writes that he is in a meeting in Marlinton, West Va., in which there were hundreds of conversions and reclamations.

More than one hundred people had joined the church within the first few days of the meeting.

A severe, though not serious, illness, coming at the most inopportune time imaginable so far as the make-up of the Advocate is concerned, made it impossible for the editor to prepare his usual contributions for this week's issue of the paper.

The Gypsy Smith meeting at Canton, Miss., has attracted thousands of people during its progress, the tabernacle, with a capacity of 3,000, being filled at practically every service. Scores of people are professing conversion and are applying for church membership.

Rev. D. F. Anders, our pastor on the Ida and Hosston charge, Louisiana Conference, is meeting with encouraging success in his work. In the two meetings at Ida and Hosston, in which he was assisted by Rev. Dan Kelly, there were twenty-six additions to the church.

The matter of erecting a church building on the campus of Millsaps College, or nearby, will be presented to the two Mississippi Conferences at their approaching sessions. The presiding elders of the Conferences have approved the movement, and there is strong sentiment in favor of it.

The Sunday school of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., held its commencement exercises at 7:30 o'clock last Sunday evening. The published list of those to be promoted shows that fine work is being done in that school. Mr. A. M. Mayo is the superintendent.

The Missouri Conference has memorialized the General Conference to eliminate the word "South" from the name of the church, to require bishops to reside within the bounds of their episcopal districts and to travel during the year in the same, and to elect bishops for a stated term of years.

Despite the devastation wrought by the recent flood, in which nearly one hundred persons were drowned and the property loss amounted to millions of dollars, San Antonio, Texas, will entertain the West Texas Conference, which will convene on October 19, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth presiding.

A union tent meeting will be held in Natchez, Miss., during the month of November, under the auspices of the Federated Bible Class. The preaching will be done by Dr. Stough, of Chicago. During the summer a union service has been held on the Bluff on Sunday, the attendance being remarkably good.

The Methodist church at Tunica, Miss., has recently undergone extensive repairs and improvement. Four Sunday school rooms have been added, the choir room has been enlarged, the entire church has been painted and papered, and new light fixtures have been installed. Rev. C. A. Parks is the pastor.

Chaplain A. F. Vaughan, of the 16th Cavalry, now stationed at Fort Sam Houston (San Antonio, Tex.), has prepared an interesting pamphlet concerning the religious work of the post and other matters that will be helpful to the men in the service. Chaplain Vaughan is a member of the Louisiana Conference.

We are greatly indebted to Dr. I. W. Cooper for sending us some copies of London papers containing account of the Ecumenical Conference. The Conference came to a close on the afternoon of September 16, the final benediction being pronounced by Bishop John W. Hamilton, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The reception tendered the students of Millsaps College by the Capitol Street Methodist Church was a most delightful affair, as we judge from what we heard while in Jackson recently and from what we have seen in the press dispatches concerning it. Dr. Tolle and his co-workers left nothing undone to make the new students feel at home.

We have seen a recent statement to the effect that the indebtedness of the Interchurch World Movement has been reduced from $8,000,000 to $300,000.

Dr. J. R. Day, who retired as the active head of Syracuse University after twenty-eight years of active service, and was then elected chancellor emeritus, will receive an annual salary of $7,500 for life.

Sister T. S. Randle, of Yoakum, Texas, desires to express through the Advocate her gratitude to the many friends who gave her a "letter shower." She received scores of letters from all sections of Louisiana, some of them from people to whom Brother and Sister Randle ministered as children. These letters and the contributions included have greatly touched Sister Randle's heart.

The Ecumenical Conference in London adopted a resolution declaring unequivocally in favor of disarmament. These words occur in the resolution: "Sitting in the shadow of the most terrible conflict in human history, with its unparalleled wastage in human life and property, and with its inevitable aftermath of human sorrow and its burden of woe, we declare war an unmitigated curse to humanity."

Bishop W. F. McMurry spent Thursday of last week in New Orleans, leaving on Friday for Houma, La., where he dedicated the MacDonell Wesley Community House that evening. On Saturday he dedicated the church at Raceland. The bishop passed through the city Saturday night, returning to Mississippi, where he will spend several days this week dedicating churches and looking after the affairs of his episcopal district.

Hon. William Hemingway, who resigned the position of Assistant Attorney General of Mississippi to accept a law professorship in the State University, will be greatly missed in Jackson, especially by the congregation of Galloway Memorial Church, of which he has long been a prominent member. The congregation showed its appreciation of him and his wife by giving them a reception prior to their departure for Oxford.

Our church at Indian Bayou, La., will observe next Sunday as Rally and Home-Coming Day. A meeting is being held every night this week in the interest of some department of the Sunday school, an elaborate and most suggestive program being rendered. Some of the most efficient church workers, preachers and laymen, in that section of Louisiana are taking part in these services. Rev. P. O. Lowrey is the pastor of this well organized rural church.

Noel Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., observed last Sunday as "Home-Coming Sunday." Preparations were made for a great attendance at Sunday school and at the 11 o'clock service. The basement of the church has recently been completed and fitted up, and the Sunday school is now adequately provided for. This is one of the leading churches of the Louisiana Conference. Dr. W. Winans Drake is the pastor, and Rev. H. L. Johns is assistant pastor.

Rev. T. M. Brownlee, our pastor at Starkville, Miss., has announced that he will conduct a series of services during the latter part of October in which the preaching will be done by Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, of Wichita Falls, Texas. The morning services will be held at the church, and the evening services will be held in the auditorium of the A. and M. College. Dr. Knickerbocker is one of the best known preachers of our church, and the people of Starkville will have a great privilege in the opportunity of hearing him.

On Tuesday morning of this week we received the following telegram from Rev. Waldo W. Moore: "Just closed first protracted meeting at Back Bay. Uimer and Fayard conducted it in new church. Have forty members. Twelve baptized Sunday.

This is fertile field for Methodism. Need twenty-four pews costing ten dollars each. Back Bay furnishes six, four others provided for; we ask Missionary Societies and individuals to give us fourteen more." This is a most worthy cause, and we trust those who are able to do so will soon supply the need Brother Moore points out.

BISHOP W. R. LAMBUTH DEAD.

We stop the press to insert this telegram, received from Dr. J. S. Chadwick at 3:10 o'clock Tuesday afternoon: "Bishop Lambuth died Monday, following operation in hospital in Japan. Rev. R. D. Smart, China Mission, died Friday of Asiatic cholera."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: E. A. Gilbert, Otho, Miss., 2; Mrs. H. S. Lann, Bryceland, La., 3; Rev. A. A. Simms, Johns, Miss., 7.

NEW PROSPECT CAMP MEETING.

The New Prospect Camp Meeting will be held October 12 to 16 inclusive, with Rev. J. V. Bennett and Rev. W. M. Sullivan as the preachers.

THE WORLD OUTLOOK OF METHODISM.

of Christendom. Methodism, if unvisited by the heavenly vision, will view this subject from the standpoint of a self-concerned and self-complacent denomination, with all the caution and timidity that self-interest can inspire. Yet John Wesley was not out to found or to maintain an additional denomination, even the largest upon earth. He sought, by God's grace, to revive the evangelic spirit of the Universal Church, through the agency of a consecrated and vigorous Society. His aim and his plan were shaped by the spirit of perfect, and therefore of universal, Love. He would indeed have been careless of the means, provided that the end were surely reached. The renewal of this spirit is essential if the question of Reunion is to be treated with the unselfishness, the daring, and the untiring patience it demands. If grace be vouchsafed to us, Methodism may play a noteworthy part in achieving the great ideal and in securing from it the most salutary results. For the danger of all such projects is that they may become the schemes of ecclesiastical statesmanship, rather than the expression of spiritual fellowship; that they may guarantee the forms, without inspiring the spirit of freedom; that they may enshrine the past, while sacrificing the adventurous faith that creates a yet greater future. Such projects may be either unduly vague or unduly rigid. They may be calculating rather than trustful. They may magnify the church at the expense of the Kingdom. Yet the outlook and experience of perfect Love, if they furnish the constructive and vital principles that are immanent in them, are sufficient to prevent any such disaster. Hence, to conclude, mankind has little need of a Methodism that has lost its savour; but most urgent need of a Methodism which enjoys the vision and seeks both the experience and the thorough-going application of perfect love—the true and effective witness to a waiting world that "God is Love."—The Methodist Times (London).

TEN REASONS FOR GOING TO CHURCH.

1. We like to please our friends. You have not a worthy friend who would not be pleased to have you go to church.
2. The sermon may help you. Daniel Webster said: "It is a mighty poor sermon that doesn't hit me somewhere."
3. It helps us keep in touch with the Eternal Verities. There is danger that God, our loved ones, and the future world will be crowded out of our thoughts.

4. It helps to keep our ideals fresh and high and stimulates us to live up to them.

5. It encourages an institution that stands for the best things, and that cannot live without friends and supporters.

6. It helps us to see things in their right proportions. We need the comprehensive view which takes in not only dirt and dollars, but also character and eternity.

7. The reflex action of worship is as inevitable as it is ennobling. One cannot help but grow like that which he reverences, loves, and adores.

8. Its service appeals to the best sides of our natures—the music to the aesthetic, our friends to the social, the sermon to the intellectual, the worship to our oldest and deepest instincts.

9. The thought and speech on high themes, the noble hymns and dignified music are needed to offset the slang, profanity, and ragtime with which we are daily assaulted.

10. George F. Hoar says: "There is no more commanding public duty than attendance at church on Sunday. It would be impossible to maintain liberty or self-government if our churches were closed, and public worship of God is to be maintained only by attendance upon it."—H. S. Bradley, in The Congregationalist.

WHO IS A CHRISTIAN?

Who then is a Christian, according to the light which God hath vouchsafed to this people? He that, being "justified by faith, hath peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ;" and, at the same time, is "born again," "born from above," "born of the Spirit;" inwardly changed from the image of the devil, to that "image of God wherein he was created;" he that finds the love of God shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost which is given unto him; and whom this love sweetly constrains to love his neighbor, every man, as himself: he that has learned of his Lord to be meek and lowly in heart, and in every state to be content: he in whom is that whole mind, all those tempers, which were also in Christ Jesus: he that abstains from all appearance of evil, in his actions; and that offends not with his tongue: he that walks in all the commandments of God, and in all his ordinances, blameless: he that, in all his intercourse with men, does to others as he would they should do to him; and in his whole life and conversation, whether he eats or drinks, or whatsoever he doeth, doeth all to the glory of God.—John Wesley.

I WILL.

I will start anew this morning with a higher, freer creed;

I will cease to sit repining o'er my ruthless neighbor's greed;

I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;

I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;

I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze;

I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;

I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;

I will not deny his merit, but I'll strive to prove my own;

I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;

I will cease to preach your duty, and be more concerned with mine. —British Weekly.

WANTED—A position in B-grade college or agricultural high school. I have an A. B. degree from Millsaps College; have taught two years in a private institution, and have been principal of schools for two years. I prefer History as a subject. Address me at Lyman, Miss. E. J. Rutledge.

Miss MARY M. CAULK died in the town of Pollock, La., August 3, 1921, and was buried in the Pollock cemetery. She was born in Clark County, Alabama, May 24, 1845. She was a daughter of Brother Moses and Sister Nancy Caulk, of the same County. They moved to Louisiana in 1873. She joined the M. E. Church, South, and since she was fifteen years of age had always been a devout Christian character. She had been a daily companion to her devoted brother, H. U. Caulk, who survives her, for 72 years. Neither one ever married. There is one sister, the only relative, whose name is Mrs. Carrie Robinson, who lives in Lincoln Parish, La., she had besides her brother. She was 76 years of age when death came. A friend,

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were passed by the Woman's Missionary Society, Grenada, Miss., Sept. 12, 1921:

Whereas, it has pleased our Lord and King to call to His Kingdom above one of our faithful members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Grenada church, Mrs. O. F. BLEDSOE, therefore be it resolved:

First—That we shall ever miss her and the loving service she has rendered in His name, and the long and faithful service in our Society will ever be an inspiration and pleasant memory.

Second—That the removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be felt by many and will prove a serious loss to our Society.

Third—That our deepest sympathy be extended to her husband and family and that we express our hope that even so great a loss may be overruled for good by Him who "doeth all things well."

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the family and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. E. G. Payne, Mrs. A. W. Stokes, Mrs. W. W. Woodard, Mrs. J. H. Campbell, Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

In the passing of Mrs. L. B. BAYNARD, Sr., the Woman's Mission Society of the First Methodist Church has suffered an irreparable loss. She was a life member of the Society, and for sixteen years was its faithful president, and until failing health prevented, was rarely ever absent from her post of duty. She was a woman of strong convictions as to right or wrong, and possessed many other sterling qualities, among which was charitableness in a marked degree. She was the personification of gentility and kindness of heart; she never spoke unkindly of any one, and it was only to those who knew her well that her many excellent qualities shone with the greatest brilliance. During her latter years of suffering and invalidism, she never uttered a word of complaint. Therefore be it resolved:

First—That we sincerely mourn the loss of one whose beautiful life so endeared her to us all, that fond memory of her will abide with us always.

Second—That while we mourn, we humbly bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, saying: "Thy will be done."

Third—That we express our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent thereto; printed in the local daily, the Christian Advocate, and embodied as part of the minutes of the Missionary Society.

Signed: Mrs. Wm. Hill, Mrs. H. H. White, Mrs. Nettie Brown, Committee. Alexandria, La., Sept. 15, 1921.

E. B. BLOODWORTH—AN APPRECIATION.

As the "wheels of time" roll by, God calls His children from labor to reward. The great Wesley in his last hours said: "God buries His workmen, but carries on the work," and that "The best of all is, God is with us." When God called E. B. BLOODWORTH to his reward, December 15, 1920, our country lost one of her most substantial citizens, a worthy number of the old-time Southerners that are rapidly passing.

The Bloodworth family was a pioneer family in one of the oldest communities in the State. The name has for all the years been a synonym for truth, rugged honesty and imperial manhood. E. B. Bloodworth has sustained the traditions of the family. In the community in which he lived he seemed an indispensable part. Every one, white and black, held him in highest esteem, not only in his community but in the wide circle of his acquaintance.

He was born March 15, 1852. He joined the Methodist Church at sixteen years of age. He studied medicine, but decided to settle on his farm, where he spent a quiet, but very useful life. He was married late in life to Miss Nannie Seale. They lived a most devoted and happy life in their pleasant country home.

Mr. Bloodworth was a devoted churchman, superintendent of his Sunday school and a leader in all affairs religious and moral. He was respected, honored and loved. His passing is indeed the passing of "a landmark" and a most estimable gentleman. His memory will long be held dear and sacred by a host of devoted friends.

FROM THE PICKENS CHARGE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our revivals at all of our churches were good to edifying the saints, with a few to join the church. These are old, historic churches, well established. About all the folks belong to some church, and the young people join as they grow up. It would be hard to find better organized churches. The Sunday school, the missionary organizations, the financial system, and the evangelistic interests are all working well.

At Goodman, Brother W. V. Shearer, of Valden, did the preaching, which was very earnest and helpful, and our people enjoyed Brother Shearer socially, in which circle he is a charm.

At Pickens and Richland, we were assisted by Brother E. H. Cunningham, of Kosciusko, who is a good preacher, good revivalist and a delight socially. Under his preaching we laughed and cried, and prayed and rejoiced in the Lord. Indeed we have had three great revivals, long to be remembered.

Our people follow these good brethren with their prayers and best wishes—wishing for them to come this way again.

We hope by the hearty co-operation of these splendid people to make a good report at the Annual Conference, as is their custom.

Yours in His name,

J. H. SMITH, Pastor.

FROM RALEIGH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have finished our revival campaign. We feel it was, to a certain extent, a success. In some of the churches there was a real awakening. We had help in all of the meetings except one, where our help failed us and we had to do the preaching. Brothers Simms, Smith, McKee, and Davis are good help. Altogether there have been at least 100 reclamations and 50 conversions on the charge this year, and something like fifteen family altars erected.

We just closed the last meeting Thursday night. We had twenty accessions, 3 to the Baptist church, 17 to the Methodist. There were at least 40 or 50 who came weeping and promised to live differently. Also there were seven family altars erected. Our help couldn't come to us in that meeting so the people began to work doubly in earnest.

In all, we have been in eleven meetings this summer—five of them in other charges. The Lord was very near to us and blessed our efforts in those meetings we assisted in. There were 40 accessions and at least 150 reclamations, people who were in church but not living right; also about 25 family altars were erected.

Just let me say, also, we have had a profitable year on the charge—one church repaired, another getting ready to build and the debt on Raleigh church paid off, also some repairs on parsonage, and planning extensive repairs first of another year.

The Christian Education Movement did not take well (financially), but we put on the organization in every church and gave a chance. Brother Nobles, the charge director, spoke in every community, and his speech was as much to the point as any I heard during the campaign.

In conclusion, the finances are in fairly good shape, and Mrs. Clegg will soon be back in parsonage. The Methodists and Baptists have had the pastor's measure taken and ordered a suit of clothes to wear to Conference. We are praying for a good report at Conference, and to be sent another year where the Lord can use us most for his glory.

R. H. CLEGG, P. C.

Since we have to be our own constant companions, not only in this world, but in the next as well, nothing can make up to us for doing a thing which impairs character.—Selected.

FROM MEADVILLE, MISS.

Just a line to say things are moving along fairly well with us. Prospects are good for a good rounding out of the year. We have just closed a real good revival at Meadville, with Brother A. M. Broadfoot doing the preaching. I have never had a man who did better work than Brother Broadfoot.

PAUL H. GRICE, P. C.

FROM MONTROSE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: On Sept. 18 we closed a fine revival meeting in Montrose, Miss. Rev. J. V. Bennett, one of our most efficient evangelists, assisted us. Around sixty or eighty professed to be saved. Weeping penitents crowded the altars, prayed clear through to a conscious salvation, and publicly confessed Christ, in the good old Methodist way. One such convert is worth more than a regiment of the modern manufactured sort. Many family altars were erected, and our church is praying and working for Christ.

W. W. HOPPER, Pastor.

FROM LAKE ARTHUR, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed a great meeting here yesterday. Our revival meeting opened on the first Sunday in September, at 11 a.m. Rev. G. D. Anders did the preaching for seven days, and did it well, as he always does. Then came Brother Dan E. Kelly, evangelist, and continued until yesterday, with three sermons per day, except on last Sunday, when he preached four. Brother John Kelly came with his cornet and rendered valuable service.

There was a general awakening in the church, and about 40 offered for membership. Old Lake Arthur was stirred up as she has never been before, so everybody says. Brother Carley, I consider it a great meeting—sixteen men and twenty-five women pledged themselves to lead a prayer meeting, and this number consisted of new converts and people that have never led a prayer meeting.

The people showed their appreciation of Brother Kelly and his helpers by a unanimous invitation to come back another year and hold another meeting, and by an offering of $400.

DODSON TELLS THE HORROR OF CALOMEL

You Don't Need to Sicken, Grip, or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tonic tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.

Get a Good Night's Rest

Sleep is just as necessary to health as food. The ability to sleep depends on the condition of the nerves.

Dr. Miles' Nervine insures a good night's rest.

It will help any nervous condition from sleeplessness to epilepsy. Your money back if the first bottle fails to benefit you. You'll find Dr. Miles' Medicines in all drug stores.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

A large class at Sardis is studying Learning and Teaching, also one at Crenshaw is working on the same book. Mrs. G. D. Burt is an individual student at Iamar, studying the Pupil; Mrs. J. R. Sparkman, of Cooksville, is studying Learning and Teaching. All over the Conference our teachers are addressing themselves to the glorious work of preparing to teach religion more successfully.

It would be cheering news to hear that fifty classes were organized and started the first of October in our Sunday schools. It would be great to hear that at least fifty schools had agreed to put on the Missionary Program once a month. Of course it will require work, but the harder the task, the better people like it.

One teacher in each school with a little training would double the attendance in many instances. Mrs. J. T. Moore, of Welr, has trebled the attendance in the last three months in the school where she teaches. Her good work has spread out to a neighboring school at Salem and that school is responding to her overflow of enthusiasm. And so the good work goes on.

This is a good time to add as many to our schools as we have already. Any amount of helps for increasing the membership will be furnished on application. The Lord has given us some great revivals this year. Have all these new converts attend Sunday school and study God's Word that they may be trained for service. Where families are too far from any church to attend Sunday school, get them to take the Home Quarterly, the best periodical published by our church.

Millsaps College has a man at the head of the Department of Religious Education; so has Grenada College. From these two institutions we may expect a number of trained teachers to do some great work. We are confident that the young men in charge of these departments will hold to the whole Book and teach a full gospel. We have reason to hope for a better day in our church as the result of these two teachers.

The question of what we are going to do with teachers in our colleges who are interpreting the Bible from the naturalistic standpoint must be answered—teachers who do away with the supernatural, teachers who seem to want an expurgated edition of the Scripture. They talk about men must be allowed to think. True, they should think, but they should think through to the light. It looks as if a man with common sense could see what Darwinism, modernism, materialism, and the like will lead men to. This stuff has been thoroughly tried out and found wanting in every respect. What are we to do with these men is a question that must be answered. A man has the right to have smallpox if he wants it, but he has no right to give the disease to others. A man may have the personal privilege of tearing the Book to bits, but he has no right to eat the bread of the church and at the same time foist his opinions upon the unsuspecting youth put under his tutelage. This poor old sin-cursed world needs the whole Book taught by men made whole by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. What are we going to do with unsound teachers in our colleges? Can we do anything? Are we to let our children come up under the regime that wrecked Germany and nearly ruined the world? Well, what are we going to do about it? The condition that prompts this question hurts me worse than anything that has happened in the history of our church.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

May I make a definite appeal to you to help the Board by observing Sunday School Day in each Sunday school, by at least an offering made?

This is a comparative statement of how the districts stand on the money sent in for Sunday School Day.

Brookhaven—1920, $506; 1921, $189.15; number schools reporting in 1921, 18.

Hattiesburg—1920, $216; 1921, $98.63; number schools reporting, 13.

Jackson—1920, $420; 1921, $348.47; number schools reporting, 20.

Meridian—1920, $260; 1921, $219.79; number schools reporting, 23.

Newton—1920, $218; 1921, $141.57; number schools reporting, 18.

Vicksburg—1920, $295; 1921, $201.59; number schools reporting, 21.

Seashore—1920, $253; 1921, $122.73; number schools reporting, 14.

Totals—1920, $2,168; 1921, $1,321.98; number schools reporting in 1921, 127.

We are short $846.02 from last year; 127 schools out of 425 have observed the Day and reported.

Some very remarkable reports are coming in. The Finkbine Sunday school, Shiloh charge, has sent twice as much money to the Orphans' Home as they have spent for literature. I think this fine for them.

The Rolling Fork Sunday school shows a most remarkable increase over last year, both as to finances and membership. They have sent in more to the Orphans' Home than they have spent on their literature.

Last Sunday was spent at Bolton. We met with them in Sunday school and held an open conference for the grading of the school. They will show a fine increase this year. They will improve the work of their school and have plans by which they will be enabled to do some very effective work.

Two months till Conference! They will be busy. Don't forget the Sunday school cause. Help us get accurate reports and help us make an increase over last year in every particular.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

FROM JEFFERSON STREET,
NATCHEZ, MISS.

On last Friday evening, the 15th inst., there took place an event in which the whole city of Natchez manifested great interest—the opening concert, under the direction of Dr. J. E. W. Lord, of Meridian, testing out the new organ just completed for this church by the M. P. Moller Pipe Organ Co., of Hagerstown, Maryland. As many as six hundred were in attendance, of the very best people in the city, composed of all denominations, representing the most cultured of our citizens.

To say that this great organ met the very highest expectations of the builders and those for whom it was built, is not stating it too strongly. The program planned and rendered by Dr. Lord could hardly be improved upon by any one in any section of the country.

Dr. Lord is a master of the keys, and with the echo, the Vox Humana and chimes, he gave the audience a rare treat, some selections being especially chosen to show what was in the organ.

The fact that the inside of the building had been re-done, with three and four coats of paint, by a man that is an artist when it comes to blending colors to get the best effect, and the new system of lighting, soft white lights, rendering this the most beautiful auditorium in any city, added greatly to the pleasure of the occasion. The congregation is very proud of this achievement, and so also is the city of Natchez, as there is quite a deal of real musical talent here, and many who can and will appreciate it.

On Sunday morning, the 18th inst., the first service since the work started of installing the organ, the new lights and the re-doing of the inside, we had a most delightful service, with a large congregation. The service opened with the administration of baptism of our fine children, splendid musical program, a sermon by the pastor, and then the administration of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. There were so many communicants that we had to refill the cups with wine, as it gave out before they had been served. Six were received into the church by certificate.

On Oct. 16 we will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of this building, which was built under the pastorate of Dr. W. H. Watkins, father of Dr. A. F. Watkins, grandfather of the late Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Hon. William and Hon. Vaughn Watkins, of Jackson, and Dr. McDonald Watkins, of this city, who is one of the leading practicing physicians of this city and county. Rev. Robert Selby will preach the sermon for the evening service. Rev. J. R. Jones, our presiding elder, will hold the fourth quarterly conference for this church that afternoon, which will be associated with the quarterly conference of the Washington charge, as we have adopted the plan of holding these quarterly meetings at the same time and place. After this celebration, I will give you a report of the year's work, and give something of what has been accomplished during the four years of the present pastorate.

I believe I can say that this church has never seen a better day; the spirit of harmony prevails and love rules in the hearts of the people, and the whole outlook is upward and we will finish well. We have as many as seventy-five at prayer meeting, and fifty-five at the Sunday evening devotional service of the League. That is good.

FROM SHREVEPORT, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please add me to the list of your subscribers to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. I have read the Advocate for years at home, and now that I am in the work I must have my own copy. I have just come to Shreveport after my year at Emory University, and am Brother Drake's assistant pastor at Noel Memorial Church.

Methodism in Shreveport is in the midst of a great union revival under Rev. George Tucker, one of our general evangelists. The preparatory week is over and we are just now going into the second week. Crowds have flocked to the meeting, which is being held under a big tent on Texas Avenue, several congregations being many more than 2000 people. Dr. Wynn said that the attendance last Friday night was unquestionably the greatest at a religious service ever held in Shreveport. Brother Tucker has made a fine impression on the people of Shreveport, especially the laboring classes, and a great work of grace is being prayed for and expected. We will give you a full report at the close of the meeting two weeks hence.

Yours fraternally,

H. L. JOHNS.

DELEGATES TO GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conferences are now meeting in rapid succession, and the delegates are being elected to the General Conference, which will meet next May in Hot Springs, Ark. We learn with pleasure that three women have already been elected: Miss Bennett, the honored President of the Woman's Missionary Council, from the Kentucky Conference; Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Vice President of the Woman's Missionary Council, from Missouri Conference, and Mrs. S. H. Bowman, another member of the Council, from the Western Virginia Conference. This will be the first General Conference of the Southern Methodist Church in which women have been seated as delegates; we congratulate these Conferences, and sincerely hope that many others will follow their example.

of Missions—was called to the position of Associate Secretary of the Board of Education. As this was a joint call from the Board of Education and the Christian Educational Commission, Dr. Cook felt compelled, by the urgency of the situation, the church having already pledged twenty million dollars for Christian Education, to accept the position.

The Scarritt Board of Control was immediately called to meet in Kansas City, July 5-6. Realizing that another President must be chosen at once and the faculty staff enlarged in other ways, a special committee with power was appointed to select a new president, and make all other faculty adjustments that were necessary. This committee is glad to report that Dr. J. L. Cuninggim has accepted the position of President, and will enter upon his duties at the coming fall session. Dr. Cuninggim, an outstanding man of the church, occupies the chair of Religious Education in the Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., and for many years has been in charge of the Correspondence Course of Study for young preachers.

Dr. C. B. Duncan, a member of the Southwest Missouri Conference, and a man splendidly prepared for the position, has accepted the chair of Sociology; Miss Kate Cooper, for thirteen years one of God's chosen vessels in our Korean Mission and now on her way back to this country, has been appointed to the school for the year as practical instructor in mission service and special field work.

It will doubtless be necessary to add other members to the faculty staff from time to time, even during the present year, as the student body enrolled to date is more than sufficient to fill all available space in the building.—Council Bulletin.

Last June twenty-one Christian seniors graduated from our McTyeire School in China, well grounded in the fundamentals of the Christian life. Concerning the Bible Course in McTyeire one of the missionaries writes: "We believe that our Bible Course is unique in missionary education from the fact that it offers a fuller study of the Bible than any school that we know of. In the four years of High School the complete Bible, as a whole, is given. There is no text book on the Bible in any year. Our text is the Old Testament and the New Testament.

The Freshman class study the history of Israel from the creative records to the division of the kingdom. The Sophomore course is the Wisdom Literature, Psalms, Job, Proverbs, etc. The Juniors have the Kings and Prophets of Israel from the great pre-exilic prophets to the builders of the new nation after the return. So from Genesis to Malachi the preparation for the Messiah, God's plan for His world, has been unfolded. Now the seniors have presented to them in the first term Paul's Epistles; in the second term, the Life of Christ.

It is not hard to see that the aim has been to lead the young women to the threshold of life with the last greatest impression being the divine Christ for their own lives, and in the last term the social applications of His teaching are also emphasized. This work is required and accredited, counting two units for each year. The periods of recitation are fifty minutes each, twice a week.

Three Korean women all the way from Siberia have come to our new evangelistic center, Seoul, Korea, for admission and instruction that they might qualify themselves for work among their own in Northern Asia. This is but one slight indication of the reach of this Central Plant when we once get our work in full sway.

Miss Ruth Brittain of Birmingham, Ala., missionary of the Woman's Missionary Council and teacher of Bible in Union Bible Training School in Nanking, China, did not return to China via the Pacific with the party sailing August 18. On August 6, Miss Brittain sailed via the Atlantic on the Cedric for Liverpool, England, where she will visit the Bible Training School of that country. About the last of August, with missionary friends from England, she will start for China, going by the Mediterranean, Suez Canal, Red Sea and Indian Ocean, reaching China early in October, just a little later than the party going by the Pacific.

A FINE REVIVAL AT DAVIS SPRINGS.

Dear Brother Carley: According to the testimony of the older members of our Davis Springs church, we have just closed one of the best, if not the best, revival meetings in the history of the church—covering a period of forty-four years.

Among the men and women of our church there we have a number who are living exemplary Christian lives, those who are consecrated, whose lives are a living testimony to the saving and keeping power of the Christian religion.

Now as to the meeting there. The pastor was assisted in the meeting by Rev. J. W. Cook, who has recently come to our church from the Nazarene church, and his co-laborer, Otis Spinks, who had charge of the music.

As you would expect one from the Nazarene church not only to believe but preach a high Christian experience, Brother Cook's preaching met fully this expectation; but there were those there among our members who were ready to say Amen as well as the pastor and it was not long before the power of the meeting began to be felt.

Prayer, such as Jacob had before meeting his brother Esau, such as was made by the church unto God for Peter, was not the exception, but the rule.

The great blessing which the Lord poured out on us as a result of the faithful preaching, the praying, and the songs sung in the power of the Spirit by Brother Spinks and the choir, far exceeded our expectations.

There were several services in which the demonstration of the power of the Spirit was great. They who think the Methodists have forgotten how to shout should have been there and learned anew the old lesson, for there was shouting from time to time when some young person for whom we had been praying lifted his or her face with the shine of glory lighting it up.

The last service was the crowning service of the meeting, and looked as though it was almost a literal answer to all of our prayers. The altar was filled with seekers; still there was not enough room for those who were coming, and they filed down behind one another, reaching out into the aisle, more than thirty of whom testified by giving the preacher their hand that the burden had rolled from their heart. Souls were saved in this service for whom prayer had gone up from the first service of the meeting.

At the conclusion of the last service Brother Cook asked all those who had been blessed by being reclaimed, converted, or sanctified during the meeting to rise to their feet, and more than seventy were counted.

One of the most beautiful scenes of the meeting, as beautiful as we nearly ever witnessed, was when Brother Cook asked for all the young people who were willing to offer themselves to the Lord for service in His kingdom as missionaries, preachers, or whatever he might call them to, to stand around the altar rail; and there came almost by storm fifty-seven noble young lives in response. I believe the church may still have its Pentecost if it will.

Brother Cook's preaching draws, the crowds at the night services exceeding the seating capacity of the church.

"TRUTHFULNESS."

By G. W. Yeates.

In consideration of a desire to fathom the meaning of the caption of this small article, we must take the back trail of time and journey, in our imagination, all the way back to the primitive days of the creation. In order that we may fully comprehend what truth really is we must affiliate ourselves with that period of time in the which God said (Gen. 2:17) "For in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

This long, imaginary journey we must take in order to be in a position fully to comprehend the meaning of the word "truth." In reality we are compelled to associate ourselves away back with a period prior to the creation of this our world, at the time when man was created, and the morning stars sang together. It will

TAKES CARE OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often despondent, had dizzy spells and at my monthly periods it was almost impossible to keep around at my work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been worse and no position could get in would relieve it, and doctor's medicine did not help me. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. My back is much better and I can sleep well. I keep house and have the care of five children so my work is very trying and I am very thankful I have found the Compound such a help. I recommend it to my friends and if you wish to use this letter I am very glad to help any woman suffering as I was until I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement or derangement of the female system. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound be then and there that we can behold the drastic results of an untruth. When once we have associated ourselves with the far-back, primitive days of Creation, we are then in a position to look upon the inner circle of events; and are allowed to hear that arch-fiend of all truth and honesty, when he said to Mother Eve (Gen. 3:4), "Ye shall not surely die." This is our first record of an untruth.

This was Satan's first opportunity of speaking to our foreparents, and he spoke a lie! Blind Milton, in his immortal "Paradise Lost," informs us that Satan, while yet in heaven prior to his fall, had heard the Father and Son speaking of creating a world, and, for their glory and honor, placing man thereon; therefore, when Satan was cast out of heaven and by subtlety and deceit had extricated himself from purgatory, his first and greatest desire was to locate the earth; and by a great effort and much seeking the eventually succeeded in his desire. But when he beheld Adam and Eve in all their primitive simplicity and happiness as they dressed and kept the garden of Eden, it was then that he was foiled in his original purport to mar their happiness, and he really regretted that in his heart he had harbored a scheme for their destruction.

But when he reflected on his own present condition, and also remembered the great heights from which he had fallen, it all only served to "stir the hell within him, for within him hell he brings, and round about him; nor from hell one step, no more than from himself, can part." And he therefore at once began to devise a scheme whereby he might successfully thwart the plans of God.

The entering into, and the seemingly becoming a talking serpent, was only a ruse of the devil by which he succeeded in attracting Eve's attention; and also to feign his innocence, whereby he hoped to cause her to believe an untruth; for our mother Eve, although in her primitive purity and simplicity, being, as she was, direct from the plastic hands of our great Creator, and being the essence of innocence and truthfulness, heeded Satan and did believe an untruth, which caused her expulsion from the Garden of Eden, and has also caused untold millions of deeds of sin and degradation. But not yet being satisfied, we again ask, "what is truth?"

It is that one immortal principle that can never be destroyed; it is that one eternal something which shall dominate the whole world, and live forever. By faith it most surely is that substance which shall exist throughout eternity.

Truth is the cornerstone of faith, hope and charity. Truth is the foundation stone of all righteous laws, order, and confidence. Without a Christian truth there is no hope of a glorious hereafter. Truth was the prime factor in the lives of David and Jonathan, also in the lives of Damon and Pythias. Christian truth is the prime factor in the life of the Protestant church of to-day. Confidence in God and man is founded on the pillar of Christian truthfulness in our fellow-man.

Truthfulness is honesty. No person can be honest and at the same time untruthful.

Therefore, let every act and deed of our lives be in strict accord with Christian truthfulness.

Now in conclusion let me ask, How is it ever possible to enjoy a life of Christian truthfulness without a Christian education? And how could it be possible for us or our children to obtain a Christian education without the maintenance of Christian schools and colleges? Therefore let us strive to go over the top with our allotted $33,000,000 as designated for the maintenance of our system of Christian education. Let us pray the good Master that he will move upon the hearts of the people, that they may rest not until they have reached the goal of God in Christ Jesus. For it shall not be "by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

Mablin, Miss.

Not Only For Chills and Fever But a Fine General Tonic

FROM LONG BEACH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Very seldom we speak through your columns in a report. But we have had many things to make us rejoice, and you know it is pretty hard for a genuine Methodist to keep silent when his cup is running over.

Long Beach was made a station this year, and at first I was anxious to know why, seeing so few church people. But when I learned these high-hearted laymen and noticed the means they were putting into the work, and the time and talent, I have been able to see more plainly, for the surrounding country is well populated, and we just used the "Tin Lizzie" to find out about them, and we got the new, and some of the old folk.

We have just closed a very successful revival. Rev. James M. Smith, of Union, Miss., did the preaching. Suffice it to say, "he fired the camp." He does not compromise with sin, and on this coast surely the devil comes with the tourist, and spends his vacation, too. But the crowds grew, and on the last night of the meeting there were more people present than had been in years at the church, so I was told. There were eleven accessions, ten on profession of faith. Besides, we believe our church has seen the brighter day dawn. Brother Smith, naturally gifted in this work, has much to promise the church. Men like this are needed to give their time to evangelistic work. This makes a total of thirty accessions this year, fifteen on profession of faith.

Brother Carley, my Ford looks like new now; electric iron in the home now; our pantry still has some of the last pounding; while it is still warm, yet there is been dumped off a cord of wood and a ton of coal. Mayor C. B. Gates, Dr. W. A. Dearman, and J. W. Allen see that the preacher is cared for and are responsible for the overplus—and they are supported by the Woman's Missionary Society. We thank the people, and praise the Lord.

HUGH C. CASTLES.

FROM ARKABUTLA, MISS.

My Dear Brother Carley: I shall not detain you long, but would like to say just a few words just here. My last meeting, which makes the fifth one, closed last Tuesday night. Since the fourth week in July I have been busily engaged in revival work; this is my third year in the ministry and I am glad to say that this year has been the pearl of the three.

I must confess that our success on the Arkabutla circuit has been a little shocking. It appeals to me that the old-time religion has again won its way into the hearts of men. I have listened to the cry of more new-born souls this year than ever before.

Rev. W. L. Graves, of Sunflower City, was with us for ten days at Arkabutla, and such a revival as we had! The pioneers of this town tell me that such has never before happened. The Holy Spirit certainly did His work with us and our meeting closed with twenty-two additions to the Methodist Church and five to the Baptist Church.

During the past two months I have received seventy-two into the church, sixty-nine of them on profession of faith.

I praise God for His goodness and mercy. My dear wife and I have walked almost through the valley of the shadow of death since our dear little girl left us in June for her final reward in heaven, but, oh, just think, just a few more days and we shall join her in the mansion above! Remember us, Brother Carley, at the throne of grace.

W. O. HUNT.

TAYLORSVILLE AND MIZE CIRCUIT

Dear Mr. Editor: We have had four good revivals on my work this year, with the addition of 27 to the church.

At Taylorsville, Rev. J. L. Smith assisted the pastor and the results were, we had good preaching, church revived, and four additions to church.

At Hebron church, our presiding elder did the preaching. The fact that this was his old stamping ground for many years, forced him to do some good preaching, to prove himself out during his long stay from his old home. Everybody knows that W. W. Graves can preach. The church was spiritually revived, with one addition to the church.

At Fairmount church, Rev. H. S. Westbrook did the preaching, with the assistance of Mrs. Alex Newton and her two sons, George and Mack, to furnish the music. This church was revived and 9 added to the church. Brother Westbrook did some good preaching here.

At Mize, Rev. J. L. Smith, of Mendenhall, was with me again. Here he was at his best in the hottest days in July. He preached as he never preached before. The church was revived and 13 added to the church.

In all these meetings we were compelled to close too early on account of the planned program of the pastor and his helpers.

Brother Carley, I have moved to Jackson, Miss., on the Millsaps campus to attend college this year. Change my paper from Taylorsville to Jackson, Miss., care Millsaps College.

Yours truly,

S. W. JOHNSON.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"THY KINGDOM COME."

The prayer for the coming of the Kingdom of God upon earth is uttered more frequently, perhaps, than any other petition that falls from human lips. This is true because it is a part of the prayer the Master taught his disciples, and because it sums up all the things that men look upon as desirable in an ideal state of society. It is altogether possible, however, that we pray this prayer without faith to believe that it will be answered. We wish the Kingdom would come—we hope it will come—but in our thinking we put its coming so far off that what ought to be a very definite expectation becomes little more than a vague desire. Yet we must believe in the coming of the Kingdom of God if we believe in a God that humanity can trust and in a humanity that God can trust. God loves men, and men are capable of responding to the call of infinite love, and out of these irrefragable facts must come that blessed consummation toward which the whole creation moves. If God hated men, there could be little hope of the coming of the Kingdom.

AN EARLY FROST.

A frost on the first day of October is a little out of the ordinary in this climate, but this is the phenomenon that occurred in New Orleans on last Saturday—at least, that is the way we interpret what happened on that day. A parade of "liberty-loving Americans" had been widely announced, in which thousands and thousands of citizens who believe in beer and wine and who feel that their "personal liberty" has been infringed upon by the Volstead Act were to take part, and during which speeches were to be made by a Louisiana Senator and other widely-advertised orators. But a frost seems to have fallen upon the whole program. According to the best newspaper accounts we have been able to find, and to the reports of friends of ours who saw the parade, fifteen hundred is a liberal estimate of the number of people who took part in it. This number includes the detachment of police which was a part of the procession, and the occupants of a goodly number of automobiles. When it is remembered, however, that prizes were offered for the best decorated automobile in the parade, it is reasonable to assume that some of the cars were in it solely with the hope of winning a prize. And the speeches—we almost forgot about them! According to the newspapers, there were none. The distinguished Senator who was supposed to deliver one of his fervid orations sent a telegram expressing his regret at being unable to be present, and the other speakers somehow or other failed to deliver their speeches. We suppose the promoters of the parade imagine that the affair was a great success, and they will probably resent the humorous headlines in one of the local newspapers over the account of the parade: "1000 Orleanians Boldly March For Beer And Wine; Banners Make Up for Lack of Oratory, and Parade Strays Off Itinerary Once When It Gets Mixed Up With Funeral Procession." For a city of some 400,000 people, a parade of not more than 1500 people looks pretty weak. It really was a frost, and on the first of October at that. From the standpoint of the lovers of beer and wine, it was probably worse than a frost—it was a hard freeze. (P. S. Our latest information, secured from a gentleman whose reliability is beyond any question, is to the effect that by actual count there were 361 people in the parade.)

A CHANCE FOR THE PUBLIC.

The public has the best chance just now that it has ever had, perhaps, to bring about such a change in the character of the moving picture industry as will make it really the means of innocent amusement and efficient instruction that it ought to be. The recent scandal in which a film star is playing the principal role has aroused a wave of moral indignation throughout the world that has in it immense possibilities—if it does not just die down. If public opinion can be brought to demand clean plays by clean players, the producers will see to it that the demand is met. It is the profit that the producers are after, and if there is no profit in maintaining moral degenerates by presenting their plays, they will very quickly eliminate them from their studios. Just last week we noticed a news item to the effect that the officials of one of the greatest film-producing companies in the world had met to consider their attitude toward the star now under such serious charges in California. It would not be at all fair, of course, to assume that there are no good men and women engaged in the production of moving pictures, but it is fair to say that the business needs more of that kind, and that it needs to get rid of those who seem to hold in contempt the simplest moral virtues.

STRAW MEN.

The world is full enough of real evils to keep all those who are sincerely interested in bringing about the establishment of righteousness busy in the work of overthrowing and demolishing them, without wasting time and energy fighting imaginary evils. One of the easiest things in the world to do is to set up a straw man and then knock him down—he was put there to be knocked down and he cannot defend himself at all. But nothing is gained by his downfall. The straw men will get along very well if we will let them alone—real issues are the things that ought to engage our attention.

AT LAST!

There is some consolation in the fact that New Orleans has at last taken steps to put a stop to the flood of vile literature that has been steadily flowing through the bookstores and newsdealers' stands for many months. We cannot speak from personal knowledge of the pernicious contents of many of these vile pamphlets, though we have had opportunity to glance through a few of them, but we are reliably informed that some of them are so far beyond the pale of decency that their publishers will not risk sending them through the mails, fearing that they will come into conflict with laws that would render them liable to fine and imprisonment. We are inclined to believe that the authorities in New Orleans have not yet suppressed all these vile publications that ought to be suppressed, but we are thankful that a beginning has at last been made. We hope that all other cities and towns in the country will likewise take action against these filthy products of degenerate minds. It may be that parents do not know that these indecent so-called magazines are being sold in practically every community in the country, and that the school children, especially the girls, are reputed to be the most eager readers of this moral filth. We suggest that parents take a look now and then at the literature being sold by a good many news-stands and drugstores—they might find some things that would shock them into action against the atrocious crime of polluting the minds of our young people that some base-hearted men are willing to commit for the sake of a few dimes.

WORRYING ABOUT THE WRONG THING.

The advice not to worry is very good advice, but mighty hard to follow. Any injunction to that effect, therefore, is so likely to go unheeded that we shall refrain altogether from giving it; instead, we merely suggest that those who do worry, usually do most of their worrying about the wrong thing. For example: the man who has a morbid fear that he will die in the poorhouse is so worried about such a lamentable end that he lives as a pauper to-day in order that he may have a crust of bread in the remote future, whereas, if he must worry, he ought to be concerned about what he will have for breakfast in the morning—or maybe for supper to-night. He is a foolish traveler along the way of life who crosses his bridges before he comes to them.

LITTLE TALKS ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By Honorable Josephus Daniels,

Former Secretary of the Navy of the United States.

Education and Individualism.

II.

The strength and weakness of the Old South was its intense individualism. Tennyson sung—"The individual withers, but the world is more and more." It was not so "In the good old days" our fathers talked about that civilization wrote individual with a capital. It grew big men, sun-crowned, above the fog in public duty and in private thinking. Calhoun, Yancey, Lamar, Hill, Vance, Vest, Beck, Hampton, Alex Stephens, Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee, these were among the lighthouse men which that civilization produced and gave to the world. We shall not look upon their like again. But they lived in a generation of individualism.

The captains of industry in the Old South were also individualists. If a man had the means he would invest it and borrow from his neighbor to build a factory. Partnerships were common but the corporation into which the many invested their surplus was in its infancy, and there was little favor shown this modern lever.

Perhaps the feeling in the extreme was best illustrated by a story of Robert Toombs. On one occasion, after the Civil War, the idea became lodged in the mind of a young merchant in Washington, Ga., that a hotel ought to be built in that town, and so he obtained a charter for a corporation, opened a subscription for a stock company, and went to Mr. Toombs, the first citizen of the town, to head the subscription. "No," said Mr. Toombs, "I will have nothing to do with it. In the first place, if a hotel is needed, let some man build it, and if convinced it is a necessity, I will lend him some money. But the fact is that Washington does not need a hotel. If anybody comes whom we wish to welcome to the town, I will entertain him as my guest. Others are not wanted."

Education halted for the same reason. The teachers who trained the statesmen of the South were individualists. They built their schoolhouses with the aid of patrons, and the benefits of their instruction were confined to the limited few. As to colleges and universities in the main, they struggled with small buildings and little or no endowment. Our rich men, with a few exceptions, had not learned that investment in immortal mind brought dividends larger and longer than any other use of money.

More money has been given to education in the last twenty years by comparatively rich men of the South for education than had been given in the previous two hundred years. Why? Individualistic practice has given way to a sense of community obligation, and a new conception of the value of education and a sense of trusteeship of wealth has come to the world. Two Southern Methodists, blessed with large fortunes, have given more money, I dare say, to build and endow Christian colleges of the church than was given by all the Methodists of the South in the fifty years between 1810 and 1860, and those fifty years saw large prosperity and many rich planters in Southern Methodism.

In early Methodist circles the layman was expected not only to attend church on Sunday morning and place a few dollars in the contribution box; he was expected to be an evangel, in the home and in the church and in the community, of the gospel he professed.

What this day needs in the Methodist Church, in all the churches and in the hearts of men outside church membership, is a consciousness that money is a means of grace, and that it multiplies its usefulness a hundred-fold if it educates a youth and sends him forth equipped for life's work. With adequate facilities and adequate endowment, the colleges of the South can give equipment to its youths to win their rightful place in the race for power and influence and service to the world.

We must educate or we must see those peoples surpass us who have the vision that knowledge is power and are willing to invest their money in placing the best educational opportunities within the reach of every son and daughter of the South. What will it profit us to gain wealth and lose the ability to translate our inherited high ideals to all peoples?

THE PRESIDING ELDER.

By Rev. Geo. H. Thompson.

Dear Mr. Editor: I hope your readers will not think that I have an "ax to grind" if I write some things in behalf of the presiding elder. All that I have to ask of them and the bishop at the next session of Conference is to let me alone. If I might project a request far in the future, and one that would involve a remote probability, it would be a request that I might be allowed to close my ministerial life without further service as presiding elder. Nine years of service as such have given me a fair chance to know his life, and to cause me to feel a large sympathy for him. To speak of sympathy for the presiding elder may provoke a sudden upward glance of the eye with some, for they have thought the office one much to be desired.

There are reasons, some noble and some ignoble, why a man might desire the office. If he desires a field of large usefulness, at the cost of as heroic service as man can render, he will find that field in the presiding eldership. If he wants a place less laborious than the pastorate, or a position which will allow him to take an important part in administering Conference affairs, the office may have a lure, but certainly no reward, for him.

Brotherliness, and I hope the facts involved, require the conclusion that whoever may desire the office is moved only by noble motives, and that he is willing to pay the price for the larger service. But has he counted the cost? It costs him the interruption of his reading and study, and interference with his preparation for preaching, and becomes a strain on his habits of devotion. It deprives him of the tender touch of the pastorate, and sometimes causes him to feel that he is regarded as the soulless agent through which the business matters of the church are transacted. His methods are censured; his motives are questioned; his efficiency doubted, and he is sometimes reminded that the people think they are paying very high for what they get. He is expected to advise like a lawyer, administer like a banker, entertain like a Chesterfield, pray like a Bunyan, and preach like a prophet. He must travel in season and out of season, catch trains at midnight, and go to bed at two o'clock a. m., spend one or two days each week with his family, and throw on his wife the care and moral training of the children, including the boys who have come to feel that they are too big to obey mother. Long rides over rough roads, through the extremes of heat and cold, services conducted in uncomfortable churches with the faithful few as worshipers, quarterly conferences conducted with little preparation on the part of officials, and the final twist with I. M. Standpat, U. R. Titewad, M. E. Skinfint, and I. Blow Myhorn, who have come up to misrepresent the churches of the charge.

It is natural for every preacher to desire the confidence and affection of every other preacher and his family, but fidelity to his duties often costs the presiding elder these considerations. Let him be as brotherly as he can in making the appointment for a pastor, these appointments are not always satisfactory, and it is easier to charge the failure to the presiding elder than to any one else. I think I have noticed that when the appointment pleases, the bishop is said to have made it, but when it displeases the presiding elder did it.

In faithfulness to his position he is often required to do things concerning which his conscience is clear, but the necessity of doing which is a tormenting regret that may linger through life. It has fallen to me more than once to say to a man who had planned to spend his life in the itinerant ministry, and who was destitute of a dollar, a bed, or a shelter for his family, that the church could not use him as a preacher. It has fallen to me to be the legal agent in the expulsion of men from the ministry whose sins had found them out. For this my conscience does not condemn me, but it pains me to remember that I had to have a part in a blow that has fallen so heavy on innocent women and children. It is a part of the price I have had to pay for the larger service.

I have made regrettable appointments, appointments that I regretted to make at the time they were made, but I could not do better. Others might have made better appointments, but I could not. All presiding elders, I am sure, have made like appointments. I have never gone into a cabinet meeting feeling that I possessed a pastor or a charge, but always have felt that I was representative for the pastor and for the charge, and endeavored to represent them to the best of my ability. My judgment has been faulty, my motive and my spirit have been right. When I have remembered that my acts had much to do with the welfare of more than twenty pastors and their families, the sense of responsibility was often overwhelming. My acts might mean hunger, sickness, death, on the one hand; and hurt to the kingdom of God on the other.

I believe that every presiding elder with whom I have been associated in nine cabinets has regarded his responsibilities as I have regarded mine. Some have seemed to be more cautious than others, but there can be a danger in excessive care. I have never found an elder who seemed willing to let one of his men be afflicted. Their greatest fault is telling so much that is good, and none of the bad. No preacher need fear that one-half of his faults will be told in a cabinet meeting. If some of them could hear themselves recommended by the presiding elder, they might become impatient that they were not advanced to much better appointments in his district. This liberal representation of a pastor is usually followed by the statement that, because of certain very unusual conditions in this particular district, he can not justly provide for him.

The secrecy so necessary in making appointments seems to cultivate in some a suspicion that he is being held out of his own. When two or more presiding elders are seen during the sitting of the Conference in close discussion, the remark is often made that "some poor fellow is being made to suffer." In four-fifths of all such discussions the effort is to keep some fellow from suffering, and it is often the fellow who makes the uncharitable remark.

I fear that there is not the frankness used between the presiding elder, pastors, and church members that the vital interests involved would require. The interests of the kingdom of God, the salvation of immortal souls, and of a man and his family, require that each party know the facts involved. It is no time and place for "pussy-foot" movements. If a steward thinks that his pastor should be moved, if he is a big and brave man he will tell the pastor what he thinks, and give him the reasons for his conclusions. If the pastor is a big man, he will appreciate the candor and courage of the steward. My convictions are strong that no presiding elder ought to withhold from a pastor information which affects the interests of himself, his family, or the pastorate he serves; and that every pastor should have religion and sense enough to profit by the information, and not stir up a row in trying to prove that the elder had been misinformed.

Now, Mr. Editor, I have much more that I would like to say on this almost threadbare question which I will give you later, if this little throw does not bring out too many hornets.

McComb, Miss.

THE FIFTH ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. F. B. Hill.

Sir Robt. W. Perks, the eminent Methodist layman, writing in the British Weekly this week, says: "I am one of a very small group of British delegates to the Ecumenical Conference of 1881, Dr. Watkinson and Sir George Smith being the persons with myself whose names appear also on that of forty years ago. Few are now left of those who heard Bishop M. Simpson, of Philadelphia, the close friend of Abraham Lincoln, preach the opening sermon at Wesley's Chapel from the text—'The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, they are life.' Of that congregation the vast majority are fallen asleep. Every one of the Ecumenical Conference has been followed by a movement towards reunion. The trend towards Christian unity and concerted action, which is manifested to-day outside Methodism in the Lambeth Conference Appeal and in the League of Nations, can be discovered in the Ecumenical Conferences from the beginning. Though the subject was excluded from formal discussion in 1881, there were many utterances which gave an impulse towards unity. Here is a brief passage from Bishop M. Simpson's sermon. 'I was walking some weeks ago' said the preacher, 'in a beautiful grove. The trees were some distance apart, and the trunks were straight and rugged. But as they ascended higher the branches came closer together, and still higher the twigs and branches interlaced and formed a canopy. I said to myself our churches resemble these trees. The trunks near the earth stand stiffly and widely apart. The more nearly towards heaven they ascend, the closer and closer they come together.' When the second Ecumenical Conference met at Washington in 1891, it was reported that Methodist union in Canada had been consummated without the loss of a single member or church. Another decade passed and the union of Australian Methodism was announced. In 1911 at Toronto we rejoiced over the union of three branches of the British Methodist family—Bible Christians, United Methodist, and New Connection. In 1921 the cause is advancing beyond all question, to an even more majestic victory."

There are 550 ministerial and lay representatives this year. Face, color, dress and language are all showing to London nowadays how Wesley's work has spread.

I am writing this in Jackson, La., on September 22. The Methodist papers dated September 9, from which I cull this news, have arrived, which show how quickly we get news these days. This Conference has no legislative functions, but it will surely foster fellowship, collect information, and set forth high ideals. The formal opening took place in Wesley's Chapel, City Road, on Tuesday evening, September 5. The other meetings were held in the Central Hall, Westminster. The President of the Wesleyan Conference conducted the service. Fraternal greetings were received from the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lloyd George, and the Baptists of Great Britain. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. S. P. Rose, D.D., Professor of Wesleyan College, Montreal. His text was from Rev. 21:5—"He that sitteth on the throne said, Behold I make all things new." With wealth of scripture quotation and many allusions to modern literature, this heartening, profoundly suggestive scripture was expounded and enforced. It came as a revelation to many how frequently the word "new" occurs in Holy Writ, especially in the New Testament. While Despair says that for things as they are, there is no remedy, and ruin and revolution are inevitable, Christ announces regeneration leading to reformation, new life taking new forms. The ministry of our Lord which began on earth is continued by the exalted Lord. And this will be so until all things are made new by His Spirit. Reform will follow the new heart and the right spirit in the individual and in society. New doctrines must be announced which yet are all in Christ, who is the final authority. And "new skins must be found for the new wine of the Spirit." Young ministers should cultivate the scientific spirit, rather than the apologetic method. Burke's aphorism concerning the State is true of the church: "A church without the means of change is without the means of conservation." Life must be renewed at Christ, the fountain of life. The church will conquer the world by daring to be utterly unlike the world. The old world cannot be rebuilt; it must be reborn. This is a brief summary of the sermon.

On Wednesday morning, Bishop John Nuelson, D.D., presided. After devotions and appointment of certain officers, Sir Walter Essex read a message from His Majesty the King, which was received standing. Sir Robt. Perks then moved an address to President Harding. Bishop Ainsworth seconded it. The "Methodist Recorder" correspondent says: "Bishop Ainsworth has a fine voice, fine presence, and a courageous utterance; he moved the house most when he made mention of Prohibition. The house would have its clap out and the Bishop just had to stop until the clapping finished. The climax came when all stood to sing 'My country, 'tis of thee.' There were English eyes which were NOT DRY and Bishop Ainsworth twirled the handkerchief in place of a flag."

WHAT THE CONFERENCE SECRETARIES SAY.

The Department of Publicity of the Missionary Centenary is receiving some encouraging reports from Conference Missionary Secretaries touching the matter of Centenary collections and the missionary situation generally in their fields.

Rev. J. E. Crawford, Central Texas Conference, writes that group meetings were held in each district of the Conference during September, with the attendance nearly one hundred per cent. Endorsement was given to the plan to make a concerted and determined effort to collect all overdue Centenary pledges and the third installment on pledges in advance of the meeting of the Central Texas Conference. Secretary Crawford says: "There are at least four reasons why October should be a month of unusual activity in collecting Centenary subscriptions. First, because most of the pledges in our Conference were made payable in October, and the time to collect is when pledges are due. Second, cotton in Central Texas is being marketed early this year, and the time for us to move is when cotton is moving. Third, to have a good report on the Centenary at Conference. Fourth, we must make an earnest effort to get in this money that we may be able to take care of the missionary needs of our own Conference another year; if this money is not collected and sent to the Conference Treasurer our own missions will suffer the coming year."

Rev. O. S. Welch, Alabama Conference, reports that the spirit of the Centenary among preachers and people still strongly abides. The Campaign for Intercessors resulted in a great spiritual uplift; at the conclusion of the special campaign on Stewardship and Tithing, the Alabama Conference stood fourth in percentage of members enrolled; there followed the largest increase in assessments for the support of the ministry ever known in that Conference. Many of the Alabama preachers followed the Centenary plan for holding their revivals and with splendid results.

Secretary Welch says: "The time has come when we again look for a large renewal in Centenary payments. With the recent rises in price of cotton and other commodities on which we depend, the consequent passing of depression and gloom, we have every reason to believe that better times are ahead of us. We have fixed the time between October 9 and 16 as Pay-Up Week for the Alabama Conference. With the united effort of presiding elders, pastors, treasurers and committees, we confidently look for great results."

Rev. W. T. Hunnicutt, North Georgia Conference, in sending a message to the people of his own Conference, says in part: "We have passed through one test, the beginning of our great Centenary Campaign. It was not nearly so difficult as many of us thought it would be, for we were swept forward by a high tide of enthusiasm which goes with the launching of a great campaign. When enthusiasm runs high we can dare to do anything and think not of sacrifice."

"Now we have come to the time in this great campaign, the middle, when the task has grown old and enthusiasm has in a measure died down, and this is the great test. We have come to the last months of the third year of our great campaign. Can we, by making sacrifices, tide over this year? If so, we can carry our campaign to a successful and victorious consummation. We have had business reverses and will be tempted, if we have lost the vision which at the beginning was so vivid, either to think our subscriptions too much or to repudiate them altogether. The church has launched a great program both in the home and foreign field because of her faith in your pledges. We must pay. We have pledged and these pledges are just as binding as any promise. God expects us to pay. We cannot think as much of ourselves if we fail. This is the critical hour in the history of our church. We cannot afford to prove disloyal to God."

Rev. A. D. Wilcox, of the North Carolina Conference, says of the situation in his territory: "Loyalty to the Centenary is still intact. All who believed in it three years ago believe in it now. Nowhere in any quarter do I find a retreat from the advanced line of 1918. Those trenches were taken to be held. In every District Conference and in other meetings of preachers and laymen throughout this year the question has been repeatedly raised, 'Are the people still loyal to the Centenary?' The answer has been without exception or variation, 'Yes.' The next question that has been raised, 'Will they pay their pledges?' The answer has been, 'They certainly intend to do it.' Aside from some necessary losses through death and incidental causes, I am confident that the pledge of this Conference will be met. Even through this present summer of financial distress the Centenary money has kept constantly flowing in, and I am looking for large increases before the close of the Conference year. A Pay-Up Week has been set for October 2 to 9. Letters have gone out to all the preachers and local treasurers, and to other Centenary workers calling for an intensive campaign during this crucial week. Local cabinets have been formed in a great many churches, and Collecting Committees will be formed in most of the others for work during Pay-Up Week. Our presiding elders are intensely interested in the success of this movement. Our people are not easily stirred, and are rather slow in action, but you can count on the North Carolina Conference being there when the final roll is called."

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Louisiana Conference, says: "The Louisiana Conference pledged 15 per cent more than her quota. On this pledge she has paid one-third. A number of churches have paid their full three years. Many have paid more than two years. A few only have paid less than one year. Everywhere I go I find a fine feeling relative to the Centenary pledges. They will be paid wherever possible and as soon as possible. Our Centenary workers are most enthusiastic and loyal. Up to the last Annual Conference about $190,000 had been paid on pledges. Since the last Conference $56,000 has been paid, which is 53 per cent of the average of the first two years. Considering that most of our pledges are paid in the fall and winter, this is a good showing for this year. I believe Louisiana will do her full duty."

NOT THE PROPER WAY.

Dear Mr. Editor: I have just received through the mail a communication from Rev. N. H. D. Wilson, presiding elder of the Washington (North Carolina) District, in which is enclosed in pamphlet form a copy of his recently published plea for a Constitutional Convention to formulate a plan for uniting the two Episcopal Methodisms in America, along with a circular letter, and a stamped and addressed postal card (to be returned to him), upon which I am asked to vote "yes or no, or decline to express an opinion" with respect to the question of holding such a Convention. Presumably this letter, with the enclosures described, is being generally sent to the presiding elders, and possibly to the preachers, throughout Southern Methodism.

While this a free country, and, if only academic questions were involved, one could not be denied the right to send out a pamphlet and ask the brethren to express themselves concerning its contents, should one so desire; it scarcely seems in good taste, when the manifest purpose is to try to affect vast interests in which there are equities of the most sacred character, for a brother to make a special plea for a certain course of procedure and call for a vote on the question without permitting an opportunity for discussion. This is pretty much as if one were to make a speech on the floor of a conference or convention and endeavor to secure a vote before the other side could be presented by moving the previous question. It should be remembered that while the Unification issue has been under discussion for years, the proposal to hold a Joint Constitutional Convention is a new thing, and that Brother Wilson has just delivered himself at length concerning it through the columns of the General Organ and several of the Conference organs. Why not wait for discussion, pro and con, before taking a ballot?

Is it said that Brother Wilson and those working with him desire to know the sentiment of the church? If this be true, why did not these brethren ask some capable man who does not believe in assembling a Constitutional Convention (there are many such) to present the other side of the issue, and send out the two statements together, with a request that those receiving them, after reading them, indicate their preferences. This, it seems to me, would have been considerate of the momentous interests involved and fair to all.

For my part, I have never been afraid to leave the question of Unification in any form, when properly understood, to a vote of the 2,256,000 Methodists of the South. But while they usually declare that the Southern Methodist people are overwhelmingly with them, I have yet to see the first public statement from a Unificationist favoring letting any plan that may be formulated be passed upon by a vote of the entire membership of the church.

It would seem to be the plan of Brother Wilson and his coadjutors to hold a partial plebiscite, after having placed in the hands of every one called on to vote an urgent special plea for their side, with a view to gathering figures by means of which they can bring pressure to bear upon the approaching General Conference. Yet, with such a one-sided canvass going on (doubtless at considerable expense), there are Unificationists who declare that the issue is a dead one, and that any adverse discussion of it is a useless waste of words. If the issue is truly settled, why do they not try to persuade their fellow-unionists to quit wasting their time and money in a futile advocacy of it? It would seem that it is only discussion by those who believe that the Southern Methodist Church should continue to exist as an autonomous organization that is ill-timed and unnecessary. Only a few days ago a gentleman told us of a brother who had been circulating Brother Wilson's plea for Unification and a Constitutional Convention. He was anxious that it should be read, declaring it to be the finest thing that he had ever seen. A few days later my discussion of "The Unification Issue" appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate; and the gentleman, meeting the brother in question, asked him how he liked it. "Oh," he said, "I wish everybody would let that issue alone, and that I would not hear it mentioned again for a generation." Truly, a wonderful thing in some of its aspects is human nature.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Whitworth College opened its 61st session September 21.

In spite of the fluctuating cotton situation, students came pouring in steadily. Many of them had been offered lower rates and higher credits in other colleges that sought their matriculation. That they returned to us speaks well for them and for our curriculum, which is being esteemed more and more highly by institutions of advanced standing North and South.

Almost every room is full. If there are other students who wish to apply for admission this fall or even for the spring term, it is well that they do so at their earliest opportunity, since those students gain most profit who enter at the opening of each term.

During the summer the dean and the business manager were active looking after the interests of the college while the president was abroad. The grounds were resodded with grass, all needed repairs and many improvements were made on the buildings. The new home of the president, which is the most recent addition to the college property, was put in splendid condition and furnished for his return, while the house formerly occupied by him has been fitted up for Senior Hall, and furnished by the class of 1921-22. A new grand piano will soon be added to the equipment of the Conservatory. Fernwood Cottage has been rolled back on a line with the Y-Hut, which is an improvement on the south side of the grounds.

Several valuable additions have been made to the music and literary faculty. Our voice teacher comes to us from St. Louis after a splendid career on the faculty of Mansfield College and will be quite an acquisition to the department, and to the musical and church life of the community.

The College opened in the midst of the Methodist-Presbyterian revival services which are being conducted in the Methodist church by Dr. Bitzar, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Leland, Miss. The students and faculty have attended several services and found them interesting and helpful.

Progressive steps are being taken looking to the introduction of student government in the college; and so along all lines the outlook for Whitworth is very inspiring.

No better investment can be made by parents for their sons and daughters than an education in a well-equipped religious institution of learning. It is an investment that can be kept through life, and that will stand them in good stead under the most discouraging conditions. It is the magic key that will unlock for them the physical and spiritual resources essential to their every need. It equips them for leadership in church, state, and society, and so is worth all the sacrifice made for the same.

"LET THE TIDE TURN BACK."

By Rev. W. G. Forsyth.

"The evil men do lives after them; the good is oft interred with their bones." This is a true saying and as sad as true. What a pity men do not laud and magnify good men and true while in the flesh, and preserve from forgetfulness their virtues after they are gone!

Running back through the records of thirty-five years of the history of the Mississippi Conference, I find the names of a large number of as noble and true men as ever graced the walks of life, yet they are forgotten and their lives of labor and sacrifice are buried in the tomb. Oh, yes, it is true their memoirs are part of the written history of the church, but they are buried away in forgotten tombs like their bodies, in forgotten and oftentimes neglected graves. "Who," I asked, "lies here?" There was no stone to mark the spot; the answer came, "I am not sure, but I believe it is the grave of Rev. ——" and my heart sank within me for I knew and loved him! In life he was noble, saintly and true—true to God, true to man, true to his Bible, and true to the doctrines of his church, dealing in no vagaries, a safe guide.

Run your eyes over the list, taken at random from the Minutes of the seventy-sixth session of the Conference: Jas. A. Godfrey, J. A. B. Jones, A. B. Nicholson, J. W. Lambuth, W. B. Hines, B. Jones, R. Abby, H. P. Lewis, W. B. Lewis, C. G. Andrews, R. D. Norsworthy, E. H. Mounger, J. A. Ellis, W. C. Black—what period of the world's history has produced or known finer characters? Philosophy, science and art keep alive the memory of their distinctive men whom they have produced, but the church lets hers sink into oblivion. Who ever communes with the memories of John A. Ellis, J. L. Forsyth, H. D. Howell, P. A. Johnston, Chas. B. Galloway, C. A. Powell? And in a few years the names of those who have recently gone from us will be but a memory.

If we could but get back to a contemplation of these noble and saintly men, with their unquestioning faith, accepting implicitly the genuineness and authenticity of the Bible in its entirety as the revealed and inspired word of God, we might hope to meet and check the onrushing tide of skepticism, quasi infidelity and outspoken godlessness. What did they care for the cries of inspiration, working hypotheses and kindred vagaries! Read Bascom's, Munsey's, and Watkins' sermons and see how free they are of modern folderol. They had too big a commission to fritter their time on such soul-paralyzing things. They were hunting men, working to convince and save men for the Kingdom of God. Oh! but we are wise in our day, and these fathers were tyros, old fogies. The Lord resurrect and resuscitate the spirit of those same old fogies and restore their voice to the world! W. E. M. Linfield, Enoch M. Marvin, Chas. B. Galloway, let us hear your voices, let us sit at your feet while you throw wide the gates of Heaven and let us see the glory of God! Bishop Keener, Bishop Parker, Bishop Hoss, swing back into the lead and rescue us from this day of waning faith, this day when all things are held lightly and the foundations of society are tottering to their utter ruin.

On one occasion, mounting the steps of the Advocate building, there rushed over me the memory of the saintly men who had sat on its tripod, and I tried to place my feet in the places worn by theirs—Keener, Parker, Galloway, Black, Boswell,—and as I did so, a prayer rose in my heart, a prayer that the things these men stood for might never be sullied or the standards they raised be lowered. And the prayer still rises, and while I pray, I thank God for its present head, whom I believe to be a worthy successor to his predecessors. In the future as in the past, there will be no uncertain sound of the trumpet editorially.

May we of the "rank and file" ever keep in mind and heart "the faith of the fathers," and so may we go forward conquering and to conquer as did they.

SARDIS DISTRICT NOTES.

Rev. N. D. Guerry, pastor of the Shuford Circuit, has had during the year 76 additions to the church, 73 of these being on profession of faith. Shuford is the only demonstration circuit in the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Guerry is a consecrated, tireless worker, and a young minister of much promise. He has lately had with him in interesting rallies Dr. R. L. Russell and Rev. Robert Ruff, of Nashville.

Rev. M. H. Weed, who is supplying the Crowder charge, has had a notably successful year. He has received about 75 members, and the church work generally has prospered under his guiding hand. He will probably be up for admission on trial. Brother Weed was assisted in meetings at two points by Rev. B. F. Bullard, of Houlka, who rendered fine service as a revivalist.

Rev. A. C. McCorkle, of Como, has been much

In demand for evangelistic work, and has held some excellent meetings. He is in high favor in his present field, and large congregations wait upon his ministry.

Rev. L. H. Floyd, of Horn Lake, has done some telling work in that developing charge. Under his resourceful leadership the parsonage has been enlarged and improved, and the Poplar Corner Church has projected a movement to construct three Sunday school rooms.

Rev. J. B. Conner, of Longtown, has been active in revival work for some weeks. By special request, he held his own meeting at See's Chapel, and his preaching was greatly enjoyed by large congregations. Brother Conner is in his third year in his present charge, and the people seem to have a growing appreciation of him and Sister Conner.

Rev. N. G. Augustus, of Hernando, has recently been doing some great preaching on special occasions. He has a masterly discourse on the Bible, which makes a profound impression wherever it is heard. Brother Augustus was recently assisted in a helpful meeting by Rev. B. P. Jacob, of Winona, in which there were four additions.

Rev. R. O. Brown is having a highly gratifying pastorate at Senatobia. He has been preaching to fine congregations, and his flock declare that they have an expositor of the Word second to none in the Conference. He had some weeks ago an outdoor meeting, conducted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Alabama, which attracted considerable attention. One of Brother Brown's notable achievements during the year has been the acquisition of a better parsonage.

It would be difficult to find anywhere in the itinerancy a minister who spends himself more freely in the Master's service than Rev. W. D. Bennett, of Courtland. He may always be counted upon to do the utmost possible in his field for any enterprise that the church may project. Furthermore, he is a student and a growing preacher. Brother Bennett has lately held a stirring revival at Chapel Hill church, in which he had the efficient help of Rev. W. A. Wilson, our Conference evangelist.

The veteran pastor of the district is Rev. John Ritchey, of Olive Branch, who has wrought well, and whose pulpit work yet ranks with the best. Brother Ritchey has held some of his own meetings, and has met his engagements from week to week with marked faithfulness. Distinguished both as a Confederate soldier and as a warrior for the Cross, is this well known minister. How we should like to have behind us his record, and ahead of us his prospect of a crown!

Perhaps no town in North Mississippi has felt the prevailing financial depression this year more than Charleston; but our church work there has held up surprisingly well, under the capable leadership of Rev. J. T. Lewis. All departments have made a creditable record. Gifted as a singer, pastor, preacher, and organizer, Brother Lewis is one of our best men. He is frequently called upon to conduct meetings for the brethren.

No two men in the district are doing better work than Rev. H. H. Wallace, of Pleasant Hill, and Rev. G. C. Gregory, of Mt. Pleasant. They are both efficient leaders in the pastorate, and know how to bring things to pass. They will be up for admission on trial at Amory. A wonderful school for developing men is our Methodist itinerancy.

Rev. F. H. McGee, of Tyro, will make a good report at Conference. He is carrying forward the splendid church enterprise at Free Springs, which was launched by Rev. A. M. Bennett, now of the Memphis Conference. He expects to hold his revival meeting in the new building, with Rev. T. M. Brownlee to assist him.

The Crenshaw and Sledge charge continues to make good headway under the pastoral care of Rev. J. M. Guinn. Brother Guinn is a graduate of Millsaps and Emory, and saw service over the seas during the great world war. His fine equipment and choice spirit combine to make him "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Mohler, at Sardis; A. S. Raper, at Coldwater; C. T. Floyd, at Byhalia; T. H. Porter, on the Sardis Circuit, and the Oakes—father and son—at Cockrum and Oakland, have wrought energetically, and their efforts have been crowned with a goodly measure of success. It now looks as if there will be little occasion for changes in the Sardis District this fall.

The work at Batesville has moved along smoothly under the direction of Rev. E. P. Craddock, who succeeded Rev. Melville Johnson in that field. Brother Craddock has been preaching to good congregations and has done a considerable amount of pastoral work. As has been stated in the Advocate before, he has been recommended by the Corinth District Conference for admission into the traveling connection, coming from the Southern Presbyterian Church. He was formerly in the Methodist itinerancy for more than twenty years.

The Sardis District has four superannuated preachers residing within its bounds: Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Batesville; Rev. E. H. Rook, of Como, and Revs. T. H. Porter and A. W. Langley, of Oakland. These beloved brethren seem to be enjoying a reasonable degree of health and are held in high esteem in their respective communities. Rev. A. F. Moore, supernumerary, holds his membership in the Cockrum quarterly conference. He is a man of choice spirit, and it is to be hoped that he may soon be able to report for active service.

Revival fires have been blazing within the bounds of the Arkabutla Circuit since the beginning of summer. Rev. W. O. Hunt, the popular young pastor, under date of September 24, writes: "I must tell you about our great revival at Arkabutla. We had preaching three times a day: twice in the church, and once on the street. There were 22 additions, and all within reach of the meeting received a great uplift. Indeed, we now have a new town. We have received 72 into the church on the circuit this year—69 of these on profession of faith."

RAMBLER.

SOME PREACHERS THAT HAVE IMPRESSED ME.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

First in this list, I would place Bishop E. M. Marvin. Magnetic, philosophical, spiritual—all in large measure—he seemed to me almost a perfect preacher. I heard him only twice, but have read and reread his published sermons—some of them many times—and they impress me as the best that American Methodism has produced. I most heartily commend them to every young preacher, not merely to be read, but studied.

For sheer greatness of intellectual movement, no man in the pulpit has impressed me as Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson. In this regard he was probably the greatest preacher of his age, and unsurpassed in any age.

Bishop John C. Keener, colossal in thought and masterly in diction, when at his best seemed almost overwhelming. Who could forget his sermon on the "Temptation of Christ," or on "The Rich Man and Lazarus?"

Bishop Charles B. Galloway, combining majesty of bearing and utterance with almost perfect grace, and with unusual mental alertness and never-failing self-command, was indeed a master in the pulpit, as well as on the platform or in the chair.

In the pulpit W. E. M. Linfield was massive and mighty. As a delineator of character I have not heard him equaled. No one who heard him preach on Esau, or on Ananias and Sapphira, could ever forget.

Dr. H. F. Johnson seemed to me to have all of the elements of a good preacher in large measure and rare proportion. He was magnetic and impressive in personal presence. In simplicity and clearness of style, combined with depth of thought and logical force, I have not heard his superior. He was always deeply reverent and earnest in the pulpit, and dealt mainly with the fundamentals of the gospel. Withal, there was an attractiveness about him which usually gave him a large and interested hearing.

For clearness and beauty of speech combined with gentle and modest bearing, Dr. E. H. Moulter was almost a model. I heard him preach every Sunday for two years, and Dr. Johnson for one year in Brookhaven, Miss., when both were at their best, and if their stamp is not in some measure upon me, it is because I could not receive impressions from men whom I heard always with edification, admiration and delight.

BUOYS IN AIR.

By Catherine Malloy Bloom.

Not long since the bird lover was privileged to enter a beautiful walled garden. Trees, vines, roses, and azaleas were there, and other fine flowers growing in profusion. Under some huge pepper trees was a delectable pool with water trickling over the rocks of its margin, making one feel that a bit of woodland had been picked up and set down in that charming city of Southern California. And the peace of a spring morning cast its spell over all. The voice of the lovely lady who welcomed us to the garden was the only sound till a faint tone as of fairy bells was heard. When the lady of the garden noticed the inquiring look on the face of the bird lover, she took her up on the steps of the house. There, hanging before a large and very shining window, were several tiny bells. Suspended from each was a long strip of paper, quite like the poems which in Japan are hung on the cherry trees when they are in bloom.

The lady of the garden said the pool invited the birds to drink and bathe, and the clear, shining window, reflecting the beauty of the garden, lured them to their death as they dashed against it in flight. So those who dwelt in the house of the lovely garden had placed these little bells, with their fluttering papers, before the window to warn them of danger. The faint ringing of the bells reminded the bird lover of buoys placed in the ocean to tell the mariners to beware.

Of course the bird lover knew what valuable little workers the birds are in a garden; but as so many flower lovers she has known seem unwilling or unable to understand it, she expressed surprise that one who had so much growing should wish to warn the little feathered folk. The lady of the garden smiled as she said: "Oh, yes, they will eat some tender plants when they first come up; but we cover them with wire netting till they grow larger. And if they do get a few of our plants, we feel they earn them, they render us such service by destroying insects and by singing their joyous songs." Then, as if he had heard her, a little white-crowned sparrow in a near-by bush burst into song.—In Our Dumb Animals.

SOWER OF SEED.

He planted an oak in his father's park
And a thought in the minds of men,
And he bade farewell to his native shore,
Which he never will see again.
Oh, merrily stream the tourist throng,
To the glow of the Southern sky;
A vision of pleasure beckons them on,
But he went there to die.

The oak will grow and its boughs will spread,
And many rejoice in its shade,
But none will visit the distant grave
Where a stranger youth is laid;
And the thought will live when the oak has died,
And quicken the minds of men,
But the name of the thinker has vanished away,
And will never be heard again.

SOWING TARES WHILE MEN SLEEP.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In the parable of the tares Jesus set forth how subtly and silently evil is propagated in the world to the damage of the good seed of the kingdom of heaven and to the injury of mankind. He said the tares were sown "while men slept." The enemy of both God and men "came and sowed the tares among the wheat and went his way."

This insidious sowing of pernicious seed is going on in the South now "while men sleep."

Most of our strongest men are absorbed in making money, or in grieving over having lost money, and multitudes of our women are exhausting themselves on frivolities and pleasures, while the evil work of sowing tares goes on among the youth of the land.

It is not sectional prejudice or sectarian animosity which leads me to say that most, if not all, of the wealthiest educational institutions of the North are infected with skepticism and socialism of the most pernicious type.

Dr. Leuba, of Bryn Mawr College, published a book a year or two ago entitled "Belief in God and Immortality," in which he gave statistics, gathered by himself by questionnaires sent to the educators concerned, which statistics were produced to show that more than half of the leading men in the faculties of these institutions, including scientists, historians, psychologists, and sociologists, have emphatically rejected all belief in a personal God and immortality. He does not charge them with this skepticism as a fault, but applauds them for their unbelief, and says that belief in God and immortality is not necessary in religion.

A little later Mr. Woodworth Clum, of the Western Reserve University, published a pamphlet, entitled "Making Socialists Out of College Students," in which he named a number of institutions and men in the North who were avowedly in this business of manufacturing socialists out of college students.

Very recently Vice-President Coolidge has published a series of articles in which he, too, named certain Northern colleges for women which he showed were engaged in the same business.

With three such witnesses testifying in the most public and unequivocal manner to these facts, all reasonable doubt is excluded concerning the evil influences and dangerous teachings which are prevalent in these Northern institutions of higher learning.

Nevertheless, thousands of Southern teachers, engaged in our common schools, high schools, and colleges, flock to these institutions for longer or shorter courses every year. Already there have begun to appear in the South the hurtful effects of it all. We are paying the money by taxation which helps to sow tares among our children and youth.

But the worst is not yet told: Many of these sceptical educators (or rather de-educators) are writing textbooks for our schools.

That noble woman, Miss Mildred Rutherford, of Athens, Ga., has done much to expose the assaults made upon the South and Southern people through school histories written by Northern authors who wrote under an unfriendly bias towards our section, and she, together with those who have co-operated with her, deserves our gratitude for what has been done in this direction.

But there is a worse danger in other textbooks from the same general source than unfair and false histories.

The South has been and is the home of the finest type of evangelical Christianity in the United States. To this fact General Grant testified years ago, and Vice-President Marshall gave a similar testimony in an address delivered at the commencement of one of our Georgia colleges more recently.

No greater calamity could befall the South than the loss of her evangelical religion. Both for the welfare of our section and the welfare of the whole nation it ought to be defended and preserved at all cost.

We might afford to have our ancestors slandered and our history misrepresented, bad as that would be; but we can not afford to have our Christianity corrupted. In recent textbooks, written by rationalists in Northern universities and published by Northern publishers, the danger of such corruption of our religion emerges.

There are lying before me now two such textbooks.

In one of them even the "table of contents" puts rationalism forward. The second epistle to the Thessalonians, the epistle to the Ephesians, both the epistles to Timothy, and the epistle to Titus are characterized in the "contents" as "pseudo-Pauline." The entire volume is filled with that braggart type of learning (so called) which announces the most debated and debatable propositions of liberalism as matters about which "all scholars are now agreed."

This book is designed as a textbook for use in public high schools in which the New Testament is taught as "a course in English." The very approach of the writer to the subject carries with it the most rationalistic assumptions.

The other book is more skillfully constructed, and conceals its rationalism more ingeniously: but upon the whole it is not less objectionable.

Now, if very many of our teachers are taught by rationalists, and then the textbooks which they use are written by their rationalistic instructors, what will be the result?

This is a question for business men to consider most seriously. Radicalism in religion always engenders radicalism in social and political life. This accounts for Woodworth Clum's exhibition of the perilous process by which certain leading institutions in the North are "making socialists out of college students" and justifies the articles of Vice-President Coolidge in which he recently warned the American people of the perils brewing in certain Northern institutions for the education of women.

The business men of the South ought to establish and endow institutions of learning in which our young men and young women can find as good opportunities for higher education as are found in any other section of our own country or in any other country. Having established, amply endowed, and adequately equipped such institutions in the South, our business men by the most careful and conscientious supervision should then see to it that the colleges and universities founded and fostered by them are kept true to evangelical Christianity and genuine Americanism. Rationalists and radicals are fond of seeking places in schools that evangelical churches and patriotic Americans have established. Like the cuckoos, they build no nests of their own, but lay their eggs in nests built by other birds and depend upon those whose nests they have invaded to hatch their eggs. They have done that sort of thing in America so often it has become proverbial.

They make much ado about what they are pleased to call "academic freedom," by which they mean the right to subvert the principles, religious and political, of the men upon whose endowments they live.

The preachers in the South, as well as the business men, need to give heed to this matter. The ground is being cut from under the churches by the propagation of rationalism in schools and textbooks. If they doubt this, let them "take a day off" to investigate the facts. The truth is accessible to any who desire to know it.

Under the shadows of certain Northern institutions evangelical Christianity is withering away, and in its place is springing up a boastful and contemptuous rationalism which characterizes every one who opposes it as an ignoramus. The same conditions will prevail over evangelical Christianity in the South very soon unless strenuous and wise opposition is made speedily. The tares are being sown with a free hand while our business men and most of our evangelical preachers sleep.

During the war we never tired of declaring that German rationalism demoralized the German nation and set the world afire. And we told the truth. But let us understand that German rationalism is abroad among us, and that it will work the same results in our country that it produced overseas. It brings forth fruit after its kind always and everywhere.

There lies before me a book bearing on the most vital phases of the salvation which Christ offers to men, and of the forty-eight authorities quoted by the author forty-two are German rationalists and the six English authors upon whom he relies are disciples and defenders of German rationalism.

Let us be fair with the Germans. Let us not censure them for teaching doctrines which made a world conflagration while we teach the same things at second-hand. And be it said that most of the rationalistic among us teach German rationalism at third-hand; for they get it from Northern rationalists who took it at second-hand from German rationalists. We may trace the movement even further back to that dissolute and degraded Frenchman, Astruc, from whom the German rationalists of a former generation received it.

Some recent books of rationalism, to three of which reference has been made, contain some things so like passages in Tom Paine's "Age of Reason," the authors should apologize to that famous infidel for their failure to give him the credit due him.

Indeed, it would astound some men to compare Paine's discredited hook with some publications of the modernists and see how he anticipated so many conclusions of modern rationalists. Why should he not be canonized as a leader of thought with whom "all competent scholars now agree?"

Truly, though Tom Paine's "body lies mouldering in the ground," his spirit goes marching on. Where will it haul up? Will it get into some pulpits?

Perhaps he was born too soon for his peace and honor. Certainly there is no reasonable ground for doubting that, if he were now living, he would qualify as a professor of theology in a German university or as the president of any one of several schools of theology in the United States, from which such mighty men as William Henry Green, Howard Osgood, Thomas O. Summers, and John McClintock would be excluded as "reactionaries," utterly disqualified for such learned and advanced work.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

In an endeavor to obtain correct reports and to facilitate the work of the Statistical Secretary and his assistants I have requested the following brethren to act as auditors for their respective districts: George Fox, J. W. Booth, L. P. Moreland, R. L. Harrell, J. E. Selfe and J. M. Boykin.

These auditors are to receive the reports and correct them at the time of their receipt so that they can be presented to the Statistical Secretary in proper and correct form. Then their duties will be over.

Please examine the Annual and follow the order as printed in the statistical tables.

Only two items were allowed written last year—Orphanage and Centenary. This year no doubt Christian Education should be written. Write nothing else. All other amounts that are not indicated on the report blanks should be recorded under "Objects Not Elsewhere Reported."

The 1920 Minutes must be the basis for reporting members. If they show your charge had 500 members and your register shows 490, you must credit 10 to your removals by death, and otherwise.

I am writing this as an act of brotherly kindness toward my successor. Sincerely,

P. H. FONTAINE,

Statistical Secretary of the Louisiana Conference.

The Home Circle

HE BEAT ME HOME.

By Strickland Gillilan.

When for a little walk we went,
On errand or on pleasure bent,
As we drew near the vine-clad gate,
My always-present walking mate
Would slip his chubby hand in mine
And, toddling on past shrub and vine,
Would turn and say, with baby wit,
"I beat 'oo home, a 'ittle bit!"

God was so good to him and me
As to permit our lives to be Like those of two frank, boyhood chums
Together solving life's hard sums.
I, as the elder, sometimes knew
Where in his path lay bog or slough
So I might point it out in time
To save him from the fall and grime.

To-day some kind folks came and spoke Gently to me. And then awoke
A slumbering memory of Then:
I dreamed he was a babe again;
That he before my feet had sped
To reach our door a step ahead—
Through trembling lips I whisper it,
"He beat me home—a little bit."

THE CHIPPING SPARROW.

By Mrs. J. Ellington McGee.

Are you acquainted with the chipping sparrow?
Of course, you have seen her many times, for she is a friendly little creature, but perhaps you have thought that she was just the common sparrow and have not paid very much attention to her.

I am afraid she would be very much offended if she knew that you had taken her for a common sparrow, for she is so dainty, elegant and amiable, not a single bit like the quarrelsome English sparrow.

The chipping sparrow is fully an inch shorter than the sparrow, which makes her quite a small bird. She has a very small head. One thing you will notice about her right away is her reddish-brown crown. The English sparrow does not have this, for the top of her head is dull gray. The back of the little chipper is brown, streaked with black. Her tails and wings are brown, while her breast is dusky gray, without any dark marks or streaks.

She is a very plain-looking little bird, but has nice manners and lives well. The more aristocratic members of this family, the song-sparrow and the cardinal, are not ashamed to claim relationship. I would advise you to cultivate her acquaintance.

The chipping sparrows in our yard hop around on the grass, and frequently come almost to the door. They keep saying all the time, "Chip, chip, chip." They give this call softly and quickly. It sounds almost like an insect. From this call they derive their name—chipping sparrow.

They have a very pretty little song, too. It is not as elaborate as the song of some of the birds, but they cheerily sing it all day long and late in the evening. It is a high trill—just two notes.
Some persons have said that it sounds like a locust, but I fail to detect the resemblance. It is very musical, and is given rapidly, but with great distinctness.

I must tell you about the nest that chipper makes.
Although she is such a tiny creature, she holds a high place in birddom on account of her exquisitely built nest. I do not know of any bird that builds a prettier, neater little cradle for her young family than the sociable chipper. I have found a number of their nests this year in hedges, and a number in trees, rather high, and right out on the swaying branch. I saw one that actually had cord twisted round and round the branch, holding the nest securely in place. I can not imagine how the birds fastened it.

During a violent windstorm one of these little nests was blown down and I had a good chance to examine it closely. It still had in it two tiny eggs that were a lovely color, greenish-blue, with tiny specks on them.

The nest was perfectly round and deep like a cup. It was made of dried grasses, put together very smoothly. You and I could not have done it so neatly. The entire inside was lined with horsehair. This is one peculiarity of the chipping sparrow's nest. It is always lined with horsehair. On this account the little bird is frequently called the hair-bird. The inside of this little nest was beautifully smooth and soft, a great credit to its builder.

The other day, as I walked through the orchard,
I heard the softest, "Chip, chip." For some time
I could not discover whence it came, and then I saw the tiniest head, and little black eyes like specks. It was a baby chipper. It was a perfect little creature, but so small that I could hardly realize it was alive. It kept on saying, "Chip, chip," and I got very close to it, and what do you think? It flew clear across the orchard. Just to think that such a tiny bird could fly so well.

I followed it up. It had flown to a small plum tree, and when I reached the tree, I found it had flown to its little sister. Soon I heard a loud trill behind me, and there was the mamma bird with a little grasshopper in her bill. She gave both the birds plenty to eat, dividing the grasshopper between them. Wasn't that a dainty meal? She did not seem to mind me at all.

They say that when these little birds grow up they impose on their mother and father. They hop around after them, and tease to be fed. They will droop their wings and pout until mamma finds some food for them. This is very hard for such a little mother bird. I think that when they are grown up, they should take care of themselves, don't you?—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

HOW SOME INSECTS WALK ON WATER.

The insects most frequently seen walking on water are the water-striders—narrow-bodied, long-legged true bugs that go sliding about the surface of ponds and small streams. In fact, a little girl who was watching them with me to-day misunderstood me and improved the name by calling them water-sliders. When moving, they slide on the front and hind legs, pushing with the middle pair. Usually only the middle and hind pairs of legs touch the water when the insect is at rest.

but they dent the surface, as may be seen by looking very closely. Indirect evidence on this point may be had, if the insects are on a shallow pool with no vegetation and the sun be shining, by watching the shadows on the bottom. There may be a central shadow cast by the insect's body, but there are sure to be shadows of the dents made by the legs on the water. The shadows of these dents are each surrounded by a bright ring, due to refraction of the sun's rays as they pass through the curved surface.

Now try an experiment. Steel is much heavier, in proportion to its bulk, than an insect, and so would sink more readily. Take a small needle oiled by rubbing it on your hair and very carefully lay it lengthwise on the surface of water in a tumbler. It will bend down the surface of the water, but it will not sink. Wet a needle that is not oily and you cannot make it float.

The surface of even the cleanest water acts as though it were an elastic film, like the films of soap bubbles. Dry, not easily wet objects, pressing down on this film will bend it quite a bit before they break it. So it is with our water-striders—or sliders. Their feet, covered with a velvety pile that is not easily wet, are placed flat on the water, and the insects' weight is so little in proportion to the surface of "film" upon which the feet rest that they do not break through.

Some insects that live under the water also make use of this interesting physical fact. The larvae of mosquitoes, the all too common wrigglers or pole-dodgers, such as live in rain-barrels—are heavier than water. By dint of much effort they wiggle themselves up to the surface, and there they seem to stick by their tails. These tails are really tubes through which the insect breathes.
The opening to this tube is provided with flaps and, as soon as the tip of the tube breaks the surface of the water, the flaps open out like the petals of a flower, and there floats the wriggler with its breathing apparatus open to the air. When it wishes to descend, it closes the flaps, and then, there not being enough surface spread out on the water to hold it up, the wriggler slowly sinks without any further effort on its part.—Frank E. Lutz

THE DEATH OF BISHOP LAMBUTH.

The news of the death of Bishop Walter Russell Lambuth in Japan on the afternoon of September 26 came as a shock that almost stunned the church at home. While it was known to his family and to the officials of the Board of Missions that he was not at all well on his return to Japan from the meeting of the Siberia-Manchuria Mission, and that he had undergone a surgical operation which promised permanent relief, there was no thought that the end of his eminently useful life was at hand. He had seemed to possess an unusually vigorous constitution, and there was hope that he would live many years to bless the church and the world with his leadership. But it was not to be so—the Lord called him to rest in the midst of his labors.

Bishop Lambuth was the son of Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Lambuth, born in Shanghai, China, November 10, 1854. We are indebted to Dr. John S. Chadwick for the following facts of his life: Eight of his boyhood days were spent in China, two in New York, two in Mississippi, two in Tennessee, and three in Virginia; he received his education at Cumberland University, Emory and Henry College, University of Nashville, Vanderbilt University, and the Medical Department of the University of New York, where he received the degree of M. D. in 1882; Emory and Henry College conferred the B. S. and the M. A. degrees upon him in 1875, and Vanderbilt University conferred the M. A. degree upon him in 1877; the honorary degree of D.D. was conferred by Emory College and by Randolph-Macon College in 1892; he was licensed to preach in 1875, and was married to Miss Daisy Kelley in 1877; he was elected Secretary of the Board of Missions by the Board in 1892, which position he filled by election of the General Conference until he was elected bishop at Asheville, N. C., in 1910.

Bishop Lambuth's great contribution to the church was in the field of missionary leadership. The son of a missionary, born on the mission field, he seemed to live in the missionary atmosphere and to breathe the missionary spirit, and his outstanding achievements were in the realm of missionary endeavor. He was an authority upon missionary matters, and in many quarters he was looked upon as the best informed missionary leader in the world. His greatest work, perhaps, was wrought in China, Japan, and Africa.

He lies buried in Shanghai, China, where he was born and where his mother is buried. The church has lost one of its greatest men, and the world has lost the greatest missionary leader of modern times. If it were not for the fact that the Lord carries on his work even when the workmen fall, we would say that we shall never see his like again. The church will always honor the memory of so great and good a man.

AN UNSATISFACTORY LAW.

That section of the Book of Discipline that provides "that where a quarterly conference shall request and a majority of the presiding elders shall concur by ballot, the bishop may appoint a preacher to a pastoral charge for more than four consecutive years," has proved to be, we believe, wholly unsatisfactory in operation. It was adopted as a compromise between the removal of the time limit and its retention, but it is a compromise which has failed to satisfy either side to the controversy, if we may judge by expressions generally concerning it.

The chief trouble with it seems to be the embarrassing position it places both preachers and quarterly conferences in at the close of a four-year pastorate. It is inevitable that the question of passing the resolution asking for the return of the pastor for the fifth year be raised as the fourth year draws to a close, and it is almost as inevitable that there be certain embarrassing circumstances in connection with it, no matter what the outcome may be. We do not believe the situation arising from such circumstances is conducive to the best interests of the church, or to the peace of mind of the preacher. We hope the next General Conference will relieve the situation either by removing the time limit unconditionally, or by going back to the four-year limit as heretofore. We personally favor the removal of the limit altogether, leaving the appointment for the fifth and successive years to be determined by the facts in each case that may arise.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, Louisiana Conference Secretary of Education, honored the Advocate office with a call on Saturday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to Houma, La., where he was to speak in the interest of his cause on Sunday.

The Noel Memorial Sunday school, Shreveport, La., broke all records last Sunday in its rally day attendance, the figures showing that 502 people were present on that occasion. Mr. C. O. Beauchamp is the superintendent of this wide-awake school.

Rev. E. G. Mohler, our pastor at Sardis, Miss., has announced that he will begin a series of revival services at that place next Sunday. He will be assisted by Rev. J. H. Bell, field secretary of the North Mississippi Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund.

A note from Sister T. S. Randle, of Yoakum, Texas, asks us to request the prayers of the readers of the Advocate in behalf of her grandson, Tom, who is ill in the U. S. Marine Hospital, New Orleans. We are sure that her request will be heeded by many of our readers.

Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Greenwood, Miss., returned last week from London, where he attended the Ecumenical Conference as a delegate from the North Mississippi Conference. During his trip abroad he visited many of the most interesting places in Europe, his journeyings taking about two months.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of Lake Charles, La., dropped in at the Advocate office for a little visit on Monday morning of this week. He was on his way to Memphis, Tenn., to attend a meeting, called by Dr. O. E. Goddard, of those who are under appointment to hold meetings in schools and colleges during the year.

The Centenary Bulletin for October carries much information that will be of interest to all subscribers to the Centenary fund and to all interested in the missionary activities of our church. One or more copies will be sent, without charge, on request to John S. Chadwick, Editor, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn.

The Commercial Appeal, of Memphis, Tenn., contained in its issue of September 30 a picture of the great class in the Methodist Sunday school at Drew, Miss. The enrollment of this class has been increased within a few weeks from 33 to more than 120. Rev. W. N. Duncan is pastor of the church, and Mr. B. R. Kuykendall is superintendent of the Sunday school.

Bishop W. F. McMurtry has been busy during September. He has held meetings with the presiding elders of the Northwest Texas, the Louisiana, the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences. He has dedicated eight churches and the Wesley House at Houma, Louisiana, and has traveled and preached almost constantly, several times preaching as often as three times a day. He dedicated the Central Church in Fort Worth, Sunday, October 2, and proceeded from there to Amarillo, Texas, where he opened the Northwest Texas Conference on October 5. The Bishop reports satisfactory progress in revivals, church building and other interests of the church.

A building for our publishing interests is being erected at Richmond, Va., at a cost of $200,000.

Rev. Paul Rader, well known as the pastor of the Moody Church, Chicago, has resigned that position to enter foreign missionary work.

The annual meeting of the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will be held in Chicago, December 14-16. The late Bishop W. R. Lambuth was chairman of this Committee.

According to an announcement in the Nashville Christian Advocate, Dr. Charles D. Bulla, for eleven years in charge of important connectional Sunday school work, has moved to the Pacific Coast and will take work in the Pacific Conference.

A news item in one of our exchanges is to the effect that Dr. Robert S. MacArthur is so incensed over the sensational preaching of his successor at Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, that he has asked that his name be stricken off the church bulletin as pastor emeritus. Dr. John Roach Straton is the present pastor.

Our church at Bay St. Louis, Miss., is making substantial progress under the pastorate of Rev. W. G. Forsyth. The church building has recently been painted, and the parsonage will be painted soon. The Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society are doing unusually good work. Dr. J. A. Evans is superintendent of the Sunday school.

The death of Mrs. R. E. Jones, of Crystal Springs, Miss., recently, removed one of the best known women of Mississippi from the activities of a very useful life. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was very active in its work. She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband, the venerable Dr. R. E. Jones, a son, and several daughters, to all of whom the Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

When the good people of Ruston learned that Dr. J. M. Henry, pastor of our church there, would ask for a year's rest at the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference on account of ill health, they presented him and his wife with a check, the purpose of which is expressed in the note which accompanied it: "Please accept this gift from your friends in our church, who wish you to use it to build a home for yourselves. It is given in love and appreciation of our delightful associations with you, and in the joyful anticipation that you will continue to live among us." We have no choicer people anywhere than are to be found in Ruston, and it is no wonder that their affection for their beloved pastor and his noble wife expressed itself in such substantial way. How blessed is the tie that binds the hearts and lives of people together in Christian love!

Mr. Calvin Joyner sailed from Vancouver, B. C., on September 24 for China, where he goes under appointment by the Board of Missions as engineer in charge of construction work in the Orient. Mr. Joyner is a son of Rev. and Mrs. N. E. Joyner, of Baton Rouge, La. He received his degree in engineering from Tulane University at its commencement last June. In connection with his trip to Vancouver, a very happy incident developed. He had arranged to make the journey over the railroad represented by Mr. Mark Anthony as Division Passenger Agent, but at the last moment Mr. Anthony discovered that, on account of floods in Texas on his line, there was a chance that Mr. Joyner would miss his boat at Vancouver; so he called him over the telephone at Baton Rouge, suggested making the trip over a rival road, and bought tickets and made reservations himself. This gracious courtesy was, of course, very greatly appreciated by Mr. Joyner not only personally, but also because of the attitude it shows toward the work in which he is engaged.

AN EDITOR'S CONFIDENCE.

The cat is at last out of the editor's bag, and the mystery that to many has enshrouded his office is laid bare. Writers for the press have so often invented strange reasons to explain to themselves why they are "rejected" that this statement of the real reasons will enlighten many minds. Mr. Holbrook Jackson, of To-Day (London), calls the ignorance of the way an editor should be approached "Invincible." For all that, he takes heart of grace and sets out to lighten "his own burden and that of his fellows of the craft." The observance of the following rules, he thinks, "would augment the amenities between literary aspirants for the honor of print and those who have the power of pronouncing yea or nay upon what is submitted to them." They begin tamely:

- "1. Typewrite your copy or handwrite it clearly.
- "2. Write your name and address clearly on the back of last page of typescript or manuscript.
- "3. Inclose not a loose stamp, but a stamped and addressed envelope.
- "4. Don't write a letter of explanation to the editor. But if you do write—
- "5. Don't tell him your stuff is good; he won't take your word.
- "6. Don't tell him it is bad; bad writing needs no bush.
- "7. Don't tell him that your friends like it; he doesn't care.
- "8. Don't say that another editor advised you to send it along; that would make him suspicious.
- "9. Don't say you want to earn money by writing; he is not out to help you, but to edit his paper and pay those who help him.
- "10. Don't flatter him; editors are cynics.
- "11. Don't tell him you know his old aunt; he may hate her.
- "12. Don't ask his opinion; he may not have one.
- "13. Don't ask why he rejects your offer; he may not know."

One added caution seemed too important to condense into a line: "Those about to try to become contributors to a particular magazine would be well advised to purchase or borrow a copy first, so as to form an opinion of what it is like. If this precaution is not taken, it is as well not to say anything about it. Above all, don't ask the editor to tell you what he wants; you are supposed to find that out for yourself."—Literary Digest.

THE PRICE OF POWER.

The great need of which Christians everywhere are conscious is that of power. Wherever a number of believers gather together for prayer, this is usually the burden of their cry.

The need is so patent and so universal as not to require any insistence or emphasis, for it is on all hands attested by fruitlessness of life and by barrenness of service.

The fact is that, despite the promises of God, the majority of his people are living lives which are so powerless and ineffective as to be a standing contradiction of the ideals and endowments of his Word. Why is this?

Obviously the cause is not to be sought in him, but in ourselves; and if we will honestly set ourselves to discover the secrets of personal powerlessness, he will not only show them to us, but will also effectually deal with them as we submit our lives to his judgment. And the importance of this attitude upon our part cannot be overestimated, for while we are bemoaning our powerlessness souls are dying and we are not reaching them; the world is misconceiving Christ and we are not offering a faithful representation of him; he is expecting glory in our lives and is being disappointed.

That this state of things may be brought to an end, it is our manifest duty to learn for ourselves how to secure the fullest measure of the power of God; in other words, to know what is the price of power.—J. Stuart Holden.

GOD'S PURPOSES.

Within these narrow points of time, the rocking cradle and the deep tomb, there is not scope enough to reconcile all the divine purposes and actions and mysteries; we need more field, an ampler horizon. We shall get it by-and-by, and then we shall know how God has been dealing with us in forcing rivers out of our eyes and in making our heads a burning pain. O child of God, much praying man, wearied almost with crying at heaven's gate, proceed, persevere! The sigh of thy weakness shall be mightier far than the thunder of thy strength. While there is one dying ray of light in the sky, hold on!—Joseph Parker.

THE TEST OF CHARACTER.

There is something finer than to do right against inclination; and that is to have an inclination to do right. There is something nobler than reluctant obedience, and that is joyful obedience. The rank of virtue is not measured by its disagreeableness, but by its sweetness to the heart that loves it. The real test of character is joy. For what you rejoice in, that you love. And what you love, that you are like.—Henry Van Dyke.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. W. Price, Walnut Grove, Miss., 2; Rev. E. V. Duplantis, Eunice, La., 2; Rev. R. M. Evans, Buena Vista, Miss., 2.

There is no path in this desert waste,
For the winds have swept the shifting sands;
The trail is blind where the storms have raced,
And a stranger, I, in these fearsome lands:
But I journey on with a lightsome tread;
I do not falter nor turn aside;
For I see His figure just ahead—
He knows the way I take—my Guide.

There is no path in this trackless sea.
No map is limned on the restless waves;
The ocean snares are strange to me
Where the unseen wind in its fury raves:
But it matters naught; my sails are set,
And my swift prow tosses the seas aside;
For the changeless stars are steadfast yet,
And I sail by His star-blazed trail—my Guide.

There is no way in this starless night;
There is naught but cloud in the inky skies;
The black night smothers me, left and right;
I stare with a blind man's straining eyes:
But my steps are firm, for I cannot stray;
The path to my feet seems light and wide;
For I hear His voice: "I am the Way!"
And I sing as I follow Him on—my Guide.

MRS. VANILLA JOHNSON, nee Yancey, was born in Oklahoma, October 31, 1888, and died July 31, 1921. She was married to Mr. J. B. Johnson on July 7, 1907; they lived happily together for twelve years but sickness came and all that skilled physicians and loving hands could do brought no relief. She bore her suffering with patience and when the end came she died without a struggle. She told her loved ones not to grieve for her, for she was going home to heaven. She was happily converted about five years ago and joined the Presbyterian Church, in which she lived a faithful Christian until death. She was so kind and good to her husband and little children and her dear old parents. To know her was to love her, but God, who loved her best, called her home to live with him. She leaves a husband, two little boys, Linard and Herbert, father, mother, two sisters, and one brother to mourn their loss. She was laid to rest in Bethany Cemetery, services being held by Rev. N. J. Slaton. The grave was covered with flowers, and the soul was safe in the arms of Him who taught us to say, "Thy will be done." Her friend, MRS. J. A. WAFER.

On August 20, 1921, the spirit of Brother EDDIE KNOX passed on to a spiritual realm, to the home our Savior has prepared for those who are faithful and sustained by an unfaltering trust. Brother Knox was born July 16, 1859, near Clinton, La. He was married July 14, 1881, to Miss Emma Hummell. To this union there were two children; one died in infancy. In October, 1883, his wife followed her child to the beyond, leaving him and little daughter to mourn their loss. In 1885 he married Miss Alice Whiteside. There is one child by this marriage, who mourns with his half-sister and mother their loss. Five sisters and one brother survive, two sisters having gone before. Brother Knox professed faith in Christ and united with the Methodist Church about two months before he died. From then until the Lord called him from the walk of this life, he rejoiced in the love of Christ. He often spoke of the great peace he had with God. Sorrowing ones, be of good cheer; it will not be long (if you are prepared) before the Master will open the crystal gate for your weary feet to enter in. It may be nearer than you think; only bear patiently your crosses, and in time you shall wear the crown prepared for the faithful.

His pastor, J. T. McVEY.

On April 23, 1921, the spirit of CHARLIE STEPHENSON took its flight from its earthly tabernacle to God who gave it. Brother Charlie was born in 1860. He united with the Methodist Church in 1881. He was a member at Oak Ridge (Mississippi Conference) when he died. The writer came in close contact with him the four years he was pastor at Oak Ridge. He was regular, as opportunity afforded, in his attendance at church. He talked to the writer often as to his own soul, and was especially interested in the spiritual welfare of a sister, who, in early life, indulged too freely in dancing. He would ask me to talk to her and pray for her. He impressed one as an innocent, harmless, and unassuming citizen of his community and member of the church. He never married. For several years he and two maiden sisters lived together, and his life was given to the comfort and happiness of these sisters. The last few months of his life he was blind. Every indication during his last illness was that he was ready for the summons. We extend sympathy to those of the family left behind, especially to his sister, Miss Lou.

J. A. WELLS.

On August 14, 1921, there passed from earth to Heaven, one of God's choicest saints, Mrs. MARTHA JANE DEMUSE MARS—"Grandma Mars," as she was familiarly called. She was born September 11, 1834, at Greensboro, N. C., moved to Neshoba County, Miss., in childhood, and was married to J. H. Mars, July 3, 1857. She was the mother of eleven children, eight of whom survive her. Those left to mourn a "mother" in Israel are Mrs. Sansing, of Newton; J. F. Mars, of Meridian; Mrs. Edgar, of Union; Mrs. (Dr.) Ross, of Hattiesburg; Mr. Geo. Mars, Mr. W. M. Mars, Mrs. W. L. Austin, and Miss Ida Sue Mars, all of Philadelphia. At the time of her home-going, her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren numbered ninety-six—all of whom felt the blessed influence of her faithful life. Her sons and daughters are noble men and women, an honor to the church she loved.

"Grandma Mars" had been a reader of the Advocate for fifty years, and by her side during these later years of affliction were always her Bible and the New Orleans Advocate. She spent the greater part of her life at Mars Hill, which community still feels her ennobling influence. Since 1906, she lived in the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. L. Austin, where all of her children ministered to her comfort and happiness. At the old home at Mars Hill, she and her sainted husband often ministered to the needs of the Methodist preacher, and, no doubt, many reading these lines will remember the kindnesses she did for them in the name of the blessed Lord she loved. She loved to talk over those early days and spoke lovingly of God's servants, many of whom she knew personally. No doubt many of these old friends were eager to clasp her hand as she entered the heavenly land.

She left us during the revival meeting conducted by Rev. Dan Kelly. On the day before her death on Sunday, her pastor, with Brother Kelly, dined in the Austin home, and such a gracious experience as they had! "Grandma Mars" cup ran over and she literally shouted for joy. How fitting that she left earth on Sunday, and during the meeting, an occasion which she loved and welcomed.

On Monday afternoon, at Mars Hill, her old home, the funeral rites were conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. S. Purcell, Brother Dan Kelly, Rev. J. C. Long, a life-long friend, Rev. S. N. Young, and Rev. Mr. Arnette, of the Presbyterian Church. All paid fitting tributes to her life and character. We left her body beneath a flower-covered mound, but the aroma of her fragrant life is still with us.

MRS. J. S. PURCELL.

Philadelphia, Miss., Sept. 26, 1921.

FROM BIENVILLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. R. W. Tucker was with us from September 5 to 14, and delivered as fine sermons as one could desire. I believe that much good was accomplished. One fine young man was baptized and received into the church.

At Strange I preached the first week and then Rev. L. M. Moreland gave us eight helpful sermons. We received six by certificate and six by vows. We have since then organized a prayer meeting. We also have a flourishing Sunday school there that has been organized this year.

At Burke Place I did all the preaching and we had a real revival. At the close of the meeting I baptized thirteen adults and received seventeen into the church. We now have a good Sunday school there.

We did not reach our quota for Christian Education, but went beyond the amount pledged for the Centenary. We have made some repairs on the churches, parsonage and parsonage yard, and have a supply of wood for the coming winter. If we move, shall we find a like provision? Let us provide for our successors. This was a dilapidated place when we came, but it will not be so when we leave.

Sincerely yours,

P. H. FONTAINE.

FROM ELLISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very fine meeting at Moselle, in which about 45 were received into the church—37 by baptism and vows. Of this number a large per cent were young men and women. It was the most promising class that I have received into the church in a long time. We are planning to organize a League and a weekly prayer meeting to conserve and develop these young people in the work of the church.

The preaching in this meeting was done by Brother J. E. Williams, of Broad Street, Hattiesburg. He is a strong, earnest, evangelistic preacher, and did us a fine week's work. I have had no more faithful and efficient help in a meeting. Sincerely,

H. J. MOORE.

Confidence

"The American people must realize that confidence in public utility securities cannot be had by constant, unjust criticism. No public utility corporation subject to regulation can finance its requirements out of earnings."—Edward N. Hurley, former head of U. S. Shipping Board.

THE POWER OF PRAYER.

When Peter was in prison, the record says: "Instant and earnest prayer was made by the church of God for him." As the prayer proceeded wonderful things began to happen in the world of material things. Chains locked and secure fell off the body of the apostle, and doors fast closed opened wide, and Peter walked out of the prison in the fellowship of an angel. Prayer is an instrument whose potency is more marvelous than even the best saint imagined.—Exchange.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2.
Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Lynda Romey, Conf. Ele. Supt.

A Key Woman In Every Sunday School.

You ask, "What is a Key Woman?" "Some one who locks and unlocks the doors of church." Yes, in a way she is. At least she will open the way. She is to be a person, reliable and responsible, with the love for children that converts service in their behalf into satisfying pleasure. She will be prompt with answers to reports sent to the local schools, keeping in touch with the organization of the Sunday schools as planned to meet the needs of every school, doing this for the sake of the children who pass her way. They are passing your way, too.

In the North Mississippi Conference there are 555 Sunday schools listed, each as important in its way as the other. Wouldn't a Key Woman help to get in touch with children's work?

Worker in the Sunday school, do you ever need? Need encouragement? Need help? Need stimulus of what others are doing? Need information? Need material? Need comparison? Need inspiration? Need to give and take? All of us do. Then let's work together.

Who appoints the Key Woman of the children's work in the Sunday school? Appointed by Superintendent of the Sunday school or selected by Workers' Council. Will you have yours ready?

All in all, this Key Woman is just one of those faithful workers found in every Sunday school, a teacher, a superintendent of a department, a young person willing to take this service activity, or any other who will heed the commission, "Feed my lambs."

How will this Key Woman line up? Her name and address should be reported to the District Superintendent of Elementary or Children's Work, or, in case there is no District Superintendent, to the Conference Elementary tary Superintendent, Local School, Sub-District, District Conference, Sub-District Superintendent (Elementary), District Superintendent (Elementary), Conference Elementary Superintendent. All working together.

Does this mean the big Sunday school? Does this mean the little Sunday school? Does this mean the middle-sized Sunday school? A Key Woman In Every Sunday School.

The Corinth Sunday school was first to have a Key Woman. Corinth District is working toward organization and standard work. Mrs. Melville Johnson, New Albany, Miss., District Elementary Superintendent.

Sunday schools of the district, do your part.

During the month of October, definite plans will be made in the Greenwood District, Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Clarksdale, Miss., District Elementary Superintendent, and in the Greenville District, Mrs. P. C. Wall, Drew, Miss., District Elementary Superintendent. Possibly some work in other districts to be reported later.

Is there anything we can do for you?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The New Orleans District Sunday school meeting, held in First Methodist Church, was well represented by the schools of the district. This meeting was planned by the district secretary, Jno. H. Carter, and his departmental superintendents. The meeting was designed to work out problems of the different departments and also to take up general plans for future work.

Arrangements are being made for a Standard Training School for the City of New Orleans. The committee will have something definite to report soon. It is not best to say too much just yet until plans are completed. Watch for further notice. This school will offer as many as ten courses.

The week spent in Collinston was profitable. I believe, to the Sunday school as well as to the church. We are going to expect a new Men's Bible Class as result of our efforts there.

Miss Hess has spent most of September in the Shreveport District.

Many thanks to the Sunday schools which have made an offering to Sunday School Board as their Sunday School Day offering, even if it was impossible to have the program. It shows your interest in those who are spending their life to promote this great cause of the church.

In your Conference report, be sure to report every school that has held any sessions during year. We want to know them and help them.

ALONZO EARLY,

Sunday School Field Secretary.
306-15th Street, Alexandria, La.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

September 24-26, was spent with Rev. D. P. Yeager on the Matherville charge. We visited Matherville, Langsdale, Salem, and Poplar Springs. We enjoyed the visit very much and think it was a profitable service.

Each community agreed to help to bring about a better observance of the Sabbath laws. Three of the schools agreed to put in the Cradle Roll, two agreed to put in graded literature for the Beginners, and two promised to observe Mission Sunday. One school agreed to a Tithing Campaign.

Brother Yeager has finished building one church and has repaired and enlarged another this year. He is in high favor with his people and is doing a good solid work. May his days be long and filled with success!

September 27-28 was the District Institute with the Herbert Watkins Memorial, Meridian. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, of Sardis, Miss., was the visiting speaker and he surely did do us noble work. I feel that his visit will be a blessing for days to come. The program was well carried out. Several of the speakers were absent, but we had a good time and the Lord blessed us. The Institute went on record in favor of a Standard Training School for the district, which I trust will materialize.

The following were elected as the officers for the coming year: Secretary, Mr. E. R. Lowery, Meridian; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. C. M. Martin, Meridian; Young Peoples—Adult W. B. C., Mr. R. C. Weems, Shubuta; Intermediate—Senior W. B. C., Miss Madge Stewart, Meridian; Missions, Hon. S. M. Graham, Meridian; Teacher-Training, Rev. M. L. White, DeKalb.

Some are sending in their Sunday school offerings. I trust that this will be our best year in spite of everything along this line. It is not so much the amount of money as it is that we are anxious for all our schools to get the habit. Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

A WIDE-AWAKE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Dear Brother Capley: Noel Memorial smashed all past Rally Day services in the history of the growing church today, in recording an attendance of 502. The goal set for the occasion was 500. The Satterly Young Peoples' Class recorded an attendance of 93, the largest in the history of that class organization.

During the past two Sundays the attendance of the school has increased from 347 to 502. The splendid development of the Noel Memorial Sunday school since the launching of this fall's campaign activities is the talk of the Sunday school workers in North Louisiana. The membership goal of the school during the campaign is 700.

Improvements made in enlarging the class facilities of the school recently give ample room for marked development in all department.

Noel Memorial Sunday school believes in advertising; the quarter page "ad" in the local papers in Saturday editions is producing results that make other Sunday schools awake from their slumbers and get busy.

The activity at Noel school is arousing numerous schools in North Louisiana to launch similar campaigns for development.

FROM FLORA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We were very much delighted to have with us on Tuesday night, September 27, Bishop W. F. McMurtry to preach for us and dedicate our new church for us. We also had with us our P. E., Rev. M. L. Burton, of Jackson, Miss., and L. E. Afford, our pastor at Yazoo City, Miss. The Bishop gave us a great sermon and every one present enjoyed it very much. His visit in our midst was a treat indeed—we appreciated it very much, and we trust it will be convenient for him to come again soon. J. H. FOREMAN.

REVIVALS ON THE FARMERVILLE CHARGE.

On July 12, we began at Desaird, with Rev. D. C. Barr to do the preaching, and continued until the 17th. The few people who attended these services were greatly helped and quickened in their spiritual lives. There were some conversions but no additions.

Then, on the night of the seventeenth, the writer went on to Marion, preaching until Wednesday evening.

Most Ailments Due To One Thing

That is, Impure, Impoverished, Devitalized Blood.

Probably 75 per cent. of the ailments of the human race are due to an abnormal condition of the blood,—thin, poor, anemic.

This fact and the further fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood, by creating a healthy appetite, aiding digestion, promoting assimilation and thereby securing in full all the benefits of complete nutrition, must impress the thoughtful with the wisdom of giving this great medicine a good fair trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is greatest merit plus greatest economy, the most for the money. Get it today.

SOUTH IS TURNING AGAINST CALOMEL

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone"
Man, Responsible for Change
for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.

when Brother Barr again came to our rescue and the meeting grew in interest until there were more people than could be seated at every night service, notwithstanding the weather was as hot as it ever gets, in this section. Brother Barr preached with great power, and there was great good accomplished, and five were added to the church. The meeting closed on July 24.

Then, on August 22, we began at Farmerville with Rev. H. Wade Cudd to do the preaching. He had increasing congregations until the close. August 28, with very gratifying results. Four were added to the church.

On September 14, we began an arbor meeting on our church ground in the Greenville neighborhood with Rev. L. W. Smart, of the Chatham charge. Brother Smart is a fine preacher. He gave the people great messages from time to time. The meeting closed on the night of the 21st with these results: Several conversions and reclamations, seven added to the church, a prayer meeting established, and a new church building planned with something like $200 subscribed. R. V. FULTON, P. C.

FROM OKOLONA, MISS.

The evangelistic campaign conducted at Okolona, Miss., by the Greer-Glover evangelistic party closed on September 20, with 43 additions to the Methodist Church; and a number indicated a desire to unite with the Baptist and Presbyterian churches.

The meeting was sponsored by the Methodist Church, but the interest and co-operation of the other churches of the town helped materially to insure success. The first week, the meeting was held in the Methodist church, but the large crowds and hot weather forced the officials of the church to build an out-door tabernacle, which was much more comfortable; the large attendance continued throughout.

Rev. Norris Greer, who did the preaching, has left a deep impression upon the people of the town for his clear, simple, yet powerful presentation of the gospel. Rev. J. W. Glover won all by his gospel solos and song leadership. It is with greatest pleasure that we can say they have helped Okolona and greatly blessed all who came to hear this splendid team of evangelistic workers.

GEORGE E. WILLIAMS, P. C.

KOSSUTH CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: In many respects we have had a successful year's work. The officials and membership of the three churches are appreciative, and they manifest an encouraging spirit of co-operation. Our district leader, Rev. J. B. Randolph, has been an inspiration on the charge with his genial spirit and good preaching. I felt lost with only three appointments, but soon found out about Mills Chapel, an afternoon point, and accepted an invitation to preach each month at Carpenter schoolhouse, where, with the aid of Brother W. D. Hale, of Kossuth, we organized a Sunday school, which is proving a blessing to the community, which is thickly settled. I also accepted an invitation to preach in the afternoon at Union Church (Baptist) once a month. At request of the membership, we conducted our own revival meetings. The Lord graciously blessed our labors in strengthening the spiritual life of the membership, with a number of conversions and thirty-four accessions, twenty-nine of which were by profession of faith.

Since beginning of present session of Alcorn A. H. S., our Epworth League has assumed new life and the Wednesday night prayer meeting has been well attended. I have reason to believe the finances will come up all right by our fourth quarterly conference here November 2, or surely by time of Annual Conference.

I love the Lord and His work and my ambition is to reflect His spirit more in my life.

CHARLEY E. DOWNER,

Pastor.

REVIVALS ON BOGALUSA CIRCUIT.

Successful revivals have been held this month, on the Bogalusa circuit, at the following points:

The pastor was assisted at Sun by Rev. W. H. Giles, of Sildell, who did the preaching. The meeting was well attended, and the church greatly blessed.

At Bush and Angie, Rev. J. G. Snelling, the presiding elder, did the preaching, and much good was done. There was one accession, and several reclamations at Bush, and twelve additions at Angie. The meeting was one of the best ever held there.

Brother J. E. Selfe, of New Orleans, had charge of the singing at Angie, and was highly commended for his good work. M. N. HILDEBRAND, Pastor.

FROM GIBBSLAND CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: I hereby hand you for the Advocate a short report of the work of my charge.

We have held revival meetings at all of the churches in my charge, all of which were right good meetings. There were nineteen additions on profession of faith, and some by certificate. The preaching was done by the following named brethren: Gibbsland Church, my brother, Rev. E. C. Cargill, of Italy, Texas; Bryceland Church, Rev. R. W. Tucker; Bear Creek, Rev. W. E. Hudnall; Oak Grove Church, Rev. A. L. Harper. The preaching of each of these brethren was very satisfactory to each congregation, and this pastor most especially appreciates their services. I wish to state that Mr. and Mrs. Carlton, of Fort Worth, Texas, were in charge of the choir at Bear Creek Church during the meeting, and rendered very efficient service.

I'm rounding out my fourth year on the charge, and hope to have a good report for Conference. Whatever degree of success may have attended my labors these four years, I give God the praise, and press on to greater things.

I'm looking forward to our Conference with much joy and solicitude that it may be a great Conference indeed.

Yours in His service,

E. L. CARGILL.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Afton, Tenn.—"I want other suffering women to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. During the Change of Life I was in bed for eight months and had two good doctors treating me but they did me no good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and in a short time I felt better. I had all kinds of bad spells, but they all left me. Now when I feel weak and nervous I take the Vegetable Compound and it always does me good. I wish all women would try it during the Change of Life for I know it will do them good. If you think it will induce some one to try the Vegetable Compound you may publish this letter."—Mrs. A. KELLER, Afton, Tenn.

Mrs. Mary Lister of Adrian, Mich., adds her testimony to the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to carry women safely through the Change of Life. She says:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me, so I got more. It cured me and I am now doing my housework. Your medicine is certainly woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. Mary Lister, 608 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand passes through this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms.

Those smothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells, are symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine, specially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the common ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. This book contains valuable information.

FROM THE NEBO CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: As my revivals are all over, I thought that it would not be amiss to write up a report of the Nebo charge.

My first meeting was held at Nebo, beginning July 17, with Dr. Rolfe Hunt, President of Port Gibson Female College, doing the preaching. It is useless for me to comment on the quality of the sermons preached by Dr. Hunt, for all who have ever heard him know that the preaching was well done. The visible results of this meeting were three accessions by profession of faith and the membership greatly revived.

Our next meeting was held at Greendale. We began August 7, with Brother C. P. Jones, from Fayette, Miss., doing the preaching. We had a gracious revival at this point. The visible results of this meeting were 9 added to the church by vows and 5 by certificate, a reorganization of the Sunday school, and a mid-week prayer meeting organized.

Our next meeting was held at Cool Springs, with W. D. Simpson. Again we were blessed with the blessing of the Lord and a good revival was the result of our humble efforts. There were five accessions by profession of faith, and the members greatly revived.

Our next meeting was held at Oak Grove, beginning the fourth Sunday in August, with Brother C. A. Schultz, from Anguilla, as our helper. Here the Lord gave us the best revival on the entire work, judging from the after effects. Our work at this appointment was in a backsliden condition; the men or the fathers had never attended church here even when our beloved presiding elder came to hold our quarterly conferences. But they all came out on Sunday to hear the new preacher. Brother Schultz gave us two great sermons and the Holy Spirit honored the Word and the most of them came back Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday in spite of the rain. The visible results of this meeting were seven accessions by faith, the Sunday school reorganized, also a prayer meeting organized. I was with them last Saturday night and there were 52 present, and, notwithstanding the meeting was conducted by one of the home boys, not a whisper was heard from the young people. Some one told me that this young man had expressed himself as favorable to the call of the ministry. I shall do what I can to encourage him and to keep him busy for the Lord.

We have two consolidated schools near my work, one in Jefferson County near Nebo church, and one in Franklin County, six or seven miles below Greendale. I had the honor of being at the opening at the one at Nebo and taking part in the exercises. I also have the privilege of opening for them once a week, which privilege I shall accept.

Brethren, pray for us; there is much to be done in this part of the country.

Your brother,

C. H. HERRING.

Perth, Miss.

Scrofula Most Progressive Now.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive.

The progress of scrofula during a normal autumn is commonly great.

It is probable that few people ever think of scrofula—its bunches, eruptions, and wasting of the body—without thinking of the benefit many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose success in the treatment of this one disease alone would be enough to make it what it is, one of the most famous medicines in the world.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost as serious and as much to be feared as its near relative—consumption.

Hood's Pills, the cathartic to take with Hood's Sarsaparilla, in cases where one is necessary, are gentle in action and thorough in effect.—Adv.
